UMass Biology Production Rated Second In N.E.

Only Harvard Graduates More Yearly Who Go On To Become College Biology Teachers

UMass this week was cited as one of the highest regional producers of college biology teachers.

Second To Harvard

A report issued by the New England Board of Higher Education lists UMass as second only to Harvard in production of biology majors who become college teachers in that subject. The report, prepared by Dr. Ernest W. Hartung, Dean of Graduate Studies at the University of Rhode Island, is based on a survey of college biology teachers listed in American Men of Science.

Included in the survey are teachers who are 45 years of age or under and who received one or more degrees from a New England institution.

Aim of the report is to indicate (1) which institutions in New England are "high producing"' or "low producing" and (2) what practices, curricula, or courses seem to help in guiding students into college teaching of biology.

The report shows that, among all other undergraduate institutions in New England, UMass produced 67 biology majors who, upon receiving their bachelor's degrees, went on to graduate work in that subject and then became college teachers. Harvard is listed as leading the field, with 68 in this category.

The survey also shows that 5 former UMass undergraduates are currently graduate students in biology with intentions of teaching on the college level. Harvard has 11 such students, while Smith College leads the field with 22.

Many Factors Influence High Production

Factors influencing high production include, according to the report, "wide range of choices in many areas of biology, a lack of particular concentration on the training of any special group of students, and a staff active in reseach and concerned with biology for its own sake rather than as the servant of one or another profession or discipline."

A strong pre-medical program is also cited as a factor. "The UMass, Harvard, Wesleyan, and Mount Holyoke College are all colleges of somewhat different character, and, relative to their size, all are high producers of teachers while having substantial records in medical placement."

In graduate studies, UMass, though ranking well below Harvard and Yale, is listed as highest among all other private and public graduate institutions in New England in the number of (1) present graduate students intending to teach biology (2) present or former teachers with master's degrees, and (3) present or former teachers with Ph.D. degrees.

Three New Appointments

Dr. Field Named Dean Of Students

Pres. John W. Lederle of UMass announced the appointment of three persons to high posts in the institution's administration.

The appointees, and the positions they will assume, include: Dr. Gilbert L. Woodside, Provost of the University; Dr. William F. Field, Dean of Students; and Dr. Marion A. Niederpruem, Dean of the School of Home Economics.

Dr. Woodside, Dean of the Graduate School since 1950 and head of the department of zoology until recently, has been Acting Provost since the departure of Dr. Shannon McCune, who last year was appointed Director of Education for UNESCO.

A graduate of DePauw University with A.M. and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard University, Dr. Woodside joined the UMass faculty in 1936. He was appointed professor of biology in 1946 and head of the zoology department in 1948.

A member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, and Phi Kappa Phi, he has done extensive work in experimental embryology, cancer research, and electron microscopy. Results of his studies have appeared in many of the leading scientific journals.

Member of a number of national professional societies, he was elected a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1955. Dr. Woodside's appointment is effective July 1. As provost, he will serve as the University's chief administrative officer for academic affairs.

Field's Post New

The post of Dean of Students, to which Dr. Field has been appointed, is a new one in the University structure. The new dean will coordinate all activities involving student life on campus. He will have the assistance of the Dean of Men and Dean of Women, whose offices share responsibilities for student welfare.

Dr. Field received a B.S. degree from West Chester (Pa.) State Teachers College, the Ed.M. from Temple University, and his Ph.D. from the University of Maryland.

A former research analyst for the U.S. Public Health Service, he was appointed to the UMass staff as a guidance officer in 1951. He has been Director of Guidance since September, 1958. In that post, he has been in charge of all testing and counseling procedures for all undergraduates at the University. His appointment as Dean of Students was effective July 1.

Dr. Niederpruem, professor of home economics and retailing coordinator at Michigan State University, will assume the deanship of the School of Home Economics at the University of Massachusetts in September. She succeeds Dr. Helen S. Mitchell who retired from the post after many years of distinguished service.

Dr. Niederpruem received a B.S. degree from Buffalo State Teachers College, an M.A. from New York University, and the Ph.D. from the University of Michigan. Prior to joining the faculty of Michigan State University, she served as head of the department of home economics at the College of St. Elizabeth in New Jersey and, later, as principal of the girls' vocational department of the New Jersey School of the Deaf.

DR. NIEDERPRUEM

PDN Leader Forming New Sorority, LDP

The national constitution of a new Greek letter sorority formed recently by convention at UMass establishes a bold new direction in non-discrimination. Lambda Delta Phi, the new sorority, was created in Amherst by its sponsors Phi Delta Nu of UMass and delegates from Beta Epsilon of the University of Rhode Island, Lambda Club of Boston University, and Nu Sigma Pi of the University of Minnesota. A constitution, membership pin, and pledge pin were adopted.

Represented at the meetings, all of which were held in Mary Lyon House, were delegates from Boston University, University of Connecticut, Hunter College, Syracuse University, University of Minnesota, University of Rhode Island, Lake Forest College (Ill.), and the University of Colorado.

Specifically written into this new national constitution of Lambda Delta Phi are safeguards to assure its local chapters of freedom from all national restrictions which may exclude students from membership because of race, religion, or national origin. Local autonomy in the selection of its members makes it possible for each group to select its members at the local level on the basis of individual worth alone and with concern for human dignity.

The basic ideals and aims of Lambda Delta Phi, "Living democracy through friendship," as stated in the constitution, are:

1. "To provide an opportunity for women of all races, religious and cultural backgrounds to live, work, and maintain social relations on an equal level.
2. To encourage a high degree of moral and personal integrity.
3. To encourage unity without loss of individuality.
4. To strive for individual and cultural goals.

SENATE COMMITTEES

There are many openings for non-senate members of Student and University Committees. Any interested persons should contact Senate President Arthur Tacelli in the Senate Office or at Van Meter House.

Welcome, Class of '65

UMass welcomes 1,839 freshmen to campus this fall. At Tuesday's covocation in the Cage, the frosh were addressed by Dean Curtis, Dean Hopkins, and the freshman Dean of Students, Dr. William Field. Scrolls' President, Jan Reimer and Maroon Key President, Bob Tedoldi offered their assistance to the freshmen throughout the year. The senior women's honor society, Mortar Board, represented by Linda Achenbach, president, and its male counterpart, Adelphia, represented by Fran Lovejoy, president, urged the class of 1965 to set high academic goals.

Faculty and students alike suffered in the sweltering heat of the Cage.

COLLEGIANS will normally be available at the dorms at 4:30 p.m. on days of publication. However a limited number of copies will be available in the COLLEGIAN office by lunchtime.

Neither Animals Nor Gods

As the University enters another year of scholasticism and growthmanship, the discerning may perceive the initial traces of fall's imposing shadows. But it is only the objective eye which perceives the conglomeration of shadows extending before the more than 6000 students now here assembled and the significance of these coalescent shades as they collect beneath the altars of knowledge. It is the mantle worn by these shadows which distinguishes their kind: the cloth of the Brotherhood of Perfection.

Confined within the scholarly walls of hour exams, labs, lectures, and distinguished visitors and within the social whirl of dances, parties, and mixes, one finds the security which comes of our small scale societal organizations. Spread over 755 acres, a tiny community functions upon the principle: "Man, when perfected, is the best of animals." Equipped with the tool of intelligence, we will tread to Bartlett or Machmer or Goessmann in order that an "ordered state" may present the thousands of opportunities and avenues of development open to us as societal creatures. For the privilege of access to these avenues, we deny our right to the solitary life held by animals and gods. The stigmas of solitary life, greed, hate, excess, and omniscience, bear the ostracism of our brotherhood.

Our moments here of enlightenment and constructive thought may all appear far removed from the chilled air corridors leading into Berlin or the dusty backroads of Cuba. The millions of man hours and constructive thought which produced a divided Berlin or the "26 de julio" movement in the Sierra Maestra mountains may appear enormous when compared to our intellectual efforts during a nine month stay within our scholastic community. But there will come a day when man may wrest himself free from the poison of violent revolution and atomic retaliation. And the advent of such days will witness our posterity's accumulated man hours of learning to control and remake the imperfect man dwarfing the man hours of revolution and greed.

Therefore, in the face of mounting imperfection across the globe, let us grasp enthusiasm and courage to struggle forward in search of perfection. Let us question and debate; let us think and create; let us love and hesitate; and let us join together within the Brotherhood of Perfection and show that "man, when perfected, is the best of animals."

NOTES AT RANDOM

by JIM TRELEASE '63

Instead of defining the earthly and noble purposes of the collegiate press while pledging our total support for all student causes, the liquidation of R.O.T.C., and all that is pure and innocent, we might serve you better by reviewing just a few of the Collegian's editorial causes last year and see what has materialized from them over the summer.

Back in April, Goodell library came under fire for its "retarded steps" in keeping pace with scholastic needs. By campaigning for later closing hours and the opening of a smoking room, the Collegian is pleased to see the doors of Goodell closing this year at midnight instead of 10 and a smoking room open till 10 p.m.

When a concerted drive was in force to liquidate the campus humor magazine, the Ya-Hoo, the Collegian wrote: ". . . with the hope that our Senatorial electives will see the merit in salvaging the voice of this publication . . . we look forward to future issues where there should be cleaner and fresher waters for us to enjoy." And when our radio station, WMUA, showed signs of incompetence, we wrote of their new officers: "It (the new administration) must bring WMUA up from the fathoms of disorganization and low popularity ratings to a level where it once again may be said to represent our student voice." Today, Ya-Hoo and WMUA will be advised by a newly created Communications Board. Ya-Hoo, with brand-new ideas for encompassing the entire campus within its scope, and WMUA with more listeners and more dorm converters than ever before, may boast with pride of their future ambitions.

And when the Collegian paged the nation's colleges on their student pay-rates, we found UMass below par. It is with pride that we point to the new pay increases of at least 15¢ and, in some cases, as high a jump as 25¢.

With the above instances speaking for our interest and leadership in student affairs, let us look at what the Collegian will offer you in the way of columnists. Mike Palter, our Walter Lippmann with a cause, and Paul Theroux, our Mort Sahl with a vocabulary, shall once again inhabit the editorial page. Bantam Ben Gordon and Hefty Dick Macklem should provide you with enough sports info' to last you through the entire Yankee Conference athletic year.

We welcome our new readers, and old as well, and wish you the best of luck and pledge our efforts in giving you the best in reading for the year 1961-62.

Universal Guilt

A universal guilt enshrouded the middle years of the twentieth century in America; and it attached to all who participated in those times. It attached to the fatuous, empty-headed liberals who had made it so easy for the Russians by yielding them so much; it attached to the embittered conservatives who had closed the doors on human love and frozen out all possibility of communication between peoples. It rested on the military, who had been too jealous of one another and too slow, and on the scientists, who had been so self-righteous and irresponsible and smug about shifting the implications of what they did onto someone else, and on the press, which had been too lazy and too compliant in the face of evils foreign and domestic, and on the politicians, who had been too self-interested and not true enough to the destiny of the land they had in keeping, and not least upon the ordinary citizen and his wife, who somehow didn't give quite enough of a damn about their country in spite of all their self-congratulatory airs about how patriotic they were. Nobody could stand forth now in America and say, "I am guiltless. I had no part in this. I did not help bring America down from her bright pinnacle." For that would be to deny that one had lived through those years, and only babies and little children could say that.

So now there was a time of uneasiness when everyone told everyone else dutifully that, "It is not our purpose to indulge in recriminations about the past," and tried to live up to it; and when all thinking men fretted and worried desperately about "how to catch up," and "how to get ahead"; and also, in the small hours of the night's cold terror, about what it would be like if America couldn't catch up, if history should have decided once and for all that America should never again be permitted to get ahead.

And already because of this, the smooth and supple voices of rationalization were beginning to be heard, and blandly clever voices of adjustment and accommodation and don't-make-a-federal-case-out-of-it and don't take-it-too-hard and after-all-what-will-it-matter-in-a-hundred-years and maybe-it-wouldn't-really-be-so-bad and I-guess-we-could-live-with-them-if-we-had-to. And for America it was a time of nip and tuck, and a darkening passageway with only God's good grace, if He cared to confer it again upon a people who sometimes didn't seem to deserve it any more, to see the country safely through.

. . . . But people were only human, after all, and they were scared; and confronted with the possibility of a war with all the horrors it could entail, they were not as resolute or as courageous as they once had been when they weren't so aware of what the consequences of resolution and courage could be. They liked to tell themselves they were brave, but they weren't; there was just enough of a feeling, just enough, to provide a very dangerous potential for an appeasement that would be fatal. Faced with an open challenge, an open attack, they would, if they had the time, rouse and fight back as they always had, no matter what the price, for America; but make the attack sufficiently intellectual, make the threat sufficiently subtle, give them time to think, let them mull it over and contemplate what would happen if they didn't go along, carry it to the conference table if you liked and be sure you gave them a way to save face as they retreated . . . .

Through a combination of lapses, stupidities, overidealism, and misjudgments, each at the time seemingly justified, each in its moment capable of a rationale that had brought a majority to approve it, the United States had gotten herself into a position vis-a-vis the Russians in which the issue was more and more rapidly narrowing down to a choice between fight and die now or compromise and die later . . . .

"All men may be born equal, but it's what they are equal to later on that counts."

Lederle Appoints Two Faculty Members As Associate Deans

Appointment of two faculty members to serve as associate deans at UMass was announced recently by Pres. John W. Lederle.

The appointees are Dr. Robert W. Wagner, formerly professor of mathematics at UMass, and Dr. E. Ernest Lindsey, professor of chemical engineering and head of the department.

Effective Sept. 1, Dr. Wagner is working with Dean I. Moyer Hunsberger in administering the program of the College of Arts and Sciences. Dr. Lindsey will serve in a similar capacity under Dean George A. Marston of the School of Engineering. The College of Arts and Sciences has the highest undergraduate enrollment at UMass, with the School of Engineering ranking second.

A graduate of Ohio University, Dr. Wagner earned M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at the University of Michigan where he was a Horace H. Rackham Fellow.

After receiving his doctorate, Prof. Wagner held teaching posts at the University of Wisconsin and at Oberlin College. He was appointed professor of mathematics at UMass in 1950.

Author of two books, "Fundamentals of Statistics" (with J. B. Scarborough) and "Introductory College Mathematics," he has also written a number of research papers on generalizations of analytic functions.

Active in the American Association of University Professors, the new associate dean aided in establishing a faculty senate at the Massachusetts institution. He was also chairman of a major committee which revised the curriculum of the College of Arts and Sciences.

During the past three years he has directed a number of National Science Foundation institutes for high school teachers of mathematics and science.

Dr. Wagner is a member Sigma Xi and Phi Beta Kappa and is active in the American Mathematical Society and the American Mathematical Association. He is married and has three daughters.

Dr. Lindsey, head of the department of chemical engineering since 1954, received a B.S. degree from the Georgia Institute of Technology and the Doctor of Engineering degree from Yale University.

A member of Tau Beta Pi and Sigma Xi, he taught at Yale and the University of Tennessee before joining the Massachusetts faculty in 1949. During World War II, he served as an electronics officer on destroyer-escort duty in the U.S. Navy. He is presently commanding officer of the local Naval Reserve Unit.

Since 1954, Dr. Lindsey has been a member of the Equipment Testing Procedures Committee, a national body which determines standard tests for chemical equipment. He is also section chairman of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers. He is married and has two sons.

Free Bus Service Will Run Between UM and Amherst

A Free Bus service will run between the University and the center of Amherst again this coming school year. It is designed to acquaint the students and other personnel at the University and with the business community at the center of Amherst. Two years ago over 22,000 rides were taken on the Free Bus.

The bus will run every half hour for five hours begining September 13 and continuing September 14 and every Friday and Saturday afternoon thereafter. Fridays the Free Bus will run from the University 2:45 p.m. to 7:45 p.m. and on Saturday it will run leaving the University from 12:15 p.m. 'til 5:15 p.m. On September 13 and 14 the timetable is the same as that in use on Saturdays. The Free Bus will not run on University holidays or exam periods. Full timetables are posted on University bulletin boards, in stores and in newspapers.

The Free Bus will stop to pick up passengers on the way to Amherst center only at the stop light on North Pleasant St., opposite the women's dorms; the Student Union; Hills Dorm and opposite the St. Regis Diner. On the return trip to terminal opposite women's dorms the bus will stop at any place on North Pleasant St. to the University on signal from anyone wishing to leave the bus.

The Free Bus will discharge passengers going to Amherst center only at a place opposite the Post Office and at the regular bus stop, corner of Amity and North Pleasant streets.

This Free Bus service is provided by the Amherst businesses displaying cards in their windows.

Commonwealth Professorship Among 52 Recent Appointments

Pres. John W. Lederle of the University of Massachusetts today announced the promotion of 52 members of the institution's faculty to higher academic ranks.

The promotions, almost all of which are effective Sept. 1, include the naming of Dr. John H. Fenton as Commonwealth Professor of Government. Dr. Fenton is the tenth member of the faculty to receive a Commonwealth professorship, established as a means of recognizing outstanding faculty accomplishment in research and instruction.

A former Littauer Fellow at Harvard University where he received the Ph.D. degree, Dr. Fenton joined the University of Massachusetts faculty in 1959. He has written two books—"Politics in the Border States" (1957) and "The Catholic Vote" (1960)—and a number of articles which have appeared in journals of political science. At present he is conducting a study of Mid-West politics.

The list of promotions, including name and rank, follows:

(College of Arts and Sciences) From associate professor to full professor—Oswald C. Farquhar (geology), Bronislaw H. Honigberg (zoology), Sidney Kaplan (English), Robert A. Potash (history), Harold Rauch (zoology), and Warren H. Teichner (psychology).

From instructor to assistant professor—Martin Anderle (German), Clarence Angell (speech), Harold Boudreau (Romance languages), Mario DePillis (history), Leonard H. Ehrlich (philosophy), Raymond Gozzi (English), Patricia J. Jaeger (Romance languages), Thomas R. Stengle (chemistry), Franklin Wickwire (history), and Robert M. William (chemistry).

(College of Agriculture) From associate professor to full professor—Joe T. Clayton (agricultural engineering), Harold B. Gatslick (forestry), Theodore W. Leed (agricultural engineering) and John H. Noyes (forestry).

From assistant professor to associate professor—Donald L. Anderson (poultry science), Theodore S. Bacon, Jr. (landscape architecture), Francis W. Holmes (entomology and plant pathology), Donald L. Mader (forestry) and Frank E. Potter (dairy and animal science).

From instructor to assistant professor — Heinrich Fenner (dairy and animal science), Christopher P. Kantianis (landscape architecture), and Louis F. Michelson (agronomy).

(School of Business Administration) From assistant professor to associate professor—John T. Conlon; from instructor to assistant professor—John M. Fitzgerald and Donald L. Stanhope.

(School of Engineering) From associate professor to full professor—Tsuan H. Feng (civil engineering); from assistant professor to associate professor—John A. Fitzgerald (electrical engineering); and from instructor to assistant professor — Donald E. Scott (electrical engineering).

Dean Of A&S Asks January Graduates To Leave Names

All students in the College of Arts and Sciences who anticipate graduation at the end of the current semester are asked to leave their names on a list being compiled by Mrs. Stewart in the Dean's office, Room 156, Bartlett Hall.

Any request for a departure from normal academic routine will not be acted upon in the office of the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences unless it is in writing with the approval of an advisor, faculty member, department head, or other authorized agent. The Associate Dean, Mr. Robert Wagner, Dean's office, Arts & Sciences, Bartlett Hall, will be happy to discuss possibilities with all students without such a written request, but no action will be taken except when the request is accompanied by a written statement.

Publicity Notices

All notices to be printed in the Collegian Club Directory, and all publicity material for campus organizations, must be handed in typed at 30 or 60 spaces. No publicity notices will be accepted that do not conform to the above standards.

SIGMA KAPPA LIVING ROOM BEFORE THE FIRE

Kappas Take To Dorms As Summer Fire Guts House

by DICK HAYNES '64

On August 4, the house of Sigma Kappa sorority, 19 Allen Street, was partially destroyed by fire. The fire, discovered about 6 p.m. by Robert James, 15 Allen Street, was caused by faulty wiring on the third floor.

Damage was extensive. Firemen confined the blaze to the third floor which was completely gutted. Heavy smoke and water damage prevailed throughout the house. At the time of the blaze, the house was unoccupied.

Since the fire, renovation of the house has been started and five more rooms are being added to the third floor. Elizabeth Murphy, sorority president, said that the house would be ready for occupancy second semester. The dining facilities will be opened on October 9. Thirty women displaced by the fire are living in dormitories now.

Carole Leland Appointed As Placement Officer

Pres. John W. Lederle today announced the appointment of Miss Carole A. Leland as Placement Officer for Women.

To Replace Mrs. Tanner

Miss Leland replaces Mrs. Anne G. Tanner who has resigned after two years as a UMass placement officer. Mrs. Tanner will reside in Worcester where her husband is undertaking an internship in psychology.

Miss Leland, a native of Voorheesville, N.Y., will be responsible for administering the placement program for women in the Office of Placement and Financial Aid Services, under the general direction of Robert J. Morrissey.

Her work will include counseling undergraduate women for prospective employment, supervising off-campus industrial recruiting and administering the part-time employment program for women, and advising undergraduates who apply for loans and scholarships.

An alumna of Syracuse University where she received a B.A. degree magna cum laude, Miss Leland holds an M.Ed. degree from Harvard University. She has also undertaken advanced studies at Boston University and Rutgers University and has attended the Institute for Guidance and Counseling held at the University of Rochester under National Defense Education Act sponsorship. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi, and Rho Delta Phi, national honor societies.

At Syracuse, Miss Leland was president of the student government and was named outstanding junior woman at the University. Earlier she had served as governor of New York Girls' State. She has also been a participant in the New York Times Youth Forum.

Experienced In Guidance Work

Her experience in guidance and placement work includes positions as assistant director of the Student Center of Douglass College, New Brunswick, N.J.; guidance counselor and teacher at Quincy (Mass.) High School; and guidance counselor and director of student activities at Sparta (N.Y.) High School. In addition to undertaking extensive work in summer music camps, she has also served as administrative assistant to the Director of Summer Sessions at the State Teachers College, Albany, N.Y.

Miss Leland is a member of the American Association of University Women, National Federation of Business and Professional Women, the American Personnel and Guidance Association, and the National Vocational Guidance Association.

A New Area To Buy Texts Is Announced

The UMass Book Store announces the following, of interest to the student body.

All textbooks for all students, (freshmen, sophomores, juniors, seniors, graduates) will be sold in the Commonwealth Room (Small Ballroom on the main lobby floor of the S.U.)

The Book Store hours (including the Commonwealth Room) are as follows:

Sept. 12, Tues. 8:00 to 5:00
Sept 13, Wed. 8:00 to 7:30
Sept. 14, Thurs. 8:00 to 7:30
Sept. 15, Fri. 8:00 to 7:30
Sept 16, Sat. 8:00 to 2:30
Sept. 18, Mon. 8:00 to 7:30
Sept. 19, Tues. 8:00 to 5:00

Class rings and 1963 blazers will not be available until October 2 because of the book rush.

Grants, Faculty Moves, Dorms Top Summer's News Stories

by JOE BRADLEY '62, News Assignment Editor

After the post-exam exodus of late May, and the Commencement of the Class of '61, the UMass academic facilities swung into one of the largest summer programs ever undertaken here.

Beginning June 15, the first freshman groups began arriving for summer counseling. By June 26, students for the UMass Summer Session were ready for the almost 200 courses being offered graduates and undergraduates and professionals in certain fields.

Among the mid-June arrivals, there was the departure of Dr. John E. Roberts, associate professor of chemistry. Dr. Roberts was appointed to the faculty of the University of Cairo, Egypt.

On leave from his present position, he will teach graduates and undergraduates and direct research in the field of chemistry.

NSF Grants $59,000

The National Science Foundation granted a total of $59,000 for studies directed by 30-year-old Dr. Phillips R. Jones, assistant professor of physics. The studies are aimed at finding out what happens to the shells and inner cores of atoms when particles are smashed against each other under controlled conditions.

Following closely on the heels of Dr. Jones' NSF grant was another foundation grant for scientific research awarded to Dr. Warren H. Teicher, professor of psychology.

The $32,700 grant will be used to study "Behavorial and Psycho-physiological Effects of Thermal Environments". The study will provide data on people's behavorial patterns — how they perform — under abnormal thermal conditions.

UMass Acquires IBM Computer

Early in July UMass became the first educational institution in western Massachusetts to acquire a high speed computer for solving complex problems encountered in scientific research. The computer, an IBM 1620 Data Processing System, has been installed in the Goessmann Chem Lab which also houses the UMass subcritical nuclear reactor. The facilities will be available to the other members of the Four College Cooperation group: Amherst, Mt. Holyoke and Smith Colleges.

In mid-July President John W. Lederle announced the signing of a contract between UMass

Professorships Granted To 3 Faculty Members

Three members of the UMass faculty have been named to Commonwealth Professorships, it was announced today by Pres. John W. Lederle.

Established in 1959, the professorships are granted to faculty members who have achieved distinction in teaching, research and publication.

The three appointments bring to a total of 12 the number of Commonwealth Professors at UMass.

The new appointees are: William B. Esselen, named Commonwealth Head of the Department of Food Technology; Mrs. Anne W. Wertz, Commonwealth Professor of Home Economics; and Carl A. Keyser, Commonwealth Professor of Metallurgy.

Prof. Esselen, author of more than 140 technical papers published in scientific journals, has been head of the food technology department of the College of Agriculture since 1957. He joined the UMass staff in 1941 after receiving his Ph.D. degree in the department he now heads.

A former consultant to the War Food Administration and the War Production Board, he recently returned from a year's work as visiting professor at Japan's Hokkaido University, where he lectured and consulted under International Cooperation Agency sponsorship.

Mrs. Wertz, a member of the research staff of the School of Home Economics, is well known for her work in nutrition. Author of many articles, she has received recognition particularly for her work in vitamins and amino acids.

She is a graduate of Connecticut College with a Ph.D. degree from UMass.

Prof. Keyser, an authority in the field of metallurgy, is the author of "Basic Engineering Metallurgy," now in its second edition and widely used as a college text throughout the United States.

He received a B.S. degree from the Worcester Polytechnic Institute and undertook advanced work at the latter institution and at the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

5. To promote these, our ideals, beyond the confines of our individual groups."

Arrangements for the convention were handled by committees from Phi Delta Nu working with an advisory board. Assistance and guidance were given by Miss Helen Curtis, Dean of Women at UMass, and Mrs. Isabelle Gonon, Assistant Dean of Women.

Committee chairmen included: Miss Carol A. Folley of Andover (Program); Miss Karen Tucker of Baldwinsville (Finance); Miss Joan Copeland of Assonet (Constitution); Miss Joyce Parent of Haverhill (Hospitality); and Miss Marilyn Bennett of Somerset (Ritual). Information officer for the convention was Miss Mary Kay Heath of Amherst.

National officers who were unanimously chosen by the voting delegates in balloting on Saturday, June 24, were: Mrs. Paul R. Knight of Springfield, President; Miss Lora Hagglund of St. Peter, Minn., Vice President; Miss Anne E. Galloway, of Providence, R.I., Secretary; Miss Marilyn Bennett, of Somerset, Treasurer.

The officers were installed on Saturday evening at the S.U. by Mrs. Isobelle Gonon, Assistant Dean of Women at UMass. This was followed by a banquet at which Dr. Wendell King, Professor of Sociology here, spoke about the implementation of the basic ideals that Lambda Delta Phi has adopted.

Mrs. Knight served as general chairman of the convention. Voting delegates from the local chapter were: Miss Merrilee Atkins of Amherst, president of Phi Delta Nu, Miss Marilyn Bennett, and Miss Carolyn Zoia of Wollaston.

Recreational activities during the convention included a cookout at Look Park in Northampton and a banquet on Saturday evening in the S.U. at UMass. All delegates were housed in Mary Lyon House here.

Fusia To Coach Redmen Through Roughest Slate In History

Strong First Squad Promises Big Season; Depth A Problem

The University of Massachusetts' varsity football team, sporting one half of the Yankee Conference football crown and a 7-2 1960 slate, faces the roughest season in UMass football history this year, and Head Coach Vic Fusia has high hopes for his first grid command here at UMass.

"Right now," said Coach Fusia, "I've inherited a very ambitious schedule. I'll know what else I've inherited when we see some action."

The Redmen have been perfecting their moves and football skills on campus since August 28 and they've been working hard. Busy from 7:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. the team, originally 45 strong but now down to 36 men, has been working double sessions in blistering heat for weeks.

LESSON TO LEARN

"We're all creatures of habit," said Coach Fusia, "and if we endure pain, there's a lesson to follow." This year's version of the UMass Redmen is learning its lesson well. Both the Coaching staff and the team are confident of a good showing this season.

And there is a good deal of manpower and talent to support this conviction. Taking a look at the first team, we have a squad which is capable of faring well against all of our opposition—and that includes Holy Cross and Villanova.

Commenting on the imposing slate of contests to come, Coach Fusia stated that most people think the challenge is too great for UMass at the present time. "But," he added, "if we can stay in one piece, I'm sure that this squad will fare well against all opponents." The Redmen, believing that they can only excel by playing the best, are, themselves, one of the best Grid teams ever at UMass.

Senior John McCormick will be at the helm as quarterback and co-captain. Jack shared the quarterback slot with John Conway last year and saw a lot of action. His great passing arm which hurls both long and short passes with amazing accuracy and his ability to lead a team should be big factors in the Redmen future.

Flanking McCormick will be Sam Lussier at right half and Freddy Lewis at left half. Lussier, a junior, has a year of starting football under his belt and should be better than ever this year.

A major factor in UMass football hopes is Freddy Lewis, a sophomore. Lewis played spectacular ball on last year's frosh team, showing the great speed and agility of his high school track days. Fred, though, is a question mark, for his right knee, from which were removed two cartilages two years ago, might be troublesome. Fred has been right in the middle of most plays during practice sessions and an intersquad scrimmage last Saturday, though, and will be starting when the UMass eleven opens at Maine September 23.

Sophomore Ken Palm of Melrose is the no. 1 fullback and has been showing a lot of stuff during the past weeks. He's come a long way since his frosh days and is improving every day. The fullback slot, a question mark last spring, should be ably filled this fall.

Western Massachusetts supplies the entire forward wall this year. Paul Majeski, from Westfield and Dave Harrington from Holyoke will be at the left and right end positions. Harrington injured his chin, during practice requiring twelve stitches and has been out of action for a few days, but should be ready for the opening clash with the Bears. Both are considered to be excellent defensive ends and good pass catchers.

Two "very proud players", Bob Foote and Tom Brophy, from Northampton and Pittsfield, will be bolstering the line at the tackle positions and should provide a good deal of protection for McCormick's deadly passing.

KEN PALM

John Kozaka of Pittsfield and Dick Eger of Holyoke will maintain the starting guard positions, flanking veteran Matt Collins of Lanesboro at Center.

To sum it up: the starting lineup is an experienced and formidable one which should give any of our opposition a rough time and surprise a good many people.

This squad, moving from what Coach Fusia calls a "composite 'T'—a 'T' with a lot of window dressing—" should provide a successful season. Both coaches and players are going after the Yankee Conference crown, and they may not be stopped if luck holds out.

LACK OF DEPTH

But injuries to any of the starting eleven could be a death blow to UMass hopes. For the biggest factor facing the team is its lack of depth. At Quarterback, McCormick is the only experienced man. Lenny LaBella, who didn't play more than an hour all last season is the second string helmsman.

Ken Kezer, who saw a good deal of action last year, will be able to fill in at times at the halfback slot, but right now Ken has a bad back. The junior from Waltham made the first string last year for the last two games when Lussier fractured a couple of ribs and quickly scored six touchdowns.

Co-captain Vin Caputo, who was out all of last season because of an injury suffered during the first game, is back, but will have to get into condition before he sees regular action.

Jimmy Hickman, a speedy halfback who has been away for a year, is back in uniform and should see a good deal of play.

Tom Kirby, who alternated with Matt Collins at center last year has come a long way and will be seeing some play at the left guard slot this year.

But this lineup of ready reserves is still relatively small and injuries could do a good deal of harm.

"I'm proud of the team," commented Coach Fusia, "the coaches are proud of it, and I'm quite quite sure the University as a whole will feel the same. Win, lose or draw, this group will represent the state University in a manner which will endear themselves to the members of the student body and the academicians."

THE UMASS CHIEFS

New Head Coach Vic Fusia is flanked by co-captains Vin Caputo and John McCormick. Vin is back with the Redmen after an injury suffered in the Maine game last year, while Mac figures to be a key factor in the 1961 UMass football hopes. Coach Fusia has worked the team hard for weeks and they should be in prime shape for their opening encounter with the Maine Bears on September 23. The squad will play their first home game against A.I.C., the 30th. If the squad stays intact, things will be looking up for Coach Fusia's first UMass command.

NOTICE

Any freshmen or upperclassmen interested in working for the Sports Staff of the Massachusetts Collegian in either a writing or a page makeup capacity is invited to attend a meeting of the staff at 4:00 p.m. Tuesday, September 19th. Students who are presently members of the Sports Staff are requested to attend this meeting.

Alumni And Varsity Soccer Squads Meet In Third Foray

The third annual Alumni-Varsity soccer game will be played tomorrow, at 2:00 p.m., behind the Cage. This meeting will be the rubber game between the two squads, the varsity having won the first contest 3-0, and the Alumni turning the tables on the second encounter, last year.

It'll be a tough decision for Coach Larry Briggs to make when he asks himself whom he favors, for both the varsity and the alumni are the proteges of the coach.

Chuck Niedzwiecki of the class of '57, who teaches and coaches soccer in Wilbraham, will captain the Alumni seven, a team strong in defense, yet a question mark when it comes to taking the initiative.

Two members of last year's squad, Fred Kowal and Charles Hallet will be up against their former teammates, and they'll be accompanied by such grads as Ned Bowler '57, Bill McCary '57, John Suleski '56, Bob Abrahamson '56, Stan Bemburn '56, and Steve Mirski '56.

The contest promises to be an interesting and exciting exhibition, so try to make it.

BASEBALL

There will be a meeting of the Varsity Baseball team on Tuesday, September 19 at 6:00 p.m. in the Cage.

Intramural Program Aims At 'Esprit De Corps' Buildup

Coach Justin Cobb, the director of intramurals on the UMass campus, has further expanded the comprehensive program of last year. The purpose of this program is to provide a broad pattern of organized recreational activities to attract the leisure time pursuits of the student body. Even more than that, the major goal of the program, states Coach Cobb, is to provide an esprit de corps among the participants, both fraternities and dorms.

It is hoped that at least 50 percent of the male student body will take advantage of the facilities available to them. As Provost Gilbert Woodside puts it: "Intellectual work is the most important activity in a college student's life ... But I know that the vast majority of people simply cannot engage in intellectual activity all of the time. The human body is not geared to do this. A student who tries it will be endangering his health. Therefore we urge the student body to take part in the intramural program of the University."

To meet this need, the program of intramurals has been expanded for the benefit of all students who wish to participate.

Intramural competition is designed especially to fulfill the desire for athletic participation among the large group of students who because of skill level, or inclination do not wish to compete on a varsity level. The Intramural program is a supplement to, and a continuation of the general physical education program. Provision is made for the inclusion of all members of the University community in the programming of events.

The Intramural Department is administered by the Director of Intramurals, a supervisor representing each class, an IFC Athletic Chairman, Dormitory representatives (chosen by the Dean of Men), and the Intramural Editor of the Collegian.

The council shall interpret and enforce the rules and regulations, make additions and changes when necessary, rule on protests, develop a system of appropriate awards and in general advise the director.

EXTRAMURAL EVENTS

In addition to the regular schedule of men's intramural activities the campus champion in Touch Football and the campus champion in Basketball represent the University of Massachusetts in an annual game with the respective campus champions of the University of New Hampshire.

The inclusion of faculty members on teams and in tournaments is encouraged. Faculty groups may compete in the Independent Leagues and when possible will be scheduled to compete against other faculty groups.

The Department of Intramurals is always in need of qualified officials. Students who are interested should apply directly to the Intramural Office. Those who are selected receive $1.00 per hour for their services.

According to Coach Cobb, due to the efforts of the IFC and because of the sense of purpose that pervades fraternity life, there always is a fine host of fraternity teams in intramurals.

But this esprit de corps should also apply to dormitories. Dorms can and should have a purpose and a unity similar to that of the fraternities. Because of the relatively small percentage of male students in fraternities (about 35%) the key to the enjoyment of life on campus is the development of an esprit de corps in the dorms.

Identity with the dorms, believes Coach Cobb, an identity somewhat similar to that between a fraternity and its members, is the key to disciplinary problems on campus. The denial of certain varied activities to students and the pressure upon students to behave requires an outlet for the energies of the students. This outlet could be found in intramurals.

A 45 team facility in the Cage makes it possible to carry out a successful program. This allows for the fifteen fraternity teams and eighteen dormitory squads as well as some independent teams.

Touch football, basketball, bowling and volley ball are some of the most popular activities available to the student body, but others include softball, lacrosse, tennis, badminton and many more. The number of sports played depends entirely upon the student interest and participation in intramurals.

To increase this student interest, an elaborate point system has been set up. This system is distinctly separate from the IFC system and applies to all teams playing in intramurals, whether they be dorm, fraternity and independent. Coach Cobbs has also perfected a system ensuring that each team eventually plays all other teams in their respective sports.

TROPHY AWARDED

One of the main stimuli to the participation in intramurals is the hope of obtaining the coveted Stephan Davis Trophy. Victories in the various sports would earn points throughout the year. At the end of the year whichever dorm, fraternity or independent team had garnered the most points would be awarded this plaque. Thus the total number of points, and not merely the possession of a few first places, is the deciding factor in the winning of the prize. The Davis trophy is a beautiful one, and a proud addition to the trophy room of any dorm or fraternity.

But in order to give the trophy must be increased participation in intramural sports. The fraternities have always been strong in intramurals, and, although in recent years the dorms have been making rapid progress, there is still much room for improvement.

It's up to the student to provide for his own health, enjoyment and honor, and there is no better channel of obtaining all of these than the University's Intramural program.

SPORTSENSE

by BEN GORDON '62, Sports Editor

Over the loud speaker as I sit in the Collegian office is coming the strains of "Happy Days are Here Again," and I'd use that line to begin the first column of sportsense this year if it weren't so trite and, to some, so ironical! At any rate, I'm glad to be back, and I send my welcome and the welcome of the Sports Staff to those beanied 1839 frosh and sundry upperclassmen.

The rather informal objective of this column, as many of you sports fans know, is to keep tabs on the sidelights and highlights of UMass sports activities and non-professional sports in general.

BIG SUMMER

It was an eventful summer, sportswise. Some of the highlights you're familiar with, such as Frank Budd's record smashing and near-phenomenal 9.2 100-yd. dash, Valery Brumel's new outside high-jump record of 7'4½" high-jump, Wilma Rudolph's new record smashing performances at Moscow, and the eventful defeat of the Russian trackmen by the U.S. contingent.

Turning to the sports scene on the UMass campus, Coach Earl Lorden's proteges Paul Wennik and Ed Connolly did quite well by themselves. Both men, starring pitchers for Coach Lorden's baseball squad last year, were signed by professional ball clubs. Connolly was picked up by the Red Sox and was playing for the Orlean team near Buffalo. In one game, Sports Publicity Director Dick Page informs me, the tall speedballer fanned eighteen of the opposition. Wennik, the winningest of the Lordens last year was signed by the Washington system.

It'll be another sports packed year at UMass. Coach Bill Footrick will be looking for another YanCon Cross Country championship. His chances for making the mark again are pretty good, having only one man from last year's team, that being Ralph Buschmann. The coach isn't taking any chances though; he was in the cage the other day just sitting in a comfortable armchair waiting for his men to walk into the door. He'll get them running around campus in no-time.

George Giddings, a shot putter on Coach Footrick's track and field team is moving up in the world. He's moved from his counselor job in the Abbey, which for some strange reason he couldn't keep, to a counselor's position in Butterfield, way up on the hill.

But there are always the setbacks in the sports world. Another counselor in Butterfield, Dick Murphy, who was thinking seriously of shot putting for Coach Footrick, gained 26 pounds during the summer — he likes Budweiser—and doesn't think he'll be in any shape to do the team much good. Too bad Dick!

Looking Ahead

Looking far ahead to basketball, it's Madison Square Garden for the Redmen. Coach Matt Zunic's men will play St. Pauls during the winter season in the Big City.

Hustler Mike Mole didn't make it back this semester, but will be back in the lineup in February for the hoop season. All in all, Coach Zunic is quite optimistic about our chances.

Intramurals will be off again within a short time. It looks as if Baker and Butterfield will be fighting it out again for the dorm competition Baker took the honors last year by a small margin.

FOOTBALL FACTS

But the biggest Fall sport for the student body as a whole is football, and we should all see some great action on the gridiron this season. Chuck Studley, who coached last year's squad to a co-championship with perennial king, UConn, has gone to Cincinnati and it'll be interesting to keep tabs on him out there. But Studley left us something—the roughest grid schedule in UMass history. And there isn't a better man to lead the Redmen against this formidable slate than the new head coach Vic Fusia.

IFC ROSTERS
All IFC football rosters must be submitted to Coach Cobb at the Curry Hicks Building by no later than Friday, September 15.

Coach Fusia came to us from Pittsburgh last spring and has been working ever since. His staff of Jack Delaey, Chet Gladchuk, Fred Glatz, Ted Schmitt and Don Johnson has been putting in a 12-14 hour day since last February, and the results of this work are quite evident. The starting squad is one of the best ever assembled at UMass.

The team isn't listening to Yankee Conference predictions. UMass has been picked by most to fight it out with Maine and New Hampshire for the runner-up slot behind UConn, but, then again, they were last year, too.

The Redmen will go after the Maine Bears at Orono on September 23 to launch the season, and will be looking for a repeat of their 21--13 win of last year.

But it's not only the Yankee Conference which faces UMass this year. Holy Cross, considered to be one of the best teams in the East, will be up against us. Bob Hargraves, a star end for the Crusaders, suffered a severe shoulder separation in a scrimmage last week and will be out for a month. This may put a crimp into their plans, but he'll be ready for UMass in November.

Many think Villanova will pose a bigger threat to UMass. They have over twenty lettermen returning, including their entire starting eleven.

But, barring injuries, the UMass squad is capable of pulling an upset. Remember Harvard last year?

At any rate, it'll be a fine sight to see 1839 beanies flying up into the air when the Redmen score their first touchdown against A.I.C. September 30 at Alumni Field. Coach Fusia, the team, the upperclassmen and the Sports Staff expect every freshman to be there. So let's go frosh. It's your team and they need the support of the studnet body to achieve their great potential.

Beanies Abound As Frosh Start Year With Convocations And A Mix

After arriving on campus and donning beanies these freshman girls sing "Happy Birthday" as upperclassmen listen.

The freshman class of 1965 began to arrive Sunday, September 10, and by Monday night hundreds of white and maroon beanies could be seen on the UMass campus.

As most of their owners had become familiar with the grounds and buildings during summer counseling periods, they began getting acquainted with each other as soon as they had gotten their belongings in order and said goodbyes to parents and friends.

That evening, the Scrolls, Maroon Keys, and Revelers sponsored a freshman mix with music by Rod MacLeod.

The frosh also met their upperclass brethren on Tuesday and hope these superior beings will be able to answer any and all questions concerning college life.

Collegian Will Offer Journalism Course

The Fall semester Collegian course in practical journalism will soon be offered to all students interested in student newspaper work. The course will be taught by James R. Reinhold, a UMass graduate, Class of '61, and a former Collegian News Editor.

News reporting, news writing, layout, copy-editing, feature writing, editorial writing and sports will be covered in the eight meeting course. The course will be offered Tuesdays and Thursdays, 3-4 p.m., in the S.U.

A special meeting will be held in the evening for those whose schedules conflict. The day and time for this special class will be announced at a later date.

At the same time the student is in the course, he will be able to take assignments on stories or work in the office in any of the capacities listed above.

Any one interested is asked to come to the Collegian office and fill out a form for enrollment in the course. Those who have already signed are now enrolled in the course.

The purpose of the trip is to consider the feasibility of building, equipping, and staffing a girls' secondary boarding school in Tororo, Uganda somewhat along the lines of an American comprehensive high school.

Dorms Under Construction

Also in July, ground was broken for the first two dormitories to be constructed by the University of Massachusetts Building Authority. The Authority was established as a public authority to construct dormitories and related facilities on lands leased from the Commonwealth for this purpose. The two dormitories now under construction will house 600 students by September, 1962. The Authority is also starting work on housing for 1,000 more students for September, 1963.

President Lederle said, "This is truly an historic occasion marking the beginning of dormitory construction by the new Building Authority."

NOTICE

Handbooks for the Stockbridge students are now available in the R.S.O. office. I.D.'s must be presented in order to receive copies.

Chorale Invites Tryouts; To Hold Rehearsal Thurs.

The Chorale, a select and mixed chorus, will hold its first rehearsal this season in Old Chapel, on Tuesday, September 19, at 6:30 p.m.

This organization has vacancies in the tenor, bass, soprano, and alto sections.

The director, Dr. John R. King will hold tryouts in his office in the basement of Old Chapel. Interested applicants should call during his office hours as for an appointment.

The Chorale operates simultaneously as an R.S.O. organization, with three elected student managers and under Music 23, 24 (Vocal Ensemble) for which credit is available.

The organization is planning two major concerts this season, one each semester, and its annual off-campus tour. There are also plans in process for a recording session in December for a network radio broadcast and a Chorale record.

1800 Frosh Attend President Lederle Reception; Mrs. Lederle and Faculty Also Greet Class of '65

by DICK HAINES, Collegian Staff Reporter

Mr. and Mrs. Lederle greet freshmen at Friday evening reception. Ronald F. Cote, '65 and Judith Dow, '65, meet President and Mrs. Lederle. Dr. Field, Dean of Students, is in background.

About 1800 freshmen attended the Freshmen Reception held Friday Night in the S.U. Ballroom by President and Mrs. John W. Lederle from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

After meeting the president and his wife, the students had the opportunity to meet and talk with faculty members, administration personnel. and housemothers who were preesnted.

Col Aykroyd Introduced

At the reception, Lt. Col. Aykroyd, PMS Armor, made his first public appearance at UMass and talked with many freshmen. He was recently transfered to UMass from Heidelberg, Germany, where he served at Headquarters, USA in Europe. He assumed the post of Col. James W. Weaver who was recently reassigned.

Amazed At Friendliness

Freshmen opinion of the reception was high. "I am amazed at the friendliness of the professors and University officials," commented one freshman.

"This type of activity is very beneficial in instilling school spirit in the freshmen and promotes more campus-wide participation in freshmen," continued a faculty member. Another faculty member stated that activities of this nature were vital to maintain and improve student-teacher-administration rapport.

Members of the Revelers and Mortar Board assisted students in making out name tags. Refreshments were cookies and chocolate chip ice cream.

Study Hall At Libe To Be Open Until 12

Hugh Montgomery, UMass Librarian, has announced at the request of the administration, that Goodell Library will maintain a study hall for undergraduate students on the fourth level of the West Building during the hours from 9:55 p.m. to 12 midnight Sundays through Thursdays.

Fridays the Library will be open 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Saturdays, from 8 a.m to 4:30 p.m. On holidays falling within the period Sundays through Thursdays, the Library will operate on Sunday hours, 2 p.m. through 9:55 p.m.; the study hall, 9:55 p.m. to midnight.

Solely For Study

Montgomery said it should be thoroughly understood that the "study hall" is operated solely for the purpose of providing a quiet reading area for students using their own books or reserve books charged from the Library Reserve desk on the fourth level. No services of any sort will be provided. Additional reserve books will not be issued from the reserve desk after 9:45 p.m.

Books may be returned until midnight at the fourth level reference desk at the north end of the building. However, as all reserve books are charged for overnight use, they may still be used outside the Library until 9:15 a.m. the next day without incurring a fine of 25c an hour.

The use of books from the stacks, reference books from other levels of the Library, periodicals, newspapers and microfilm are not allowed after 9:45 p.m. There will be one man on duty on level four.

Privilege Applies To Women

The late study privileges at the Library apply to both men and women students. Women students not using the Library after 9:45 must obey the regular curfew hours. Those who use the study hall are required to sign a permission slip and leave it with their housemother and sign out on a special sheet.

Girls using the study hall must be there at 9:55 p.m. and once they have left, must return immediately to their dormitories.

Operates on Trial Basis

The Library will operate with the new hours only on a trial basis. Whether it continues maintaining a study hall for a longer period than November 15th will depend upon an evaluation of the use statistics and student reaction to the new hours.

The Library is open the extra hours at the expense of extra time and work on the part of the staff and cost to the University. Unless the room is effectively used as a place for study, and, a businesslike atmosphere is maintained, the service may be discontinued, Montgomery stated.

No Smoking Allowed

There will be no smoking at any time in the reading areas.

This service is provided in the interests of affording the students a quiet place to study. The overcrowding of the University dormitories and the heavy use of the Student Union for activities other than reading have provided a purpose for initiating this experiment.

"Student cooperation in maintaining an intelligent approach to the Library is invited and required," said Montgomery.

NOTICE

The Police Department has announced that car registration for seniors, special students, graduate students, and teaching fellows will be held in the South Lot on Tuesday, Sept. 19.

On Wednesday, Sept. 20, all other student cars will be registered.

In the event of rain on Tuesday, registration will be Wednesday, Sept. 20, and Thurs. Sept. 21. However, if there is rain on both Tues. and Wed., the registration will take place on Thurs., Sept. 21, and on Tues. Sept, 26.

New Center For Therapy Aids Children

The following was taken from the Amherst-Journal Record.

For thousands of Massachusetts children who suffer from speech or hearing problems, there is a new faculty of hope at the University of Massachusetts.

With more than 300 additional therapists needed to help the estimated 50,000 Massachusetts children hampered by speech or hearing deficiencies, the university's recently opened hearing and speech center is dedicated to producing as many therapists as possible.

Operating along clinical lines, the center presently has a caseload of more than 100 persons, ranging in age from 3 to 80, who receive treatment for various difficulties, including stuttering, delayed speech, hearing loss, articulation defects, aphasia (inability to use or understand words because of brain injury), and voice problems.

Training Center

The center is devoted to helping many Massachusetts citizens who have such problems — but most important of all, it provides a training program by which therapists can be produced for greater service along a broader front. The university plan provides for training of speech and hearing therapists within the speech department. As majors in that department, students receive a broad foundation in the arts and sciences, with specialized training in speech pathology and audiology.

Laboratory training is an important part of this program, both on the undergraduate and gradaute levels; and the new facilities in the recently opened

New Pay Raises Set For UMass Students

Robert J. Morrissey, Director of Placement and Financial Services, has announced new student employment pay rates. The minimum wage has been increased to ninety cents per hour and there will be five and ten cent hourly increases for various years' experience.

The only exception to this new pay scale is weekly dormitory office workers who will be paid seventy-five cents per hour.

For inexperienced personnel doing general work the minimum hourly wage will be ninety cents. Experienced and skilled workers meriting increases will be paid ninety-five cents to $1.10 hourly.

Special, scientific, technical, or sub-administrative personnel will be paid $1 to $1.15. The range for professional assistants will be $1.25 to $2 per hour.

The Placement Service estimated that 25 per cent of UMass students would be affected.

Innovations Planned For Convocation

Thursday, September 21, at 11 a.m. in the ballroom of the S.U., President John W. Lederle will address the student body. By presenting policy statements for the year and pointing out administrative thinking is regard to student life both in academic and extra-curricular affairs, it is hoped that this Opening Convocation will become an annual University affair with real meaning and enthusiastic reception by a large attendance of students.

In addition to faculty appearing in academic costume, some new innovations have been added. The present members of the Student Senate will be presented and class officers will be recognized. This gives all students a chance to see in person those who are dealing with Senate affairs which directly affect student life on campus.

Classes will be dismissed five minutes early to allow time to be seated in the ballroom. The student body is urged to make this opening convocation an outstanding event of the year and "fill the ballroom of the S.U. to overflowing next Thursday."

Enrollment Near 7000 At UMass

There are about 5,700 undergraduates at UMass this fall as compared to 5,257 last year, according to Marshall O. Lamphear, director of admissions.

In addition there are about 800 graduate students, 400 at the Stockbridge school and 100 special students, taking a course or two. The grand total comes to an approximate 7,000 this year, which points toward the 10,000 goal in 1965.

The fact that two additional Ph.D.,'s have been offered during the past year, in French and sociology, and one additional Master's, in speech, in the same length of time, is indicative of the growth pattern. Now thirty-seven departments offer the master's degree and sixteen the Ph.D.

To Dr. William Field, our new Dean of Students, and to Dr. Gilbert Woodside, now our official Provost, we extend our sincerest congratulations and best wishes for extended tenures of office. The division of labor between these two members of the administration is a major and creditable move on the part of yearling-President Lederle.

Last year, when "Cuba si, Yanki no," resounded across the hemisphere, UMass students heard, almost as often, the now famous, "Give him a chance to get his feet on the ground," in reference to their new University President. With a new bucket full of money to deal with in July, Dr. Lederle began what we hope to be a major build up program within the administration and faculty.

With Provost Woodside now able to handle exclusively the academic side of student affairs and Dr. Field marshalling the personal and non-academic side of students, a great deal of time-consuming red tape has been averted. The fact that these important administrators will now be more accessable to students is equal in importance to the fact that our President has finally made his presence firmly felt.

Strong decisions will have to be made within the next few years. Some will be popular . . . like the position of Dean of Students. Some will be unpopular . . . like the extra freshmen this year. But the crown of popularity is seldom worn by the executive during periods of change and reform. Our eastern State Universities are facing a challenge from economic and population growth. We ask not for a popular University President but rather for an informed and strong one.

—J.T.

Letters

To the Editor,

Hats off to the author of the brilliantly written parody on academic life in the first issue of this year's Collegian. If taken seriously, it would be a disturbing example of the depths to which intellect has been drawn on this campus. But since the ponderous platitudes and thought-clichés of the editorial were never meant to be taken seriously, the editor will appreciate a closer scrutiny of this piece de resistance.

Man is not perfectable, and no one since the eighteenth century has seriously believed it. This earth has had the experience of knowing only one Perfect Man, and even though we may aspire to His example, yet the goal is unattainable. Man is, at best, refinable; and the further he removes himself from bestial behavior, the more he can be called the master, rather than the prisoner, of his environment.

If the University community were, as the author assèrts, to offer a measure of security, it would fail its purpose. The task of a university is the abolition of ignorance, and intellectual security would hinder this task by providing a harbor for inborn prejudices. Liberation from the darkness of ignorance is the reward for diligent inquiry.

Contrary to the author's fervent belief, the surrender of solitude is not the price of learning, but the price of ignorance. The advantage of a large university is the relative anonymity and solitude it offers to those who seek it. Equating the solitary life with greed, hate, and excess is, perhaps, the greatest blunder of those who fancy themselves "popular". Was Ramakrishna greedy? Was St. Thomas Aquinas hateful? Was Henry Thoreau excessive? These three nobly bore the ostracism of an ignorant "brotherhood."

The author's true comic intentions are revealed in the final paragraph where he solemnly admonished us to "love and hesitate." In love, "he who hesitates is lost." Only the ridiculous nature of this editorial saves it from being pure rot.

Richard Boardman

Ed. Note—Aristotle first said, "Man, when perfected, is the best of animals." We think you missed his point. We made no such mention, as you say we did, of "intellectual security" but rather we wrote of the existence of security offered by societal organization. We think you missed our point. Philosopher Bertrand Russell wrote, "The distinctive feature of the unintelligent man is the hastiness and absoluteness of his opinions . . ." but you say, "In love, 'he who hesitates is lost.' " You may have missed Bert's point. Thus, we think you missed all our points and, even after several readings, we KNOW you missed all our points.

CAPE COD SWINGS

It Was A Great Summer, by all standards—as soon as that last exam was taken in May, there was only one thought in mind — the Cape. Everyone was there—hundreds of them, thousands—they came from everywhere, in swarms and droves—flocked to the beaches, cottages and restaurants—"Where are you from? Oh, do you know—? Where do you go to school?"—UConn!—and what's more, everyone you knew: can you imagine sitting in the Snack Bar only to find your last semester lab partner right next to you?—that's the Cape for you.

And it was crowded, to say the least—one of Cape Cod's biggest seasons as it continues to be the popular vacation spot for President and Mrs. Kennedy at their Hyannisport home—St. Francis-Xavier Church was filled to capacity every Sunday, along with Otis Air Force Base where a new instrument-controlled landing system was put into effect for the President's arrivals.

It Was An Interesting Summer—so much to do, places to go—Errol Garner at the Melody Tent, Louis Armstrong and the All-Stars —and the disappointment registered when the Kingston Trio broke up and cancelled their engagement at Storyville—sailing, water skiing, swimming, jazz concerts, parties—and that's not all—motorcycle rides through Hyannis (not for long, though—three on a bike, like four in an M.G.)—oh, those men in blue.

Where did they live? Where do they stay? From the Canal shore to the wilds of Provincetown, some rented cottages or guest houses—while others beckoned to many of Cape Cod's finer beaches—some were evicted bag and baggage within a day or two, others waited a week—always on the move, just bounced around, slept in cars—or wherever anyone would take them—some were good-hearted and helped others find places to stay or moved baggage before the landlord threw it out on the street.

How did they get around? A car was a must—if you were lucky enough to have one—those who didn't just took their chances—Rte. 28 was so "handy." What did they live on?—hamburgers, cheeseburgers, pizzas, frappes—or some would indulge in Petrillo's special spaghetti take-out.

Return To Bass River

It Was An Eventful Summer — Where did they go? What did they do?—well, they went to Bass River, but they didn't go fishing —start out at the Vet's maybe—then for a free twistin' lesson at Sloppy Joe's (creates a terrific atmosphere)—or down to the Coffee House for the limbo contest—those kids were terrific—what a crowd —standing on chairs to watch and everyone in a trance—how about those Sunday night talent shows and the popular "Michael Rode the Boat Ashore?"—of course, no evening was complete without one stop at the Club Hazlemore, better known as "Harry's Heavenly Haven for the Homeless" (all that refrigerator space and no food)—or there were always the jazz concerts at Sandy Pond, then take the "Night Train" to the Dinasaur Lounge with the Fabulous Flintstones — or those terrific jam sessions with the Nick Peters' Combo at the Chuckwagon.

Going to Craigville?—a saltwater campus—they all were there, new friends, old friends—those you hadn't seen since high school—always mobbed, hardly any room—can you imagine getting a tan in two feet of beach?—yet, they loved every minute of it. Beach parties? —go to Sandy Neck or Nauset—always something doing—"Oh, the beach closes at midnight? Well, it may be your beach, mister, but the ocean belongs to everyone."

It Wasn't A Financially Rewarding Summer—Where did they work? Jobs were plentiful, yet competition was keen—had to be in the right place at the right time—some worked, some didn't—a few of the resourceful even managed to save some money (how did they do it?)—you saw them everywhere, doing everything: cleaned motel units, waitressed, collected rubbish, garbage, laundry, drove milk trucks, directed traffic, baked pizzas, washed dishes, built swimming pools, moved furniture, acted in plays, washed windows, lifeguarded, packed groceries, car-hopped, taught swimming, bartendered—left and right, they quit or were fired—come and go—back home to work for a while, only to come down to the Cape on weekends.

It Was A Crazy Summer—crazy clothes, crazy talk, crazy living —saw a fellow getting a suntan, not too ununusual, but on the roof of a car going forty miles an hour??—never a dull moment, everything moved fast—people, time, cars, money—time meant nothing—one day rolled into the next—days flew by—no plans, no schedule, but go, go, go just the same—live for today—many felt they'd be drafted or at war by this time with the Berlin crisis threatening world peace.

Old Cape Cod—a summer campus, perhaps, but never a summer school—except, maybe, for the three R's—raids, riots and revivals—remember those jumpin' revival meetings? "Damn you wicked sinners!"

But it was too good to last—the summer was gone before they knew it—and Labor Day brought everything to a close—it was time for goodbyes and address-taking—and it was time to head back to campus with fond memories, tanned faces and sun-bleached hair—yes, it all happened at the Cape—and believe me, that's just how it happened—see you next summer?

Berlin And Limited War

It is now quite clear that the Soviet resumption of nuclear tests is "inextricably bound" to the Berlin crisis. It is even clearer, however, that the Soviet move is related not merely to Berlin, but, in greater measure to the concept of limited war.

At the moment, the Berlin situation constitutes the greatest threat to war. Yet, what type of war will it be? The Soviets say that if there is war it will be full-scale. Assuming that Kruschev means what he says, we can readily see the dilemma with which the Allies are confronted. Are the Allies to remain implacable in their resistance to the East German peace treaty, thus increasing the possibility of a war which may know no bounds or are they to maintain a flexible position in order to facilitate negotiation?

Initially, the United States affirmed the former position. Yet, as the Soviets have raised the stakes in Berlin (by their open rejection of limited war) we may expect to see a softening of the over-all allied position. I use the phrase "over-all" simply because the Western position is naturally a mosaic. Thus, although DeGaulle may not go along with flexibility in negotiation, the Western position can evolve from implacability to cautious flexibility.

It would be incorrect, however, to confuse flexibility with appeasement. Flexibility is the essence of compromise. Compromise is essential in negotiation as long as it is not at the expense of principle.

There is of course a body of opinion in the United States which accepts only the present situation in Berlin and refuses to adopt a flexible policy. Those who adhere to this position are usually doped by the opium of limited war. According to this view, war over Berlin will be localized war. Thus, it is worthwhile to engage in a localized war in order to maintain the Western position throughout the world. Proof of the widespread acceptance of this view can be seen in recent expenditures for the development of limited war potential.

In addition to the "stand-firmers" who support the theory of limited war, there are also the "stand firmers" who are heedless of the dangers of total war. This philosophy is based upon the "kill now or die later, anyhow" theory! It is significant that this theory is most widely held in the United States. This is obviously because most Americans have absolutely no concept of war, let alone nuclear war.

The Soviet-East German treaty will compel us to recognize the East German regime. This, however, need not entail the abject surrender of West Berlin. Certainly a stand firm attitude (in the sense of complete inflexibility) cannot possibly benefit anybody since it will serve to stifle negotiations.

Of course one could purchase a bomb shelter to fend off 100 megton explosions.

Seems funny in a world where one is urged to close the match cover before striking!!

At first glance...

Our editorial points to the new Dean of Student's position as a year-long awaited example of President Lederle making his presence felt. It also proposes the possibility that our times will make it difficult for Lederle's administration to win any popularity contests . . . In his first column of the new academic year, Mike Palter writes of the pressures which may force the West to soften their "stand-firm" position in Berlin . . . With the sand still in many shoes, Marcia Ann Voikos remembers Old Cape Cod as a summer campus . . . And our "Letters to the Editor" section opens with a "boom" when Richard Boardman of the Young Republican's Prism staff tags our first editorial as close to "pure rot."

School Of Education Is Site Of New Elementary School

New $2 million school of education shown nearing completion late last fall. This building will house the Mark's Meadow elementary school for the Town of Amherst. The new school has many advantages for the incoming youngsters, including air-conditioned wardrobes, washroom facilities in the class rooms, and toilet facilities readily accessible.

Great-granddad's eyes would have popped at the sight of the unique features of the new Mark's Meadow school being readied for the occupancy of 300 Amherst elementary school children.

"A principal's dream come true," is the way Arthur Bertrand, Mark's Meadow principal, refers to the ultra modern plant and facilities.

This laboratory school located in the new school of education building on the University of Massachusetts campus will be operated jointly by the school of education and Amherst school officials.

An official open house at the new school will be held in October. Until that time Amherst school officials are asking that parents and townspeople make no attempt to make an inspection visit.

Air Conditioned Wardrobes

Each of the 12 classrooms has approximately 900 cubic feet of space. Storage facilities are plentiful and built in wardrobes in each room are air conditioned to keep student's clothing fresh as well as dry. Each room also contains a sink and bubbler.

An exit between each two rooms provides easy access to the out of doors for fire protection and greater convenience.

For the first three grades toilet facilities are readily available in each room. A main toilet area is set up for grades four, five and six.

Hot Lunch Program

Even children living in the Mark's Meadow neighborhood will not go home for lunch and there will be no bag lunches, according to Mrs. Kathleen Padelford, elementary supervisor. Two lunch periods are planned in the cafeteria which seats 150. Food will be partially paid for under the federal hot lunch program.

Another unique feature, especially in an elementary school, is the gymnasium for indoor games.

A section of the 90 by 50 foot library has been designed for the elementary pupils. The larger part will be used by University of Massachusetts students in the school of education. An auditorium seating between two and three hundred will be used jointly by the pupils and University students.

Observation Facilities

According to the agreement between the University and the town of Amherst, "the primary goal of the cooperative project is to furnish the University with "a valuable training and research adjunct which will render outstanding services to the citizens of the commonwealth through the development of more effective teaching methods, equipment and techniques."

To make this training and research available to the school of education students special features have been incorporated into the Mark's Meadow school.

An observation corridor fitted with one-way glass looks down on all the class rooms. Two $20,000 closed circuit TV units, located in the school of education will also allow prospective teachers to see class rooms in operation. Since it is important to hear as well as see a suspended microphone is installed in each classroom.

The Mark's Meadow school is officially ready for occupancy having been inspected and conditionally accepted by the Massachusetts Division of Building

Science vs. Religion Topic Of C.A. Lecture

Campbell Searle, Professor of Electrical Engineering at M.I.T., addressed a Christian Association gathering on the Incompatability of Science and Religion last night in the S.U. Ballroom.

Searle's talk centered on the fact that scientific method could not be applied to the arts, drama, music, human relations, or religion.

Searle said, "The scientific method does not resolve conflicts between science and religion." He said the individual must resolve any conflicts that arise between the sciences and religion.

Last night's talk was the first in a series of critiques to be offered by the Christian Association.

4 UM Grads Leading Class At BC Law

Four of the thirty graduates of UMass now attending Boston College Law School led the class of 110 after examinations in May and June of 1961.

They are:

Richard M. Gaberman, an Accounting major while attending UMass, was active in Alpha Epsilon Pi, Phi Kappa Phi, Beta Gamma Sigma, Interfraternity Council, and was on the Dean's List 3 years. In his senior year he was named to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

A former Math major, Alan M. Kaplan, was president of Math Club in his senior year and served on several S.U. Committees.

Stephen J. Paris, a History major, belonged to Tau Epsilon Phi and several dramatic societies including Campus Varieties.

An Economics and General Business major while at UMass. Michael B. Spitz was a member of Alpha Epsilon Pi, a S.U. Committee, and belonged to the Industrial Administration Club.

The class enrollments as of this time run as follows: 1965, 1150 men and 700 women; 1964, 811 men and 610 women; 1963, 812 men and 523 women; 1962, 619 men and 360 women. The ratio of men to women runs fairly parallel to the ratio of a applications.

Therapy . . .

Bartlett hall are a fitting site for the supervised clinical work undertaken by majors in the program. The center's equipment includes such mechanisms as tape recorders, clinical audiometer, group hearing aid, playback apparatus, models of speech and hearing organs and phonetic charts—all utilized in the daily program of clinical treatment of children and adults.

The faculty also includes four student training rooms, a student reading room, two offices, one large classroom and a smaller room connected by two-way vision mirrors for observation rooms allows for careful listening in the process of therapy as well as for recording of interviews and evaluations for subsequent teaching purposes. Soon, too, there will be another room in which audiometer testing will take place under sound-proof conditions.

Clinical Experience

Trainees in the field observe the professional staff at work and learn the techniques by which effective practice can be undertaken in other settings—in hospitals, rehabilitation centers, elementary, secondary and special schools. Clinical experience is supported by course work in the scientific bases of speech, rehabilitation of the acoustically handicapped and other areas.

School Children Aided

The center cooperates actively with the Massachusetts department of education whose program includes certification of speech and hearing therapists for various institutional settings in Massachusetts. Aiding this program is a newly adopted plan providing fifty percent reimbursement by the commonwealth to local public school systems for speech and hearing services. The university's course of study is designed to give students the background and special skills needed to fulfill the certification requirements of both the Massachusetts department of education and the American Speech and Hearing association.

Dr. Inez Hegarty

In charge of this entire program is Dr. Inez Hegarty, a graduate of nearby Mt. Holyoke college. With a Ph.D. degree from the University of Wisconsin, Miss Hegarty served successively as a hearing and speech expert at Wellesley college, Mt. Holyoke college, the Massachusetts General hospital and the Bay State Rehabilitation Center.

Under government grants, she has studied organic voice disorders and esophagal speech at the University of Miami Medical school and psychological assessment of the deaf at Gallaudet college in Washington, D.C.

At present, as director of the University of Massachusetts program, she is the energetic, friendly and very effective leader of a curricular and clinical process which has deeply significant implications for the many Massachusetts citizens experiencing speech and hearing disorders.

Assisting Dr. Hegarty is Miss Catherine Hanifan whose background includes degrees from Mt. Holyoke college and Northwestern university and teaching experience at Smith college, St. Catherine's college in Minnesota, Trinity college in the nation's capital and the Springeld public schools.

Two Million Afflicted

With two million school-age children afflicted with speech and hearing handicaps in the United States, the university program can well serve as a pattern for similar programs throughout the country. The most pressing needs are in the public school systems of this and other states, where trained therapists may be able to alleviate difficulties which, when untreated in childhood, can become marked handicaps in later years.

(Persons interested in the university's speech and hearing rahabilitation program should write to Dr. Inez Hegarty, Speech and Hearing Center, Bartlett Hall, University of Massachusetts. There is no fee for services rendered.)

Redmen Look Sharp in 25-0 Victory Over Maroon Team

Amid high hopes and anxieties, Massachusetts gridiron fans caught a sneak preview of the 1961 Redmen Saturday as Coach Fusia's men trounced Springfield College, 25-0, in a game-type scrimmage on Alumni Field.

Fusia, the former top assistant at Pittsburg, used only four seniors on the starting eleven. With the exception of sophomores, Fred Lewis and Ken Palm, however, all were lettermen.

The Redmen broke the scoring ice with three minutes remaining in the first period when Paul Majeski hauled in John McCormick's 30 yard pass in the end zone.

Twice the Maroons threatened early in the second quarter. Hopes for an equalizing TD were fumbled away on the UMass 5 yard stripe. The Redmen, however, returned the favor by loosing the pigskin on the second play. Again, though, Springfield failed to open the door paydirt which remained closed to them for the rest of the afternoon.

In the third quarter John McCormick engineered a UM drive to the opposition's 1 yard line. From there the Belmont ace swept around his own left end for the touchdown.

John Bamberry, who had missed his first conversion attempt, made no mistake on this one; and the Redmen were riding high, 13-0.

Midway through the final stanza Mike Salem recovered a fumble in midair and had clear sailing for 35 yards for another score.

John Bamberry sandwiched two field goals of 20 and 13 yards around this TD and the '61 tribe of Redmen warriors had tomahawked Springfield, 25-0.

The Redmen's double "L" boys, Lussier and Lewis, piled up 143 of the team's 243 total rushing yards. Sam ground out 78 yards in 13 carries while the latter halfback utilized his speed around the outside to average eight yards in as many attempts.

EXTRA

University of Massachusetts Director of Athletics Warren P. McGuirk said that the University of Massachusetts is happy to have its football team elevated to the major category by the Eastern College Athletic Conference. The Redmen, who enjoyed their best season in almost three decades last year, have toughened up their schedule considerably this fall with the addition of two of the East's top independents, Holy Cross and Villanova.

It took four men to bring down FREDDY LEWIS after a five yard gain through the tackle slot. Lewis and Sam Lussier picked up good yardage for the Redmen.

PAUL MAJESKI, who could be the finest end in the Yankee Conference this year, picked up a few yards in Saturday's scrimmage against Springfield before he was brought down by three of his opponents.

Alumni Stop Booters, 3-0

The University of Massachusetts Alumni soccer team defeated Coach Larry Briggs' varsity booters for the second straight year, Saturday, in the rubber game of a series which has continued for three years now.

The Alumni, winning by a 3-0 score, were led by Captain Chuck Niedzwiecki who is now a high school soccer coach.

The three tallies were scored by Andy Psilakis of Springfield, Charlie Leverone and Grant Bowman. Captain Niedzwiecki stopped all varsity attempts to score with some outstanding goal tending. Ted Smith, the West Springfield High Coach and Ned Bowler of Monson also played fine ball for the Alumni.

by DICK MACKLEM '62

As the Yankee Conference strives to emerge from oblivion, a few of our local products are beginning to make themselves known. The most outstanding case is young Rollie Sheldon, the erratic ace of UConn's pitching staff, who has won many important games in his rookie year with the Yankees. I saw him destroy the Red Sox early in June at Fenway Park, and was proud to see one of our own do so well.

At last reports gigantic Paul Lindstrom of New Hampshire is in the starting lineup of the Boston Patriots football team and John Rollins of Rhode Island, who was a one-man show against the Redmen for three years, is striving for a position with the Green Bay Packers.

As far as the Eastern College Athletic Association is concerned UMass for the first year has the status of major college in football. Joining us in the elite ranks are UConn and U. of Buffalo.

While on the subject of New England, we are waiting to see if Red Auerbach of the Celtics missed the boat on local talent again. Last year Red passed over Len Wilkins of Providence and little Lenny amazed everyone "in the know" by winning a starting position with the Western Conference champion St. Louis Hawks, and was an amazing rookie. Granted, the Celtics were overly rich in back-court talent, with Cousy, Sharman, and the Jones boys, plus Ramsey playing guard when needed; but again this year with Sharman gone, Red overlooked a Providence boy. Johnny Egan was drafted by the Detroit Pistons for a starting slot.

Many of you will be glad to hear that Frank Leja, the young Western Mass. boy who signed a large bonus contract with the Yankees a few years ago, but never made the grade, is fighting his way back from obscurity. Frank had an excellent season in the International League this year where he was the RBI king. Maybe the Yanks can find a spot for him next year.

Harry Wismer, now the voice and money behind the New York Titans of the American Football League, has stated that he is willing to put up $35,000 as his share of the expenses for an exhibition game between his new Titans and the well-established New York Giants of the National League at the end of this season with all proceeds going to charity. Somehow we don't think it would be much of a contest. The Giants' experience and wealth of manpower should overwhelm the Titans. The new league is coming on fast, but it will be a few years yet.

Did you notice the picture of Jim Piersall putting the boot to two "fans" who attacked him in the Yankee Stadium last week? It was one of the finest sport photos I've ever seen. We know that Jim is eccentric, but we're all behind him this time.

Town Proposes Zone For UMass Campus

A campus zone south of the UMass campus was proposed by the Amherst town planning board Wednesday and will be presented at a future town meeting.

According to a report by the Amherst Journal-Record, one planning board member said, "Fraternities and sororities are part of the Amherst zoning picture. With the expected growth in student population we will probably have more of them as well as other student oriented groups."

Boundaries for the campus zone will be discussed at a later meeting.

Members of the board emphasized that establishment of a campus zone would not mean that unrestricted buying, remodeling or building would be allowed. Permits have to be obtained from the zoning board of appeals which would give the board an opportunity to see plans and make sure that certain standards are met.

The board voted to support the request of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Weidhaas for a variance to permit them to sell their Lincoln Ave. property to Kappa Kappa Gamma. A public hearing will be held on the petition Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the court room, town hall.

Provost McCune's House New Home of Alpha Chi's

Alpha Chi Omega sorority is now occupying the white house, formerly Provost McCune's residence, near the new education building.

The Alpha Chi's had originally planned to live in the old infirmary, but they have decided to rent this house from UMass temporarily.

Desks, beds, and bureaus have been supplied by the University, but the living room and kitchen furniture have not arrived yet.

The girls are still in the process of redecorating their large twenty room house. Thirty girls are now living there for the entire year. There are study rooms and two dining rooms capable of serving fifty.

In addition, there is a spacious porch and a separate apartment for their new Head of Residence Mrs. Helbling.

The ACO President on behalf of the sisters of Alpha Chi Omega sorority, sincerely thanked the University, Mrs. Gonon, and the Alpha Chi Omega advisors for their help and co-operation.

Campus Illustrated Solicits Material From Collegiates

Each month throughout the college year, a national magazine, Campus Illustrated, intends to bring news of college life across the country and around the world supplied by campus correspondents.

Being a magazine for, and written largely by, members of the college community, Campus Illustrated is hoping to receive plenty of material from readers on campuses around the nation. The magazine is in the market for short stories, essays, poems, humorous anecdotes concerning events on campus or in the classroom, cartoons and photos of college activties.

Campus Illustrated has offices at 805-15th St. Northwest, Washington, D.C., and representatives on over 300 campuses across the nation. To obain a copy of the September issue, a nine month subscription, or information, contact Barry Freedman — Campus Representative, 308 Chadbourne House or the above address.

Registration Dance Starts School Year

A swarm of faithful rock 'n' rollers invaded the hot and humid S.U. Ballroom last Wednesday evening, intent on beginning the school year with a real "blast." Here Judy Page '64 and Dave Morrison '63 are dancing up a storm. The Freshman Dance, held Tuesday night in the Ballroom, offered the men of the class of '65 their last chance to snare a frosh woman before the upperclassmen took over Wednesday.

Applications Accepted Now For Civil Service Exams

Applications are now being accepted for the 1962 Federal Service Entrance Examination, the United States Civil Service Commission has announced.

This examination, open to college juniors, seniors, and graduate students regardless of major study, as well as to persons who have had equivalent experience, offers the opportunity to begin a career in the Federal Service in one of some 60 different occupational fields. A written test is required.

The positions to be filled from the FSEE are in various Federal agencies and are located in Washington, D.C., and throughout the United States. Depending on the qualifications of the candidate, starting salaries will be $4,345 or $5,355 a year. Management Internationships with starting salaries of $5,355 or $6,435 a year, will also be filled from this examination.

Applicants who apply by September 28, 1961, will be scheduled for the written test to be held on October 14. Six additional tests have been scheduled during the year. The dates are: November 18, 1961; January 13, February 10, March 17, April 14, and May 12, 1962.

Closing date for acceptance of applications for Management Internships is January 25, 1962. For all other positions, the closing date is April 26, 1962.

Details concerning the requirements, further information about the positions to be filled, and instructions on how to apply are given in civil service announcement No. 265. These announcements and application cards may be obtained from Mr. Donald J. King, at the civil service regional office located in the Amherst Post Office, or from the U.S. Civil Sedvice Commission, Washington 25, D.C. These pamphlets also may be obtained at the Collegian office.

Dr. Anderson To Launch 3 Year Study

The U.S. Public Health Service has awarded a grant of $82,354. to a UMass zoologist for a three-year study of the submicroscopic world of living cells.

Dr. Everett Anderson, newly appointed professor of zoology at the University, will use the highly complex "eye" of an electron microscope for a closer "Look" at the inner composition of parts of cells from different kinds of animals.

Ordinary optical microscopes are not powerful enough to explore the minute worlds deep within certain types of cells. Working on a different principle, the electron microscope can probe with far greater effectiveness into the innermost parts of cells.

Dr. Anderson, a graduate of Fisk University with a Ph.D. from the State University of Iowa, said that his aim is to correlate facts about the composition of cells with the function such cells perform. An expert in the use of the electron microscope, he will offer graduate courses in the fine structure of cells. Students will be trained on the University's new electron microscope housed in the Justin Morrill Science Center.

Dr. Anderson is presently attending the First International Congress of Protozoologists in Prague, Czechoslovakia, where he has been invited to present a paper on cell structure in certain microorganisms.

Several Senators Not To Run; One Resigns Tonight

Nomination Papers Will Be Available

Nomination papers will be available for elections coming up October 12, in the RSO offices in the S.U. Papers will be available for all Senate posts including dorm senators, fraternity senators, sorority senators, and commutor senators.

Nomination papers for other class officers will also be available.

Nomination papers for vice president, class of '63, and vice president, class of '64, will be available for candidates who wish to seek these offices, Friday, September 22.

Other Papers Available

All others who wish nomination papers for senatorial offices and class officers are asked to pick up their papers Friday, September 29, in the RSO offices.

Nomination papers for vice president, class of '63, and vice president, class of '64, must be returned, with sufficient signatures, by Friday, September 29.

Nomination papers for dorm senators, fraternity senators, sorority senators, commuter senators and class officers must be returned by Friday, October 6.

Elections Oct. 10

Elections for all these offices will be held Tuesday, October 10.

The Senate is reminding the student body that they are invited to become members of the various committees. Linda Achenbach, vice president of the Student Senate and chairman of committees, will be available to any members of the student body who wish to work on Senate committees.

Volunteer Help Needed At Belchertown School

Every Saturday afternoon during the school year, 1500 people at Belchertown State School for the Mentally Retarded, await the arrival of UMass students who willingly volunteer their time, energy and talents at the school.

Children Responsive

Volunteer work consists of holding a child's hand, learning the latest dances from bandstand experts (the children), answering the child's natural questions of "why", and helping him understand his emotional and personal problems. Volunteers can use their own imginations to suggest games and activities to the children, but the children are usually so responsive that they will be asking the questions and suggesting the things to do.

At Belchertown the people live in buildings according to their physical and mental ages. There is a nursery for boys and girls to about age ten, and an infirmary for young babies and older men and women. There are also buildings for teenage girls and older women and for teenage boys and older men. Volunteers can work at any of these buildings.

Belchertown is a school for the mentally retarded, not an institution for the mentally ill or insane. Mental retardation is a permanent affliction incurred at birth or through accident.

No Training Needed

One needs no special training to be a Belchertown volunteer—just a liking for people and a desire to make someone happy. Since there are so many people at Belchertown many volunteers are needed in order that each building receives some students each Saturday. Besides volunteers, drivers are urgently needed. To be a driver volunteer one does not have to work in the buildings. Quiet lounges are available for studying or reading to any student willing to drive volunteers to and from the school on whatever Saturday they could make it. There is a great need for such help.

University volunteers leave Skinner Parking Lot at 1:15 every Saturday afternoon, work from 2:00 to 4:00 at Belchertown and arrive back on campus by 4:50.

Additional information about the Belchertown Project is available at the Christian Association Office in the Student Union.

Della Penna Will Quit To Maintain Marks; Others To Fill Terms, Not To Run Again

by JOSEPH BRADLEY, News Assignment Editor

VIN DELLA PENNA

At least one Student Senator will resign tonight at the first Senate meeting of the year. Five more Student Senators will not seek re-election at the completion of their terms this October.

Senators Explain Their Positions

Vin Della Penna, '64, will resign his senatorial post mainly for academic reasons. Della Penna, who is below the 2.0 requirement, also cited what he termed "the anti-intellectual attitude" of the student body. This, he said, was also a reason leading to his resignation from the students' representative body.

Della Penna, who holds the Senate post until June of 1962, is not affected by the 2.0 requirement.

Senator Ray Wilson '64, Van Meter, will not seek re-election this October. Wilson stated his reasons as mainly academic also. He said the Senate made constant demands on his time.

Work Load in Senate Heavy

Wilson went on to explain that senate Committees, which are open to the student body, are handled almost entirely by the senators. Only one non-senator was a member of any Senate Committees last year.

Wilson said, "70 to 80 per cent of the time of the Senate was taken up with non official Senate work such as conferences with other senators, constituents, and other members of the student body."

Wilson declared, "Senate Committees are too small and no outsiders seem interested in student politics.' He suggested that Freshmen "join committees for a taste of Senate work" before running for the Senate.

"You're obligated for a year", Wilson continued. "If you join a committee, you can explain to the committee chairman if the load is too heavy, and then drop out."

He also suggested more recognition for committee members. Wilson felt that more non Senators would join committees if there were sufficient recognition for their work.

Senate Not in Difficulty

The other senators who will definitely not seek re-election in October are Senators Peter Haebler '63, Thomas Fratar '63, Andy D'Avanzo '63, and one woman senator is seriously considering not running.

All those interviewed felt that more student body co-operation on Senate committees would ease the work load of the Student Senate.

Senate President Pro Tem Tex Tacelli said that although the Senate was losing several good Senators, he believed the Senate would not be in any serious difficulty.

Reservists May Join Naval Co.

U.S. Naval Reserve Research Company 1-3, affiliated with the office of Naval Research, is resuming its activity on the UMass campus.

The Company affords reservists the opportunity to maintain and improve their status within the Naval Establishment. Members of the student body as well as individuals within the faculty and staff who are members of the Reserve are eligible, as are other reservists who live in Western Massachusetts.

This is the twelfth year of the unit's uninterrupted service with the Navy.

Meetings are held two or three times monthly, on Tuesday evenings at 7:30 p.m., in Dickinson Hall. The next scheduled meeting is Sept. 26. Interested reservists are cordially invited to attend.

Inquiries may be addressed to William D. Scott, Commanding Officer, in the Student Union, or to Herschel G. Abbott, staff Officer, in the Conservation Building.

NOTICE

The Student Senate will hold its budget petitioning meeting in the Student Activties Office on Thurs., Sept. 21, 1961 at 7 p.m. Any tax supported organization that wishes to make changes in its budget must be there. This is the last opportunity for any changes.

The Message Was Peace

"But for the patient, indefatigable leadership of Dag Hammerskjold, the United Nations might not exist today. Quietly, shrewdly, persistently he labored to maintain it against heavy odds and to enhance its effectiveness in a world that teeters on the brink of catastrophe . . . He began his tenure at the United Nations modestly, the epitome of a devoted international civil servant. By displaying absolute neutrality and fairness, by showing absolute discretion in keeping confidences, he gained the trust of all parties and built up his role as peaceful arbiter . . .

"There could be no better tribute to him than to bring his body back in state and bury it in United Nations territory under a fitting monument to remind all men of the values for which he lived and died."—New York Times

"If intellect and patience alone could have solved the world's problems, Dag Hammerskjold's eight years at the U.N. might have brought the nations closer to lasting peace than they seem today. The U.N., quite literally, was his life.

"Although few outsiders knew him when he succeeded Trygve Lie as Secretary-General, his labors over the years brought Hammerskjold international reknown and made his name respected throughout the world. He met and mastered more than one crisis working, for the most part, silently and circumspectly in accordance with his concept of 'quiet diplomacy.'

"Perhaps the best measure of the admiration in which he was held, here no less than elsewhere, was the open shock expressed by people on the streets of New York yesterday—people for whom 'Dag' personified the U.N. and who instinctively knew this rather aloof intellectual diplomat as a friend."
—New York Herald Tribune

LETTERS

To the Editor:

On Monday, September 18, the human race lost the one member it could least afford to lose, Dag Hammerskjold.

The Secretary-General of the United Nations was undoubtedly more than once the sole reason the international organization survived mean and greedy assaults against its authority, and he well may have prevented, single-handedly, and on more than one occasion, a nuclear horror that would have meant the end of civilization as we know it, if not life itself. It is all the more tragic that he should be lost at this time, when the U.N. finds itself in perhaps its most difficult situation, and that his life should end while on a gallant mission to rescue the U.N. and at the same time, bring peace to one of the earth's most volatile areas.

These are terrifying times. Times when responsible men the world over are fearful of the mushroom clouds of doom. Times when the power of global annihilation is in the hands of several men who find themselves at odds on the fate of man, and when that power is spreading. Times when the conflicts between these men, and the societies they lead, are reaching the point of no return. Times when a 16-year old girl writes a moving letter to The New York Times pleading with these men to spare "a world I have just begun to touch, and hear, and see."

Dag Hammerskjold's death decreases immeasurably the chances we have of saving our world. There seems to be no one in the United Nations on whom the major powers can agree, much less anyone with the shrewdness, fearlessness, and dedication to peace that was Hammerskjold. As it is, Russia demands the secretariate be commanded, or really, rendered useless by a three-man committee. She, or even France, who has opposed the U.N.'s role in Africa, can prevent the selection of a successor.

Thus the death of one human being becomes much more than the loss of a great man—it becomes the possibility of the beginning of the end: the end of the United Nations, the end of world order, the end of our fragile "peace," the end of everything. The Secretary-General's death is an event so frightening that our only hope seems to be that it will scare all men of power into a miraculous sense of responsibility, so that human history won't be brought to a horrible stop.

If there are history books in the decades, or even centuries, to come, they will pay fitting homage to this man who helped make it possible.

Gary Holten

A Novel of the Presidency

By early morning, the long rain had ended, and the Potomac lunged swollen and clumsy through a wide channel. Its roar had changed to a sullen, soft murmuring, and yet to Malcolm Christiansen it carried the undertones of danger. A morning mist steamed over the river, and crows flapped in anxious search of food among the tangled vines and sycamores.

Malcolm Christiansen walked its still-wet towpath, his heels leaving marks in the soft earth. As he walked, he turned his face slightly upward to feel the glow of the early sun and breathe the sweetness of the air after the storm.

He stopped to watch a flock of ducks as they waddled toward him—like a delegation of fat bakers, he decided. They stared at each other; the ducks curious yet greedy—they plainly hoped for crusts of bread; he with pure enjoyment.

He was aware at this moment of the impermanence of his joy. The awareness crossed his mind like a searchlight scanning the dark midnight sky. It was as if only here, in the privacy of early morning on his daily walks, was he inviolate and safe. Elsewhere, the muscles tensed, the heart beat more rapidly, the nostrils smelled the stench of man's dung, the ears heard shrieks and groans and obscene laughter. He pushed aside this truth with sudden passion. Forcing his attention to the ducks, he saw them again as absurd and comic creatures. He smiled happily. "Crazy, dumb ducks," he said aloud.

His three companions, serious young men in dark suits, smiled as one. Malcolm Christiansen knew their thoughts. In their place he would have felt the same. Thank God he's in a good mood, they were thinking. Not like Thank God I didn't miss the bus, or Thank God I put the windows down before the rain. Real Thank God.

Everyone knew that Malcolm Christiansen was as nice a man as you'd want if he was in a sweet humor. But you never knew what he was going to be from one minute to the next. If you worked for him and he went into a black mood, you went into it with him. He could do that to you. He could break down the door of your own private self and overpower you with his feelings. If he was happy, C----- you were gay. But if he was down in the mouth, you were sore at the world and you couldn't fight it.

He was the President of the United States . . .

There are jobs that give a man or a woman an extra two feet of height. Take a nun. You see her, and you begin to feel the holiness clear to your fingertips, and sometimes you resent the fact that they have it and you don't. Or a Marine color guard. You straighten up and waves of patriotism go up and down your spine. The President, he's just a few steps down the throne from the Big Guy himself. It doesn't make any difference what he is personally or whether you agree with him, he's still Number One. Maybe they don't think that way in England or Italy or Zanzibar, but when we put a fellow in the White House right off he loses the wart on his nose and a little halo starts playing around the bald spot in the back of his head.

From: Coffin, Tristram, Not to the Swift, (New York, 1961) pp.7-8.

At First Glance . . .

With the tragic death of Dag Hammerskjold, we felt few people were as qualified to pay tribute as those who watched his neutrality from their offices just blocks from the U.N. — New York's Times and Herald Tribune. . . . Paul Theroux his summer affair with a cockroach in Puerto Rico in The Omphalos . . . We also catch a quick look at Tristram Coffin's inspiring fiction on the Presidency.

The Omphalos . . . by paul theroux '63

SUDDENLY LAST SUMMER . . .

On the advisement of the editorial staff of the Collegian I decided to devote my first column to what I did last summer. Of course, this could only be the ramblings to a pre-pubescent schoolgirl relating a trip to the Bronx Zoo or the Fun House—but in the course of reading you will find that this analysis is not far from true. Sure, I'm male and post adolescent; however, you'll find that my summer was populated by characters which would not be foreign to any zoo or Fun House.

I went to Puerto Rico.

The Editorial Staff only knew half of it; that's the half I'll tell.

Last May in a state that can only be referred to as derangement I got a job on a ship bound for the lesser Antilles. So you don't know where the Lesser Antilles are? Neither do I, even now, because I only got as far as the Greater Antilles — the prickly heat capital of The Tropic of Cancer. I could tell you about a ship strike and an ulcer attack and poverty and chthonians and black great-dugged women; but it's the other detail you want, I know.

If you've ever seen a movie of Borneo or Sumatra or Madagascar starring John Wayne—and the whole cast is constantly tossing off shots of rum in open air bars with a fan moving at one r.p.m. and there's flypaper crammed with dead insects dangling in front of the camera, and an old lady weeping way down the end of the bar and dirty pictures and obscenities all over the walls and a native barkeep who has narrow piggy eyes and knows everything that's going on; and outside, the naked kiddies are romping in the gutter smells under a large Coca-Cola sign (in Swahili) and the stucco walls are all cracked and lousy looking—then I won't have to describe Puerto Rico to you.

It's a zoo of the mobile flatulence of turistas: really horrible these off-season babes—pocked with acne, puffy(fubsy, fleshy and all in the "... soft bloom of pthisis." One can only view the tourists with whatsontelevisionnextweek emotions. Any thing else would be insanity.

And insects! My God, spiders, beetles, ants, crawling, flying swimming at me from a million directions. Cockroaches in phalanxes of twenty and thirty. Enough to keep a whole lecture section of Ent. 26 students busy for their whole college career (of course, they would be given rest periods occasionally which they would spend in that section of the Hatch reserved for Entomology Majors). I caught a cockroach in a jar once (he was making off with a pair of my sneakers and had already put on my UMass sweatshirt) and was starving him to death until I found that his diet was the same as mine—beans. So I slipped a few into his jar and we had supper together often. As a friend remarked, "... only a madman would keep a cockroach!" but I can relate to a cockroach much easier than a dog. Somehow I can't picture myself saying, "On King! Up, big boy!" Then grunting in chorus with the mutt.

The cockroach lived well until I strangled him in a drunken stupor late one night.

The fertility rate in Puerto Rico is astronomical. Puerto Rican women are among the most fecund in the world (ask any social worker in New York). I read a survey of the habits of the jibaros, the real honest-to-god natives that look like lemurs; the editor said that the men bragged of siring fifty and a hundred children. Whether this is symptomatic of satyriasis or fecundity is a debatable point, I imagine.

I lived in the low rent district of San Juan. When I saw the landlady about renting the place and told how much I had to spend she took me to the roof of her five story building and pointed to a little cement hut. There was no stove, no refrigerator, no furniture except a moist, scabrous bed and a privy secreted in the corner containing a chipped sink (propped by a mossy board) and a shower pipe that spewed a dark, viscous liquid. I retched.

"Nobuddy botherrr you heer," she said wiping saliva from her lip.

"Boy, I'll say! We'd really have a lot of peace and quiet and sun and monsoon and disease from that rotting fruit over there; yeah, nobody bother me here, by God! I bet I could fix up . . . how much?"

"Fotty buck wid da bed."

"Forty dollars?"

"Yah, wid da bed . . . widout da bed terty figh."

So you see that living is cheap on this isle. Sure, the Chamber of Commerce overdoes the place a teensy-weensy bit by calling it the "Hope Diamond of the Hesperides," but the people are real people, you know what I mean. Heironymous Bosch is the only painter I know that could do them justice—the natives, that is. Norman Rockwell would go into fits over the tourists.

So as we bid a fond farewell to la isla encanta and Eastern Airlines Flight 831 speeds away from five thousand arms waving coconuts and lottery tickets, we uncork our fifth of Bacardi ($1.79 a fifth), settle back in the seat, and ring for the stewardess.

Danforth Graduate Fellowships Open To Male Seniors, Grads

Applications for Danforth Graduate Fellowships worth up to $12,000 are now being received, Dr. John Conlon, Chairman of the Management Department, announced today.

The fellowships, offered by the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis, Missouri, are open to male college seniors or recent graduates preparing for a career of teaching, counseling, or administrative work at the college level. Applicants may be planning to major in any field at the American graduate school of their choice, but should not have already undertaken graduate work.

Approximately 100 fellowships will be awarded to candidates from acredited colleges and universities in the United States. Nominees will be judged on intellectual promise and personality, integrity, genuine interest in religion, and potential for effective college teaching.

Winners will be eligible for up to four years of financial assistance, with an annual maximum of $1,500 for single men and $2,000 (as well as $500 per child) for married men, plus tuition and fees. Students without financial needs also are invited to apply.

In addition to the annual stipend, winners will be guests of the Foundation at an annual educational conference held on the shores of Lake Michigan. Leading scholars are brought to the conference for lectures, seminars, and personal contact with the Fellows.

Danforth Graduate Fellowships are unique in that they may be held for life, with certain benefits after completition of graduate work, such as financial assistance to attend educational conferences and stipends to purchase books and periodicals during the first three years of teaching.

Students may hold a Danforth Fellowship concurrently with other appointments, such as Rhodes, Woodrow Wilson, Fulbright, and National Science Foundation. Winners will become Danforth Fellows without stipend until these other awards lapse.

Further information concerning the program may be obtained in room 227, Draper Hall, from Dr. Conlon who may nominate up to three candidates. Nominations must be submitted to the Foundation by November 1.

The Danforth Foundation, one of the nation's 10 largest educational Foundation, was founded in 1927 by the late William H. Danforth, St. Louis businessman and philanthropist. The Foundation's primary aim is to strengthen and enrich higher education in America.

ONCE MORE, UNTO THE BREACH

With this installment I begin my eighth year of writing columns for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, as fine a bunch of men as you would meet in a month of Sundays—loyal, true, robust, windswept, forthright, tattooed—in short, precisely the kind of men you would expect them to be if you were familiar with the cigarettes they make—and I hope you are—for Marlboro, like its makers, is loyal, true, robust, windswept, forthright, tattooed.

There is, however, one important difference between Marlboro and its makers. Marlboro has a filter and the makers do not—except of course for Windswept T. Sigafoos, Vice President in charge of Media Research. Mr. Sigafoos does have a filter. I don't mean that Mr. Sigafoos personally has a filter. What I mean is that he has a filter in his swimming pool at his home in Fairbanks, Alaska. You might think that Fairbanks is rather an odd place for Mr. Sigafoos to live, being such a long distance from the Marlboro home office in New York City. But it should be pointed out that Mr. Sigafoos is not required to be at work until 10 A.M.

But I digress. This column, I say, will take up questions of burning interest to the academic world—like "Should French conversation classes be conducted in English?" and "Should students be allowed to attend first hour classes in pajamas and robes?" and "Can a student of 18 find happiness with an economics professor of 90?"

Because many of you are new to college, especially freshmen, perhaps it would be well in this opening column to start with campus fundamentals. What, for example, does "Alma Mater" mean? Well, sir, "Alma Mater" is Latin for "send money".

What does "Dean" mean? Well, sir, "Dean" is Latin for "don't get caught".

What does "dormitory" mean? Well, sir, "dormitory" is Latin for "bed of pain".

Next, let us discuss student-teacher relationships. In college the keynote of the relationship between student and teacher is informality. When you meet a teacher on campus, you need not salute. Simply tug your forelock. If you are bald and have no forelock, a low curtsey will suffice. In no circumstances should you polish a teacher's car or sponge and press his suit. It is, however, permissible to worm his dog.

With the President of the University, of course, your relationship will be a bit more formal. When you encounter the President, fling yourself prone on the sidewalk and sing loudly:

"Prexy is wise
Prexy is true
Prexy has eyes
Of Lake Louise blue."

As you can see, the President of the University is called "Prexy". Similarly, Deans are called "Dixie". Professors are called "Proxie". Housemothers are called "Hoxie Moxie". Students are called "Amoebae".

Christian Group To Hold Frosh Picnic Saturday

Intervarsity Christian Fellowship will begin its season of activities with an introductory picnic for all freshmen and interested upperclassmen which will be held this Saturday, September 23, at Groff Park between the hours of 3:00 and 8:00.

The program will include games, food, and songs, and there will be an explanation of the purposes of Intervarsity which is basically a Christ-centered organization of students who believe in the relevance of scripture and who are convinced that God speaks today through it. Therefore, the emphasis of the group is toward Bible study and fellowship with this living Lord, and all interested are cordially invited to find out more about the group at the picnic.

All girls interested in attending are requested to get in touch with Terry Freni at 222 Arnold House (AL 3-9111) between the hours of 8:00 and 11:00 while the boys are requested to contact Al Norton in 206 Greenough House (AL 3-9160) between eight and eleven. Rides will be provided to all in need from the main entrance of the Student Union, and a charge of thirty-five cents is requested to defray expenses.

Virus Hits Redmen Grid Squad As Maine Opener Draws Near

(Reprinted from Hampshire Gazette)

Virus and dysentery—definitely not on the schedule — have dealt sharp blows to the Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Holy Cross football squads.

With the season's opener at Maine only four days away, Massachusetts reported Tuesday that oveh half the team has been hit b ythe bugs since the Saturday scrimmage against Springfield. At least 19 players have been affected.

Coach Vic Fusia particularly misses starting quarterback John McCormick, placekicking specialist John Bamberry and halfback Loren Flagg, all confined to the infirmary with temperatures.

"I doubt that I'll have the entire squad together for one practice session this week," moaned Fusia. His defending Co-champions open their Yankee Conference defense this Saturday at Orono.

New Hampshire, opening at home against American International College Saturday, has had as many as six players in the infirmary at a time with the virus.

Spectacular halfback Dick Mezquita, elected co-captain Monday along with Bo Dickson, has been weakened by his bout with the bug.

Senior Fullback Kevin Malone and junior end Gene Corbett went to the infirmary with the virus at Holy Cross. However, the Crusaders don't open their schedule until a week from Saturday against Villanova.

A.I.C. Coach Gay Salvucci says four sophomores — guard Jo Tavarese, tackle Walt McCarthy, end Ron Cournoyer and halfback Pete Schindler — probably will start against New Hampshire. (Schindler, by the way, was a big prospect at UMass until he transferred to A.I.C.)

Boston College head coach Ernie Hefferle, who sends his Eagles against Cincinnati at the Heights Saturday, (Cincinnati is led by ex-UMass Head Coach Chuck Studley) heard this report from the scouts on the Bearcats who beat Dayton 16-12 last week:

"The line is big, mobile, two deep and tough." Cincinnati held Dayton to minus nine yards on the ground, gained 263 rushing themselves.

Neighboring Amherst, a veteran club with great promise, rushed the ball for 158 yards and passed for 229 more in the 24-8 scrimmage margin over Worcester Tech. Steve Van Nort carried the ball over twice for touchdowns during that scrimmage.

Former Mass Head Coach O'Rourke Will Run Contest

Charlie O'Rourke, former football coach at the University of Massachusetts, has been named director of competition for the Amherst Punt, Pass and Kick program, to be held October 14 at Amherst at a site yet to be announced.

Announcement of the appointment of O'Rourke, one time All-American, was made by Edward T. Mraz, president of Mraz Ford, local sponsor of the competition. Mraz also announced that judges for the new competitive event for boys aged six through 10 will be announced soon.

In the competition, boys will be judged on the distance and accuracy of their passing, punting and place-kicking. Top winners, one from each age group, will receive football uniforms and may have the opportunity to compete in the national eliminations, depending upon their scores.

Scores of the top winners in the Amherst competition will be compared with scores of other winners in this area, and the best five youthful football specialists will pass punt and kick for national honors at a home game of the New York Giants in November.

The YANKEE CONFERENCE

The Yankee Conference is comprised of the six New England land grant state universities for the purpose of developing interschool athletic rivalry and friendly relations among the schools. Conference members compete in football, basketball, baseball, cross country, rifle, track, tennis and golf. It is hoped that hockey will be added in the near future.

The Bean Pot, symbol of the Conference championship in football, has been in competition for fourteen years and last season was the first time that Massachusetts has had the trophy on campus as a result of tying Connecticut for the Conference Crown. Coach Fusia, in his first year at the Redmen helm, is hoping that the team can retain that coveted pot.

The Redmen will meet their first YanCon rival of the season when they meet UMaine at Orono, Saturday. Those of you who can make it, let's go. Those who can't, don't forget Jim Trelease and the WMUA crew who will bring the game to you.

WMUA Sports Crew Will Bring Maine-Redmen Clash To UMass Campus Saturday

Facing the most intensive football schedule in UMass history, WMUA's sports crew, headed by Jim Trelease '63, drives north to Orono, Maine, Friday for the second successive year.

With hours of preparation behind them, the four man crew will hit the air waves at 1:15 with "Locker Room Warm-up" (an interivew show with Fusia as their first guest) and follow this with the play-by-play over 91.1 F.M. By then, Trelease and his coadjutor, Howie Wainstein, will have drawn-up numeral and personel charts for each team, memorized backfield and end positions and their numbers, set up statistic sheets, and assimilated as many player anecdotes as the Maine morning papers can afford.

The other half of the broadcasting crew is composed of speech major Barry Brooks and that most indespensable portion of the team—spotter Tim Nevils —wihout whom Trelease admits, "I might as well broadcast blindfolded." Checking lines, establishing contact with the Engineering building studios, and "riding" mike occupy most of the time for former "Crazy Rhythms" host Brooks.

Jim Trelease, an English major, began his play-by-play career while a high school junior as a finalist in the Red Sox sportscasting contest. Taking time out from his Collegian editorial chores, Jim can still quite vividly remember his biggest air "slips": excitedly announcing "Maine's Manch Wheeler crossing the 55 yard line" and speculating that "two more Yankee Conference wins will enable Matt Zunic's Redmen to go to the NAACP tourney at Madison Square Garden."

"H.J." Wainstein, handles the color and half-time show with spot play-by-play. The Phi Sigma Kappa junior recapitulates touchdown marches, points out game strategy, and shares the statistics with "Brooksie."

Operating with a $1200 budget, WMUA's sports department provides the University and the surrounding 20 miles with the most comprehensive football and basketball coverage within the Yankee Conference.

UM Tribe Is Up Against Job Of Equaling '60 Slate

Last season produced the best overall football record at the University of Massachusetts in twenty eight years and a share of the Yankee Conference Crown for the first time in history which means that new head coach Vic Fusia and his staff will have a Herculean task to show an improvement. Furthermore this year's schedule is a bit tougher than last fall's nine-game slate, but don't make the mistake of selling this year's Redmen eleven short.

The new staff has been working overtime trying to get acquainted with the squad personel and although there are seventeen lettermen returning for a nucleus this fall, several chronic injuries and a lack of depth at two or three positions appear to be creating crucial problems before a game is played.

The end position appears to be one of the deepest at the moment with three lettermen Paul Majeski, Ed Forbush adn Dave Harrington being supported by two promising sophomores Roger DeMinico and Roger Cavanaugh. Majeski was the squad's leading receiver a year ago and probably the outstanding lineman on the squad. Harrington is improving continually and Forbush looks ready for his best season.

At the tackles Bob Foote and Tom Brophy appear to be the starters with two sophomores, Don Hagberg and Paul Graham ready to spell them very adequately. Brophy lettered at guard last fall but his moving to tackle should strengthen that slot.

Dick Eger, John Kozaka and Wayne Morgan have all lettered at Guard and Tom Kirby who lettered at center last fall as a sophomore should see plenty of service at one of the guards this fall. Sam Slick and Bob Tedoldi are the best of the sophs at guard and could be valuable once they have some game experience under their belts.

Lettermen Matt Collins and Vince Caputo along with sophomores Bruce Jordan head the center talent and on the whole this position should be as strong as it was last year. Collins had a very fine year as a sophomore and Caputo has lettered for two years as a pivot man.

Co-captain John McCormick will be playing his third year at quarterback and for the first time will not be splitting the duty with John Conway who graduated last year.

Len LaBella will have to spell McCormick when he needs a breather with Pete Sullivan and Al Hedlund battling for the third string slot.

At the halfbacks four lettermen are returning. Sam Lussier, Ken Kezer, Mike Salem and Jim Hickman will provide a pretty fair nucleus. In addition sophomore Freddy Lewis is being groomed for a starting berth and the former Springfield Tech standout could be the big man in the Redmen offense this fall.

Sophomore Ken Palm and junior Art Perdigao are battling it out for the fullback position where there are no lettermen returning. Scrappy Dick Warren could help at this position before the season progresses too far.

All in all it appears as though barring any major personnel losses this year's squad should be about as strong as last season's eleevn. However, with the schedule toughened up a bit it is going to take plenty of hard work and more than the usual share of good breaks if the team is to do as well overall as it did twelve months ago.

Getting Around to It

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Ivy League helped pioneer college football back in the handle-bar mustache era, yet it wasn't organized as an official conference until 1956. All statistical records date from the beginning of that season.

Fine Coaching Staff Is Basis of UMass Hopes

Experience, Skill of Helmsmen Has Squad In Prime Condition

CHET GLADCHUK
Line Coach

Chet Gladchuck is a native of Bridgeport, Conn., where he learned his football at Harding High School and won all sectional honors at center. From Harding big Chet went on to win fame under Gil Dobie and Frank Leahy at Boston College.

On the Heights, Chet won All-America honors in 1940 and was selected to the All Time Sugar Bowl Team on January 1, 1941. He is also a member of the All Time Cotton Bowl Team for his exploits in Dallas against Clemson on January 1, 1940. The Eagles defeated Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl, but lost to Clemson in the Cotton Bowl.

Following four successful years at Boston College, Chet moved on to play professional football with the New York Giants and was an All-Professional Center for two straight years.

In 1950, Chet returned to his home town and became the first football coach in the history of the University of Bridgeport.

But in 1951 he was lured into Canada for one more fling at football and became player-line coach of the Montreal Alouettes. The Alouettes won their division title.

At the University, Chet also coaches the varsity and frosh golf teams.

The Gladchuks make their home in Amherst with their five children.

end Coach

A native of Pittsburgh, Pa., Coach Fred Glatz is beginning his second year as a Massachusetts football coach. Fred attended the University of Pittsburgh and won letters during his junior and senior years as an end. He received his B.S. degree in 1956 after majoring in health and physical education with a minor in biology.

After graduation Coach Glatz played with the Pittsburgh Steelers for a year before entering the service. While stationed at Ft. Benning, Georgia, he was a standout performer in football, basketball and baseball and also assisted with the coaching chores in football.

After his discharge from the service Fred returned to Pittsburgh to work on his masters' degree and was also a member of the football staff where he coached the freshman squad and also handled the varsity punters. In 1959 he served as end coach on the Massachusetts staff under Coach Charlie O'Rourke and last year he was end coach at Boston College.

Coach Glatz and his wife Joan along with their eighteen month old daughter reside in Amherst.

UMass mentor, Vic Fusia, had this comment when Fred joined his staff; "Fred Glatz has made a fine impression on me with his enthusiasm and dedication to the football coaching profession. I feel very elated that he will be a member of my staff for the coming year."

The nineteenth head coach in the University of Massachusetts seventy-eight year begins his first year at the helm of the Redmen football regime.

A native of Pittsburgh, Coach Vic Fusia attended Wilkinsburg (Pa.) High School and Mt. St. Michael's High School (Bronix New York). He graduated from Manhattan College in 1933 with a B.S. degree and as an undergraduate was an outstanding tailback for the Jaspers.

Following his graduation from Manhattan Fusia taught for a year at Bernard School for Boys in New York before entering the U.S. Navy. He served in the Pacific for two years with the 7th Fleet Force and was discharged in 1946 with the rank of Lieutenant Junior Grade.

Fusia coached at Rankin (Pa.) High School in 1946 and 1947 where he lost but two league games in two years. He then moved to Indiana (Pa.) High School and climaxed three very successful seasons with an undefeated team in 1950. In 1951 he began a four year stay at Brown University on the staff of Alva Kelley where he served as backfield coach.

In 1955 Coach Fusia moved to the University of Pittsburgh to serve as backfield coach and first assistant to head coach John Michelosen.

During the past six years the Panthers have been rated as one of the top independent college elevens in the country with Fusia being accorded much of the credit for the team's success with his offensive strategy.

Coach Fusia and his staff have been working diligently for weeks with a capable group of men and all are optimistic as to the season's outcome.

DON JOHNSON
Asst. Back Coach

Don "Red" Johnson, former co-captain of the 1955 Redmen and three year halfback star, is serving his third year as a member of the varsity grid staff.

Johnson was the sparkplug of the Redmen from 1953-1955 as a hard running halfback and in his final year was chosen co-captain of the club. After graduation he remained at UMass to obtain his Master's degree in Education and only recently returned from a tour of duty with the Army.

Red was also a stellar lacrosse performer while an undergraduate at UMass and was an outstanding football player in his high school days at Fitchburg High. He is married and resides in Amherst.

VIC FUSIA
Head Coach

Ted Schmitt

A former University of Pittsburgh lineman, Coach Ted Schmitt is starting his first year on the Redmen staff following an eleven year tenure as Harvard line coach. A graduate of the class of '38 at Pittsburgh he played during one of the greatest areas in Panther grid history and was a member of the 1937 team which is generally regarded as Pitt's greatest.

Following his graduation he played with the Philadelphia Eagles for three seasons, and simultaneously started his coaching career at St. Joseph's Prep in Philadelphia.

In 1941 he went to Sharon, Pa. High School as head coach of football, and except for three years of Navy service, he was there until 1948 when he joined the staff of his alma mater. A native of Pittsburgh he attended Carrick High School and is noted for being a very thorough worker who is most conscious of the smallest details.

Ted and his wife Mary and their three children, Larry, Tim and Mary Kay reside in Amherst.

Jack Delaney

A former University of Cincinnati backfield standard during the Sid Gillman era in the early fifties, Jack Delaney begins his first year on the UMass coaching staff after a seven year hitch at his alma mater where he served for two years as freshman coach and then five seasons as offensive backfield coach.

A native of Columbus, Ohio, Coach Delaney attracted attention while performing on the basketball, football, and baseball teams of Columbus Aquinas High School. After an eighteen month tour of duty in the Army, he entered Cincinnati and soon was a standout on the gridiron and on the baseball diamond. In 1952, his senior year, Delaney averaged almost eight yards per carry while the Bearcats were winning eight games while losing one and tying one. The following spring he captained the baseball squad.

Jack, his wife Jackie, and their three children are residing in Amherst.

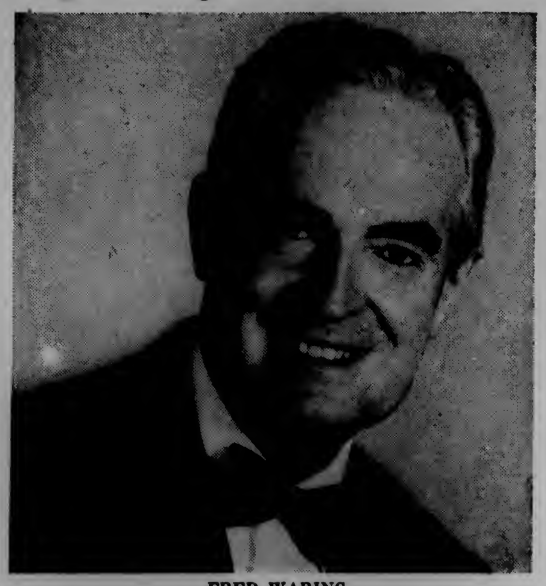
Capacity Audience Listens To Convocation Speech



FRED WARING

Waring To Begin Concert Season

The Concert Association has announced that the 1961-62 University Concert Series will open October 24 with the presentation of Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians. The program will take place in the Cage, at 8 p.m.

UMass students will be admitted to the event upon presentation of their student ID. For visitors, the price of admission is $1.50.

Waring will present "Let Freedom Sing", which will make use of the newest techniques in lighting, stage sets, costuming, and stereophonic sound.

Sound Portrait of Americans

The presentation is a portrait in sound and color of the American scene—past and present, touching on every locale of the country—its people, its cities, its small towns, its traditions. 'Let Freedom Sing" is a musical portrait of the ideas, the events, and the spirit which gave birth to the United States of America and have preserved the nation ever since.

The half-hour musical story begins with the voyage of Columbus and concludes with the War Between the States. First performed in June, 1950, by the Pennsylvanians on Waring's weekly TV program, it has come to be recognized by nationally regarded authorities as the most important work of its kind ever published.

The program will include Roy Ringwald's "The Song of America", which tells the story of our nation in the words of its greattest poets—Longfellow, Holmes, Emerson, Whitman, Whittier, and others.

Hot Squirrel Fouls Convo Jumping High Volt Wires

by JOE BRADLEY '64, News Assignment Editor

A furry, long tailed squirrel raised havoc with President Lederle's Convocation speech yesterday.

The power failure which blacked out the campus and interrupted Dr. Lederle's speech was caused by a squirrel which jumped a fence at the Western Massachusetts Electric Company substation at No. Amherst.

Mr. Cuddebach, district manager of Western Mass. Electric, said the squirrel was found across the high voltage wires in the switch yard at the No. Amherst substation.

The squirrel tripped all the switches leading from the high voltage transformers, thus blacking out the campus.

Esther Not Involved

Cuddebach added that hurricane Esther had nothing to do with the power loss which lasted from 11:24 a.m. to 12:06 p.m. Surrounding communities, including Sunderland, Whately, North Hatfield and Hadley also lost power.

Although the electric company had no control over the errant squirrel, Cuddebach apologized for the inconvenience. He noted that Western Mass. Electric had the newest, most modern equipment for their customers.

Cuddebach said the squirrel problem is one of the most serious problems facing rural electric companies. He said three years ago a squirrel blacked out half of Springfield in a manner similar to yesterday's happening.

The squirrel, needless to say, was served up on the high voltage wires well done.

Lederle Calls For Local Finance Control Through University's Board of Trustees

STUDENT LEADERS CONFER WITH PRESIDENT

"It is with genuine pleasure that I come before you today at the beginning of this most important year in the University's history.

"It is a year, in my view, when significant clarifications must be made by all of us as to the role of education in this, one of the most challenging and most dangerous eras in the history of mankind.

"Not one person in this room today—or at this entire University—is exempt from confronting this fact. And not one of us can evade the responsibility of trying to do everything possible to insure that mind is still master over matter—that man thinking is important to the consideration of man surviving.

"Having said this, let me quickly say that it is not my intention by any means to sound a pessimistic note this morning. Quite the opposite. Crises are not something to be feared. Crises can be opportunities—often the most dynamic opportunities.

"Inevitably they imply risk, but man's greatest moments of progress have come because certain men dared to take risks.

"Let me begin by saying that, though we are in the midst of international crises, these are exciting times for higher education on every campus; but for sheer e x c i t e m e n t due to dynamic change, the University has few, if any, rivals. We are in many ways pioneers, and pioneering is always exciting. Public higher education, up to now, has flourished in the Midwest and Far West. In the East it has been tolerated, but really not encouraged. Suddenly conditions have changed and the Eastern states find they must turn to their state universities to provide for great numbers of qualified high school graduates who seek further education.

. . "Private institutions have little growth potential; and indeed because of their national character they are even reducing their Massachusetts and Eastern clientele. Private institutions find it difficult to embark upon costly new fields of professional and graduate study. Yet as our population expands there is a need for more doctors and dentists, more physicists and biochemists.

"All this is aggravated by the larger proportion of youth wishing to attend college today. Recent figures indicate that while 16% of college age youth went to college in 1940, and 30% in 1950, 39% in 1959, 44% may be expected to go in 1970. This means great pressure on parents and the taxpayers if all the qualified secondary school students are to have their chance to go to college.

'This means that all of you here have a great responsibility to justify the public's investment in educational facilities for your use. This means that those of us on the faculty and in the administration who are trustees on behalf of the state must take care that our educational resources are reserved for those students who are here with seriousness of purpose and with true intellectual curiosity.

"As I have lived through my first year on the campus I have made one discovery that is disappointing. I find that a small but vocal number of our students have an inferiority complex about our University.

"I say to students, to faculty and administrative staff, let's turn away from negativism. Let's call a moratorium on irresponsible or ill-motivated complaint. We have our share of problems and we are working on them with optimism and enthusiasm. But these problems will be doubly difficult to solve if we indulge an inferiority complex in an atmosphere of negativism.

"Let us be dedicated students —men and women of thought and commitment; men and women interested in putting aside childish things and preparing to face the problems of war and peace, of disease and despair, of man's constant onslaught on ignorance and tyranny and strife—in whatever ways these manifest themselves.

"As a community of dedicated people, then, I ask you to strengthen your sense of responsibility, so that in the years ahead we will have contributed greatly to the preservation and protection of our free institutions and our free society.

"The University belongs to all of us and all of us must contribute mightily if it is to live up to its potential and if we are to exercise our natonal responsibilities. Citizens, students, faculty, trustees—all have a contribution to make. To the extent that I as your president must articulate institutional needs and dreams, I call upon all of you for your suggestions, for your advice and counsel. My door is open, whether you wish to plead for more books or longer hours for the library, or higher salaries for the faculty, or more money for scholarships and students loans, or a University press, or better counseling in the dorms.

'I know you will realize that if not all legitimate requests are met, it is not for want of trying or desire by the president. There is never quite enough money to satisfy our needs—the various claims upon limited funds must be balanced anl allotments inevitably involve a measure of compromise with the ideal.

"Above all, we need individually to cultivate patience. We cannot build a greater University of Massachusetts in a day. We cannot telescope time. What is possible? We can work according to a plan, dedicating all our efforts, seriously and sincerely, daily to that end. By licking one problem in turn, we can dig into our backlog of problems and perhaps ar-

Leadership and Responsibility

Wednesday's front page "Senate resignation" story brings forth two important campus crises. The fact that several of last year's most prominent Senators will leave the organization is in reality an urgent message to the latent leadership on this campus to take a sabbatical from their back row seats and step forward.

President Lederle and ex-Senator Della Penna (on separate occasions) have made mention of an "anti-intellectual attitude" on this campus. This attitude has induced enough able students to sit back and avoid responsibility to the extent that we have suffered during the last year from a serious student leader shortage. In truth, the "too many activities on this campus" chant is a poor excuse to shirk responsibility. As President Lederle said yesterday, ". . . All too often we weaken our sense of responsibility by an inordinate attention to selfish or trivial concerns." It is time for us to concern ourselves with self-government instead of self-complacency.

The second point brought out by these resignations is that many Senators label the Senate as a cause for low academics. It is essential that we realize that the Senate ~~is an~~ inanimate institution; the Senate never flunked anyone out—they flunked themselves out. Every year we return and surprisedly find last year's Senators or editors or announcers or class officers absent from their positions. But to no one's surprise the University community continues to function as regularly as before. Among 6,000 students, each of us is dispensable. Student leaders must realize this before they decide, "I'll have to do the job or it won't get done."

It is up to each individual to know his own capacities. The Senate or Collegian or WMUA are inanimate and therefore know nothing of your capacity. It is up to you "to know thyself." No one will "bird-dog" you. Our activities present us with an ideal opportunity to handle and learn responsibility. Dr. Lederle aptly phrased: "You are all here preparing for your place of real responsibility." For some, the time of preparation is long overdue.

TESTING: the Soviet Point of View

Most assuredly the resumption of nuclear weapons testing on the part of the Soviets is "inextricably bound" to the Berlin situation and the concept of limited war, but this fact may be viewed in a somewhat different light than that suggested by Mr. Palter recently. Could it not be that the Soviets resumed their nuclear testing program to incite in the minds of the Western nations just such thoughts as were expressed by Mr. Palter? Looking at this move from the Soviet point of view for a moment, we can readily see the logic involved.

The Soviets recently made the statement that any armed conflict between themselves and the West would lead to unlimited war. In doing this they hoped to intimidate the Free World into acquiescing to Soviet desires at a Soviet-engineered conference table. In order to give their bluff the substance which it lacked, the Soviets resumed testing hoping that the West, taking this as a sign of Soviet preparation for all-out war, would become less convinced about a firm stand in Berlin.

Why else would Mr. Khrushchev make a sword rattling statement about a hundred Megation bomb? Why else did he pick such a seemingly inopportune time to announce his intentions? The threat of a bomb with such inconcievable destructve powers was calculated to put a little more hesitancy into the Western mind. Picking his time of announcement to coincide with a neutralst conference in Belgrade was not a blunder but a well calculated move. Mr. Khrushchev knew that he would outrage neutral opinion, but he also knew that he would give them a good- old-fashioned scare. And this was presisly what he wanted, for there is no better instrument of anti-war propaganda then a scared neutral. Witness Prime Minister Nehru's trembling return from a conference with Mr. Khrushchev.

What should we do? We should accept the Soviet bluff for what it is and stand firm. For a flinch now will only encourage Mr. Khrushchev to try the same tactics elsewhere. Listen to the words of a man well schooled in the deployment of power, Charles de Gaulle, "Withdrawal makes the aggressor more excited, makes him redouble his pressures. The Western powers can best serve peace by standing firm."

The Cleansing Spirit

The Class of 1965 exhibited a spark of initiative on Monday when some of its members took it upon themselves to clean up the vandalistic painting of Metawampee, the very symbol and spirit of the students.

We have heard the wails of many who long for the old traditions like Spring Day, the rope pull, and the nightshirt parades. These were lost through abuse and yet, while we shed sad tears, little is done to alleviate the situation—Metawampee went from red to white. High spirits are not necessarily a sign of school spirit.

The freshmen have indicated to the rest of the University that they have already begun to possess a loyalty to and a respect for the University.

Promise has been shown. They have gotten in their first marks on the good side of the slate. Let us hope that the freshmen will continue the favorable image which has been created for them in our minds.

A Three Horse Sleigh

by MICHAEL PALTER '63

In a more significant sense, the Russians are attempting to construct a political lever which would run counter to Western interests while not necessarily obstructing manipulations with which the East is sympathetic. This position is based upon the theory that on certain fundamental issues such as imperialism and colonialism there is a broader base of agreement between the East and the neutral or non-aligned bloc than exists between the West and the neutrals. This was clearly illustrated at Belgrade where the West bore the brunt of the political attack although Russia had then just recently detonated an atomic device in the atmosphere.

Is the United Nations to take an active and positive part in international affairs or is this organization to act merely as a sounding board from which world opinion is to be swayed in times of crisis? It appears that the Soviet demand for a tripartite Secretariat would, if successful, reduce the role of the U.N. to the latter. Yet we can not assume that the Soviet plan was put forward in the hope of paralyzing the U.N.

The conference at Belgrade pointed up the fact that the neutral nations, as a whole, continue to identify the West with colonialism and imperialism. A look at Rhodesia, Angola, Algeria, and Katanga suffices to explain this position.

How would the situation in the Congo have been handled under the Troika plan? First of all, there is no doubt that each member of the Troika would have approved of U.N. involvement in the Congo. Yet, whereas under Hammarskjold the U.N. subjugated the followers of Lumumba, it seems likely that in this new situation the U.N. troops would have moved directly on Tshombe of Katanga. The Western representative in the Troika would have been hard-pressed to veto this move since in the minds of the neutrals it would have implied tacit approval of colonialist Belgium.

Thus while Tshombe would have been fighting for his life Lumumba would have had the opportunity to consolidate his strength. This would have represented a political victory for the East.

Initially the Congo situation did not take on the characteristics of a cold war conflict. Under the Troika arrangement therefore U.N. action would have been possible. But this could have lasted only so long as East-West differences were not involved.

It thus appears that a single Secretary General representing a truly neutral nation is the only solution in so far as problems of the cold war are concerned.

Khrushchev says that there is no neutral man. He is probably right. Yet the United Nations is not a perfect institution. If it were, it could dissolve tomorrow.

LETTERS

To the Editor:

I would like to make a correction to the lead story that was printed in the Collegian Wednesday, September 20th. In the story the Collegian said that I would "definitely not seek re-election to the Student Senate in October."

Permit me to point out that I was elected at-large in the elections held last spring and that my term does not expire until the spring of 1962. Furthermore, I do not have any intention at this time of resigning from the Senate.

Sigmas Find Fire Difficult To Believe

The UMass student body is now aware of the fire which swept through the Sigma Kappa Sorority house in the beginning of August. A cross section of those most directly concerned, the sisters of Beta Eta, have been asked what their first reaction was when they heard of the fire.

Carolyn Oliver '64—"The first thing I thought of was where would the kids live. Next I wondered what had happened to our color TV set."

Mae Kapinos '64—"I couldn't believe it. When my mother told me about it, I thought she had misunderstood the announcement over the radio. As soon as I found out that it was true, I made plans with another sister to drive up and see how much damage had been done."

Joan Werner '63—"When I first heard of the fire, I was stunned. It was hard not to connect it with the fires in the other sororities during the previous summers. There must be a hex on the UMass sororities!"

Ginger Anderson '62—"Two hours after the fire alarm sounded I learned that Sigma Kappa had burned. My first reaction was complete disbelief, and then, being on campus, I went down to Allen Street to observe the ruins. I walked through the house more or less in a daze. It was as if I were having a nightmare and should wake up any minute and find out it wasn't true."

Carol Hajjar '63—"I first thought of our beautiful new living room. Then I thought of the 30 of us trying to find a place to live. It was certainly a shock and a disappointment."

Carol Zangrilli '62—"I got all upset when I found out. A bunch of the sisters got together and came up to see it. There wasn't any roof, all the furniture was gone, and all the walls were black."

The fire was indeed an unfortunate accident. As a result, however, many new improvements are being made. All the rooms in the house will be doubles with the exception of two triples. The dining area is being enlarged so that more of the sisters will be able to board at the house.

The house should be ready for meals to be served by the middle of October. The sisters will, however, be living in the dorms until second semester.

New Head Of Residence Is Former Interior Decorator

by Susan Lampron

Arriving for the first time on the UMass campus was not an experience reserved for just the freshmen this year. Due to the resignation of Mrs. Lucie K. Davey, who left this summer for Japan, Thatcher House has a new head of residence, Mrs. Besty H. Ogletree.

Mrs. Ogletree was born in the Middle West and educated in the public school system. She received her bachelor's degree from Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota, where she was an art major and a language minor. While she was pursuing her career as an interior decorator with Marshall Fields in Chicago, World War II broke out. She enlisted in the Waves.

While serving as a morale and barracks officer, Mrs. Ogletree first became interested in working with young women. After the war she resumed interior decorating, but soon realized that she was much more interested in working with people. As a result she took advanced courses at Barry College in Florida and began working with exceptional children at Montanari Clinical School.

Because Mrs. Ogletree had always loved New England, and was still interested in working in a supervisory capacity with young women, she took an extended trip to New England last summer. After visiting various college campuses, she ultimately accepted the head of residency of Thatcher.

Being the new head of residence for Thatcher, working in the section of the country that she has always liked, and with the age group that she is most interested in, is a "dream come true" for Mrs. Ogletree. The Thatcher girls join in welcoming her as a vital part of our campus lives.

Dorm Counselors Hold Workshops

by Sandy Giordano

The 11 women's residence halls on campus have been running smoothly since opening chiefly due to the work and co-ordination of the heads of residences and their counsels.

At the House Counseling Workshops which were held the Friday and Saturday prior to the opening of the University, the House Counselors and heads of residences made plans for the coming year.

Patricia Valiton '63, a government major from South Ashburnham, was chairman of the workshop.

Many discussions were held during the week-end concerning dorm spirit, freshman participation, and scholarship motivation.

Guest speakers included Dean Helen Curtis, Dr. William Field, Dr. Southworth, Miss Carole Leland, Dr. Robert Gage and Dr. Julian Janowitz.

Student participants included Patricia Chase, Jean Conlon and Marjorie St. Aubin.

Changes Are Made At Pi Phi's House

Pi Beta Phi

Many pleasant changes were awaiting the Pi Phi's upon their return to school this semester. Workmen have been busy most of the summer making improvements in the house. The front porch has been removed and in its place a study room is being built. The main entrance is now on the side of the house where a new reception hall has been added. The dining room has a fresh coat of paint and a new lighting system. There are also plans for the house to be painted this fall.

Several Phi Phi's spent a very interesting vacation. Patricia Kraft and Penny Matthews were this chapter's representatives at a Pi Phi Workshop held in Gatlinburg, Tennessee, last June. Penny Matthews also was awarded the Danforth Fellowship and studied Home Economics for two weeks in St. Louis, Missouri and two weeks in Michigan.

Jane Benoit and Helen Van Keuren spent their summer in Europe. Jane has remained in Germany working until the end of this year.

Roben O'Brien is studying at Florida State University this semester as a part of the Education Department exchange program.

Career Cues

"Cure for job boredom: I made my favorite pastime my career!"

Richard Bertram, President
Bertram Yacht Co., Division of Nautec Corp.

"When you stop to think what percent of our total waking hours is spent bread-winning, you realize how tragic it is for any man to work at an occupation he doesn't enjoy. Besides frittering away life, it reduces chances of success to just about zero. I know . . . because it almost happened to me!

After college, I did what I thought was expected of me and joined a solid, Manhattan-based insurance firm. I soon found office routine wasn't for me. I lived only for lunch hour when I could walk to the Battery and mentally sail with the ships that stood out in the Narrows . . . and for the summer weekends when I could go sailing. Fortunately, the company I worked for is one of the leading insurers of yachts and after two years I was transferred to their Yacht Underwriting Department. Enjoyment and interest in my work improved immediately 100%.

After World War II, I started my own yacht brokerage firm and yacht insurance agency in Miami, combining my marine insurance background with an even closer relationship with boats.

My only problem ever since has been a feeling of guilt that my work was too easy. I love boats and boating people. That affection has paid me rewards way beyond the financial security it has also provided.

The moral's obvious. You have an odds-on chance for success and happiness working at what you enjoy most — what comes naturally! And if it's not just frivolous, your life's work could well be what you now consider just a pastime. It's certainly worth thinking about, anyway!"

Richard Bertram, while still in his early thirties, became one of the country's leading yacht brokers. Today he heads up eight companies covering yacht manufacturing, insurance, repair, storage, finance and brokerage. A resident of Coconut Grove, Florida, Dick became a Camel fan while still in college.

And to make any time pass more enjoyably...

New Center To Open At Special Ceremony

The public will get a look at the versatility of a high-powered computer on Saturday, Sept 23, when the University unveils its new Research Computing Center at a special dedication ceremony.

Prof. Morse To Speak

The program will get under way at 11 a.m. with opening remarks by President John W. Lederle. Then, Professor Philip M. Morse, Director of the M.I.T. Computing Center, will give an address on the use of computers by a university. In the afternoon at 2 p.m., Warren B. Strohm of the Thomas J. Watson Research Center of I.B.M. will give a talk on the use of the computer in the automatic translation of languages.

A 3 p.m., refreshments will be served in the Computing Center while a practical demonstration of the use of the 1620 computer in figuring basic income tax is given.

Used By Many Departments

The Center, located in Goessmann Chemistry Laboratory, where the dedication will be held, houses a new I.B.M. 1620 computer which has been in operation on an experimental basis since the end of May. A major advantage of this machine is that it can serve a wide variety of interests. In its few weeks of operation it has been used by 12 University departments. Faculty and graduate students will be able to use the new computer for various research projects.

Dedication Open To Public

The entire dedication is open to the public. In addition, special invitations have been sent to members of "The 1620 New England Universities Users Group". This informal group is made up of computing center directors of universities which have, or are going to have, I.B.M. 1620 computers.

Direction of the Research Computing Center is under the University Computer Committee, whose chairman is Dr. Richard S. Stein, professor of chemistry. Dr. Robert L. Rowell, instructor in chemistry, is directly responsible for operation of the Center.

Leads For Musical, "Oklahoma" Announced By Director Alviani

Professor Doric Alviani, Director of the University Operetta Guild, announces the leads for the Guild's fall production of Oklahoma: Susan Spearen, '63, as Laurey, Michael Hench, '64, as Curley and Kenneth Goodman, '63, as Jud. Other major characters in the Rodgers & Hammerstein musical which will be presented on October 18, 19, 20 and 21 in Bowker Auditorium include Karen Canfield, '63, as Aunt Eller, Paul Cwiklik, '63, as Will, Jean Alden, '62, as Ado Annie, Frank Mancusco, '62, as Ali Hakim and Ernest Bilodeau, '64, as Andrew Carnes.

The University Operetta Guild is the only organization offering musical theatre among the Pioneer Valley colleges (Amherst, Smith, Mount Holyoke), and one of the few in colleges and universities of New England.

In review of intense rehearsals, Director Alviani commented, "It's true that the show was put together quickly; this could not have been done had it not been for the players' devotion to the show as a whole. We have seen this devotion, not only among the players, but also in the organizational and business end of the production. If Rodgers and Hammerstein could see the rehearsals, I think they would be very pleased."

Oklahoma tickets will go on sale Wednesday, October 4, in the SU box office.

High School Students Visit UMass Campus In October

More than 500 high school students will visit the UMass campus each week in October to participate in the annual High School Guest Day program.

Students from public, parochial, and private secondary schools will arrive in groups during each of the four Saturdays in October for informational talks by University officials. Purpose of the Guest Days is to acquaint secondary school students, particularly seniors, with the University campus, history, admissions procedure, and curricular offerings.

Principals and guidance officers have received invitations to attend the program and will accompany groups of students in accordance with the county system used so successfully last year. The schedule is as follows: Oct. 7—Norfolk and Suffolk counties; Oct. 14—Barnstable, Bristol, Dukes, Essex, Middlesex, Nantucket, and Plymouth counties; Oct. 21—Berkshire, Franklin and Worcester counties; Oct. 28—Hampden and Hampshire counties.

Parents are also urged to attend the sessions. Representatives of the various colleges, schools, and departments of the University will be available for consultation at each session. Members of the Registrar's Office staff will explain the Universitys' requirements for entrance as well as other procedures used in judging students for admission.

All guests are invited to attend football games or other athletic events scheduled for the month of October.

CNVA Calls For End Of Russian Tests

A group of Americans is in the Soviet Union today calling for an end to Russian nuclear bomb testing.

The Americans, sponsored by the Committee for Nonviolent Action, and some European supporters are on the last leg of a 6,500 mile Peace March from San Francisco to Moscow.

Peacewalkers Reach Brest

The pacifist peacewalkers, numbering about three dozen, arrived at the Russian border city of Brest Friday, September 15. They were given permission by the Soviet government to advocate unilateral disarmament in signs, meetings and in the distribution of literature for the duration of their march.

A CNVA spokesman said it was believed to be the first time Russia has allowed the existence or organized opposition to official policies within Soviet territories.

Speaking to a public meeting attended by about 400 Russians on arrival here, Bradford Lyttle, CNVA National Secretary and walk leader, denounced nuclear testing by East and West and urged that Soviet citizens actively promote disarmament within their own country. Lyttle also discussed the pacifist organization's program of peace through nonviolent resistance and conscientious noncooperation with military policies.

Peacewalkers Feted by Brestites

The residents of Brest treated the peacewalkers to a feast and a concert before they left on foot to resume their hike to Moscow. They are expected to arrive early in October, 10 months after leaving San Francisco.

The March has traveled through seven countries—the United States, England, Belgium, West Germany, East Germany, Poland and Russia. France had been included in the itinerary but the government refused to admit them, forcing the walkers to offer civil disobedience twice by jumping from ships at Le Havre.

Tacelli Boosts Student Government At Convo

by JOE BRADLEY '64

The Listening Post is a new Collegian column which will list items that are or soon will be in the news. Thus, it will be possible to learn at a glance of much that is happening on campus.

Senate President, Tex Tacelli, in his brief speech at yesterday's Convocation, pointed out the importance of the student body participating in the Student Government. Tex reminded everyone that Student Government is our business . . .

The Senate plans to expand the Women's Affairs Committee and expansion is also planned for Women's Judiciary.

The Alumni Lecture Series has a guest on tap for its opening event. Robert Frost is expected to be on hand for the first lecture. As soon as details are worked out, an announcement as to time and place will be forthcoming from Mem Hall.

So. College Will Reshuffle

South College is in for a major reshuffling when the School of Education vacates its present Machmer offices. The Deans now in South College will move into Machmer in the present offices of the School of Education. Dean Purvis and the faculty of the School of Education, will move to the new Education Building.

The Concert Association will also be getting underway with its first presentation of the season. The Association will present Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians, October 24. Waring will do the spectacular "Let Freedom Sing".

The production makes use of the newest techniques in lighting, stage sets, costuming and stereophonic sound.

Newman Club Prepares for Ground-breaking

Father Power, Father Quigley and the Newman Club officers are preparing for ground-breaking ceremonies for the Newman Club Center, Monday at 4.

Bishop Christopher J. Weldon of the Springfield Diocese will be on hand for the spade ceremony which will signal the beginning of construction for the three-quarters-of a million dollar edifice.

Class of '65 Mugbooks are still reposing in the RSO office—about two hundred of them. Good news for upperclassmen, since the remaining Mugbooks will go on sale to all interested parties along with Mugbooks for other classes which are on sale now.

UMass Artist Shows Work At Exposition

A UMass senior, Arthur H. Winer, is the artist of "Untitled", an abstract done in oil on wood, which is currently being exhibited at the Eastern States Exposition in West Springfield.

The painting, which is 36 by 24 inches is priced at $150.

The art exhibition, to which approximately 100 artists were accepted, is open to all artists in the Eastern States area for a registration fee of two dollars.

Winer said he worked on the painting this summer. It was accepted for exhibition by the art jury two weeks ago. The artist intends to work for his Master's degree in art, in order to teach the subject.

The Exposition began last Saturday and will continue until this Sunday.

Art Program Is Planned

A program emphasizing the opportunities available at Amherst Art Center will be presented at Jones library September 30. Admission is free.

Demonstrations and exhibits will be featured during the afternoon and a program of music and poetry in the evening. Details of the event will be announced next week, according to Stephen Hamilton, director.

Operetta Guild Is Staging All Freshman Production

Under its present expansion program, the UMass Operetta Guild will include in its calendar of activities a special all Freshman Revue on Saturday, October 7. The Guild Executive Board made this announcement as a part of its projected broadening of the Guild program.

Auditions will be held in Old Chapel on Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 26 and 27 from 2-4 p.m. This call includes vocalists, instrumentalists, comedians, and monologists.

"This current expansion program," as described by Guild Manager, Paul A. Cwiklik, "is the result of conscientious planning by both University officials and the Operetta Guild student membership. The Guild hopes to operate within the enlarging framework of the University and to offer to the college student a chance to use and to display publicly his innate theatrical talents.

"Taking the necessary steps toward this end will be a gradual, but rather precise movement. As somewhat of an indication of this action, UMass Operetta Guild has recently been accepted into membership in the Amerian Educational Theatre Association."

Young Republicans Hold First Meeting Of Its Exec. Board

The Executive Board of the Young Republican Club of UMass held its first meeting of the semester Tuesday, September 19, in the Hampden Room of the S.U. The officers of the club are: President, David Manley; Vice President and Chairman of Publicity, Vincent Basile; Secretary, June Crasco; Treasurer, Bob Morgan; and Chairman of the Executive Committee, Richard Boardman.

The Young Republican Club newspaper, The Prism, which is distributed throughout the campus and the state, is headed by Editor-in-Chief, Del Ketcham. The club's advisor is Eugene C. Putala.

Mr. Boardman, who is heading the campaign activities of the organization, announced that on October 17, the first general meeting of the club will be held featuring a noted speaker. A complete program of campaign activities will be presented at that time.

Hort Show Plans Moving Smoothly For Oct. Showing

As an added attraction to the forty-ninth Annual Hort Show, "Carnival of Flowers," a ferris wheel and midway will be featured this year.

Plans are rapidly developing for the presentation by the University and Stockbridge students of Agriculture for the October 27, 28, 29 show.

Student chairmen of the show will be named at the first general meeting Wednesday, September 27, at 7:30 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium. Other students wishing to participate are cordially invited to this meeting.

Under the direction of E. A. White, the first Hort Show was held in Wilder Hall as early as 1908. Due to an increase in size through the years, the show was moved to various buildings, but in 1932, through the cooperation of Professor C. S. Hicks, the "cage" was destined as the new area.

This year, to help pay the expenses of the show, adults will be charged a small admission fee of 25 cents and students will present their I.D. cards for admission.

Sports Scandals Have Added Meaning As Football Nears

We of the Sports Department are sure that most of you remember the basketball scandals of last year in which it was proved that many players, some turning up to this date, receive large cash offers to "fix" games.

These players performed far below their normal capabilities in the chosen games, shaving off points, fouling unnecessarily, and generally doing their best to lose or win the game within the margin set up by the bookmakers.

I received a letter a month ago from Sports Illustrated Magazine, a magazine which campaigned vigorously, as did the Collegian, against these decadent conditions in the Sports world. Here is part of that letter:

"By this time you have undoubtedly read a great deal more on the highly controversial basketball scandal. As it unfolds, further facets keep coming to light. We hope that you will continue to join us in our dedicated pursuit of a final and just resolution. We . . . are seriously and genuinely concerned with bringing to the public's attention a clear, forthright, and accurate summation of events to date . . . Our many thanks for evincing such concern in the interests of a better moral climate for the world of sports and our youth . . ."

The campaign for a cleaner atmosphere of the sports world should not be limited to a brief "crisis state, but, rather, with a new year of college sports ahead of us, we should refresh our memories and be aware of the dangers facing the moral health of American athletes.

NEW VITALITY

This problem is quite vital at this time, for, with the football season already here, bookmakers and crooks throughout the nation will be laying bets and infiltrating the gridirons. FBI trained men have been assigned in even greater numbers than before to curb the gambling connected with football and the corrupting of gridsters.

A widely published article which throws in full light the weaknesses in academic systems which foster corruptness in college sports may be of some help in bringing this problem to mind. It appeared in many journals and magazines about the time of the basketball scandals last year. Here is a summary of that article:

New York, May 24—College recruitment of athletes today is not just highly competitive— 'it is a rat race." An NYU graduate student wrote to eleven colleges for admission and scholarship aid in the name of a fictional basketball player. The results show that although getting into college has never been tougher for most young men, it has seldom been easier for athletes. It exposes "a frantic attitude that contributes to the tragedy" of the basketball scandals.

The project was the work of Thomas Affinito, son of a Meriden, Connecticut, doctor. Affinito was preparing a term paper entitled "High School athletics, a passkey to College." On the basis of a personal letter signed "Tom Fini" and a faked newspaper clipping depicting the applicant as a good ("all-state") basketball player with a straight average, the following results came within two weeks:

- Two colleges offered full scholarships.
- One college offered a half scholarship to be changed to a full scholarship if he became a starter on the freshman team.
- Representatives of three schools telephoned: two others telegraphed, and five wrote within a day of receiving the letter. Every college applied with evident interest.
- Four colleges enclosed admission applications in which was written the name or initials of the basketball coach, plainly put there to show the admissions office it was dealing with an athlete.

Affinito selected the schools he approached on the basis of their geographical spread and their known interest in basketball. They were: St. Francis College (Pa.) University of Detroit, University of Richmond, University of Akron, Gonzaga University, Duquesne University, Belmont Abbey, Idaho State University, Memphis State University, Kentucky Wesleyan College and the University of Portland. Of the eleven, only Duquesne called the local high school and newspaper to try to check credentials before approaching the player.

A Sports Illustrated article includes the progress of the replies as Affinito recorded them in his diary. A sample follows:

April 17—St. Francis College got into the act today. At noon a telegram arrived from Dr. W. T. Hughes, a dentist who is also the basketball coach. The doctor asked Fini to telephone him. A letter was sent saying Fini had other plans.

But four days later a registered letter arrived for Tom Fini from Dr. Hughes. It read: Tried to reach you by phone. Also sent telegram . . . Can't seem to reach you. Call or write if you are still interested.' And a week after that came a last letter from the St. Francis coach. It contained a flat offer:

"Would like to have you with us at St. Francis College. Can offer room, board, tuition and fees. We are only 75 miles from Pittsburgh, and we are one of the nicest small colleges in the country. A picture of our next two dormitories being started now, enclosed.'

On the St. Francis application form Dr. Hughes had written his name. Beside the name were the underlined words, "Basketball Player."

CONDITIONS SHOWN

Tom Affinito's project presents a flagrant example of the conditions present in many institutions of higher learning conducive to athlete corruptability. If these men can be allowed to disregard the principles of fair play and honesty, if they can live in a community interested in them merely for their athletic ability and what that ability can do for that community, then there is little to prevent them from being swayed by crooks who can offer them additional remuneration.

Many people hold the presidents of colleges responsible for the standards maintained in those institutions. 'The most shocking fact," writes Sports Illustrated, "about the scandals is not that there are evil men who try to seduce college athletes, or that some of those athletes yield to temptation. It is that the college heads refuse to admit their own dereliction of duty and are trying to shift responsibility for the tragedy to others. "We don't intend to do anything different than in the past," says LaSalle's brother Bernian, "Because we don't think we did anything wrong." This seems to be the position all college administrations have taken since the scandals broke, a scandal which involved some players from our own Yankee Conference.

All too many universities have a double standard of education. One of their nonathletic students, another for the athletes who bring in the gate receipts. Here the responsibility of college administrators is obvious: they are inviting the further corruption of kids whose values already have been perverted in the process of forceful and brazen recruiting.

Everett Case, Basketball coach at North Carolina State College, has a plan to keep future basketball scandals from touching his state. He believes that New York City boys are more easily corrupted than Carolina boys and that Carolina coaches should therefore stop recruiting New York athletes and concentrate on acquiring homebred talent!

ACTION TAKEN

This belief, although it may seem strange to some, has led to some definite official action by collegiate authorities. The University of North Carolina and North Carolina State College, both hit by player-bribery charges, have agreed that henceforth they will grant athletic scholarships to only two basketball players per year outside the Athletic Coast Conference. (AND WILL APPLY THE SAME PRINCIPLE TO FOOTBALL RECRUITING).

With the current onset of the football season Americans everywhere should give serious thought to the principles of numerous institutions which make taking bribes a "soft touch." FBI trained men don't have to be reminded of the existing conditions.

Intramural Net Crown Open To All Comers

The Department of Intramurals is again holding a tennis tournament open to the entire university.

There will be contests for students and faculty members, and eventually the grand champion will be found.

It is a single elimination tournament, with a trophy for the winner. All entries check with the intramural office in room 8 of the Physical Education Building, or with Tom Simons or Eric Schuhle, 212 Brooks Hall for entry blanks. All entries must be in by Wednesday, Sept. 27.

The tournament is not one for champions, but one for anyone who has fun playing tennis. All those interested in the game and who have played somewhat are urged to compete.

Last year's winner, Mr. Don Bossart, is expected to participate once again.

Bossart and Ken Barrows led the strong field of seventy-five contestants into the finals of the tennis tournament last year. Bossart reached the finals with wins over Paul Norten and Bob Roland.

The finals between Bossart and Barrows were skillfully played contests and provided a good deal of excitement and entertainment since both men were former college varsity players. Bossart played for Harvard.

INTRAMURAL TENNIS CONTESTANTS

Former Intramural tennis contestants strove for the net championship and provided fun and excitement for all concerned. Last year's champion, Don Bossart, is in the first row, right.

rive at that halcyon day when our problems will seem more limited.

"But problems will always be with us, for every step we take opens up new areas of difficulty. When one contemplates our rate of expansion in the next three or four years it is clear that the gears of our complex machine will frequently clash. For the number of students who are in the University this year, we have adequate classrooms but inadequate dorms.

"The academic year 1961-1962 can be the year of major breakthrough for our University. I am convinced that Massachusetts, with its great tradition in private higher education, will not accept anything less than first rate public higher education. There is on all sides an awareness that private institutions cannot absorb the hosts of able Massachusetts boys and girls who are seeking higher education. The Commonwealth must find the money and organize a system of public higher education calculated to cultivate our greatest natural resource—our youth.

"The legislature recently created a Commission to study budget procedures at the University. This was an indication of the desire of leading legislators, regardless of party and politics, to do everything possible to build and improve the State University. What this Commission is investigating is the need for greater freedom on the part of your University—freedom to manage its own affairs with full accountability to the public it serves.

"A national Commission on Government and Higher Education, of which Milton Eisenhower was chairman, studied the problem of external controls over public universities by detailed legislative appropriations, and by central budget, purchasing, accounting, printing and other regulations. In a stirring report entitled "The Efficiency of Freedom", the Commission called for return of the management of the universities to the boards of trustees. Let the trustees be true trustees—trust them to allocate the appropriations wisely in the light of institutional needs.

"So far as the University of Massachusetts is concerned we need to eliminate centrally administered personnel regulations which prescribe the number of instructors in each rank, their pay, and rigidly freeze salary ceilings in a period when there is a growing shortage of academic personnel. Let the trustees develop their own salary and personnel program in the light of the needs of our particular institution, which is unique in Massachusetts, just as Lowell Institute of Technology is unique, or the Berkshire Community College is unique.

"One problem we face today is inability to organize as we see fit. When I first arrived I found that one of our most serious lacks was a full-time person to coordinate the activities of the offices of Dean of Men, Dean of Women, Student Union, Guidance, Placement—in short, the entire area of student affairs. For a number of years there had been a request that a position of Dean of Students for the University be established. But year after year, without an appreciation of our problems, the request went unanswered. Our enrollment expanded, extra-curricular activities multiplied, dormitory noise and counseling problems became aggravated, economic and social problems afflicted our fraterni-

UMass-Maine Opening Grid Contest Is Canceled

Virus Grips Twenty-two Redmen As Many Lose Weight, Strength

Director of Athletics Warren P. McGuirk announced Wednesday afternoon that the football game between the University of Massachusetts and Maine, scheduled for this Saturday at Orono, Maine has been cancelled because of an intestinal virus that has afflicted the Massachusetts squad and campus.

Mr. McGuirk also added: although we were very reluctant to have to cancel our season opener, we certainly do not want to take the chance of exposing our student athletes to injuries following the virus attack which will prevent them from being in top playing condition this weekend. Secondly, we are also concerned about exposing the Maine team and campus to a malady which could hurt their squad in the weeks to come.

JOHN McCORMICK
Loses 10 Pounds

Dr. Robert Gage, team physican and Director of Health Services at the University of Massachusetts indicated that more than half of the team has suffered from the sickness since last Saturday which is characterized by high fever, headaches and dysentary. "Some of the team personnal have lost as much as thirteen pounds in three days," Dr. Gage commented, "and I am certain that it is impossible to have a representative squad available for the Maine game in light of the severity of the virus."

A total of 22 players have been hit by the virus, including star quarterback John McCormick and placekicking specialist John Bamberry. McCormick, Bamberry, Vin Caputo, Roger Cavanaugh and Loren Flagg were released from the infirmary Tuesday.

McCormick lost 10 pounds during his seige and said Tuesday, "I feel worse now than I did a couple of days ago."

Although every effort will be made to reschedule the game, Mr. McGuirk indicated that no date has been selected at this time.

UMass, Connecticut And Buffalo Are Ranked As Major Teams By ECAC

The Universities of Massachusetts, Buffalo and Connecticut have been ranked as major college football elevens beginning with the 1961 season, Asa S. Bushnell, commissioner of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, announced Wednesday. The elevation of the trio, all former members of the ECAC Small College North Category, brings the number of ECAC Major Colleges to 22.

Buffalo, which will play a nine game schedule, opened its 1961 season by beating Gettysburg 14-6. The Bulls will meet four major ECAC rivals—Boston University, Holy Cross, Villanova and Connecticut.

The UConns list a nine-game slate, beginning September 30 at Yale. Six major opponents are on the Huskies' card, including the Elis, Rutgers, UMass, Buffalo, Boston University and Holy Cross.

The Massachusetts Redmen are slated to meet four major colleges.—UConn, Boston University, Villanova and Holy Cross. Massachusetts and Connecticut tied for the Yankee Conference title in 1960.

The new list of ECAC Major College elevens, in alphabetical order, follows: Army, Boston College, Boston University, Brown, Buffalo, Colgate, Columbia, Connecticut, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, Holy Cross, Massachusetts, Navy Pennsylvania, Penn State, Pittsburgh, Princeton, Rutgers, Syracuse, Villanova and Yale.

Rifle Squad Needs Men

Freshman and senior candidates for the Stockbridge Rifle Team are wanted. Prior experience is desirable, but not required.

The Stockbridge Rifle Team is classified by the National Rifle Association and recognized by other college teams as a member of the NRA Intercollegiate Rifle Association. Postal matches are conducted with college teams throughout the United States, and shoulder-to-shoulder matches are held in the New England area with freshmen and varsity college teams at and away from Amherst.

Included in the 1961-62 season are matches with the Yale freshmen at New Haven, Northeastern Univrsity freshmen at UMass, and Holy Cross at Worcester.

In addition the Stockbridge Rifle Team takes part in the National Intercollegiate Secional Match. at Boston.

Practice periods reserved for the Stockbridge Rifle team at the University rifle ranges are:

9-12 A.M. on Tuesdays
6-10 P.M. on Tuesdays
1-4 P.M. on Wednesdays

Other periods may be possible by arrangement.

Candidates are asked to contact seniors Jim Mitchell, Brad Allen, Loren Valley or Dick Mottolo for further information or to see Colonel Marchant at one of the above practice periods or in his office in Dickinson Hall.

Cross Country Team Ready To Defend YanCon Crown Behind Balch and Brouillet

by ABE SHEINKER '62

The UMass cross country team has been training every day since the opening of school in preparation for the coming season. The schedule opens with a meet at New London, Connecticut, against Coast Guard and Hartford College.

Cross country is new to many people so an explanation of the rules and scoring of the sport is in order here.

Runners from each of two or more teams race over roads and trails, through woods and over hills on a predetermined course.

The UMass course includes a sprint up Baker Hill. The distance for freshman is about three miles and for varsity about 4½ miles, but these figures vary from course to course.

Each team has an unlimited number of entries but only the first seven finishers from each school count for places. A confusing point in the scoring is that, of these seven runners, only the first five finishers count in the scoring. For example, if the first seven finishers from one team finish in places one through seven, and those seven of the second team take places eight through 14, the first team is awarded points for places one through five, and the second team wins points for places eight through 15. The number six and seven men of the first team do not add to their team's score, but are important since they prevent the second team from scoring points for places six and seven.

As a result, the sixth and seventh men of the first team, if they finished ahead of any of the second team's first five finishers, can move some of the second team's men back a few places. scores are tallied as one point for first, two for second, etc. and the low scoring team wins.

The UMass squad is very strong this year, having lost only two men through graduation while gaining several great men from last year's New England Champion and undefeated freshmen. The losses include Ralph Buschmann and Emo Barron, the squad's second and fifth men, respectively.

Most of this year's runners were on the 1960 team which had a 6-2 record in dual meets, won the Yankee Conference title, and was a close second to Brown in the New England championships.

The nucleus of Coach Bill Footrick's team will be Dave Balch '63, Bob Brouillet '64 and Dick Blomstrom, '63. Balch was the first UMass finisher in every meet last fall and has been leading the pack in early workouts so far. He is a team co-captain and won the Yankee Conference meet last year while setting a new course record.

Brouillet, number one man on last year's freshman team, is a very strong runner who holds several frosh track records in the mile and two mile and who has been bussing Balch this Fall. A consistant number three runner, Blomstrom should keep his spot this season.

Leading the supporting forces are Ken O'Brien '63, Jim Wrynn '63, Bob Avery '63, Charlie Proctor '63, Gene Colburn '64 and Gene Hasbrouck '63.

O'Brien, Proctor and Avery were in the top seven of last year's team and Colburn fought Brouillet for the top spot on the frosh squad. O'Brien is a school track record holder in the half-mile and 1000 yard races. Wrynn, a member of the 1957 team, returns after a three-year stretch in the army during which he ran many distance races in Europe. Avery is in top shape after having covered about 400 miles in summer training including a dozen road races.

Also striving for places on the team are seniors Joe LaMarre and Ken Johnson, juniors Jack Harrington, Tom Leavitt, and Ron and Bruce Thompson, sophomores Dick Monteiro and John Bradley. This team can go all the way to the New England championship but for injuries, illness and a travel budget squeeze by the athletic department.

The schedule is a follows:

Sept.	30	Coast Guard and Hartford	Away 2:30
Oct.	4	Union	Home 3:30
Oct.	7	Maine and Northeastern	Away 2:00
Oct.	13	B.U. and Conn.	Home 3:30

Bad Breaks Hit Wheeler

Wheeler Dorm, under the direction of John Mastone, Athletic Chairman, held its first intramural football practice session Monday night, and bad luck, which plagued the team last year, took its toll.

One player suffered a broken ankle and another aggravated a foot injury suffered during the summer.

This now cuts the squad down to eight men, two short of the prescribed number required by intramural rules. If the squad is not filled by Friday, September 22, Wheeler will have to forfeit its team.

Any resident of Wheeler Dorm interested in playing contact John Mastone, Room 231, or Mrs. Emily Raymond, Housemother.

Keeping Time

NEW YORK (UPI)—Women keep closer tabs on time than men, according to Robert Mohr vice president of Timex. A survey of the time-checking habits of 3,500 men and women, Mohr said, gave these results: An average of 24 times a day for women; 18 times for men.

ties and sororities. The need for administrative leadership and coordination so students might get answers to their multiplying problems was obvious. A free university, granted its appropriation without personnel restrictions, could have quickly resolved this by establishing an office of Dean of Students. But the University of Massachusetts had to await legislative authorization —for which we are now thankful, even though the action is late.

"I said earlier that this could be the year of the big breakthrough—the year in which the University of Massachusetts achieves the freedom to manage its affairs with appropriate flexibility so as to achieve the greatness we are all seeking. We do not presently know the nature of the report which the study Commission will render. We do not know the form of the legislation which will be submitted to support the Commission's conclusions. Even if the report is favorable, as we fervently hope, the legislation might face hard sledding in the General Court. For years the Commonwealth has been strengthening its controls over administration through detailed budget, accounting, purchasing and printing regulations. Desirable as these may be as applied to other agencies of the state government, they serve only to inhibit the proper development of institutions of high learnings.

"Nationally, public universities flourish in an atmosphere of freedom; they wither or become mediocre in an atmosphere of detailed external control. Having been on both ends—as a state controller and a university president—I am convinced that we can get the most education for our tax dollar by turning over the management of the University to the trustees.

"All of us — students, faculty, alumni—have the opportunity of responsibly presenting the case for the efficiency of freedom. This is a year for seeking to convince the legislature to give us the means to run our own affairs and achieve through placing of managerial responsibility squarely on our own shoulders the excellence that citizens and university people alike desire. In such an endeavor, students have a major responsibility. Every student's goal must encompass not only individual fullfilment but the enrichment and strengthening of the university community and of the society which supports the university.

"Ultimately, of course, what you get from your four years at the University depends largely on you. The taxpayers can provide you with a ne physical plant. The faculty can direct your attention to the sources of knowledge. But only you can determine whether you will have an education and justify all the effort put forth by others to assure the opportunity that is yours.

"There is much sweat and tears and hard work involved in intellectual activity. A student's day is never done, for there is always more he could do to prepare for class, there is always a little more polishing that could be done on the term paper, there is always another article he could read or an additional review of class notes that would help on the next examination. Being a student is a vocation, just like being a newspaper editor or a lawyer. It is a full time job.

"Let us hope that many of you will get that inner spark which leads you to work on and on and learn more and more for the sheer joy of learning, not, as is so frequently the case, to satisfy a teacher, to pass an examination, or to get a good grade. The University of Massachusetts is a tough school. It is hard to get admitted; it is hard to stay in. Learn to be proud of the rigor applied to admissions and to academic achievement after you are here. The greater the challenge, the more rewarding the goal achieved.

"We are met, as I said earlier, amid circumstances of crisis. Never was freedom more seriously challenged. Never was America and American youth in such mortal danger. Our young men are already aware of the increasing tempo of the Selective Service calls. Each day our press reveals new threats of war.

"In the battle for the world which is already going on, education is America's weapon. Upon our colleges and universities depends the preparation of the physicists, the chemists, the astronomers, the engineers, the administrators who will produce and operate the rockets, the space platforms, the computers, which will get us to the moon if need be. Upon these same educational institutions depends the preparation of the doctors, the lawyers, the social workers, and just plain educated citizens whose good works alleviate ills and promote happiness and the welfare of mankind. An educated citizenry can win.

"Everyone here today is the beneficiary of a great privilege. We have no room for the dilettante or the playboy. We want only the serious, those who are here to learn (which is not to say we have no moments for good, wholesome fun.) You are all here preparing for your place of real responsibility.

"Some of you I hope will see it as your mission to work in other lands. Some of you will wish to acquire a real understanding of a foreign language, and beyond that, of a foreign culture. When I went to college opportunities were limited. Few, if any of us ever contemplated service abroad. There was no Point IV Program. There was no Peace Corps. Today youth lives more dangerously, but more excitingly. Live it up to the hilt. Use your university years to prepare for being citizens of the world.

"Remember, if you will, these words by Alfred North Whitehead: 'The justification for a university is that it preserves the connection between knowledge and the zest of life, by uniting the young and old in the imaginative consideration of learning . . . Youth is imaginative, and if the imagination is strengthened by discipline this energy of imagination can in great measure be preserved through life. The tragedy of the world is that those who are imaginative have but slight experience, and those who are experienced have feeble imaginations. Fools act on imagination without knowldege; pedants act on knowledge without imagination. The task of a university is to weld together imagination and experience.

"I now ask you to embark upon that task."

Other Programs Planned

On November 8, the Concert Association will present the Hartford Little Symphony in Bowker Auditorium. Carlos Montoya, the world's leading flamenco guitarist, will highlight the third concert of the series on January 9, in the S.U. on Ballroom. The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra will offer the fourth Series presentation, on February 20, in the Cage. The Series will conclude its season with the American Ballet Theatre, April 12, in the Cage.

Four-College Radio Goes On The Air

Music — from the classics to jazz — is broadcast 12½ hours this week and every week on WFCR-FM. (WFCR-FM is the new frequency modulation station (88.5) supported by Amherst, Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges and the University of Massachusetts.)

Monday through Friday evenings at 5:00, Bill Cavness plays "New Recordings," offering his own thoughtful, informative commentary on recent record releases.

Noted concert pianist Alexander Borovsky will be heard in recital September 18 at 7:30, playing music of J.S. Bach; and at 8:30 the same evening Tanglewood in stereo with WHCN in Hartford. Charles Munch conducts the program which includes the "Elegy for Serge Koussevitsky" by Howard Hanson, Honegger's First Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3.

Tuesday, the 19th, Bill Cavness will again be at the microphone, with a comparison of ancient and contemporary choral music, starting at 8:30.

There's a two-hour New England Conservatory Orchestra concert Wednesday the 20th, beginning at 8:30 with James Dixon directing Mahler's Second Symphony.

"Music From France" is featured Friday the 22nd, at 10 p.m., when the String Quartet by Marcel Delannot will be heard.

Saturday evening there'll be four hours of music, starting at 4 p.m. with "Musical Rarities" of the 19th Century. At 7:00 Father Norman J. O'Connor hosts his own Jazz Anthology, and at 8:30 another concert of Music from Tanglewood, features Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" Suite, Rachmaninoff's Second Piano Concerto and Tchaikovsky's Seventh Symphony.

That makes a total of 12½ hours — almost one-third of WFCR-FM's total broadcast week.

No. Congregational Church Will Offer Rides On Sunday

Each Sunday during the school year, there will be rides available to the North Congregational Church for students who wish to attend its 11:00 service. The cars will leave from in front of Arnold House at 10:45.

Rev. Russell G. Claussen, who resigned as the Acting Protestant Chaplain of the University in June, is the minister of the church.

North Church is located approxiately one mile north of the women's dormitories.

Nomination papers for the office of Student Senator from the commuters, married students, dormitories, sororities and fraternities, and for the office of Senator at Large from the class of '64 will be available in the RSO office, SU. (These must be returned by 1 p.m., Oct. 6, 1961.)

October 3

Primary elections for the office of Vice President of the classes of '63 and '64 will be held in the SU. Lobby from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

October 10

Final elections for the offices of Vice President of the classes of '63 and '64 will be held in the S.U. Lobby from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Elections for the offices of commuter, fraternity and sorority Senator will be held in the S.U. Lobby from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Elections for the offices of dormitory Senator will be held in the respective dormitories from 8 p.m. until 10 p.m.

Elections for the office of married student Senator will be held in the Berkshire House from 8 p.m. until 10 p.m.

Among the women's dormitories, Arnold House has been allotted two student senators, while the remainder have been allotted one each.

Among the men's dormitories, Van Meter House has been allotted three student senators, Baker House has been allotted three, and the remainder have been allotted one each. (Hills North and Hills South are considered separate dorms.)

The married students and the sororities have been allotted one senator each. The fraternities have three senators. The commuters will elect four senators.

Many UMass Alumni Hold High Positions

The Alumni Office of UMass has published the following list of the positions held by some former graduates. These range from administration work at colleges and universities to supervisory positions in various fields of research.

These men and women have risen far in their chosen fields after their commencements and are certainly a credit to the University.

Harold B. Pierce '17, chairman of the biochemistry department and vice-chairman of admissions, University of Vermont College of Medicine, has been made a Fellow of the New York Academy of Sciences for "having attained outstanding recognition for scientific achievement and for the promotion of science."

Dr. Harry R. Copson 29, has been awarded the Willis Rodney Whitney Award in recognition of his contributions to the science of corrosion. He is supervisor of the corrosion section of the research laboratory at International Nickel Co., Inc., of Bayonne, N.J., where he has worked since 1934. In 1946 he was awarded the Dudley Medal for a paper on the mechanism of rusting of steels, has had more than 40 articles published, and has written chapters for several books on corrosion subjects.

Stanley F. Salwak '43, on leave of absence from the Provost Office, is acting as Associate Director for the Committee on Institutional Cooperation at Purdue University.

Paul Perry '50 and former Collegian editor, is assistant to the director of Harvard's School and University Program for Research and Development. The job is basically a communications chore, including the writing of a variety of reports and documents, and wll also entail some administrative and public relations work.

Murray Danforth Lincoln '14, president of Nationwide Insurance, was recently appointed by President Kennedy to be head of the Food for Peace task force of the new administration.

Conrad L. Wirth '23, director of National Park Service, was recently selected to receive the 1960-61 Rockefeller Public Service Award. Mr. Wirth's award is also given in the area of conservation and resources.

Dr. Mabel M. MacMasters '26, professor at Kansas State University, has been named president-elect of the American Association of Cereal Chemists. This is the first time in 20 years that a woman has been named to the post and the third time in AACC's 46-year history. Earlier this year Dr. MacMasters received the AACC Osborne Medal.

Dr. G. David Novelli's '40, research into protein synthesis has been hailed as a significant advance in biological research. His research report was given in testimony before the joint congressional atomic energy subcommittee on research. Dr. Novelli is principal biological chemist at the Atomic Energy Commission's Oak Ridge laboratory.

Robert Frost May Lecture In Alumni Memorial Series

Fred C. Ellert, Chairman of the Alumni Lecture Memorial Series and head of the UMass German department, has announced a list of persons which the Alumni Lecture Memorial Series is seeking as possible lecturers.

Robert Frost Invited

The list includes Robert Frost, famed American poet, Walter Lippman, syndicated political columnist and writer, and James Reston, New York Times political writer.

Ellert said it is hoped that Robert Frost will be on hand for the dedication week of the Four-College radio station, WFCR. In the event that the Alumni Memorial Lecture Series is unable to get Frost, Ellert said that another poet or lecturer would be present to help dedicate the Four-College educational radio station.

Series Allows Flexible Schedule

Ellert explained that the lecture series is endeavoring to get as speaker "the best people in their field". The Alumni Memorial Lecture Series has no concurrent theme, Ellert noted, thereby allowing a flexible schedule of speakers.

Ellert also made mention of the fact that the manuscripts of the lecturers presented by the Series become potential material for the Massachusetts Review.

The last Alumni Memorial Lecture was presented last May by noted historian Oscar Handlin, professor of History at Harvard who delivered the lecture "The American Civil War: A Symbol". Hanlin's lecture was the third in the series.

Lt. Col. ALBERT W. AYKROYD

ROTC Dept. Acquires New P.M.S.

As of September 1st the UMass ROTC department has acquired a new professor of military science.

Lt. Col. Albert W. Aykroyd has returned to his alma mater, for he received his B.S. in entomology from the University in 1941. He is from Worcester, Mass. and is looking for a home in the Amherst area.

His family, which is in Ohio, will join him in a few days. He has three children: Douglas, who is fourteen; Ann, ten; and Jeoffrey, eighteen, who is in the U.S. Army Military Academy Preparatory School at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Served Overseas

Lt. Col. Aykroyd was commissioned a second Lieutenant in the reserve Cavalry Armor School upon graduation from here. In 1941 he was on the faculty of the armor school at Fort Knox.

He was in Europe during W.W.II, in Japan from 1948-1952, and in the second Infantry Division in Korea. In 1953 he was on the faculty of the Command and General Staff College at Fort Levenworth, Kansas.

His last tour of duty was from 1957-1961 in Europe. He also served at the U.S. Army headquarters of the Operational Div.- in Heidelberg. He served at Fort Benning, Georgia; Fort Meade, Maryland; the Far East Command, and was a prisoner of war.

Has Varied Interests

He is very much interested in photography and soccer; in fact, he is helping the soccer coach with the UMass team.

Lt. Col. Aykroyd went to graduate school here in 1946 for one semester. While here he lived in Leverett in a house that was built in 1790, and he recalled that the best apple pies his wife ever made came out of that "old black iron stove."

A.B.A. Urges Public Schools To Teach About Communism

In recent months, an increasing number of organizations has been urging the public schools to include specific courses on Communism in their curriculum.

Early in the year, the American Bar Association passed a resolution urging such teaching and demanding "the highest quality of instruction in this area."

This month, it was disclosed that the American Legion was working with the National Education Association to provide "a model course" for the public schools to study about communism.

The New York Times has asked the education departments in all fifty states whether they now prescribe, or plan to issue, separate materials on communism for use in the social studies curriculum. Replies have been received from thirty-four states.

The states' approach to this controversial subject varies greatly. It ranges from complete local option to determine whether and how an understanding of communism should be taught, to mandated study guides.

Broad Range Revealed

It also runs the gamut from apparently well-documented scholarly teaching to at least one example of an ultra-right-wing approach.

The latter includes, as a required part of such instruction, the showing of a film strip, developed at Harding College, in Arkansas, and widely attacked in recent months as containing extreme right-wing propaganda.

Thus the range of the approach is from an objective investigation of the conflict between communism and the ideas of freedom to the interpretation of social welfare measures as part of the threat of communism.

Everyone seems to have had fun at the Fall Frolic, held Friday night in the S.U. Ballroom. It may have been hot though; at least one dancer found it so and tried to keep his feet cool.

Three Meet the Changing Fabric

Our universities, old and new, are facing grave times and growing crises. The social, moral, and academic fabric of America has changed over the last century. Tradition—that pillar of spirit and the mistress of wealthy alumni—is being built and savored among the many young and growing universities. But among our nation's older institutions, there has arrived the problem of whether or not tradition should bow in favor of our changing collegiate fabric.

Georgetown University announced last week that plans are now in effect to build a tavern on campus for its students. "Indoctrination in the proper use of alcohol is part of the education of modern young men," explained Rev. T. Byron Collins, a university vice-President. "We prefer to provide a place with proper atmosphere where they can go for relaxation." We salute a move on the part of this revered institution which treats alcohol not as a problem but rather as an element within the environment which should be recognized and met maturely. The denial of alcohol's presence seldom dilutes its effect.

When the University of Notre Dame's doors opened last week, several stalwart oaks of tradition fell from the South Bend horizon. Instead of the staid midnight "lights out" in residence halls, each student will now set his own hours. Discipline is being put, for the most part, in the hands of the students rather than the Dean of Men. And the Student Government has been granted more powers. President Hesburgh has explained, ". . . a few months after graduation each of you will be facing tremendous responsibilities; marriage, military service, graduate school, your first job . . . Now is the time to achieve maturity."

Through the palm trees and salty air surrounding the University of Miami last week came the stern voice of Dr. Robert Johns, the university's executive vice-president. Dr. Johns, like Fathers Collins and Hesburgh, was in the process of destroying a tradition but instead of allocating responsibility to the mature, he was offering an ultimatum to the immature. The "student parking and necking any place on campus," tee shirts, sandals, men's short-shorts, and fraternity parties more than 20 miles from campus, which presented the University with the suc-sexful titles, "Playboy U." and "Suntan U.," have now been banned altogether.

These decisions by the three institutions show a great deal of courage and foresight. They have set their goals high . . . in respect to both the moral and the academic attitude of their students. As one newspaper editorialized, "Maturity is the product of challenges set and met." Miami, Notre Dame, and Georgetown students have been given their challenges; the fate of their sister institutions may rest with how well they meet the challenges. More than just their own administrations will be observing their performances.

While the student body at UMass is fortunate in possessing a large degree of "autonomy", in other respects it would certainly prove profitable to all if our administration took cognizance of these major steps toward meeting the changing fabric of their college populace.

THE RIGHT TO SPEAK

Today's world is a world of propaganda — insidious propaganda that ceaselessly emanates from every quarter, giving no quarter. It is a world that behooves rational decisions founded on exploratory and systematic thought.

Debate has traditionally presented those credentials necessary to explore issues, to expose the specious argument, to fight tyranny and ignorance. And the world issues besetting man today, as never before in the history of Western Man, give new meaning to the art of debate and those organizations devoted to it.

Presently the university debating societies across the nation are preparing for another season of debate. Their mere existence is a reaffirmation of the right of American students to pit their minds in the give and take of debate, to freely explore ideas and issues. And in some countries such as in Central and South America, students in the coming year will play a vital role in their nations as the vanguards of thought and action.

After a successful season last year, the University Debating Club is again organizing to join the community of college debators. Its membership is open to the skilled and especially the novice, offering the opportunity to train the disciplines of thinking and speaking.

The ability to speak cogently on one's feet is unequivocllay a precious asset to the butcher, the baker, or the candlestick maker. Whether you are to be a scientist or businessman, a professional or politician, the training in debating is worth your time and effort, the right to speak is worth your keeping.

HOMETOWN AMERICA

Solution to World Problems

Recent magazine and newspaper articles have revealed to the public that Americans are overweight. This comes as no shock to 40 million American calorie watchers. A calorie watcher is a person who watches himself take in an enormous excess of calories, promises to starve himself for a week, and quickly forgets about the whole thing.

When a calorie watcher begins to find difficulty in squeezing through the kitchen doorway, he is faced with a major decision. Should he make the doorway larger or should he make himself smaller? If he does not own a set of tools and cannot afford a carpenter, he sets out on a weight losing campaign. The usual procedure begins with one teaspoon of sugar in the coffee in place of the usual two. Before long the decision is made to use milk in the coffee in place of cream. Although there are no immediate results, the calorie watcher feels satisfied that he is making an effort.

One day, after nearly half a year at only a pinch of sugar in the coffee, the calorie watcher settles his sebaceous frame into a sagging sofa and turns on the television set by pressing a button on a remote control device. A cartoon show is interrupted by one of those commercials which is cleverly disguised as a news bulletin. The narrator reveals the fact that millions of people have had satisfactory results by using a certain brand of liquid diet.

Portly Pete burns off the T.V. and tries to envision himself as a sprightly 170 pounder. He is so excited that he has to stand up and walk around the room. The same day, he sends away for a month's supply of liquid diet, and he soon becomes a life-long addict.

The idea of a completely liquid diet is not a new one; hospitals are full of people who habitually receive all their nourishment from bottles and cans. Perhaps these people serve as a warning of the effects of the liquid diet, but their presence seems to have little effect on the bulk of popular opinion. One unverified report from Tibet states that a group of Sherpas came upon a bevy of abominable snowmen who brandished empty cans of Metrecal. Much to the surprise of the Sherpas, the snowmen did not flee and were easily killed with slingshots.

Why didn't the usually elusive snowmen flee? An autopsy revealed that the creatures had become weakened because of lack of bulk in their diets. Abominable snowmen usually feed on lost mountain climbers and abominable snowman hunters, but this was an off season and the missing links had to eat lichens in order to stay alive. One day, a cargo plane loaded with dietary food crashed on the slopes of Mt. Everest. The snowmen had no choice but to consume whatever was left of the cargo, 500 cases of liquid diets.

Despite the fact that an American housewife is not as sturdily built as an abominable snowman, millions of women have pledged themselves to a completely liquid diet. To be sure, many will shed a few unwanted pounds, but if a person cannot live on bread alone, how can she survive on tasteless fluid.

Several suggestions have been made to prevent what happened in Tibet from reoccuring all across America. Production of cans for liquid diets would solve another great American problem; the steel industry would once again be working at full capacity. The economy would rise so that all could afford to pay for the special cans. After having been emptied, the cans could be collected and sent to government munitions factories. Many types of bomb and shell casings could be fashioned from the cans, and our military budget could be lowered.

Other nations would attempt to bolster their economies by producing the heavy cans but would not be as successful because of lower percentages of overweight people in their populations. Our competitors would need large amounts of fattening foods in order to establish a need for the cans, and we would have a ready market for our food surpluses.

Before the beginning of the worldwide can race, we must inform all these people that they should eat if they expect to help our nation's future.

RD's Select Volpone For Fall Production

The Roister Doisters, dramatic organization of UMass, being concerned with bringing the best in drama to the campus, has selected as its fall production Ben Johnson's "Volpone", an Elizabethan farce which will be treated in a highly theatrical style ranging from ornate costumes and spectacular scenery to a highly unusual dance number.

The scene for "Volpone" is Venice and the central figure the luxurious, cynical Volpone. Aided by his servant, Mosca, he pretends to be on his deathbed in order to tempt a miserable crew of self-seekers, Corbaccio, Corvino, Voltore, to make him presents of gold and jewels in the expectation of being named his heir. Volpone's active mind and sensuality won't let him rest, however. He becomes enamoured of Corvino's beautiful young wife, Celia, and in his attempt to seduce her oversteps himself.

Ordered before the Venetian courts, he has himself brought in on a litter, and Mosca claims he is so enfeebled he cannot even open his mouth to speak. This trick has its effect; his detractors are silenced; while he, intoxicated by success, is induced to attempt a more daring device still: he gives out that he is dead, and that Mosca is his heir. In his savage joy at the discomfiture of his dupes he does not see the danger into which he has blundered: Mosca, invested with his riches, calmly refuses to part with his booty; Volpone's only course left is to reveal the trick, and this leads to his punishment and disgrace.

"Volpone", which will be presented in Bowker Auditorium Nov. 16, 17 and 18, will be directed by Miss Doris E. Abramson of the Speech Department. Tryouts for the production will be held in E14 and E16 Machmer on Wed., Sept. 27, from 7 to 10 p.m., Thurs., Sept. 28, from 8:30 to 10 p.m. and Mon. and Tues., Oct. 2 and 3, from 7 to 10 p.m. All students interested in working backstage for this production may also sign up at these times.

Peace Corps Offers Exam On October 7

Any American who wants to serve in the Peace Corps will have another opportunity to qualify by taking examinations on October 7th. The third round of Peace Corps examinations will be held at that time in testing centers throughout the country.

The examinations will begin at 8:30 a.m. and will last for six hours, with an additional hour out for lunch.

Each person will be given his choice between two types of examinations. One is designed for men and women who would like to be considered for positions as secondary-school or college teachers. To take one of these tests, the applicant needs a bachelor's degree but does not need to be an accredited teacher.

The other examination is for everyone else who wants to serve in the Peace Corps. There is no rigid passing grade for this test. Results are considered along with such other elements as background, special skills, and character references.

For the October tests, the Peace Corps hopes to attract a large number of Americans in the agricultural and industrial fields.

"We are receiving an increasing number of requests for such skills from prospective host countries," according to Dr. Nicholas Hobbs, director of Selection for the Peace Corps. "We will have to turn down these requests if we are unable to meet their needs."

Many of those who will take examinations on October 7th will be men and women who have sent in a Peace Corps questionnaire since the last testing in

Euclid Aids Parachutists In Returning To Campus

Two UMass students who left La Fleur airport here Saturday afternoon knew where they wanted to go and go there—by parachute.

Ellsworth H. Getchell of Belmont, a senior engineering student, and Dana P. Smith of Marblehead, a graduate student in German, started by deciding the point at which they wanted to land, then calculated where they would have to leave the plane in order to get there.

They finally went up in the plane and parachuted from about two miles up to drift more than three miles to their destination.

The two chose the University exit from Rte. 116 in Amherst as the point at which they wanted to land. They then obtained wind direction and velocity readings and closeted themselves for three hours of calculating.

Their calculations completed, the pair left La Fleur with Edward Hines as their pilot after notifying area airports. They flew to an altitude of 12,500 feet before jumping.

The jump took place 3.2 miles from the campus over northernmost North Hadley.

Getchell landed about 50 yards from the designated point, while Smith landed down the road a bit, near the campus pond next to the Student Union building. They spent 11 minutes and five seconds coming down.

Getchell said that, to the best of his knowledge, the feat had never been attempted before by civilians.

UM Naiads Plan Tryouts Oct. 11-12

The Naiads of UMass are preparing to get in full swing again.

In Greek mythology, Naiads are water nymphs of the stream and river. At UMass, Naiads are girls who through movement and technique try to bring grace and beauty to swimming. Hours of diligent and hard practice go in to making the Naiad Show in March.

This year's slate of officers are: President-Rusty Henderson, Secretary-Judy Williams, Jr. Naiad Trainer-Gretchen Shultes, Publicity Managers-Barbara Quay, and Carole Marsden. Also this year weekly meetings have been changed from Thursday to Wednesday at 7 p.m.

For anyone interested in joining the Naiads there will be practice on October 9 and 10, and tryouts on October 11 and 12, commencing promptly at 5:45 p.m. in WPE pool. All classes are invited.

Women's Dorms Adopt Greek Style Point Plan

This year for the first time, womens' dormitories will compete against each other under a point system very similar to the ones which the fraternities and sororities are now using.

Instead of individual plaques being awarded for the various dorm activities, the winners of events will accumulate points, and an award for the most outstanding dorm of the year will be given in the spring.

The first event to come under the new point system will be the Inter-Dorm Sing which will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 26, at 7 p.m. in the Womens' Physical Education Building. Eleven dorms will participate.

Dorms will also win points for Homecoming floats, WAA intermurals, snow sculptures and scholastic standings.

Points will be given for first, second, and third place. In May, the winning dorm will be awarded a plaque which reads "Annual Competitive Award presented by the Womens' Inter-Dormitory Council" and on which the name of the dormitory and the date will be engraved.

CLUB DIRECTORY

ALPHA PHI OMEGA

An open smoker will be held Mon. Sept. 25, at 7:30 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the S.U. The speaker will be William Burkhardt, Assistant Dean of Men. Refreshments will be served. This smoker is open to freshmen.

Athletes and Coaches Rebel Against AAU Incompetence

by ABE SHEINKER '62

An article in this week's Sports Illustrated entitled "The End of the AAU" describes the current move afoot to wreck the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States. This body controls all recognized amateur athletes in the nation and all non-school competition in basketball, track, boxing, weight-lifting, wrestling, swimming, and gymnastics.

The National Collegiate Track Coaches Association has decided to form their own amateur athletic body, to be called the United States Track and Field Federation. Amateur basketball coaches have similar plans.

The rebellion against the AAU is not surprising. Track athletes have pointed to poor planning on foreign trips, politicking in the selection of coaches for these trips, and general mismanagement.

These are the reasons that nine of our top trackmen decided to pass up last summer's tour of Europe, which included a meet against Russia in Moscow. The athletes had won places on the team by virtue of their first or second places in the National Championships in New York City last June. As a result, the U.S. had to send some of their second best men in several events.

The athletes knew from experience that the trip would be a grind since nearly all of them had made the journey to the Rome Olympics in 1960. On that trip, they flew on a prop jet for 14 hours to Bern, Switzerland, and competed in a meet immediately after landing. Then they boarded a train for a 14-hour, hot, tiring trip down through Italy to Rome. They are expected to be at their best after these needless, poorly planned side trips, and the folks back home wonder why they aren't.

Another gripe voiced by these Olympic athletes was the need for competing in all the meets last summer. Many wanted to compete only against Russia because they could not afford to be away from their jobs and families for three weeks. They missed a month of work the summer before during the Olympics. But the AAU said they were to go against Poland, West Germany, and Great Britain also, or not go at all. The original purpose of the trip was to meet Russia and our top athletes were needed.

We almost lost the meet.

The purpose of the AAU is to serve amateur athletes. The Union has failed miserably. Mr. Daniel J. Ferris, AAU head for 30 years, and his assistants have planned trips with their own sight-seeing pleasure in mind, disregarding the athletes' need for regular rest, sleep and meals, so important in training for top performances.

The AAU has also done a poor job in planning meets. When I went to New York City last summer to view the national champion meet, I met an old friend outside the stadium, javelin thrower Bob Sbordone of the University of Southern California. He looked very disheartened. He had missed the trials of his event that morning and a chance to compete on the team that went to Europe. The javelin trials had been scheduled for that afternoon but were rescheduled in the morning because of the large number of contestants.

I saw an AAU official tell Sbordone that the change had been announced a week before, everywhere. Sbordone was at his home in East Boston at that time and was never notified. He had a good chance at a place since he has thrown over 256 feet. The AAU, knowing that college classes had ended weeks before, should have notified each entrant personally, but apparently didn't.

If AAU officials don't quit their back-slapping and politicking, they will soon find themselves in an athletic organization with plenty of officials and no athletes.

Rams Lose To N.U. 26-13

Northeastern University had a fine homecoming day as the Huskies, led by Quarterback Gerry Varnum, dumped the Yankee Conference Rhode Island Rams 26-13, Saturday.

Varnum, in his first assignment as regular quarterback for Northeasten gave the 5100 fans quite a show as he scored twice, once on a 69 yard sprint in the third frame, and passed for a third touchdown, hitting Ed Brady in the end zone from the 34. Varnum made good on eight of eleven passes for 159 yards.

Fullback Curtise Perry chalked up the fourth Husky touchdown as he swept around his right end for a 58 yard touchdown run early in the final quarter.

Rhody had a one point edge going into the second quarter, and emerged after the halftime break trailing by one. But the Northeastern defense held the Rams scoreless in the second half, notching a T.D. in each frame.

The Rams threatened to add to their slim margin in the first quarter as they had the ball on the Northeastern four yard line on second down. But Dick McPherson, the only second year man in the Northeastern starting lineup, tossed halfback Frank Kupusinsky for a six yard loss, and the Rams gave the ball up on the next down.

Rhody came up with the ball again only to have McPherson break through to grab Charlie Vento. Vento, attempting a pitchout, was jolted and passed badly, Denis Dugan of Northeastern recovering the ball.

The Huskies were too much for the Rams, and Rhody didn't get another opportunity to score.

Studley's Cinci Squad Bows To Eagles, 23-0

Mighty Boston College, behind the running of Harry Crump, a heavy duty fullback, made good the oddsmakers' predictions as they trounced Coach Chuck Studley's Cincinnati ball club 23-0 on the Heights in Boston, Saturday.

The Eagles gave Cinci only 47 yards of offense beyond the midfield stripe, as about 18,000 fans sweltered.

Crump galloped over 112 yards in 20 carries during the game, highlighting his fine performance with a 28 yard touchdown run.

Studley's entourage looked well conditioned and keyed up for the skirmish, but were far outmanned by Ernie Hefferle's team.

CHUCK STUDLEY

Cinci's only threat came in the first quarter when they found themselves on the host's 22 yard line on second down with eight to go.

Out came four big men off of the Eagle bench, and Cinci could go no further. They punted the pigskin into B.C.'s end zone from the 27.

The Eagles then quickly ran up a 10-0 lead in the second frame when helmsman George Van Cott uncorked a 25 yard TD pass which hit Mike Tomeo in the end zone. Lou Kirouac then made good a field goal attempt from the 13.

Crump burst through with his TD run early in the third quarter and Kirouac converted his second point after to give B.C. a 17-0 lead. The final touchdown came on another Van Cott pass. Van Cott hit Carl Fleingner in the end zone, but the play was called back because of a backfield in motion penalty. Undaunted, Van Cott pitched out to halfback John Janas on the next play, and Janas was standing on the goal line when he caught it.

Coach Studley, who left UMass to take over the chores at Cincinnati last year, attributed the loss to the depth and size of the B.C. squad. "Too many people for us and too much size," Studley said.

The popular 32 year old coach, who guided UMass to its best season in 28 years last year, was far from depressed about the defeat.

"Of course it's always disappointing to lose. But we expected a real tough battle against B.C. I think we made a very respectable showing against a good ball club", said Studley.

"We played against two clubs and more today. We didn't have near enough reserves to withstand the kind of pressure they kept up against us. Some of our front line starters were out, too, and we felt that right from the start.

"Injured Eddie Tkath is our No. 1 guard on the right side and although he was dressed I didn't want to take a chance on him getting hurt again. Gus Schmidt, our tackle on the left side, also wasn't in there and he would have been a big help."

Studley had plenty of praise for Boston College, though. "Ernie Hefferle had a particularly good pass defense. He'd flood our zones one time and rush us another. He mixed it up well and that gave our quarterbacks fits."

Villanova Defense Shines As Wildcats Drub V.M.I.

Coach Alex Bell's strong Villanova team provided many a thrill for 12,000 homecoming fans as the Wildcats ran all over last year's Southern Conference champs, Virginia Military Institute, 22-0.

Villanova showed a great defense during the contest, repelling five V.M.I. scoring threats.

V.M.I. wasted a couple of first period scoring chances and then could do nothing to stop the Villanova drive which culminated in two touchdowns in three minutes.

Richie Richman, alternating at the quarterback slot with Ted Aceto, led the first march which took only six plays and covered 58 yards. A two point conversion on a fullback plunge made it 8-0.

A minute later, V.M.I. quarterback Bobby Mitchell lost the handle on the ball at his 18 and Villanova's Dick Bartozzi recovered it. It didn't take the Wildcats long to make the yardage for a T.D. and another two pointer doubled the score.

For V.M.I. it was a heartbreaker, as they couldn't capitalize on their many opportunities. In the first half, the rugged Wildcat defense stopped an attack on their 22 after V.M.I. recovered a fumble on the 48. V.M.I. then wasted a 35-yard run by Mitchell, only to be stopped again, and couldn't take advantage of a stolen ball which was snatched on the Villanova 34.

Villanova scored their last touchdown when halfback Bob Merenda intercepted a Mitchell pass late in the final frame and returned it 70 yards for the T.D., falling into the endzone as he was downed on the one-yard line.

UMaine Bears Fill Gap As They Dump Army B's 21-6

The University of Maine filled the gap in their schedule due to the cancellation of the UMass clash as they took on Army's B team and beat them, 21-6 at Orono, Saturday.

Quarterback Manch Wheeler sparked the victory, passing for two touchdowns during the Maine opener.

The Bears started their scoring after three and one half minutes of the first stanza when Dave Cloutier culminated a drive with a power dive from the one yard line.

It took a lot of doing to notch their second tally, though, as the Maine squad found itself within the Army 10 yard line three times without scoring. The second T.D. finally came on a nine yard Wheeler to Dick Kinny pass, seconds before the half-time siren. Roger Bouchard kicked his second conversion and it was 14-0.

Wheeler hit Cloutier with a fifteen 'yard pass in the third frame for the third score and Bouchard kicked the final Maine point.

The Army B's scored late in the fourth quarter, as quarterback Doolittle unleashed a 51 yard pass play to Boice. A pass attempt for two points failed, and the Army squad could do no more.

A.I.C. Defeats Wildcats 6-0 On Fumble

American International College took advantage of a recovered fumble and converted it into a quick score as the squad from Springfield crept by the New Hampshire wildcats 6-0 at Durham, Saturday.

Wildcat halfback Jim Edgerly fumbled a punt on his own 20 yard line in the second period and it was converted into six points in six plays.

A.I.C.'s fullback Andy Griffin lugged the ball three of the six times, and carried it over from the one for the tally.

Then it was all A.I.C. defense as they stopped New Hampshire drives on their three yard line in the third frame, and on the one during the last seconds of the final period.

BU Drubbed By Buffalo

A big University of Buffalo team, recently appointd to the Major college division of the ECAC trampled the Terriers of Boston University 24-12 behind the running of reserve halfback Ron Clayback.

Clayback, a senior from Cheektowaga, N.Y., sprinted 24 yards of a double reverse for one score and grabbed a 10 yard pass from quarterback John Stofa for the other tally.

The Bulls led when they emerged for the beginning of the second half as a result of the Clayback's scores and a safety in the first quarter.

The Terriers notched their first six points when helmsman Farland found Stack in the end zone with a six yard pass in the second quarter. A run for the extra points failed and the score after the first half was 14-6, Buffalo.

B.U. threatened the Buffalo lead briefly in the third quarter when Farland and Viti teamed up for an 84 yard touchdown play, but a couple of T.D. passes by the Bulls in the last stanza put away all of the Terrier hopes.

SPORTSENSE

by EEN GORDON '62, Sports Ed.

Just about the biggest thing to hit the amateur sport world in recent months broke this week when over fifty athletes, many of Olympic fame, and many coaches denounced the Amateur Athletic Union and its policies, threatening to form an organization which would handle amateur sports in a far more efficient manner.

This is something which has been brewing for a good time now. A sports fan could hardly help noticing the objections to the AAU in papers and magazines whenever a foreign trip was scheduled and bungled.

The leaders of this organization seemed to have taken up where Andrew Jackson left off with the Spoils system. Dozens of officials would make the overseas trips, and all were blessed with excellent living conditions. This, however, did not apply to athletes, for which the organization supposedly exists.

Athletes would more likely than not have to put up with inferior living and travel conditions. The trip to Russia, England and Poland this summer is a prime example of this inefficiency. Athletes can't be expected to perform well when they have to travel and perform with little or no rest in between.

AAU events in the U.S. are just as mismanaged and even the AAU magazine is devoted primarily to the officials in the organization rather than to the athletes. It's about time the athletes and coaches banded together en masse to alleviate the existing, deplorable conditions.

NO PUSHOVER

On the UMass scene, many of the football squad are still feeling the effects of the intestinal virus which has been raging through campus, and all are hoping that things will be looking better when we meet AIC next weekend. The gridders from Springfield aren't going to be any pushovers, as many thought they'd be last year. Only a one point margin gave us the victory last year, and AIC was threatening at our goal line when the siren ended the game.

AIC's defeat of New Hampshire Saturday should be enough proof for anyone, for New Hampshire looked to be the best team Chief Bosco has had for some years. In fact, UMass coach Vic Fusia picked New Hampshire to be the dark horse candidate for the Yankee Conference Beanpot honors.

Villanova looked like a powerful ball club when they trounced VMI last weekend. But, then again, VMI, last year's Southern Conference Champions, were playing without their All American quarterback.

Coach Chuck Studley's Cincinnati team is now one and one for the season, having beaten Dayton and lost to a big Boston College squad.

It looks as if many oddsmakers may have been right when they picked Penn. State to unseat Navy as the best of the Eastern independents. Penn. dumped the Middies led by quarterback Don Caum (he's a sophomore) 20-10. Penn. was picked to win, but it was anyone's guess.

In the Ivy League, Yale has been picked to repeat as Ivy League champs by a group of 55 sports writers and sports casters from league territory. The Eli's, although most of their starters of last year have graduated, look like the best bet, for they've got a powerful and experienced team even now. Cornell will be pushing them all the way, though.

BIG SWITCH

Getting back to the Yankee Conference, UConn's coach Bob Ingalls is juggling his lineup again. Dave Bishop, who won the All Yankee Conference center position because of his defensive ability for the past two seasons is going to be moved to the fullback slot. Dave has been working out at that slot for a while now, and should be seen there when the Huskies meet Yale in their opener next Saturday. He's what you might call a jack of all trades, and Coach Ingalls is hoping that he's a master of them all.

Coach Earl Lorden here at UMass informs me that two of his starters last year on the baseball diamond are now fathers. Jack Foley and Bob Roland both achieved the new distinction this summer. The Collegian staff, for which Bob's wife, Mary Lou, worked last year, is still wondering if Janice has red or brown hair.

Trackman Dick Ward was married this summer, and has been bringing his wife to the practice sessions. Mrs. Ward majored in Phys. Ed. at Keene State and may wind up coaching Dick.

Coach Larry Briggs' soccer team scrimmaged with Dartmouth Saturday, losing 5-1 in the normal game time. The Booters will open against Coast Guard on September 30.

Precisionettes To Begin Marching At First Home Game

Over 225 girls tried out for Precisionettes during the latter part of last semester. After six weeks of practicing, 32 girls were chosen for the year 1961-62. They are: First row (l to r) Patricia Gilgut, Janet Crowell, Deborah Downey, Joan Lovett, Marilyn Jackson, Mary McLaughlin, Janet Wehmann, Marcia Policow, and Gail Sird. Second Row (l to r) Karen Ploeger, Carol Roche, Carol Kline, Beverly Botelho, Joyce Traquair, Karen Malinowski, Priscilla Burns, Merilee Carlson, Catherine Mycue. Third Row (l to r) Betty Miller, Marjorie Olson, Bernadette Menz, Nancy Carlyn, Sue Schreiber, Nancy Leach, Joan Campatelli, and Penny Hatch. Missing from the photo are Wendy Green, Geraldine Dow, Guntra Austrins, and Adrienne Allen.

The Precisionetts Drill Team of UMass will march under the direction of Professor Joseph Contino at the first home game of the season when UMass will play A.I.C. September 30. The group is comprised of 60 girls from the classes of '64, '63, and '62.

Don Witkowski will serve his third year as Drill-Master for the group. Robert Ellis, '64, and Ivan Stokes, '64, will be drill apprentices and will assist Don.

Lynne Foley was recently elected Captain of the Precisionetts. Squad leaders, from the class of '62 are Arlaine Anderson, Patricia Conway, Sarah Dion, Jane Grant, Lynne Foley, and Ann Leyden.

The Precisionettes are known throughout New England for their precision marching at football games and other events. They will also march at the away games when UMass plays UConn and Holy Cross.

Contino remarked, "This is the best group of trainees ever, so we're looking forward to a great season."

Smith College Announces Sunday Recital Schedule

With the reopening of Smith College last week announcement is made of the Sage Hall Sunday evening recitals of the first team, and of other concerts of this period.

On Oct. 8, the audience will have the first opportunity to hear a recital by pianist George Walker, newly appointed to the department of music.

On Oct. 15, Marion DeRonde, cellist, will be heard in a program of duos with her colleagues Louise Rood, viola; Gabriel Banat, violin; and Emil Hebert, bassoon, and with Bruno di Cecco, cellist, of University of Connecticut. The program will include a Telemann sonata for two cellos, Bach duets for violin and cello, and Haydn sonata for violin and cello; Mozart sonata for cello and bassoon, and Piston sonata for viola and cello.

No recital is announced for Oct. 22, but on Oct. 29 there will be a chamber music recital by members of the department.

Nov. 5 there will be no Sage Hall recital, but at 4 and 7 at Hills Chapel the Smith and Hamilton Glee Clubs will present a choral service. Again in Sage Hall on Nov. 12 Dorothy Stahl, soprano, will present a song recital, with the assistance of Louise Rood, viola. Another new member of the department of music, Robert Miller, pianist, will give his first recital Nov. 19.

The Smith-Amherst Orchestra under the direction of Marion DeRonde, with Adrienne Auerswald, soprano, as soloist, will give its first-term concert in John M. Greene Hall Nov. 29. Miss Auerswald will sing arias of Gluck, Rossini and Verdi, and the orchestra will play the Mozart Haffner Symphony, Ravel Mother Goose Suite and Tchaikowsky Romeo and Juliet.

The first term will close with advent vespers by the Smith and Princeton choirs in John M. Greene Hall at 4 and at 7:30 Dec. 3.

Communism . . .

However, the latter approach seems in the minority.

Broadly, the replies fall into three categories:

1. States that permit local districts to determine their own curriculum almost without interference.
2. States that have prepared, or are preparing, separate curriculum units on communism.
3. States that prescribe teaching about communism as an integral part of their social studies or history curriculum.

Typical for the first category of local option is Maryland. Dr. Thomas G. Pullen, Jr., state superintendent of education, points out that each of the twenty-four school systems writes its own syllabus and reference materials.

But Dr. Pullen adds that, while there are outspoken current demands to include instruction about communism in the curriculum, "a few years ago many schools were forbidden to even mention communism in the classroom."

Discussion Prohibited

These directives, he says, "were not to forbid advocacy of communism, but to prohibit any discussion about communism."

The Department of Public Instruction for Pennsylvania mandates only three units in the social studies — Pennsylvania history, United States history and World Culture.

While the teaching about communism is left to local option, the department offers a curriculum pamphlet on "A Comparative Study of Democracy and Communism" and a detailed "annotated bibliography" on world communism. The latter includes a carefully selected appendix on Communist source materials.

Connecticut's State Department of Education "does not have separate materials on communism for either teachers or students, nor do we plan to prepare any such materials."

While there is local option, the curriculum bulletin recommends courses in European and Asian civilizations, both of which have "a substantial unit on communism." So do senior courses and seminars dealing with problems in democracy.

Complete local option in all curriculum matters, and therefore lack of any state materials on communism, were reported by Wisconsin, Wyoming, Maine, Oklahoma, Nevada, Alaska, and Ohio.

Texas leaves the preparation of materials to local schools. However, the State Association of School Superintendents has been working with local school superintendents "to assist them in developing their own programs of good Americanism."

The Department of Public Instruction in Michigan replied that the only areas in which state standards determine the local curriculum are physical education, civics, driver education and the teaching of the effects of alcohol and narcotics.

Massachusetts operates under the system of local option. For the last nine years, however, a special Division of Civic Education has provided instruction concerning communism to undergraduates in teacher-training colleges and to teachers in inservice courses.

The department recommends a sixty-seven-page publication, "Unit on Communism—Enemy of Democracy," by the Boston Public Schools.

In the category of states that have introduced, or are planning to introduce, special materials, Louisiana has perhaps acted with the greatest enthusism. However, its interpretation of the mission leans heavily toward right-wing indoctrintaion.

A mimeographed publication, "Americanism versus Communism—A unit of Work in American History," was issued this year by Shelby M. Jackson, State Superintendent of Education. On its cover it pictures Uncle Sam standing apparently helpness, while a Red Army soldier grabs the globe.

The booklet is intended for high-school history teachers. Its introduction states that "there can be no compromise—no peaceful coexistence with international communism."

In its approach to economic theory it is equally uncompromising.

It urges "a determination to resist all movements toward collectivism or subversive socialism ('welcome state')."

It calls socialism and the "welfare state way stations on the road to communism."

Among visual materials recommended for the mandatory course is the film strip, "Communism on the Map." This film implies that the United States, Spain and Switzerland are the only non-Communist nations of the Western world.

According to a resolution of the State Legislature, the film must be seen by all high-school students as a requirement for graduation, as part of a mandatory six-week unit.

This year, the Florida Legislature approved a bill requiring all public high schools to teach a course on "Americanism vs. Communism" of not less than thirty hours. This is required of all students. The course must begin not later than September, 1962. At present, the State Department of Education is studying materials for this course.

Lt. Col. Aykroyd commented that his plans for ROTC are to put out the best possible product in the time alloted and to provide the best military foundation in the first two years. He also said that it has been proven that a student with ROTC training moves to leadership positions much faster than those without this training.

Commented on Draft Deferment of Advanced ROTC

He said that those in Advanced ROTC, which is on a volunteer basis, have a draft deferment along with those who have completed one year of military study, but their vulnerability as to their eligible age is extended from the age of 26 to 35.

Lt. Col. Aykroyd appeared to be man with experience, ability, and desire to educate the youth to their great responsibility to our country. He has a great understanding of students and is more than willing to assist them when needed.

Vt. Colleges Show Increase In Enrollment

Vermont colleges are bulging with record enrollments. The University of Vermont at Burlington, largest collegiate institution in the state, reports a total enrollment of 3500 including its Medical College and other graduate students.

Norwich University at Northfield registered a record freshman class of 412 bringing its total enrollment to nearly 1100.

Middlebury College's enrollment was held to 1200 students. Although more than 2000 applications were received Middlebury accepted only 354 freshmen.

St. Michael's College at Winooski Park has an enrollment of 900 including a freshman class of 300.

Bennington College has an enrollment of about 400. Goddard College at Plainfield has 192. Trinity College at Burlington reports 120.

The junior colleges—Vermont College at Montpelier and Green Mountain College at Poultney—along with the three state teachers colleges report substantial increases in enrollment.

Peace Corps . . .

July. But others are welcome as well.

Anyone who has not yet filled in a questionnaire but is interested in Peace Corps service, can still take one of the examinations on October 7th. He should see the person in charge of the Civil Service Commission testing center on the morning of that day. The examiner will do his best to accommodate him.

The testing center in Amherst is at the Jones Library. Centers are also located in Boston, Greenfield, Lowell, New Bedford, Northampton, Pittsfield, Springfield, and Worcester.

Intestinal Grippe Hits UMass Hard

by ANN MILLER '64

UMass students have recently been under frontal assault by a bug that could be termed an intestinal grippe.

The first case was registered on Sunday, September 17. The peak of the outbreak was reached on Tuesday and Wednesday nights, the 19th and the 20th. At present, the number of new cases is at a normal flow.

According to Dr. Gage, the grippe is one of a group of diseases which includes, among others, polio. The occurrance rate for the group is highest in September and October, lowest around April. At that, the outbreak was abnormal.

There is no indication as to the origin of the recent epidemic. Although something is going around U.N.H. and Holy Cross, it appears to be of a different nature from what is on the UMass campus.

"The Gastro-Intestinal system has suffered many upsets," said Mrs. Loretta Eiben, superintendent of the Outpatient Department, "but not as many as the word diarrhea." Research on the part of Mrs. Eiben has lead to compilation of a list of spellings not to be found in any medical dictionary of the day. Students filling out their outpatient service requests have variously listed their ailment as — dieria, diaherrea, diarhea, diarrrea, diareha, diahrea, diaria, diarehea, diarrhea, diarrehea, diarreah, diarrea.

Upperclassmen may be reminded of the severe epidemic of Asian influenza which occurred in the Spring of 1957. There is, actually, no comparison between that bug and our present resident germ; influenza is a lung disease while that presently on campus is of a viral intestinal nature.

Altogether, between fifty and sixty students have been hospitalized and perhaps 300 have been involved to some degree. The latter figures can only be estimated since many students had only light cases and didn't go to the infirmary.

One night—when the outbreak was at its peak—42 of the 46 available infirmary beds were being used. Normal infirmary occupancy is about six or seven beds a night.

The new infirmary will, of course, be better prepared for such an outbreak, with a bed capacity of from 88 to 125 beds. It should be finished within a week, Dr. Gage said, and ready for occupancy within a month.

Mechanics And Physicists Of Equal Importance Today

"A missile may blow up on its launching pad because the designer was incompetent or because the mechanic who adjusted the last valve was incompetent."

With these words, an outstanding educational authority points out that America's welfare depends—as does that of almost every society — as much on its mechanics as upon its physicists. Both groups should be valued; but their differences should be acknowledged, not hidden behind obscure slogans built around "equality."

These are among the points discussed by John W. Gardner, President of the Carnegie Corporation. In attempting to provide gifted youngsters with the best possible training, America may have begun to place an excessive and "altogether false" emphasis on college education, Gardner feels. College should not be seen as the only preparation for human happiness, but merely as one kind of further education for those whose abilities fit them for it.

"Being a college graduate involves qualities of mind that can never be univerally possessed," he says, suggesting that we ought to stop coercing academically unsuited students to go to college because of false considerations of prestige.

UMass Newman Club Holds Ground-breaking For Center

by JOE BRADLEY '64
News Assignment Editor

Amid a steady rain, ground-breaking ceremonies for the new Newman Club Center were held yesterday afternoon. Religious, civil and university dignitaries, as well as a small group of hearty bystanders, many holding umbrellas, were present.

Among those present were Bishop Christopher J. Weldon of the Springfield Diocese, Rt. Rev. Walter C. Connell, Fr. Power, Fr. Quigley, and Fr. Charles J. Tohman who is doing graduate work in the UMass chemistry department.

Also present were Harold Elder, chairman of the Amherst Board of Selectmen, Dr. Frank L. Boyden, chairman of the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees, and President John W. Lederle.

A procession led by three acolytes bearing a crucifix flanked by candles marched to the area in back of Theta Chi where the ceremonies took place.

Bishop Receives Permit

Bishop Weldon received the building permit from Elder, the town selectman, and then handed it over to Joseph Francese of Pittsfield, the general contractor. Bishop Weldon commented as he received the permit, "This is most important because we can't drive a nail until he gives that permit."

Bishop Weldon, mentioning the delay which had held up construction of the new center said, "The delay turned out to be really a blessing because the building which we had planned was much tighter and smaller. As if God had said it isn't good enough for the University."

The bishop continued, "The center will take its place with the other magnificent buildings which we have on the University of Massachusetts campus."

The religious ceremony followed including a reading of the blessing in both Latin and English. The ritual was concluded with the asperges or sprinkling of holy water over the site of the building.

Golden Spade Used

The traditional golden spade was brought into play by the bishop who lifted a full shovel of the wet earth. Dr. Boyden took the shovel next, but it was up to President Lederle to take top honors. Lederle lifted a matted chunk of earth and grass followed by the best distance throw of the day, a good five feet.

Next, the bishop signaled to a nearby derrick shovel to begin demolition of the house. The 20-ton mammoth swung its shovel to a corner of the doomed house and ripped out a chunk of shingles, clapboards and gutters.

To make the ground-breaking complete, a bulldozer gouged a 10 by 20 foot strip of earth in the approximate area where the altar will stand.

Bishop Thanks Lederle

Bishop Weldon thanked President Lederle, Dr. Boyden, and Elder for their time and assistance at the ceremony.

The center which will be built at a cost of nearly seven hundred thousand dollars will house a chapel, library, lecture rooms, class rooms, recreation rooms, lounge, priests' quarters, and a snack bar. The center will be paid for by the UMass Newman Club with half the cost being defrayed by Bishop Weldon.

Dignitaries at Newman Club ground-breaking ceremonies included President Lederle, UMass Board of Trustees chairman, Dr. F. L. Boyden, Fr. Tollman, Msgr. Connell, Fr. Power, and Bishop Christopher J. Weldon.

Scholarships Announced For Studying In Europe

Scholarships for undergraduate study in Europe during the academic year 1962-1963 will be announced today by the Institute of European Studies, a Chicago-headquartered, non-profit educational organization specializing in overseas study for American college students.

The scholarships are valued from $1,950 to $2,350, and provide a full year of study at one of the Institute's three study centers, Vienna, Freiburg (West Germany), and Paris. Roundtrip ocean transportation from New York, tuition, room, most meals, language instruction, special courses and field study are included.

The scholarship application period for the 1962-1963 academic year begins October and closes February 1, 1962. Students who will be sophomores or juniors, and who surpass the minimum qualifications required by each program, may apply.

Robert T. Bosshart, president of the Institute of European Studies, said the scholarship program is aimed at placing the best in American and European education within the reach of all qualified U.S. college students.

Students in each center may choose from a wide range of liberal arts courses. Sophomore and junior courses are conducted in the English language at the Vienna and Paris centers or in the language of the host country. Freiburg classes are taught in German and open only to juniors.

Intensive language instruction is provided to all students, Bosshart said. Other special courses are also available.

Each program includes field-study trips which are directly related to formal course work. Bosshart said, the study trips, timed to occur during normal vacation periods, are a vital source of background knowledge for lecture classes.

Nine European countries—England, France, Germany, Belgium, Italy, Luxembourg, Austria, Spain and Switzerland — are visited by students in the Vienna program. Freiburg students will visit Germany, Austria, Switzerland and Italy on two field-study trips. Paris students will visit England, France, Belgium, Italy and Spain.

Institute students sail as a group from New York. Aboard ship they receive special orientation and language instruction. They live in private European homes during their stay in Europe. All three programs end late in June.

"Each program—the European Year (Vienna), Das Deutsche Jahr (Freiburg), and the Honors program in Contemporary European Civilization (Paris)—is structured to fulfill the needs of American students studying in Europe," Bosshart said. "Both

There comes that magical time of year when our thoughts of peace, goodwill toward our fellow man, negotiation, and espousal of all that is non-violent give way to a nationwide affection for aggresiveness, power, brawn, fight, and all returning lettermen.

Indeed, we may rightly look forward to this three month respite from pacifism and take pride in seeing the Maroon and White line send the opposition's quarterback sprawling in the chalk dust. Perhaps because it serves as such a unique and thrilling outlet for our loyalities and hostilities, America's campuses eagerly welcome the arrival of each new football season.

This Saturday afternoon on Alumni Field, newly ordained Head Coach Vic Fusia will inaugurate Redman Football 1961. The road ahead for this Pitt extract will be lonelier and rougher to follow than any which his predecessors have had to tred. Not only may his efforts suffer from a constant comparison with a star-studlied 7-2 record of last year, but Coach Fusia, unlike Studley, must meet the ferocious aggregations from Villanova and Holy Cross.

The courage which Fusia showed in leaving a lifetime job at Pitt in order to shoulder an insecure, small conference co-champ shall not go unrewarded. The campus warmly extends its hand in welcome to this man and his staff. We have found their presence and comments both intelligent and encouraging. "Football is the binding force which links student, faculty, and alumni," said Fusia soon after his arrival.

May Vic, his staff, and their Redman charges experience all the success and joys which crisp, fall weekends can afford them. U-Mass' best wishes attend the Saturday afternoon gladiatrs as they make ready for the long season in the arena.

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the Women's Physical Education Department for their latest ruling—that majors may wear only strictly feminine attire, i.e. skirts or dresses, to all classes!

At present the school only makes a few of our decisions for us—they know our whereabouts after seven P.M. (occasionally), and they decide at what hour it is best for us to be in our dorms at night. This is a deplorable situation, since it leaves us a few areas wherein we must still think for ourselves. This is clearly appalling since it is quite obvious that the best way to make young college women study hard and become mature, discerning, worldly, intellectual adults is to remove all trivial, annoying obstacles that might sway them from applying themselves to their books—in short, to make all of their decisions for them.

I am shocked at the brevity and incompleteness of the Women's Rules—only twice as many for women as for men! Personally, my roommate and I (the former a Physical Education major) would not consider leaving our houses after seven anyway, and if we had to, not without our black stockings and ankle-length crepe dresses.

We applaud the Department's moral victory!

Jess E

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in reference to a disgraceful condition present on our campus on Sunday. Although I refer specifically to the condition present in Van Meter, I have been told the condition is present throughout the campus.

I am refering to the lack of janitorial service on campus on this most important day in the week. The conditions of the lavatories, halls, and recreation rooms in Van Meter on Sundays are deplorable. Trash cans are filled to overflowing, hall floors are filthy, and the condition of the recreation rooms is so horrible that I wouldn't go in them, let alone bring a visitor.

These are crucial times for this University as President Lederle said in his address on Friday. On a given Sunday this campus has thousands of visitors who are all forming ideas about this institution. How can we possibly hope to convince the public of the importance and excellence of the University if we don't even clean our buildings to welcome them on campus?

The Guild And Oklahoma!

With the announcement of the Operette Guild's fall production, Oklahoma!, to be presented October 18, 19, 20, and 21 in Bowker Auditorium, it seems timely that we examine this Recognized Student Organization, our University Operette Guild, and review some of its ihstory. The Guild has come a long way since its founder and present director Professor Doric Alviani, now Head of the University's Music Department, came to campus in 1938. It consisted then of an original men's glee club which had been infiltrated by a few musically minded coeds resulting in the first Guild production, Gilbert and Sullivan's The Mikado. The Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire was the rage and it wasn't until 1947 that Broadway releases hit our campus beginning with the smashing success of Victor Hebert's The Red Mill. Thanks to the Guild our campus has since thrilled to such classics of musical theatre as: Sweethearts, Hit The Deck, Brigadoon, The Student Prince, Carousal, South Pacific, Pipe Dream, and Damn Yankees.

Such theatre on college campuses is quite a rarity. The Guild is the only area college group offering musical theatre, and one of the few in all colleges and universities of the New England region. Recently honored on a national scale for their contribution to educational theatre, our University Operetta Guild has been accepted into the American Educational Theatre Association—a collection of groups dedicated to ". . . stimulating and organizing for young people educational theatre experience of the highest possible standards." Our Guild is certainly such a group as newcomers to campus shall soon learn from its rendition of the original Rogers and Hammerstein musical drama, Oklahoma!

The Art of Confusion

by ELIZABETH SCHNECK 62

Listen to almost any radio or TV news broadcast. Following a loud, jolly and boisterous ad for nerve pills, the announcer comes on in his warmly impersonal voice: "Good evening, Everyone!" Then, in a let's-get-down-to-business air, he continues: "Hurricane Esther went out to sea today and promises no real danger . . . The Soviet Union dropped its fifteenth bomb in a series of atmospheric nuclear tests begun three weeks ago . . . Roger Maris did not hit his 59th homer in the last game of the season . . . We will return with around-the-world details in a moment."

After a pause for station-identification and three or four infantile spot ads, the announcer returns. This time he is equipped to run rapidly through the latest announcements off the A.E.C., the Civil Defense, or some corporation and perhaps a statement from some eminent person such as former President Truman, remarking that "any dangerous effects from fallout is alot of hooey". Local newspapers are organized similarly. By reporting 'objectively' the words of quotable people the press is freed from the responsibility of editorializing off its editoral page—but increases confusion.

Looking back to the literature of the 1950's, we see this was a period closely aware that a problem of an immense nature existed. It was a period of analysis in which intellectuals such as David Riesman and C. Wright Mills attempted to frame the problem. The structure of our society, our values, and our goals as a nation and culture came into question in an attempt to define it. Turning into the 'sixties it was evident that solutions were needed to work out the growing conflicts and tensions.

Since the end of World War II, the world and national situations have been analyzed in countless ways. And, now that we face the threats of nuclear power, a human, rational solution is, more than ever before, needed to follow on the basis of this analyses. Yet, it is not apparent that any human value-assumption is being granted today. With the resumption of testing, we also are initiating an agency for disarmament. Our period is no longer one of controversy, as it might seem, but one of confusion in which a basic foundation of value-assumptions is being forgotten.

Our present problem, I believe, begins here and is traceable to our mass media. The mass media, influencing public opinion more than any other means, is aiding and abetting the elite group of 'spokesmen' who represent institutional wishes. What these spokesmen say or why they say it does not come under any value judgments by the press; this is evidenced by our news reports. The news is reported in hari-cari fashion with little concept of scientific fact and of understanding of the moral and human values, albeit so much talked about. While it would seem that the effects of radioactive fallout should not be a matter of open discussion since it is an issue of science, anyone from a former-President of the United States, a head of a corporation or social group, to a housewife is permitted air time. Yet, while the opinion of Linus Pauling would be called for, it is either slighted or counter-balanced by an opinion by someone like Edward Teller. And, this in itself, is curious.

Confusion is a useful art for the spokesmen who have interests to protect. The spokesmen do not have a difficult time in safe-guarding and promoting these interests, if they can hold their position in the communication media. As the clche goes, "Money talks." If it is not possible for the spokesman of any institution to win quickly and easily in the game of persuasion, his next bet is to gamble on increasing confusion. By thwarting authoritative opinions with ambiguities and wishful thinking, the spokesman can still hope to manipulate attitudes in his favor. A case in point is radioactivity; the public is placed in an unfortunate position of having to pick sides as to its implications and dangers. (Moreover, since John Doe cannot be expected to have any grasp of the implications of something that he cannot see and feel, he is most likely to choose the side that is predominant, comfortable, complacent, and . . . dangerous.)

Since democracy is meaningful insofar as its public is informed and understands the values and issues at stake, it is important that this present confusion, created by opinion thrown against opinion, come to an end. A rational solution to our problem will be found only when personal wishes give way to a careful and thoughtful consideration of assumptions, values, alternatives, and consequences.

At First Glance . . .

Although the temperature might have us believe otherwise, Fall is about its annual presentation — FOOTBALL. In our main editorial, we look at the Redmen and their new coach in 1961 . . . Autumn's other presentation is in conjunction with the Operetta Guild. Oklahoma! and the history of the Guild is reported by Steve Daly . . . The failings of our present-day communications system falls under the pen of Liz Schneck.

J. D.'s CORNER

by JUDY DICKSTEIN '63

This is a new column, one where you will find all sorts of invaluable information, such as that the capital of Iceland is Reykjavik and that a man named Dante Bollettino (228 W. 4th St., N.Y.C.) is looking for members to form a "We Don't Care" Society. (It's purpose would be to promote complete indifference to such events as the latest status of Anthony Armstrong-Jones, Jackie Kennedy's newest hairdo . . . or perfume . . . or Paris original hat . . ., Elizabeth Taylor's health, and so on. . . . Interested? Write to Mr. Bollettino; each year the members could vote and present an award for the event most worthy of complete indifference.)

To this, add gems of wisdom, such as: You can get people to believe almost anything you tell them . . . if you whisper it.

Then, toss in excerpts gleaned from classes. One psychology professor once described a manic-depressive as: "Easy glum, easy glow." And a geology grad student once informed me that "Igneous is bliss."

Occasionally signs are worth quoting, such as this one: REPORT OBSCENE MAIL TO YOUR POSTMASTER
(he thrives on it)

For the cultural aspect, add poetry or verse:

Here's to champagne, the drink divine
That makes us forget our troubles!
It's made of a dollar's worth of wine.
And six dollars worth of bubbles.

In fact, in this column you can expect to see anything: droodles, tongue-twisters, puzzles, quips, useless words to add to your vocabulary, addresses where you can obtain a pen-pal (or other free things), a ready-written letter home (just fill in the spaces, sign, and mail it), or perhaps a recipe for making bathtub gin. In short, this column is a catch-all. Whatever is inappropriate for news, sports, or editorial copy may be found here. If there's any topic you'd like to see in print, write to J. D. at the Collegian office, Student Union.

And look for J. D.'s Corner again soon.

Fulbright Applications Are Available

Only a month remains to apply for over 700 Fulbright Scholarships for graduate study or research in 31 countries in Europe, Latin America and the Asia-Pacific area, The Institute of International Education announced today. Applications will be accepted until November 1.

Applications for Inter-American Cultural Convention awards for study in Latin America, and for awards for study in Ireland under the Scholarship Exchange Program between the U.S. and Ireland have the same filing deadline.

Recipients of Fulbright awards will receive tuition, maintenance and round-trip travel. The terms of awards to Ireland are the same as those for the Fulbright grants. IACC scholarships cover transportation, tuition and partial maintenance costs.

Fulbright Travel Grants to supplement maintenance and tuition scholarships awarded from other sources are also available to American students receiving awards for study and/or research in universities in Austria, Denmark, France, Germany, Israel, Italy and The Netherlands.

Three Tie Games Mark Start of 1961 Intramural Football Season

by JAY BAKER '63

Sig Ep tied TKE, AGR tied ATG and Theta Chi tied QTV to mark the beginning of the 1961-1962 Intramural IFC football season. In the lone decision game Kappa Sig narrowly edged TEP 6-0.

After a hardfought defensive first half on a muddy, sloppy, and slippery terrain SPE managed to score on a bullet pass from quarterback Max Savage to halfback Eddie Cass.

TKE, not to be undone, scored almost immediately after on a long pass play to end Henry Mackie. This hard fought contest ended in a 6-6 tie.

AGR was caught in the last one and one half minutes of play by ATG to end the contest at 6 to 6.

AGR scored early in the first half on a long pass from quarterback Pete Stanely to end Ken Robbins. Then later on in the final quarter with a few minutes to go Ken Risdal of ATG intercepted a pass and ran for the score. Final score AGR 6 ATG 6.

Great running by QTV president and quarterback was the story in their game. Frank Pisiewski ran for touchdowns in both halves. His second run came after a spectacular 30 yard pass catch by Barry Meunier.

TC's quarterback Gordy Lewis threw two touchdown passes, one to Bruce Tucker and the other to Jeff Wheeler. This was the high scoring contest of the night with a final score of TC 12 QTV 12.

In the lone decision last year's champs Kappa Sig edged a determined TEP crew.

In the last game of the night in an extremely muddy field Rod Corey made a spectacular sliding catch of Doug Hedlund's long pass to put his team into the scoring column. Good defense on both squads accounted for the low sore. Howie Alperin of TEP excelled on defense.

Only One Yancon Contest On Tap For This Weekend

Only one game is scheduled in the Yankee Conference but two conference teams will flex their muscles against Ivy League opposition in key games during the coming week.

The University of Maine's Black Bears and the University of Rhode Island Rams will meet in an important conference slash at Kingston. Last year, the Black Bears edged the Rams 7-0 at Orono. This will be the 41st meeting between the two schools with Maine having won 23 to Rhode Island's 14. Three games have ended in ties.

Meanwhile, the defending co-champions from Connecticut, will make another attempt to score their first victory over Yale when the two teams meet at New Haven. The UConns, now recognized as a major team, feel confident that the 13th meeting between the two teams will be a lucky one and result in their initial triumph. Last year, Yale rallied to win 11-8.

New Hampshire's Wildcats are in a similar position as they tangle with Dartmouth at Hanover. In eight previous meetings, the Hanover Indians have prevailed although on a couple of occasions it appeared that the Wildcats might be victorious.

In other action, Massachusetts entertains American International College. The Aces are fresh from their victory over New Hampshire last week, while UMass will be playing for the first time this season.

Vermont will visit the Coast Guard Academy at New London.

UConn's Ingalls Shifts Bishop To Fullback Spot

"Here we go again," is the way Connecticut Football Coach Bob Ingalls replied when asked what he was going to do this season with Dave Bishop, his jack-of-all-trades who has been working at the quarterback position.

Bishop, football handyman who won the All-Yankee Conference center position because of his sterling defensive work for the Huskies the past two seasons, is going to move to fullback, his coach reports.

The move was dictated because the deep position needs shoring up. Three of the five fullbacks preparing for Saturday's opener with Yale at New Haven have received minor bumps and bruises which prevented them from getting fully prepared for the Yale game.

Bishop is now figured to help out Letterman Ralph Rinaldi and sophomore Stan Zaleski, the only able-bodied men at fullback after three weeks of pre-season preparations.

Moving around is nothing new to Bishop, the Husky 6-1, 200-lb. defensive standout who has drawn rave notices all over the East for his sparkling play. He was a halfback at West Springfield where he was the top sectional scorer. Then he played end at Staunton Military Academy. He played center for UConn as a sophomore and opened the season last year (as a junior) as quarterback against Yale. Other positions held last year were left half at Buffalo and middle linebacker against most YanCon opponents.

"He's quick at grasping plays and situations and a good man to coach when you need to move men around," Coach Ingalls states of Bishop.

Ingalls adds, "We are fortunate enough to have good strength at quarterback in the persons of (Gerald) McDonough, (Joe) Klimas, and (Jim) Mudowney that we can afford to move "Bish" to plug a gap at fullback.

Dave Roberts, an impressive Meridan sophomore, has responded slowly to a leg injury suffered earlier this week; and Vito (Topper) Luciani and Don Warzocha have had minor hurts that set them back somewhat, Ingalls pointed out.

JOHN KOZAKA

A 196 pound, 6 footer from Pittsfield, John Kozaka lettered at guard as a sophomore where he proved to be a most rugged linebacker on defense. He has been slowed down with a leg injury, but he will be starting at the guard slot this season.

Lacrosse Rosters Are Available Now

Rosters for Intramural Lacrosse are due Oct. 2. A minimum of eight players per squad is necessary to be eligible. Games will be played Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 4:30-5:15 p.m., and only two varsity lettermen are permitted on the playing field at one time.

No experience is necessary to apply. For further information contact Dick Hoss at AL 6-6179 or Coach Cobb at the Cage.

by DICK MACKLEM '62

So you won't read a word until I explain the dizzy title! Glad you asked! At least I know that two or three people read last week's column. A "frozen rope" is now a fairly common major league term for a line drive, deriving from the old expression of "hanging out the wash", which was used for a player who was really stinging the ball.

Paul Richards made the term "rope" common in modern times, and it is now used to describe such hitters as Pete Runnels, Bob Boyd or Vada Pinson. So there!

Last week I bragged about how proud the Yankee Conference could be of Paul Lindquist of New Hampshire and John Rollins of Rhode Island. Since that time Rollins has been released by the Green Bay Packers and Lindquist, who started the first game for the Boston Patriots and saw much action in their second game, has been mysteriously dropped from the squad. As the sun sets in the west, we drop slowly back into oblivion.

My next paragraph was to be a glowing appraisal of Chuck Studley and his powerful Cincinnati Bearcats after they had beaten Dayton last week and came to Boston to trounce Boston College this past Saturday. However, as you know, the mighty Eagle sent the visitors home with their tails dragging, shutting Cincinnati out 23-0.

Ths victory was a tremendous lift for New England football. We hope that it can be the first of many this season. Our future intersectional opponent, Villanova, has won its first two games by a combined score of 55-0, rolling over such usually strong teams as Miami of Ohio and VMI. Holy Cross opens its season in Worcester this Saturday.

BEARS NOTING

This meeting between our two strongest opponents bears close watching, and will certainly give us a glimpse of things to come.

During the past week there were two notes of interest for Western Mass. sports fans. First, after 13 years of outstanding and unselfish play for the Springfield Indians, Harry Pidhirny has departed from the Indians pre-season camp. Harry, a really devoted veteran of hockey wars, has accepted the position of player-coach with the new San Francisco club in the Western Hockey league. We hope that this well-deserved first step upwards for Harry is the start of a long and successful coaching career.

Second, Walt Kowalszyk of Westfield, the ex-Michigan State All-American, has recently been signed as a halfback by the Oakland Raiders of the American Football League.

The NBA champion Boston Celtics opened their training camp last week at Babson Institute in Wellesley. Nine of last year's eleven are back, including Heinsohn, Ramsey, Loscutoff, Sanders, Guarilia, Russell, Cousy, Sam Jones and K. C. Jones. Because the NBA is planning to expand next year, all clubs will be allowed to carry 12 players this year, and dress them for all games, instead of the customary 10 plus one for emergencies.

With Bill Sharmen and Gene Conley gone, the Celts have five men trying to fill the three open positions. Sure of a spot is Carl Braun, ex-New York Knick star, while rookies Gary Phillips of Houston, Al Butler of Niagara, Karl Lawrence, from Pawcatuck, Conn., of Texas A.andM., and Dick Davies of L.S.U. are battling for the other two positions.

Davies is the younger brother of all-time professional all-star Bob Davies of the old Rochester Royals. Somehow we don't think that the Green will have too much trouble wrapping up the title again this year.

JUST LIKE HIM . . .

Quote-of-the Week department: From Hal Naragon, the Minnesota Twins' catcher on sportswriters comparing Red Sox rookie Carl Yastrzemski with Ted Williams: "Sure, he's just like Ted—from the shoelaces down.

As the respect for and the status of amateur tennis in the United States sinks lower and lower because of the shortsightedness and constant bungling of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association, the naming of the American squad to face India next week in the quarter-final round of the Davis Cup seems somewhat of a farce. With most of America's better amateurs either chosing not to play, such as Tut Bartzen and Dennis Ralston, or not being allowed to play, erratic Chuck McKinley is the only veteran on the squad. He is joined by youngsters Whitney Reed, Don Dell of Yale, none of whom have ever had serious international competition. If the U.S. can get by India, and our semi-final round opponent, Italy, I hope the USLTA has the common sense to hide just a little of its foolish Victorian pride and field a squad against Australia that we can be somewhat proud of.

One last note of interest concerning two former Boston favorites; Best wishes for former Celtic Lou Tsioropoulos of Lynn who recently signed with the Pittsburg Rens of the pro basketball league. Lou was forced into retirement a few years ago because of back trouble, but now he seems healthy and wants to try again. However, it looks like the end of the road for the old Bruin's favorite, Fleming Mackell, who was dropped by the Detroit Red Wings after a two week trial period. We always admired Flem's hustle and are sorry to see him go.

During the course of a week, it is hard to gather material to keep fans of all the various sports happy. If you have any topics you would like discussed, please contact me in care of the Collegian office at any time.

Net Blanks Due Tonight

All entries for the men's Intramural Tennis Tournament are reminded that application blanks should be returned to room 8 of the Phys. Ed. blg. or to Tom Simons or Eric Schuhle at 212 Brooks House, by 8 p.m. tonight.

Entrants should consult the draw sheet posted on the bulletin board of the Cage, and be ready to play on Thurs. Sept. 28, and over the weekend. All first round matches must be completed by Tues. Oct. 3.

The Arkansas Penitentiary System produces about twice as much cotton and rice per acre than the average Arkansas farm.

Debate Club Seeks New Argumentators

The University Debating Club extends an open invitation to all interested students to attend a get-acquainted meeting Thursday, 11 a.m., in 212, Bartlett.

Annually the college debating clubs across the nation select and debate one topic, which is a domestic or foreign political question.

The new national topic, which will be announced at the Thursday meeting, will usually be debated at forthcoming tournaments. Additionally, challenges will be made to other schools to debate other topics selected by the members.

During the past season, the debators traveled to Tournaments from Maine to New York City, played host to other schools in a tournament here, and conducted an intramural contest for the student body.

They debated various teams in tournaments at Brooklyn College, New York City University, Mt. Holyoke, Amherst, Boston University and Bowdoin.

Additionally, the Club sponsored an entertaining debate with a New Zealand team to conclusively determine whether or not the attributes of Robinson Crusoe constitute an ideal for Americans to emulate.

This debate, as others planned for this year, utilized the British Parlimentary system which encourages audience participation.

Students unable to attend the Thursday meeting are advised to contact either Professor Angell or Professor Savereid in the speech department.

Miss Leland Will Attend Workshop

Miss Carole Leland, Assistant Director of Placement, is planning to attend the Placement Directors workshop for College Women, to be held at Barnard College this week-end.

She will participate in discussions concerning job hunting in New York particularly jobs in arts, public relations, advertising, market research, investment banking, and non-profit organizations.

Miss Leland plans to relate this information to the senior women at their second convocation, to be held October 5.

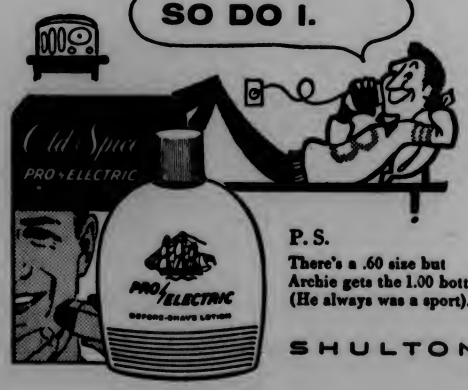
ARCHIE SAYS:

My cousin Archie—he thought the electric razor his gal gave him last Christmas was o.k. Then he tried Old Spice Pro-Electric, the before shave lotion. Now the guy won't stop talking, he thinks electric shaving is so great.

ARCHIE SAYS Pro-Electric improves electric shaving even more than lather improves blade shaving. ARCHIE SAYS Pro-Electric sets up your beard by drying perspiration and whisker oils so you shave blade-close without irritation. ARCHIE SAYS Pro-Electric gives you the closest, cleanest, fastest shave.

If Archie ever stops talking, I'll tell him I use Old Spice Pro-Electric myself.

SO DO I.



P. S.
There's a .60 size but Archie gets the 1.00 bottle. (He always was a sport).

Fulbright . . .

The Institute of International Education administers these graduate student programs for the U.S. Department of State.

General eligibility requirements for these programs are: 1) U.S. citizenship at time of application; 2) a bachelor's degree or its equivalent before the beginning date of the award; 3) knowledge of the language of the host country; and 4) good health. A demonstrated capacity for independent study and a good academic record are expected. Preference is given to applicants under 35 years of age who have not previously lived or studied abroad.

Applicants will be required to submit a plan of proposed study that can be carried out profitably within the year abroad. Successful candidates are required to be affiliated with approved institutions of higher learning abroad.

Students enrolled at a college or university should consult the campus Fulbright Program Adviser for information and applications. Others may write to the Information and Counseling Division, Institute of International Education, 800 Second Avenue, New York 17, New York.

Competitions for the 1962-63 academic year close November 1, 1961. Requests for application forms must be postmarked before October 15. Completed applications must be submitted by November 1.

UM Faculty Featured At Art Program

Four UMass faculty members will participate in an Amherst Art Program on Saturday, Sept. 30.

The Amherst Art Center will hold its Fall Opening Program in the Jones Library Auditorium. A wide variety of events, including craft and painting demonstrations and programs of music and poetry are planned for the afternoon and evening, and public attendance is cordially invited.

The schedule of the program is as follows:

Weaving demonstration by Mrs. Matilda Bell and Mrs. Sally Dirks. Mrs. Bell gives a course in weaving for the Amherst Art Center each year.

Pottery-making demonstration by Hood Spencer of Springfield. Spencer gives courses in pottery-making for a number of Springfield organizations.

Oil painting demonstration by John Onatzk. Onatzk painted the murals in the Massachusetts Building at the recent Eastern States Exposition.

Watercolor painting demonstration by Stephen L. Hamilton. Hamilton, who teaches art at the Stoneleigh Prospect Hill School in Greenfield, heads the Amherst Art Center and for the past six years has taught watercolor painting to numerous local residents.

7:30-8

Program of modern music by Paul Norton, Elliot Schwartz, and Nan Turgeon. Piano with flute and flute duets will be presented. Norton, chairman of the art department at UMass, studied the flute under Marcel Moyse. Schwartz, instructor in the department of music at UMass, is a composer. Miss Turgeon studies flute under Norton and attends Amherst Regional High School.

Poetry readings by George Abbe and Joseph Langland. David Rigley Clark, Poet and associate professor of English at the University, will introduce the readers. Refreshments will follow the program.

Abbe is presently poet-in-residence at Russell Sage College and has taught at Yale, Columbia, Mount Holyoke, Iowa and other colleges. In 1956 he won the Shelley Memorial Award, and his Collected Poems, 1932-1961, was recently published. The Library Journal's review stated, "Abbe is a major American Poet and this volume should be a nomination for the Pulitizer Prize in verse for 1961."

Langland, associate professor of English at UMass, was awarded the Amy Lowell Traveling Poetry Fellowship in 1955. He has held Ford Foundation Faculty Fellowships at Harvard and Columbia, and last year he was recorded by the Library of Congress under its program of making live recordings of noteworthy contemporary poets. Author of The Green Town (1956), Langland taught at the San Francisco Poetry Center this past summer, and Poet's Choice, an anthology which he edited with Paul Engle, will be published in 1962.

Plans for the 1961-62 Amherst Art Center classes and working groups will be announced, and local residents who are interested in participating will be given the opportunity to register.

Fine Arts Committee Sets Up Constitution

by MARTY ADAM '64

Last spring the Student Senate recommended that a more efficient program be initiated to deal "with the total Fine Arts program." Realizing that $25,000 of student money was being spent on an often "lop-sided" program, the Senate passed the motion that Fine Arts Council be formed "to coordinate all extra-curricular Fine Arts activities." This council is now busy writing its constitution.

"A Taste of Everything"

The President of the Student Senate, Arthur "Tex" Tacelli, stated that the Council will initiate "the programs we will all appreciate." Members of the Council will have to decide which parts of the program would be most unanimously received by the student body. To insure a well-rounded program, the members of the Fine Arts Council are "people with broad backgrounds." The chairman is Dr. John Harris of the government department. The rest of the Council is composed of five students and five faculty members. As a check for the Senate's interests, Student Senator Richard Shields has been appointed to the Council.

A Help to the Senate

It is felt that this new unified approach to our Fine Arts program will be a great help in reducing the Senate work load. Before now, the Senate had to consider each request for money, in the Fine Arts field, sepraately. Not knowing what the next request would be, or what the studens wanted, the Senators were in a dilemma. At times sums of money were allocated to a production attended by 50.

Now, the council will decide on the program, and submit it in full to the Senate for approval. Tacelli stated emphatically that, "from now on I will not allow anyone or anybody to come to the Budget Committee with a request for money, without going

Soph-Frosh Night Discussed By Wallace At '64 Meeting

President Kim Wallace of the Class of '64 presided over the first meeting this year of the sophomore class yesterday. About 60 sophomores turned out for the meeting.

Wallace discussed plans for the Soph-Frosh Night scheduled for Friday evening, October 27. Soph-Frosh Night will be incorporated into a Soph-Frosh Weekend, Wallace said. A Soph-Frosh track meet will be added as a part of the weekend with trophies awarded to winners of events and a large trophy will go to the winning class.

Soph-Frosh will feaaure "original" activities and a dance with music provided by the newly formed Soph Combo. Refreshments will be served to the combined classes of '64 and '65.

Three committees were formed to handle Soph-Frosh Night including a committee to handle ticket procurement, a committee for pre-sale of tickets, and a committee for sale of tickets at the door. Wallace noted the committee arrangement would lessen individual workloads.

Other committees were formed for the track meet and refreshments for Soph-Frosh Night as well as a publicity committee for all coming events.

An Executive Council will be elected by the sophomore class with representatives from all dorms, sororities, fraternities and the commuters.

The purpose of the council will be to link class officers and the class more closely. Applications for the Executive Council elections will be available Monday, Wallace said. No time or place was designated for the applications.

The members of the council will serve as committee heads on the various committees.

COLLEGIAN CLASSES BEGIN

The Collegian's annual journalism training program for new members began Tuesday. The course is still open to interested students. James R. Reinhold, a UMass graduate and a former Collegian editor is conducting the sessions. The course meets Tuesdays and Thursdays at 4 p.m. in W17 Machmer.

UM Centennial Plans Turner Tribute In Town of Templeton

UMass and the town of Templeton are jointly planning a major event calling attention to the Land-Grant Centennial.

Templeton, noting its bicentennial in 1962, is the birthplace of Jonathan B. Turner (1805-1899), a pioneer in the land-grant educational movement.

The UMass Centennial Committee and the Templeton Bicentennial Committee are scheduling a joint commemorative ceremony in April, 1962, to honor Turner. The ceremonies will take place at the Narragansett Regional High School in Templeton, and will feature representatives of the University, of the Templeton community, and a main speaker of national note. It is also hoped that the University will be represented by a student group.

Templeton Will Sponsor Essay Contest

The Templeton school system will sponsor an essay contest for its high school students on the philosophy or history of the land-grant movement, or on Turner himself. The winners of the competition will read their essays at the April ceremonies and will be awarded prizes furnished by the University.

The Templeton Bicentennial Committee has appointed a special Turner Day committee, with John Huddleston, principal of the Narragansett Regional High School, as chairman. Other members of the group are UMass alumni and area high school teachers.

Templeton-University Ties Numerous

Historically, there are many ties between the University and the town of Templeton. A Templeton native son, Warren Elmer Hinds '98, was the first man to receive a Ph.D. from this institution (in 1902). The Old Chapel chimes were donated to the college in 1937 in memory of Dr. Hinds by one of his friends, Bernard Smith '99. Dr. Hinds also spoke at the dedicatory ceremonies for Fernald Hall in 1910.

Jonathan B. Turner was born in Templeton on December 7, 1805. He attended Yale College, but left in 1833 before graduation to accept a teaching position at Illinois College.

In addition to his teaching, he edited a local newspaper, and crusaded tirelessly against slavery. He resigned from the college in 1848, and turned his homelands at Jacksnoville, Ill. into an experimental farm. His interest in farming, together with his experience in education, convinced him that everyone should have the opportunity to learn his trade at an institution of higher education.

Turner unveiled a blue print, "A Plan for a State University for the Industrial Classes", in May, 1850, in which he called for using the money Illinois had received from public land sales to endow a state university.

Caused Petition to Congress

His leadership caused the Illinois legislature to petition the Federal Congress to bring about the land-grant proposal. With the passage of the Morrill Act in 1862, he lectured and wrote endlessly to get the Illinois legislature to set up a state institution under the Morrill provisions.

On September 13, 1870, he laid the cornerstone for the University of Illinois at Champaign, Illinois. He saw his blueprint of 1850 finally become the groundwork of a giant university.

The essay contest will be launched in mid-October at a special assembly in the Templeton high school. Dr. Harold W. Cary, chariman of the history department here, will speak at the assembly on the background of the Land-Grant movement and its effect upon the University. Dr. Cary is presently writing the official History of the University of Massachusetts, to be published in conjunction with the University's Centennial observances.

Antagonism Of Ivy Seen By Trustee

Hugh Thompson, New England regional director of the A.F.L.-C.I.O. and first labor leader to serve as a trustee of UMass, told 1100 delegates to the Massachusetts State Labor Council:

"The ivy colleges around Greater Boston are not interested in the development of the University of Massachusetts. In fact they are opposed to many things. including a medical and law school for the University of Massachusetts."

Thompson said Harvard, Tufts and Boston University feared opposition from a University of Massachusetts medical school.

Plea for Backing

Thompson called on the labor movement to support the expansion of the University of Massachusetts or face the prospects of seeing their sons and daughters shut out from a college education because of increased tuition costs.

"The people of Massachusetts have failed the University of Massachusetts and in some quarters it is still spoken of as an agricultural school."

Thompson left a University of Massachusetts Trustee meeting to address the convention.

"The University of Massachusetts should be of interest to the labor movement and working people," Thompson continued.

"It is the one university left in the state for students whose parents make less than $6500 a year," he added.

Freshmen To Discard Beanies

For more than a decade, one of the most popular traditions at UMass has been the wearing of freshmen beanies. Purchased when the freshmen first arrive on campus, the beanies are customarily worn until the UMass football team scores its first touchdown of the season.

Tomorrow the Redmen take the field against the Aces of AIC as they offically open the 1961-62 football season. Once again the frosh are expected to make a fine showing and, in keeping with the tradition, wear their maroon and white beanies.

The Maroon Key Society wishes to remind forgetful freshmen that they will not be admitted to the game unless they are sporting their beanies.

DAVID AND GOLIATH

Wednesday, the stone from the sling of David sped toward the profile of Goliath. There is reason for great eejoicing in the camp of David but they can hardly expect the giant's immediate collapse.

Showing the pride and courage which so many of us either lack, or are too timid to express, UMass Trustee Hugh Thompson has entered into battle against the Goliaths of Massachusetts education. "The ivy colleges around Greater Boston are not interested in the development of the University of Massachusetts. In fact, they are opposed to many things, including a medical and law school for the University of Massachusetts."

Indeed, it is about time someone besides the President and the Student Body took up the shield of UMass and crusaded against the monopolies of Harvard, Tufts, and Boston University. As Thompson, a New England regional director of the AFL-CIO, said, "The people of Massachusetts have failed the University of Massachusetts". . .When the working man finds the expensive hands of the three aforementioned institutions bringing pressure upon the State Legislature in order to defeat UMass' medical and law school plans, then it is time for retaliation . . . regardless of the schools' revered statures.

It is readily foreseeable that should our Universitly's medschool go into effect, Harvard, Tufts, and Boston University would suffer a financial loss through the change in enrollment. But without such a state medical or law school, many hundreds of future doctors, dentists, and lawyers would fail to reach their goals due to the exorbitant cost of the ivy med-schools.

To the average man, to the family garnering less than $6,-500 a year, and to the aspiring young surgeon or lawyer with a weak bankbook, the University of Massachusetts is the last hope and only answer left within the state.

We can hardly expect the three schools to role over and play a dead Goliath but the light thrown upon the latter's monopolistic education practices should certainly enhance the chances of success for our medial and law schools. "Let the trustees be true trustees—trust them . . ." Not only has Mr. Thompson earned our trust but he may also enjoy our hearty thanks for a job well done in Boston last Wednesday.

Where are you Uomo Universali?

"Today our society suffers from a plethora of splendid splinters—fractional adults who never become men and women in any real sense of the word." Thus spoke Claude Coleman in his speech before the Congress of the National Student Association, reprinted in the New York Times Magazine of Sept. 24th. We at the University of Massachusetts see the students plugging away as majors in geology, economics, English, engineering . . . everything. They enter freshman year, take required courses, then specialize in one particular field, take the required number of courses, make very private jokes which only a chemistry major could possibly grasp ("Did you hear the one about the guy who poured the H_2O into the H_2SO_4?") and go their private, highly specialized ways through four years of college and through four years of esoteric and emerge the product of the University—it could be any American university—a "splinter" of a personality whose ventures into literature don't exceed a southern Negro rape trial in an eighth-rate tabloid newspaper.

How many English majors read the Scientific American? How many Chemistry Majors know who Lawrence Durrell is? Who the hell knows what the electoral college is? Who cares? Mr. Coleman in the Times compares the intellectuals on the campus (both in the faculty and student body) to the monastic scholars who removed themselves from the "world of affairs" in the Middle Ages.

Do you ever wonder when you sit in your room memorising equations, or dates of battles or as you sit reading the "College Outline Series—a Synopsis of Plato's Dialogues" that you just might be spending your college time in the worst possible way? Some professors may argue that these are "intellectual calisthenics". I say that the calisthenics should be performed in the secondary schools—LET US THINK! I get filled with an almost overwhelming feeling of disgust when I find myself in a classroom and the air is alive with facts, dates, and opinions to be memorised. Do you ever resent being told why something has happened instead of maybe finding it out on your own? Where are the occasions for the exchange of ideas uncontaminated by notebook and grade? They are rarely, if ever, found in the classroom.

Specialize! And by specializing you can go out and earn a lot of money. Think about your future; think hard. And of course it is imminent that you get married—right away, then your wife can work and you can study. Having artistic ambitions frees you from the onus of worrying about the political situation. Being an engineer frees you from an esthetic responsibility. This is all false! You may be an engineer or an economist or painter but you still have to be judged as a man. The man is the uomo universali—Leonardo da Vinci; not the chauvinistic, domineering prigs of the colleges who know their field and don't give a damn about what is going on about them and, worse, force their students to follow the odious path of specialization. And if a student does not rebel, if a student permits himself to be led, then he is as dangerous as the teacher. This is an age of self-pity and the student or professor is likely to cry out, "But you can't judge me by your standards. I'm different. I'm cut out to do this kind of work. And what do I care about the UN, the Atom Bomb, the University Administration, and God-knows-what-else." This is wrong. And this is even more dangerous than we can possibly imagine because the young man is likely to believe it, and if he does, it will turn him into a mountain of narcissism, a monster.

The scientist who thinks that the world of humanities has no connection with him is thoroughly deluded. What great scientist has not been well acquainted with the humanities? Albert Schweitzer is a doctor and an excellent organist as well as the author on a small book of philosophy; C. P. Snow, one of the most renowed of the present-day physicists, is the author of many novels including a projected eleven volume work of the life of one man; the scientist as purely a technician in a monstrosity just as the concept the writer as a pure observer is a false ideal. These are great misconceptions of our time bred by the academicians and nurtured by the student. Shakespeare was an actor and director; Goethe was a scientist and administrator; Dickens was a parliamentary reporter, journalist and editor. Chekov was a doctor. Certainly it is essential to have a trade, but we must probe; we must think; we must explore beyond our own spheres of consciousness. We must be human beings, too, not just a breed of freaks who wandered on the scene, nerve ends exposed.

As our world of the universities becomes more and more bureaucratized; as the administrators, the professors, the trustees begin applying pressure to the student who is trying to work himself through this jumble of bodies, then credentials take on a great significance. The faceless persons march through the colleges with a steady tread into the world outside, dark and forbidding with the omipresent incubus of reality pressing upon them. But they're not afraid, for in their fist is clenched tightly their Bachelor's Degree, or their Master's Degree, or, their Doctor's Degree—footnote to an empty life, visa for suburbia.

- - LETTERS - -

To the Editor:

In the lead story of last Wednesday's Collegian, Sept. 20, 1961, the Collegian was incorrect when it stated that I would not seek re-election to the Student Senate. Although at that time I was seriously considering not running, I did not committ myself either way. However, since then, I have decided to run as Senate representative from Wheeler dormitory.

Moreover, I am very much disturbed about the effect that this lead story has had on part of the student body. Last Wednesday's Collegian could easily be misconstrued to mean that participation in the Student Senate is a useless and time consuming activity. I believe that such an attitude predominating the mind of any student will deprive him of much of the opportunity that's been made available to him on this campus. Certainly, the academic study is the most important goal to strive for. I, for one, have gone on record several times as saying, "Studies first, all else second." However I do not believe that academics is such an all inclusive goal that it automatically eliminates other activities that improve your own personal worth.

Today, a college education has gained such an extraordinary prestige that we are all too often tempted to assume that our only useful and rewarding activity comes from attending such an institution, listening to the professor lecture, and then reproducing required information on occasions called examinations. The objectives of a college education should not only include the enhancement of your professional and intellectual abilities, but also your own personal attributes as well. Certainly, a college graduate who has proven to himsef that he can address a body of people, convey his ideas to them confidently, and even convince them that his ideas are the best is a more valuable individual. I don't intend to give a lecture, but it's not hard to see that the Student Senate is the most opportune way to develop your executive and leadership abilities.

Also, in last Wednesday's Collegian, both Senators Della Penna and Wilson implied that the work load in the Senate was too heavy to allow them to handle both academic and Senate responsibilities. Although his may have been true for them, there is no reason to assume that it automatically applies to any of you. Let me remind you that success in both areas is dependent upon your desire, your motivation, and your ability to satisfy both academic and Senate responsibilities. If this were not true, why is it that we have had senators with a far greater Senate responsibility than any of these ex-senators, and yet have maintained honor grades?

For the average senator, the required work was somewhat exaggerated. The average senator, one who does not hold either an office in the Student Senate nor the chairmanship of a committee, has a MAXIMUM Senate work load of 3-7 hours a weak. To some people, this time is nothng more than a few hours of Hatch time turned into a useful and rewarding activity.

I think I have said enough to help remove the cloud of pessimism that seems to have lingered around since last Wednesday's front page article. I hope that I have reminded both upperclassmen and freshmen about the opportunity that is available to them. If any one has any questions about the Student Senate, I am sure you will be welcomed to talk it over with any student senator, or contact me at 304 Wheeler.

Lichens on the Walls

To the Editor:

One afternoon last winter, I returned from class to find that my room, 313 Chadbourne, was partially flooded due to a persistent leak in the middle of the ceiling. Water began blistering the paint, and condensing on the walls. The atmosphere of the room became so humid that lichens began growing on the walls. The drip-drip of the water from the ceiling grew maddening after 3 days. Repeated calls to the Housing and Maintenance departments brought no results, until at last the leak ceased of its own accord and the room slowly dried out. The damage caused by this leak was very evident, such as blistered paint and discolorations. Unfortunately, my room does not possess the only leaky ceiling in this dorm. The fourth floor boasts many water stains and has been temporarily patched many times.

Upon my return to Chadbourne this semester, I was expecting to see the bright new look of newly painted walls. I was doomed to disappointment, however, for the walls and ceilings looked just as dirty and dingy as ever. There is little wonder that these walls and ceilings are in their present condition for it is rumored that the last time Chadbourne was painted was in 1948!

Leaks and lack of paint are not my only complaints, however. I have a radiator which at full steam will raise the temperature of my room on a cold winter day about 2 degrees. Also, a standard piece of equipment common in most dorms is absent here—an intercommunication system. Once there was one, but from the looks of the ancient remains, its origin was akin to that of the first Bell telephone.

Why are we in Chadbourne subjected to these conditions? Is it that the University is so poor that rooms cannot be made to look like rooms rather than bomb shelters, and feel like rooms rather than shower stalls? Due to this trend of disrepair, Chadbourne looks twice as old as it is. Can nothing be done other than appealing vainly to the sympathies of the Housing and Maintenance departments?

Lewis, Dwight, Hamlin Place In Dorm Sing

The Women's Physical Education Building was the scene of the second annual interdormitory sing last Tuesday night. The sing was the first event of the season sponsored by the Inter-Dormitory Council. Every womens' dorm on campus participated, singing one UMass song and one of their own choice. The freshman women were given permission to be out after 7 p.m. and were urged to participate.

Dean Curtis, Mrs. Gono, all the heads of residence, the women's physical education staff and girls from all the dorms attended.

Judges were Mrs. Albinson, Mrs. Alviani, and Miss Wallace.

Points were awarded for first, second, and third places. These points are the first awarded in a series which will be totaled at the end of the year. The dorm with the highest total will be awarded a plaque in recognition of its achievement. Other points will be awarded for the Float Parade, Snow Sculpture, and Scholarship achievement.

Lewis House singing "Bonnie Highland Laddie" took first place. Dressed in Scottish attire, the girls were directed by Helen Forsberg. Carol Esonis directed the girls from Dwight House. Dressed in white blouses and black skirts, they took second place singing "Good News." The "sailors" from Hamlin directed by Sue Speren took third place. They sang "Michael, Row The Boat Ashore."

THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME

It happens every day. A young man goes off to college, leaving his home town sweetheart with vows of eternal love, and then he finds that he has outgrown her. What, in such cases, is the honorable thing to do?

Well sir, you can do what Rock Sigafoos did.

When Rock left Cut and Shoot, Pa., he said to his sweetheart, a simple country lass named Tess d' Urbevilles, "My dear, though I am far away in college, I will love you always. I will never look at another girl. If I do, may my eyeballs parch and wither, may my viscera writhe like adders, may the moths get my new tweed jacket!"

Then he clutched Tess to his bosom and planted a final kiss upon her fragrant young skull and went away, meaning with all his heart to be faithful.

But on the very first day of college he met a coed named Fata Morgana, a girl of such sophistication, such poise, such savoir-faire as Rock had never beheld. She spoke knowingly of Franz Kafka, she hummed Mozart, she smoked Marlboros.

"You can hit me in the stomach, if you like."

Now, Rock didn't know Franz Kafka from Pancho Villa, or Mozart from James K. Polk, but Marlboros he knew full well. He knew that anyone who smoked Marlboros was modern and advanced and as studded with brains as a ham with cloves. Good sense tells you that you can't beat Marlboro's exclusive selectrate filter, and you never could beat Marlboro's fine flavor. This Rock knew.

So all day he followed Fata around campus and listened to her talk about Franz Kafka, and then in the evening he went back to the dormitory and found this letter from his home town sweetheart Tess:

Dear Rock,

Us kids had a keen time yesterday. We went down to the pond and caught some frogs. I caught the most of anybody. Then we hitched rides on trucks and did lots of nutsy stuff like that. Well, I must close now because I got to whitewash the fence.

Your friend,
Tess

P.S.—I can do my Hula Hoop 3,000 times.

Well sir, Rock thought about Tess and then he thought about Fata and then a great sadness fell upon him. Suddenly he knew he had outgrown young, innocent Tess; his heart now belonged to smart, sophisticated Fata.

Rock, being above all things honorable, returned forthwith to his home town and walked up to Tess and looked her in the eye and said manlily, "I do not love you any more. I love a girl named Fata Morgana. You can hit me in the stomach with all your might if you like."

"That's okay, hey," said Tess amiably. "I don't love you neither. I found a new boy."

"What is his name?" asked Rock.

"Franz Kafka," said Tess.

"A splendid fellow," said Rock and shook Tess's hand, and they have remained good friends to this day. In fact, Rock and Fata often double-date with Franz and Tess and have heaps of fun. Franz can do the Hula Hoop 6,000 times.

Women Seek Tenderness

"Try a little tenderness," advised the lyrics of a popular love song of a few years ago. That advice seems to be confirmed by recent surveys of the qualities women most value in the men they marry. Tenderness leads the list of desirable attributes.

The list of check points on the road to marital harmony is published in an October Reader's Digest article, "What Women Want in the Men They Marry." Women in several Western nations indicated similar preferences when asked what qualities they most valued in a husband.

Undoubted champ of qualities women most appreciate in their men is tenderness. But, reports author Dr. David Mace, this quality is in short supply among Western men.

"The trouble is that our society trains its men to keep their emotions under strict control," he explains. This seems to preclude the kind of outflowing warmth that women want.

Ironically, women who indicated tenderness was all-important in a lover also placed importance on his possessing strength. They seem to want a man who is vigorous and self-assertive in his approach to the world in general, but who becomes gentle and sweet with the woman he loves.

Dr. Mace questions this, asking: "Are our women asking too much?"

What's the chief complaint women have about men?

It seems to be a lack of loyalty. One wife complained that her husband continually ridiculed her when they were out with others.

Other wives resent husbandly criticism in front of children.

In the article Dr. Mace describes other qualities women value in men, says the findings indicate most women feel that "the perfect husband is a good man who knows how to express love."

Summer Activities of Greeks Are Varied

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Coming back to school was of special interest to the sisters of Alpha Chi Omega because they start a new year in a new house. The Montague House beside the new Education building is the site of Alpha Chi's new home. In the near future it will be open to the public and all will be welcome to tour the Alpha Chi Omega house.

The summer was especially enjoyable for two Alpha Chi's, Betty Baldi and Ruth Henderson, who toured Europe, France and Italy were two of the several countries visited.

Another Alpha Chi, Sandra Carlson, is now visiting some friends in Pakistan. She will return to the University second semester.

Three girls were initiated last Sunday. The new sisters are: Linda Gardner, Nancy Harris, and Eileen Reilly.

This year the Kappas are proud to welcome a new housemother, Mrs. Martindale. She is from Syracuse University where she was housemother for Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

Four girls have joined the slate of officers for this year; Susan O'Neil, '63 is assistant rush chairman, Jane Mullen, '63 is assistant pledge trainer, Judy Hanlon, '64, is assistant treasurer and Merilee Carlson, '64, is assistant public relations chairman.

Dottie Bonovan, '64, now a regular cheerleader, is all set to spur UMass to victory.

SIGMA DELTA TAU

The sisters of SDT were elated and relieved to find their house standing just as they had left it last May, considering the experience of last summer. SDT would, however, like to extend their best wishes to Sigma Kappa for as speedy a re-entry into their house as possible.

Although everybody is finding it difficult to return to daily routines, Carolyn Baker is perhaps finding it the most difficult to come down from cloud number nine. Carolyn has just returned from a summer tour of Europe, and has delighted all of her sorority sisters with endless stories of her travels.

SDT is happy to be able to return the kindness that AEPi extended last year during the girls' post-fire difficulties, by inviting them to dine at SDT until their kitchen is reopened.

The house is happy to have Elaine Kaplinsky back after a year's absence and a great victory over various microbes.

The sisters of SDT would also like to congratulate the founders of Lambda Delta Phi and wish them success in the future.

SIGMA KAPPA

The Sigma Kappas would like to say "Thanks" to the S.D.T.s for having them to dinner last Saturday night. The Sigmas really appreciated the gesture.

The sisters are proud of the silver tray which they won as an activities award from the Sigma Kappa national. This award was received at a convention at Fort Collins, Colorado this past summer. Liz Murphy, Pres., Carol Hajjar, Rush Chairman, and Jan Bardazzi represented the UMass chapter.

At a recent election Carol Tarr was elected as the house's new treasurer and Carolyn Price the new ass't treasurer.

Sorority Singing Group Hopes To Gain Approval

A group consisting of fifteen girls from each sorority on campus was called together by Jeannie Alden of Kappa Kappa Gamma last week. This was done at the request of Dr. Doric Alviani of the music department. The purpose was to prepare a song to be presented at the opening convocation.

Although, the group was prevented from appearing, it now aspires to reach higher levels under the direction of Dr. Alviani. First on the agenda is the task of drawing up a charter and getting this group approved as a campus organization.

Dr. Alviani's enthusiasm soon spread to the girls attending the first rehearsal. He stressed the need for such a group—one in which people with good voices but not quite what the Chorale is looking for—might participate.

After several rehearsals this chorus plans to travel to different colleges in the area for concerts.

Florida State Pair Here For Semester

The UMass women would like to welcome the two exchange students from Florida State University who are presently studying on this campus.

They are part of the Education Department's exchange program, and will spend all of first semester with us. We have likewise, sent several girls to study at Florida State. Look for an article next week concerning the impressions these girls have thus far formed of our campus.

Mass. Gridmen Get Set For Season Opener Against AIC

The UMass gridsters, who went through their best practice sessions of the season this week, according to Coach Vic Fusia, will open the season Saturday when they meet the AIC Aces on Alumni Field at 1:30 p.m.

"At this point," stated Coach Fusia at a coaches' banquet this week, "I'm much impressed with the coaching staff and this schedule."

And it looks as if Coach Fusia has the right idea, for the Staff of Jack Delaney, Fred Glatz, Ted Schmitt and Chet Gladchuk has whipped the team into great shape.

Most of the men have recovered from the grippe, it appears, and should be ready for the initial clash.

A few of the starters, however, may not be in the lineup. Paul Majeski could have a pulled tendon in his leg and may not be ready for action. Ken Palm, the squad's starting halfback, has been confined to the infirmary and he, too, may be out of action on Saturday.

Tom Brophy, who impressed everyone at his tackle slot, is no longer with the team because of disciplinary actions brought against him.

These injuries to the squad may hurt, but Coach Fusia has some capable men to fill the gaps. Ed Forbush, who lettered as a sophomore and junior, should be in great shape. A fine receiver and improving all the time defensively. Ed will see action at end if Majeski is not able to play.

Dick Warren or Art Perdigao will be set to fill in at the fullback slot if Palm is still out.

Sophomores Paul Graham and Don Hagberg have looked good at tackle during practice and will be sent in to fill the large gap left by Brophy.

ART PERDIGAO

ED FORBUSH

Quarterback John McCormick, who was hit hard by the grippe, losing 14 pounds, has been coming around and should lead the Redmen into what promises to be quite a game.

The Redmen, who opened their home season against AIC last year, also, managed to squeak out the win by a slim one point margin, and almost lost it during the last few minutes of play. The Aces, although never a big team, always seem to have that extra reserve to provide a tough contest.

Coach Fusia and his staff are confident that, along with the fine turnout, every frosh will wear his beanie, ready to let it loose when the Redmen carry the ball over for the initial touchdown.

Freshman Cross Country Team Meets Coast Guard

Frosh sports for the present school year will commence tomorrow when Coach Justin Cobb's cross country squad takes the field against the Coast Guard, in Connecticut.

Although none of the squad has seriously challenged the course record in time—trials, set by Bob Brouillet, '64, several of the men ran very well, giving the squad a lot of depth.

The following men who have stood out in practice should form a strong nucleus:

Tom Panke, a western Mass. mile champ from Feeding Hills; Bill Young, of New Bedford, and winner of last year's N.E. cross country championships; Alec Macphail, Wellesley Hills' number four class B miler; and Charlie Sisson, of Needham.

This year's squad has engaged the toughest schedule in school history, which features a three consecutive meet against Boston University and UConn, Harvard and Army. This block will prove the real test of the team's strength, and will also help reveal whether or not this team can match the unbeaten slate turned in by last year's New England Champs from UMass.

McDonough To Handle QB Slot On Connecticut Squad

"Humphrey is going to take over," was Connecticut Football Coach Bob Ingalls' word relative to his number one quarterback following three weeks of preseason workouts.

"Humphrey" in this case is Gerald M. McDonough who picked up his monicker when he reported for spring practice at 205 pounds and his team mates noted he looked like and waddled the same as Humphrey Pennyworth of the Joe Palooka comic strip.

McDonough, a 5'11" junior, trimmed himself down from the portly Humphrey porportions of 205 to a neat 189 when he reported for workouts. And his work on the gridiron, as he mixed it up with three others in the wide open battle for the vacant quarterback slot, has carried him to the top.

"Humphrey" lettered for his play as a linebacker on defense last season. His weight handicapped his "quickness" whenever he was tried on offense; and the coaches decided to make him a defensive operator.

McDonough had a fantastic high school career at Kingston High (N.Y.) where he quarterbacked his schoolmates to three undefeated seasons.

The husky No. 1 signal caller passed very well in the scrimmage with Brown a week ago, setting up one touchdown with a long pass and tossing a TD bullseye for another score.

"He handles the offensive very well, and right now he's our top man," says Ingalls. "We haven't as yet determined our other levels on the depth chart at QB," the UConn skipper adds when queried as to the relative standing of quarterbacks, Joe Klimas, Jim Muldowney and Jimmy Nocera.

NOTICE

The UMass athletic department has announced a different seating plan for home football games this season.

Sections reserved for students will still be located on the west side of the field. All general admission seating will be behind the endzones.

Narrow Margin Gives UMass 1960 A.I.C. Win

John Bamberry's talented toe produced the margin of victory in Saturday afternoon's AIC-UMass clash one year ago at Alumni Field before 6,000 fans.

The Redmen broke into the scoring column with seconds remaining in the first quarter and Bamberry's conversion projected the Redmen into a 7-0 lead. The Aces came roaring back with a six pointer of their own before halftime but failed on the all important two point conversion attempt.

Throughout the remainder of the afternoon each team was contented to stay on the ground and attempt to grind out the yardage. The stalwart defenses of both squads, however, stiffened considerably when the opposition threatened.

During the final half the Redmen forward wall held the Aces to a total of 33 yards on the ground. AIC couldn't accomplish anything via the airways either, as they were stopped with minus yardage. Not to discredit the UM line, quarterback Dick Glogowski and fullback Andy Griffin were forced to play the entire 60 minute and obviously tired in the final half. Griffin, a 205 lb. bulldozer and Glowski a converted halfback, accounted for two thirds of AIC's rushing yardage.

UMass scored the third time they had possession of the ball on a drive which started on their own 41. After the Redmen drove to the Aces' 21 the attack bogged down momenarily. Then on fourth down John McCormick hit Harry Williford on the 9. Roger Benvenuti then carried twice and finally tallied on a plunge from one yard out.

Kicking specialist Bamberry then showed the fans why he's good to have around as he split the uprights to give the local gridders a 7-0 advantage.

The Aces climbed back into the battle midway in the second period, on a 76 yard march. The drive was climaxed when Glogowski uncorked a 17 yard pass to John Mahoney on the UM 19. The fleet-footed halfback then outdistanced two defenders and galloped to the end zone unmolested.

The men from Springfield then elected to try for the two point conversion which would have given them the lead. Mahoney sprang himself loose in the endzone but Glogowski's pass missed it mark by a couple of feet.

The Aces have a strong team this year, and Coach Fusia is looking for a repeat of last year's win, a little less close, when the squads clash at 1:30 at Alumni Field.

LONE TOUCHDOWN GIVES REDMEN THE WIN

The lone UMass touchdown came when Roger Benvenuti carried the ball over from the one early in the AIC contest last year. John Bamberry's extra point boot provided the winning margin.

A.I.C.'s Salvucci Banks On Backs In Second Game

AIC Coach Gay Salvucci, a former All New England Tailback at AIC, is off to a good start in his sixth season as head football coach at his alma Mater. He defeated UNH last week, 6-0, looking to better his 1960 5-5 slate this year, including a reverse of last year's 7-6 loss to UMass, Saturday at Alumni Field.

Coach Salvucci expects to have "more to work with" this season and it looks as if he does, judging from his victory over the Wildcats.

As usual the team shapes up as strong in the backfield but rather thin up front, a familiar description of recent AIC football teams.

The backfield is manned by co-captain Andy Griffin, chief threat for the past seasons, and a half dozen other returning lettermen.

Griffin wil be the man to watch in his fullback slot, as he has been a leading ground gainer for the Aces for the past two years with a over a thousand yards good for a 4.2 average carry. In great shape, he'd like to bow out of his college grid days in a blaze.

Dick Glogowski, quarterback, and Joe Meucci, halfback were both regulars a year ago and will be up against the Redmen this Saturday. Glogowski, who passes, kicks and runs, directs the team like a seasoned veteran.

Meucci, whose 88 yard TD gallop two years ago was the longest ever staged in AIC park is good for five yards a carry.

Pete Schindler, who picked up a total of 41 yards in last weeks contest, will be at the other halfback slot for the Aces. Schindler, who transferred to AIC from UMass as a sophomore, look to be a big man for Salvucci this season.

The Aces may have to do most of their gaining on the ground, as Glogowski completed only four of fourteen passes against the Wildcats.

The AIC line is the weakest part of the squad, having only three lettermen in the forward wall. Tony Marino and Don Rober provide the strength at the guard positions, and Bob Smith will settle at a tackle slot. The Aces gave Chief Bosco's squad twice as many yards rushing as they made themselves, winning the game on a fumble.

Big Jack Salmon, who caught nine passes as a sophomore but only five last year, returned to the AIC squad in good shape and did the punting for the Aces during the New Hampshire game, will be a man to watch at the end position.

TRELEASE TALKS

Should circumstances prevent you from attending tomorrow's clash between U-Mass and A.I.C., Jimmy Trelease will be there high above the gridiron to bring it all your way over WMUA. Air time is 1:20 at Alumni Field.

Master Plan To Expand UMass For 10,000 By '65

Anyone who has been even the least bit observant during the past few months would notice that such major landmarks as whole buildings, groups of trees, and pieces of road and sidewalk have completely disappeared. This process of clearing land to make way for progress here at UMass has been a steady and continuous one for the past five years, but has been stepped up considerably in recent months.

Mather Recognized Need

Since the former president, Jean Paul Mather, recognized the need for considerable expansion to accomodate the increased enrollment at this institution, he proposed that UMass should be ready to take care of 10,000 students by 1965. Mather, together with the trustees and consulting architects set down a plan of expansion which was called the "University of Massachusetts Master Plan".

Since its first draft in 1957 this plan has been revised many times to keep abreast of the newest concepts in education and the needs of the students, keeping in mind the same goals presented in the original plan.

One of the first requisites of a University is adequate dormitory facilites. Many students do most of ther school work within their dormitories. A new concept of dormitory organization has been created by the architects and administration. Any new dormitory constructed hereafter will be divided into floor units consisting of no more than twenty-five students per unit. Each unit will have its own study hall. The stairways will be located for from the study area so that there will be a minimum of distraction.

Two Dorms Being Constructed

There are two dormitories now being constructed in the men's area. These will be used by men at first but could be women's dorms if the need arises. These two new buildings will increase the housing capacity by only 600 students since many of the existing dormitories are overcrowded, but each year thereafter dormitory capacity will be increased by 1000 students until the goal of 10,000 is reached by 1965.

Other buildings on which construction is well under way are the third engineering building to be known as the Engineering and Physics shop, the building for Natural Resources and the third section of the Morrill Science Center. Also the Infirmary is included in this group of buildings and will be completed within the next two weeks.

There are five new buildings which have been planned and for which the funds have been appropriated ready to be started. Among these is the new School of Business Administration which will be started next Spring. This building is a necessity for it is estimated that in 1965 20 per cent of the student population will major in Business Administration.

Work will be started this Fall on a new area of athletic fields and Soon a new Men's Physical Education Building will be started.

Other new buildings for which appropriations have already been made are Chenoweth Food Technology Laboratory, an addition to the Physics building and a fourth section of the Morrill Science Center.

Besides these buildings there are others which have already been planned and will be started when the funds can be allocated. These will be a new Administration Building, a Liberal Arts Building and an annex to Machmer. Also a new Dining Commons will be needed by 1963.

In addition to the buildings there will have to be added more and larger parking facilities and roads. It has been decided to construct a main road on the periphery of the central part of the campus. Therefore the traffic on the present route 116 through the center of campus will be diverted to the new road. A new main entrance to UMass will be by way of North Hadley Road which is West of the men's athletic fields. This has been named by the architects as the Centennial Entrance.

Lyle Blundell, a professor in the Department of Landscape Architecture, who helped devise the Master Plan said, "When we finish all of the buildings which have been planned thus far and we reach our first goal of 10,000 we will then have just begun to expand."

Assembly To Choose 4 Members

The Massachusetts Assembly, the group in charge of Distinguished Visitor's program is expanding to include four more students. This will bring the size of the Assembly to seventeen, twelve of whom will be students.

The new members will be chosen by the Assembly on a competitive basis from among students who file applications. Applications will be available in the RSO Office from Monday, October 2, until Monday, October 9, at 5 p.m. The term of office will be one year, with the possibility of reelection.

The committee will begin processing applications immediately after the deadline. They will probably interview the candidates personally on Tuesday, October 10 and on Wednesday, October 11.

Final selection will be completed by October 13. If there are any questions, contact Linda Achenbach at the Student Senate Office or at Johnson House.

The program was started when the Student Senate passed the now-amous S35 in the spring of 1960. It is supported by a tax levied on the students which is determined by the Student Senate. To date, the program has brought Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt to campus, and co-sponsored Aaron Copland with Mortar Board for the Fine Arts Festival.

Ben Zion Goldberg To Speak at Hillel Foundation Supper

BEN ZION GOLDBERG

Ben Zion Goldberg, noted author and columnist, will speak on "The Jewish Problem In the Soviet Union" at a delicatessen supper sponsored by the Hillel Foundation on held Sunday at 5:30 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union.

Born in Russia and educated at Harvard and Columbia, Goldberg will explore such questions as "How does it feel to be a Jew in the Soviet Union today?" and "Is the Soviet government really anti-Semitic?"

Admission to the supper will be 50¢ for members and $1.00 for non-members. Membership will also be available at the door for those wishing to join.

The supper is being run by the Hillel Social Committee headed by Judi Robinson, Rozzi Effinson, Wendy Green, and Manuel Smith.

First Of A Series

ALUMNI PROFILES

Old Grads never die, they just get filed in "Mem" Hall.

Do you ever worry that when you leave the University you may just disappear into the cruel world outside without anyone ever worrying about you? Well, cast aside such worries for they're all for naught. There are a set of offices in Memorial Hall that make it their business to see that you're not forgotten, and they also see to it that you don't forget the University.

Housed in those offices is the Alumni Association, under the direction of Evan Johnston '50 and his assistant Hugh Calkin '61. Independent from the University the Association operates on funds donated by our graduates. Last year UMass was third among land grant colleges in Alumni participation in the annual fund drives. Over 40% of the graduates donated to the Alumni Fund.

Nearly 14,000 Alumni

Not too long ago there were only a few thousand alumni to keep track of, but as of June, 1961, the number approached 14,000. Naturally as the numbers of alumni multiply so do the activities of the Association's offices.

Keeping up with address changes is almost enough to keep one girl busy full time, especially among the more recent classes.

Each graduate has his own file, in which up to date biographical records are kept. This information is collected through periodic questionnaires and from clipping bureaus and news agencies. These files are available for the perusal of any student, alumnus, historian, or government bureau that may be gathering data on the University or its grads.

Homecoming and Commencement generates a great deal of activity in Mem Hall with problems ranging from housing for alums to passing out caps and gowns.

Off campus, through the auspices of the Association offices, many new clubs are being formed as our grads congregate in various parts of the country. These groups often meet when a prominent member of the faculty or administration is in their area and he brings them up to date on the current events at UMass. A program of slides depicting the scenes of the University is also available for such get-togethers.

Athletic events in Boston, Connecticut, or New York are ideal excuses to get-together for a cocktail party. These get-togethers are not all merely social functions, however; in fact few are. Additional scholarships, recruiting assistance and booster clubs are often the result of such gatherings.

Publishes the ALUMNUS

The Association's activities are many and varied. Currently they include editing and publishing the Alumnus, a quarterly magazine, which is mailed out to all alumni. The Alumnus acts to bridge the gap between college friends and acquaintances by listing their activities and whereabouts, and between the graduates and the University by covering campus highlights.

The Alumni Memorial Lecture Series initiated in the fall of 1960 by the Association brought to the campus such distinguished speakers as W. W. Rostow, economic advisor to President Kennedy, Vice Admiral Samuel Eliot Morison, the distinguished historian, and Oscar Handlin, noted Civil War authority. The Association has also been active in launching and aiding the Massachusetts Review, a publication conceived and developed by University alumni and faculty, which is taking its place among America's leading reviews. The offices of the Review are also in Memorial Hall.

In the past the alumni have rallied to make many contributions to their alma mater. The Alumni Building Corporation was responsible for the clearing of Alumni Field, the construction of the Curry Hicks Gymnasium, nineteen of the dormitories, the faculty appartments and the Student Union. Memorial Hall was built entirely by alumni contributions.

Aided Faculty Raise

Most recently, the alumni played a very subtle part in swaying the state legislature to pass the Faculty Pay Raise Bill.

If you would like to investigate the facilities which are available to you as students and alumni you are welcome to drop in anytime. Above all feel free to use the lounge in Memorial Hall for study purposes and inquire about using the hall for any club or committee meetings that you may have.

This year, with an eye on the Centennial, the Alumni Office is presenting a series of outstanding alumni profiles in the Collegian. This first article will be on Friday, October 6, and will be on Murray D. Lincoln '16, President of C.A.R.E.

Coach Fusia And Dean Field Address Thousands At Rally

An estimated 2000 persons attended the first football rally and bonfire of the year held Friday night behind the S.U. Highlight of the night was the appearance of the wife of Head Coach Vic Fusia. She was flown in secretly from Pittsburgh earlier in the day as a surprise for the rookie coach.

Fusia, who hadn't seen his wife in several months, almost disrupted the proceedings by wanting to leave early with his team. Originally, he had planned to leave with his squad immediately after the introduction of the players, but he was persuaded by Adelphia to remain so that "awards could be presented to some of the players."

Coach and Mrs. Fusia beam at camera after Mrs. Fusia surprised the coach by arriving at the rally.

Then, after the coach had said a few words to the cheering crowd, Bernie Murphy '62, co-chairman of the Rally committee, presented him with a gift. Murphy also produced a bouquet of flowers which he said were "for your wife who couldn't be here tonight."

Presents Bouquet To Mrs. McGuirk

Fusia, not knowing that his wife was coming toward him from the other side of the platform, accepted the flowers then said that he would present them "to the most beautiful lady on the platform, Mrs. (Warren) McGuirk."

At that moment Mrs. Fusia stepped forward and the expression on the face of the coach can never be recreated in words (see photo).

Dean of Students Dr. William Field also spoke, along with team co-captain John McoCrmick. After some cheers led by Alsie Edgerton's tumblers, Metawampee (Robert Small '63) made his traditional jaunt to the bonfire pit and started the blaze.

Later most of the fans who attended the rally came to the dance in the S. U. ballroom, where the crowded hall rocked to the music of Tex and The Corvettes.

Then on Saturday 5600 cheering spectators turned out to watch the Redmen cap a successful weekend by topping AIC, 21-12, in a real thriller (see Sports section for details).

Revelers Start Planning For 'Campus Varieties'

The 1962 edition of Campus Varieties is about to be launched, and the Revelers, who produce this annual show of campus genius, are in the process of putting this year's version together.

Varieties originally had the format of an old vaudeville variety show. The expanding university and the corresponding increase in talented students prompted its conversion into a musical comedy.

Now the yearly search for resident talent for this year's production is on. Possible scripts as well as a director, stage manager, set designers, choreographers, musical arrangers and composers are being sought.

Anyone who would like to be a part of this production, in any capacity, can do so merely by placing his name and position desired in the Revelers' box in the RSO office, at the S. U. lobby counter, or by seeing any Reveler before October 13.

WFCR-FM Will Broadcast First Medical Seminar Tues.

The unique "40,000-square-mile classroom" of the Albany (N.Y.) Medical College will be aired over the educational radio station WFCR-FM beginning Tuesday, October 3.

WFCR-FM (88.5 mc.) is the new educational radio station supported by Amherst, Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges and UMass. Its transmitter and studios are located on Mt. Lincoln in Pelham.

Two-Way Radio For Questions And Answers

Started in 1955 to provide doctors with needed post-graduate education that would not interfere with their already crowded schedules, the airwave seminars allows physicians in over thirty hospitals within a 130-mile radius of Albany to hear prominent authorities lecture on special medical topics. Then, when they have finished their lectures, a high frequency two-way radio network permits the doctor-listeners to ask questions and hear immediate answers from Albany via FM —all without leaving their hospitals or offices.

Originating from WAMC-FM in Albany, the seminar already has well over 6,000 M.D. listeners. Now, with the addition of WFCR's 34,400-watt voice, physicians throughout southern New England will be able to increase their medical knowledge in the latest electronic fashion. The discussions can be heard each Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from noon until 1:00 p.m.

Broadcasts U.N. Proceeding

Another public service feature from WFCR is its three weeks' broadcasting of the complete proceedings of the recently-convened 16th United Nations session. Beginning at 10:15 a.m., Monday through Friday, the uninterrupted deliberations of this international body will be aired through the morning and afternoon sessions until adjournment in the early evening.

During these UN broadcasts, some of WFCR's regular programs will not be heard. However, these will be resumed during the week of October 9.

The Saga of Al Hero

With the nomination papers now filed, various class offices and senate positions will now be up for grabs. Yet, in the past many offices were not earned or merited but simply grabbed.

Take the case of Al Hero. Al's fraternity thinks it would be a good idea if our good looking friend ran for the vacancy in his class office. After all, the House didn't have a single Maroon Key, Adelphian, class officer, or Reveler. "Someone will have to make a sacrifice and run for the vacant office," decided the House upper-echelon. So the fated finger was pointed at Al Hero to pick up the house's cross.

It really makes little difference to anyone if Al has a 2.0 average just by the skin of his teeth or that he has had no previous experience in organizing and meeting people, or that he really wants no part of the class office. You see, he really shouldn't think of himself at a time like this.

And so the week of elections rolls around and the House starts to roll out the 400,000 blue and red posters they have labored over for the last 14 days. By the end of the week, our Al is in office, bewildered and unenthused. By the middle of the semester, he is flunking two courses and has missed half of the class meetings. And by the end of the semester, Al has flunked out, the class office has another vacancy, the senate has another election to run, and the House is back where it started.

Right about here you are probably expecting a stunning rebuttal of fraternity politics. We are sorry to disappoint you, but the conclusion must be a stunning rebuttal of campus voters. While the fraternity brothers (and sorority sisters, in some cases) took advantage of their young, good looking member, the Student Body DID NOT take advantage of their right to vote. Instead of running a candidate themselves, they let the next guy do it. Instead of voting experience or capability, they voted the poster-man. The man with the most posters is the man with the most votes on this campus (with the possible exception of the incumbent).

The fraternities are faced with the problem of infringement. They are like the satellite nations: crushed by two great powers—Administrations and growing college populaces. Unless they continue to hold both prestige and a voice in Student Government, the fraternal system may go asunder in the waves of masses. Thus the fraternities and sororities have a worthy reason to struggle and construct and enthuse. But the voter on this campus feels no necessity to inquire or struggle or even be constructive. In chorus, the 3,500 independent voters and students shout: "What more do we have to build? Haven't we already built the most powerful structure in self government—APATHY!"

U.S. And Hemispheric Unity

President Kennedy met recently with Latin American heads of state at the U.N. in efforts to consolidate meaningful political relationships and to gain needed support for U.N. programs.

For instance, the United States counts heavily on unified hemisphere backing in the choice of a new U.N. Secretary General. Differences arise, however, in that Brazil's President Goulart favors U Thant of Burma, hardly considered a favorite by the U.S., and Latin America, herself, is uncertain of her own stand on the forthcoming Red China debate—adding to more confusion for the U.S.

This "confusion" regarding Latin America cannot be measured in terms of one administration's capacity to pacify resentments and heal wounds that occurred decades ago—nor can it be settled in one meeting. The trouble with Latin America goes back to the expansionist era of the western state system of which the U.S. played a prominent role. From our annexation of Texas to our conversion of Cuba, Panama and Haiti, among others, into protectorates, we manifested tragic and consequential indifference towards the internal development of these countries. In failing to project a sincere interest (if not a spectacular financial assistance—at least a sharing of technological change), we failed to achieve any satisfactory relationships based on a mutual and reciprocal trust. Consequently, the U.S. was dubbed "The Collosus of the North."

"It is easy to remember, but so hard to forget," shout thousands of Latin Americans every year to U.S. tourists and ambassadors. It is hard to forget —but even harder to correct. Yet, to blame the current administration for past deeds is to allow a man to suffer for a crime committed a hundred years ago.

What can the U.S. do? What does it take for any two parties to get along?—understanding. On the other hand, do the U.S. and Latin America "get along" for external reasons only? (for example, mutual protection against the Soviet bloc). Will this basic and underlying resentment against the "rich capitalists" of the north deter crucial U.N. programs?

Perhaps the trouble lies within the Latin American nations, themselves, in their relations with each other. Rather than a unified and stronger foreign policy, many hemispheric nations have deviated and embarked on independent policies which will, in the long run, affect our efforts to offset the Soviet bloc through the U.N. and O.A.S.

At any rate, the U.S. must realize that although it cannot expect to alter these newly independent and changing foreign policies—it can attempt to understand and adjust to them. Fortunately, we have established firm relationships with many Latin American leaders, including President Prado of Peru and Argentina's Frondizi, manifested at last month's Inter-American Conference and the Alliance for Progress Program. We hope this may set an example for other Latin nations to follow suit.

In other words, the U.S. is no longer "Great White Father" to many influential and crucial Latin American nations. The U.S. must roll with the punches if it wants any reasonable backing in the U.N.

Dear Editor,

Re: Miss Schneck's article on the subject of Mass Media. I have several comments to make on the thoughts expressed by Miss Schneck. First however, I should like to congratulate the staff of the Collegian on its work. Coming from a college where the newspaper was a conglomeration of Hedda Hopper type gossip and insignificant news such as the library's acquisition of a new flower pot, I was quite pleased at the level attained by your college paper.

Now to the points in question. Miss Schneck says ". . . anyone from an ex-President, a head of a corporation or social group to a housewife is permitted air time." This complaint on the reporter's part is valid I believe. One must realize, however, that this is a democracy, which could be questioned also, which we are living in. This type of society points out this factor, which the reporter objects to, as one of its most attractive aspects. Namely, the right of all citizens to air their views. The fact that we must listen to a speaker who has no knowledge of his or her topic is one of the drawbacks of a democratic policy. It would be more in the interest of the people to hear Dr. Pauling. It would be more efficient to hear his views but efficiency is not obtained to the greatest degree in a democratic society. The only way to obtain this efficiency is to have a centralized power, a factor which our Founding Fathers found quite unpalatable.

"Money talks" is quite true but again is not this a characteristic of our world? Is this not the most basic of all problems, the loss of the spiritual in favor of the materialistic?

"Opinion thrown against opinion" to end? This is a rather surprising statement coming from one who apparently is writing to effect a change in favor of democracy. Is this debating technique not the basis of a democracy? Are not policies evolved after debate within the public, within the Congress, within the Executive? No, I do not think that eliminating debate over mass media would solve any problems, more likely it would create one which the Supreme Court would find in its lap, I'm quite sure. No, the answer I believe is a dirty word in American government—centralization. Centralization of controls in a strong organization with wide powers to decide what is fit and what is not fit for the air and television waves. Obviously, the F.C.C. does not fill the bill.

In short if we are to retain our sanity in a democratic society we must, as Shakespeare puts it, "suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune . . ." Democratic slings and arrows are far more comfortable than totalitarian weapons.

Controversial Democracy

by ELIZABETH SCHNECK '62

What characteristizes democracy is controversy, not confusion. The controversies of our Founding Fathers were, undoubtedly, lively ones. But they were also rational, and an evident effort was made to see that the opinions of those dynamic men were scientifically or philosophically justifiable. What, however, seems to characterize today's world of rapid and mass communications is confusion. While the expresson of opinion today may be loud, clear, and even lively, and while more and more people have access to the leading views of the day, the effect is mostly one of noise.

I lay part of the blame for the confusion in present issues to the mass media who are open to the exploitations of both institutions and powerful individuals. If this is the case, we cannot expect our public to be prepared to exercise its rights as intelligent, well-informed persons. An exploited media, by the very nature of things, creates and adds to confusion since it is the tool of institutions and individuals (who per force promote, and protect, ther own ideas). Their premises are in many cases at odds, and, rather than a single socially-benefiting goal, they have many goals. The confusion is thus created by the free distribution and reign of bastard claims, assertions, and ideas. Meanwhile, controversy is being smothered.

It is reasonable to ask, what evidence do we have of confusion in the thinking and behavior of our time? Quickly, three references might be made. First, the American reactions to various issues during the past few years might be noted; i.e., McCarthyism, the TV quiz investigations, the U2 incident, the Cuban fiasco, the John Birch Society, the U.S. consideration for resuming nuclear testing this summer, and finally, the reacton to the Soviet Union's resumption of testing.

Second, one might consider the economic and political reasons why confusion is coming to be characteristic of our time. Not only one writer has discussed the significance and implications of various elites in our society; for example, the military or Madison Avenue. Third, one might consider the remarks of Norbert Wiener in his study, "The Human Use of Human Beings: Cybernetics and Society." In his work, Wiener discusses the serious implications of the Second Law of Thermodynamics (the tendency for entropy to increase in isolated systems to man and society).

I do not believe that confusion can be dressed up to look democratic. It is undemocratic since it does not permit a rational approach to issues. Confusion, in the last analysis, can be just as totalitarian as Hitler or Khrushchev, because it prevents solution to the main problems of our time. It seems unwise to allow democratic privileges to become the black cloak of a headless horseman.

Dr. Clarke Awarded Palmes Academiques

A member of the UMass faculty has been awarded the "Palmes Academiques" of the French Legion of Honor for contributions to literature.

The award, established by Napoleon to recognize distinction by individual merit rather than by title or birth, has been granted to Dr. Katherine Allen Clarke, associate professor of Romance languages.

Voted by the French government and signed by President Charles de Gaulle, the citation accompanying the award recognizes Dr. Clarke's contributions to the study and appreciation of French literature. A representative of the French government will make a formal presentation of the award later in the fall.

An authority on the contemporray French author Jean Giono, the UM scholar has achieved wide recognition for her translations and studies of Giono's work. Her English translations are found in all French libraries and in the Bibliotheque Nationale.

Reviews of Dr. Clarke's work have appeared in the New York Times, the New Yorker Magazine, the London Times, and other newspapers and periodicals. She was granted honorary membership in the Mark Twain Society for her contributions to literature.

A graduate of Goucher College, Dr. Clarke also studied at Johns Hopkins University and Middlebury College. After receiving the M.A. degree at the latter institution, she continued her studies at the University of Grenoble in France where she received her doctorate. She taught at Hood College, Alfred University and Lake Erie College before joining the UMass staff in 1945.

Soph Council Applications Due Friday

Those interested in applying for membership to the Sophomore Executive Council should pick up their applications at the R.S.O. office in the Student Union during this week.

These applications must be filled out and returned by Friday, October 6. They will then be reviewed and applicants will be voted on at their dorm elections which will be held on October 10.

The purpose of the Executive Council is to act as a link between the class memebrs and officers. The members of this council will be eligible for committee chairmanships and should also play an important part in making successful such coming events as Soph-Banquet, Soph-Mix, and Winter Carnival.

Student Finds American Tools Too Large For Indian Farmer

American technology is fine for Americans, but sometimes it's a little bit too much for other people to handle.

That's the conclusion reached by a student from India who will receive his master's degree in agricultural engineering from UMass.

He is Rama K. Srivastava who spent two summers evaluating various hand methods of harvesting grain — using hand implements better suited to the agricultural economy and land tenure system in his native country than modern American equipment.

Indian Tools Inefficient

The traditional Indian implements of grain harvest are inefficient in both the time and the energy they require. Srivastava used Indian, Japanese, European and American scythes, an American cradle and a hand-powered Japanese "Nissan" portable harvester to harvest small plots of oats, rye, buckwheat and barley. These crops were used in lieu of the usual Indian grains — rice, millet and wheat.

The entire experiment, sponsored by the department of agricultural engineering in the College of Agriculture, and aided by the International Co-operatioin Administration, was designed to discover which hand tools were more efficient and most suitable for use in the Indian system of agriculture.

Srivastava calculated the number of calories a farmer would use with the various methods by measuring with a simple gas meter the amount of air he had to breathe. Then, using an oxygen analyzer, he figured the amount of oxygen used and from this determined the amount of energy needed to wield each tool. As a sidelight on the amount of effort used, the harvester's pulse and breathing rates were also recorded.

Efficient But Too Heavy

The American hand tools were ranked first in efficiency with the cradle leading and the scythe close behind. But, and here's the catch, the American tools were just too big to handle. Although they allowed the fastest rate of harvest and cut more grain per unit of energy used, Srivastava felt they were too heavy for the often poorly-nourished Indian farmer to use. The European scythe with its straight blade is about two-thirds the size of the American version and ranks next in efficiency. This appears to be the most practical for Indian farmers to adopt.

Srivastava was aided in his research by two other Indian graduate students in the department of agricultural engineering—Anandi P. Bhatnagar and Bireshwari P. Singh—under the direction of Prof. C. A. Johnson.

Brouillet, Balch Lead Harriers To Victory Over Coast Guard

by ABE SCHEINKER '62

Bob Brouillet loafed over a completely uphill course Saturday to finish first and lead the UMass Cross Country team to vicory over the U.S. Coast Guard Academy and Hartford College. The strong running sophomore tied the Guardsmen's New London course record with a time of 21 minutes and 16 seconds.

UMass' top man all last fall, Dave Balch, had to settle for second place as the Redmen were hit with only 20 points. Coast Guard had 40 and the weak Hartford squad racked up 80 points.

Co-captain Dick Blomstrom supplied the biggest surprise for Coach Bill Footrick. Blomstrom spent several days in the infirmary the previous week with the grippe and had run very little for two weeks. After prodding teammate Bob Avery to move up, he decided to do it himself and gained fourth place over the 3.9 mile course, only a minute behind the winner.

Only two men, both from Coast Guard, managed to sandwich between the first five Redmen. The best Hartford runner finished 14'th.

The UMass harriers' next meet is at home against Union College on Wednesday. The race starts at 3:30 in front of the Women's Physical Education Building.

Villanova, Maine Win As U.N.H., Rhody, UConn Lose

The Crusaders from Holy Cross scored first, but it proved to be their last touchdown as the big team from Philly, Villanova, surged ahead to a 20-6 victory, Saturday, at Worcester.

Villanova came through with two tallies during the half, though, on a Richman to Russo pass two minutes later. Jack Clifford hauled in an Aceto pass near the end of the half to make it a one touchdown margin.

Although Holy Cross threatened again in the first stanza and later in the second half, Villanova was too strong, and was good for another T.D. before the game ended.

UConn was stopped cold by the Ivy League gridders from Yale as the Eli's put on the pressure to gather in an 18-0 shutout victory. There was no score at the siren signalling the end of the first half, but Yale came on to pick up a field goal and two touchdowns to put an end to the high Huskie hopes of taking the day.

The Wildcats from New Hampshire were no match for an aggressive Dartmouth squad. Dartmouth handed Chief Bosco's squad a 28-3 defeat, and the Wildcats now have a 0 and 2 season, losing last week to AIC.

In the sole YanCon conference clash last weekend, the Maine Bears edged the Rams of Rhode Island 22-20 in a closer game than many predicted.

Booters Edge Coast Guard

Coach Larry Briggs' soccer squad booted their way to victory over Coast Guard Saturday and started their season off right in all ways.

Dick Leete, a veteran booter, provided both goals for the Redmen in their 2-1 win, playing a fine game.

The UMass squad looked sharp both on offense and defense, stopping many Coast Guard drives to bail themselves out of danger.

In the tightly fought contest many of the rookies of last year proved that they could play a good brand of soccer, and will be out to improve on their season slate when they come up against a strong Williams team next Saturday at home.

Nose Bowl Clash Mon.

Monday night at 8 p.m. Alumni Field is the site of the annual Nose Bowl game before an expected crowd of 13,909.

AEPi goes into the contest with a 0-2 record, being defeated by Phi Mu Delta 9-0, and by Kappa Sigma 13-0.

AEPi is quarterbacked by junior Steve Forman. However the man to watch is end Dickie Kleiman. They are contemplating breaking into the scoring column during this game.

TEP has a 1-1 record having defeated Phi Sigma Kappa 12-7 and being edged by Kappa Sigma 6-0.

TEP's fine offensive team sparked by blocking backs Mike Feldman and Bob Schwartz, and center Sol Yas have showed progress and coordination in their previous games.

Redmen Roll to 21-12 Opening Victory Over A.I.C.

Lussier And Lewis Spark Big Second Half Scoring Surge

by W. JOHN LENNON '62

The University of Massachusetts Redmen unleashed a powerful second half offensive attack, and displayed a rugged forward wall to tomahawk a sputtering AIC team, 21-12, before 6000 sundrenched fans at Alumni Field Saturday afternoon. When the Redmen's linemen weren't slamming the tepee door on AIC's scoring thrust Sam Lussier and Fred Lewis were combining their talents to pile up 216 net yards rushing and tally three touchdowns.

Lussier broke the ice in the see-saw battle at 11:15 of the third quarter when he capped a 65 yard drive by plunging for five yards over the elusive goal line. This initial TD which ate up ten plays was helped by four bursts over center by Art Perdigao, and highlighted by Ed Forbush's circus catch of John McCormick's aerial covering 24 yards. "Old Reliable" John Bamberry parted the uprights, and the Redmen were riding high, 7-0.

The Yellow Jackets finally took advantage of a UM mistake midway through the final stanza. Following Rod Cournoyer's recovery of a Lewis fumble on the enemy's 37, Dick Glogowski completed three passes in five attempts and then scored from one yard out. The Aces, who were playing for all the marbles, gambled and lost on the two point conversion attempt.

Now the free for all was in full swing. In less than three minutes the Redmen marched 80 yards in eight plays. Lussier and Lewis churned out 67 yards and McCormick added 13 before Fred hurtled himself over the line from one yard out on a fourth down play. Bamberry's magic toe upped the count to 14-6.

Gay Salvucci's forces refused to wilt, and stormed back into contention. Pete Schindler, a UM transfer, bulled his way for 37 yards to the UM 17. On the next play Dave O'Neill snared a Glogowski missile for the TD. A two point conversion attempt to knot the score failed and the much relieved Redmen were on the front end of a 14-12 count.

The UM gridders clinched the victory with the afternoon's final six pointer when Jim Hickman returned the kickoff for 31 yards to the Aces 45. Then Lussier galloped through the left side of his line and easily outdistanced the floundering AIC linebackers. Bamberry again converted to run the final score to 21-12.

EXTRA POINTS

For a while it appeared that the adage, "Lightning never strikes twice in the same place" would be disproved. Last season's home opener was a 7-6 conquest of the Aces. Again Saturday the Redmen were leading by the identical count with less than seven minutes left in the skirmish . . . The Redmen's solid, experienced line stymied the opposition, allowing them only seven net yards rushing . . . As did his predecessor, Chuck Studley, Fusia sported his beanie until his boys gave him the opportunity to throw it aloft. For a while we were fearful that he would be sporting the same head-dress for the Villanova contest . . . Right half-back Sam Lussier, the squad's leading ground gainer last season, showed he had no intention of relinquishing his title as he averaged 8.8 yards in 16 attempts.

LUSSIER GOES OVER FOR A T.D.

Sam Lussier, who played a great game for the Redmen, hurtles over the goal line for the final touchdown of the game. The touchdown culminated a drive from the 14 yard line, Sam and Jim Hickman providing the big blows in that final drive.

FREDDY LEWIS STOPPED

Freddy Lewis is stopped after a short gain through the tackle slot in Saturday's victory over A.I.C. The Sophomore flash had plenty of fans from Springfield in the stands to cheer him on.

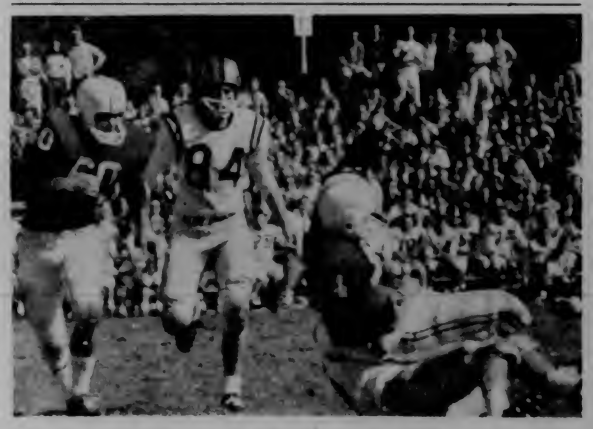
Is this the only reason for using Mennen Skin Bracer?

Skin Bracer's rugged, long-lasting aroma is an obvious attribute. But is it everything?

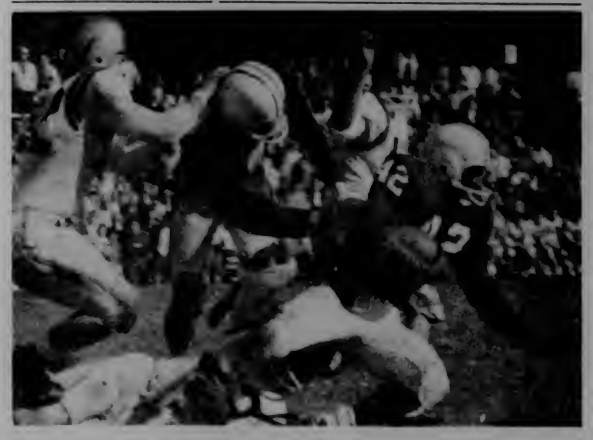
After all, Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the after-shave lotion that cools rather than burns. It helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Helps prevent blemishes. Conditions your skin.

Aren't these sound, scientific virtues more important than the purely emotional effect Skin Bracer has on women? In that case, buy a bottle. And—have fun.



PERDIGAO BROUGHT DOWN

Filling in for Ken Palm Saturday was Art Perdigao. Art filled the fullback slot to perfection and looked like a veteran as he rammed through the middle of the line on more than one occasion.



A LITTLE HELP

Freddy Lewis picked up seven yards on this one before he was brought down. The drive ended when Fred spun crazily in the air as he hurtled over the opposition to land in the end zone.

Mass de-CAPitation occurs in the traditional tossing of the beanies at the first UMass touchdown of the year. Coach Vic Fusia faithfully wore the beanie presented to him at the rally until the big score late in the third quarter. The air was filled with the long neglected beanies of exhuberant freshmen when Sam Lussier racked up the first tally of the game, but Coach Fusia had to be reminded to toss his away by a player. We can't imagine what made him forget.

Monsignor Lally Speaks At Newman Club Meeting

Tuesday night was the first Newman Club meeting, held in the Dining Commons at 7:30 p.m. Monsignor F. Lally, editor of the Boston Pilot, was the guest speaker.

Bob Savoy, president, announced that all students who knew James Mulcahy should drop Jim a line, as he welcomes mail. He was injured this summer and can be reached at the U. S. Marine Hospital in Seattle, Washington.

Monsignor Lally tried to clarify, for the students, the effect of the president's election on the Church in America.

He compared the image of the Catholic, Al Smith, of 1928 to the 1960 image of Catholic John Kennedy. Alfred Smith was a poor New Yorker, a politician who was an immigrant and a product of the New York Tammany machine. He spoke with a distinct accent.

Kennedy, said the Monsignor, is "the wealthiest man to live in the White House." He was educated in the better schools, and can readily adopt almost any accent. His father was a mayor of Boston.

What effect did the President's election have on church life? Not all Catholics voted for Kennedy. About as many voted for him as against him. Monsignor Lally said, "that without the immense Protestant and Jewish vote, he would have lost."

Some part of the Catholic press remained Republican. Because of Kennedy's religion, a wide exposure to the teachings and doctrines of the Catholic church was given to Americans by the New York Times. In 1960, America was a religiously neutral nation.

Mary Ellen Chase Will Be Featured At Hillel Lecture

MARY ELLEN CHASE

Mary Ellen Chase, distinguished author and Professor Emeritus of English Literature at Smith College, will speak on "The Book of Job," Tuesday, October 3, at 8 p.m. in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union. She is the first lecturer in the series "Moral Problems in Great Literature" sponsored by the Hillel Foundation.

Miss Chase was graduated from the University of Maine and took her Ph.D. degree in English Literature at the University of Minnesota. She then entered upon her career as a college professor.

From 1926 until her retirement in June, 1955, she was professor of English at Smith College, teaching courses in the English novel and the King James Bible as well as directing the work in Freshmen English.

After her retirement in 1955 she conducted two of the Radcliffe Seminars for adult education. Her subject was the Literature of the Old Testament.

In Northampton Miss Chase lives on the Smith College campus. She recently has completed a new book The Fishing Fleets of New England, which is to be published this fall.

Her best sellers include A Goodly Heritage (1932), Mary Peters (1934), Silas Crockett (1935), Windswept (1941), The Edge of Darkness (1957), and The Lovely Ambition (1960).

V.P. Primary Held; Senate Post Open

Primary elections for the office of Vice President of the classes of '63 and '64 were held yesterday. The voting was marked by a very light turnout of voters.

The Class of '63 nominated Joe DiMauro and Tony Lincoln for the October 10 elections, while the Class of '64 named John I. Yablonski and Carol Townsley. Yablonski and Miss Townsley were the only names on the '64 ballot.

The voting break-down follows:

Class of 1963

DiMauro	152
Goldstein	36
Doran	62
Lincoln	119
Golden	87
Concemi	64

Al Hero got 1 of 2 write-ins.

Class of 1964

Yablonski	145
Townsley	115

Scattered write-ins gathered 15 votes.

Nomination papers are still available at the RSO office for candidates for senator from dorms, sororities, fraternities, and commuters. The papers must be returned to RSO by 1 p.m. Friday.

Papers are also available for a senator-at-large from the Class of '64 at RSO. The same deadline of 1 p.m. Friday applies.

According to the Elections Committee, several constituencies have no candidates.

Of the four openings for commuters, only one person has so far taken out nomination papers. From Van Meter only one person has taken out papers though there are three senatorial posts open. No one has taken nomination papers from Baker which has two openings.

The same situation prevails for Chadbourne which also has two openings. Arnold also has two posts open, and only one person has taken papers.

Tickets For 'Oklahoma!' Available At Box Office

Richard Rodgers and the late Oscar Hammerstein II

Tickets for the fall production of "Oklahoma!" by the Operetta Guild went on sale today at 10 a.m. at the S.U. Box Office. All seats will be reserved, and may be ordered by calling the box office at ALpine 3-3411.

"Oklahoma!" continues a long association with the musical team of Rodgers and Hammerstein beginning with the Guild's production of "Carousel" in 1954. "South Pacific" was presented in 1956, and most recently, "Pipe Dream" in '58.

Team Honored

Shortly after the week-long run of "Carousel", the University honored composer Richard Rodgers and librettist Oscar Hammerstein II at a Spring Convocation. There before an estimated crowd of 4000, Governor Christian A. Herter read a citation praising the two for their "development of a fresh theatrical form, the musical play" and for their "recognition of the value of theatre in education". The two also became alumni of the University by accepting the honorary degree Doctor of Humane Letters.

Alviani Directed Program

The ceremony took place at the University on the 11th anniversary of the New York premiere of "Oklahoma!" which opened on Broadway March 31, 1943. It also marked the first time these men had received an honoray degree as a team. This Convocation program was directed by Professor Doric Alviani, Head of the Music Department, and director of the upcoming "Oklahoma!" on campus.

A display of letters, articles, copies of the citation and of the main address which was delivered by Elliot Norton, drama critic of the Boston*Post*, will be on display in Goodell Library until showtime, October 18, 19, 20, and 21st.

I.F.C. Forms Rush Committee To Organize New Fraternity

The Interfraternity Council yesterday released information on the formation of an IFC Rush Committee which will attempt to form a new fraternity on campus.

The IFC move was supported by Dean of Men, Robert S. Hopkins Jr., and Assistant Registrar William Starkweather. For the complete text of their letters, see page three of today's Collegian.

The IFC statement follows:

"Today the Interfraternity Council officially announced the inauguration of a new program, unique on this campus and perhaps unique in the history of fraternities. Acting on the recommendations of the recently formed IFC Expansion Committee, the Fraternity Presidents' Assembly authorized the formation of an IFC Rush Committee for the expressed purpose of actively soliciting the formation of a new fraternal group on this campus.

"Many people have already inquired into the motives behind this action. The crux of the matter is that the fraternity system must expand more rapidly than it has been in the past in order to keep up with our rapidly growing University. We feel that the best method of reaching this goal is to bring various interested groups together in a series of smokers in the hope that we may help generate the spark of enthusiasm and comradeship upon which each new fraternity is initially based.

"The successful operation of these smokers will be the responsibility of the Rush Committee. By promoting fraternities in general as institutions that serve so well in rounding out the education of any college man, we hope to find a group of enterprising non-fraternity men who will have enough pioneering spirit to accept the challenge and create their own fraternity. In short the Interfraternity Council is seeking a body of men who will take advantage of the opportunties for unequaled experiences in leadership and responsibility that are involved in the formation of a new organization."

$15,000 Grant Is Given To Nursing

The UMass School of Nursing has received a $15,000 grant from the National Mental Health Institute for the sixth consecutive year, it was announced by President John W. Lederle.

According to Miss Mary A. Maher, dean of the School of Nursing, the grant is made to a limited number of collegiate schools of nursing for the purpose of integrating mental health concepts into the entire nursing program. During the past six years the School has concentrated on training nurses to give care for the "total" person. The "total" person concept recognizes the fact that people who are physically ill are also under mental stress.

A portion of the grant money is used to provide books on the subject of clinical psychiatric nursing. The major part of the grant is used for personnel.

At present, the School of Nursing has on hand a qualified mental health nurse working with faculty members to integrate psychiatric material into basic courses.

In addition, a faculty member teaches psychiatric nursing to student nurses working on problems of the mentally ill.

Receipt of the grant of another year enables the University to continue preparing qualified nurses for the understaffed area of psychiatric nursing.

New Policy Benefits Talented UMass Frosh

An "open door" policy for talented freshmen at UMass is making big educational gains—and the state's secondary schools are getting a major share of the credit.

The policy, now in its fourth year of operation, permits entering students to by-pass basic courses and go on to advanced work if they show they are well-prepared to do so.

Class of '65 Scores High

This year's class of 1850 freshmen, largest ever to enter, scored high in the number of such advanced placements, and Dean of Students William F. Field today praised the secondary schools for "what is certainly one of the best-prepared classes ever to enter the University."

The dean noted that some 1280 placements were made after careful screening of students through testing and faculty interviews. By-passing of basic courses was most frequent in foreign languages, speech, mathematics, English composition, zoology, and chemistry.

"While exact comparisons with other classes are not now available, this year's placements represent a very high percentage in terms of our own expectations, the dean said.

"And since we are talking here about entering students, a great deal of credit must go to the secondary schools for the work they have done in preparing our freshmen."

Many From Small Schools

Dean Field said that he is particularly impressed with the many superior freshmen who have come from small high schools where in most cases there are no special honors programs.

"We can only conclude that these students must have had some excellent instruction in one or more classes conducted by first-rate teachers."

Reporting on a follow-up study of the advanced placement program, the dean said that accelerated students "clearly show that they do well in all respects."

1961 Index Given A- Rating; Cited For Big Improvement

by ANN MILLER '64

The National School Yearbook Association of Columbia, Missouri recently sent the UMass Index their score sheet and critique for 1961. The Association judges each school's yearbook and rates it, according to the classification and size of the school. The 1961 Index was given a composite score of A- and a comment of "excellent, much improved . . . One of the most improved yearbooks of 1961!"

According to the judges: "This book shows some work, some planning, and a sincere effort to tell the full story of UMass to your readers. It represents one of the biggest jumps in grading we have seen for a long time. The book gives the complete story, with some outstanding pictures, especially the color shots . . . Congratulations on an excellent production."

Editor-in-chief of the '61 Index was Hugh B. Calkin; business manager, John Sweeney; managing editor, Anne Doane; photography editor, Donald Witkoski. Advisors included Albert Madeira, Bill Deminoff and his staff of the University News Office,, Mr. Buck, and Ross Farnham of William J. Keller Publishers.

UMass and the Boston Press

The people of Maine are proud of their state University. Open up the newspaper in any big city in the Black Bear State and you'll find articles about the University of Maine, despite the fact that such wealthy, big-name colleges as Bowdoin, Bates and Colby are also competing for headlines. Maine residents are kept informed about their state University and support it wholeheartedly.

This condition does not exist in Massachusetts. The University of Massachusetts contains more Massachusetts residents in fulltime study than does any other institution of higher learning in the state. Yet, to look in any Boston paper, one would hardly know that a State University even existed here.

Of course, UMass has more competition than its Maine counterpart. Instead of only three wealthy private colleges in the state, UMass, 100 miles from Boston, must vie for space with seven large, wealthy, private colleges in the Hub area. The fact that these seven private colleges are in Boston and the University is in far away Amherst, does not constitute to us a valid reason for press negligence.

The parents, friends and relatives of 7000 UMass students are interested in finding out about what's going on at the University. What other college in the state offers such a large potential circulation to the Boston papers?

Yet, with the notable exception of the Globe, Hub newspapers have failed Massachusetts citizens. Sad proof of the disservice of Boston newspapers to Bostonians is the fact that there are many people who still think that their state institution of higher learning is nothing more than an agricultural school.

On news and sports pages alike there is the same obvious void in coverage. We can read all about out-of-state colleges—colleges that are of little importance to Boston readers. Pick up a Boston newspaper, turn to the Sports pages, for example, and see if there aren't at least half a dozen stories about colleges from New York to California. But can we find a story about our own State University? Rarely, if ever!

Sticking to the Sports pages, because they offer the most flagrant examples of the negligence of the Boston papers, let us look at a case in point. In one Boston Sunday newspaper we can find four-inch stories on Cobly College, Bridgeport, Maine, and Rhode Island. There is even a huge 10-inch lead story on the Yale-UConn football game. But is there a story—even a list of the statistics—about the UMass game? The only place we can find the UMass score is by looking in the long list of football scores of teams all over the country. And that list, by the way, is compiled by the wire services, not by the Boston papers! So we can see that if it weren't for the efficient work of the Associated Press, the UMass score wouldn't have been printed at all.

It's about time for the Boston papers to stop cow-towing to the wealthy private institutions around them. They owe it to the citizens of this state to report as accurately about UMass as they do about Harvard and B.U. At least we deserve as much of a story as Bridgeport College! Perhaps the day will come when the University of Massachusetts is considered by the newspapers in its own state Capitol to rate as much attention on its Sports pages as the University of Connecticut.

To the Editor:

In last Wednesday's lead story I was quoted as saying that it would be advisable for freshman not to run for the Senate, but to participate in committee work. I had two reasons for this opinion, unfortunately based on my own experience:

1) Freshman are not familiar with the different aspects of college life which will be filling their time, and do not know with certainty what degree of extra-curricular and curricular responsibilities they will be able to handle.

2) Should their marks suffer, Freshmen do not have the security of a previous cumulative average of fall back on.

The fact is that while none of the upper-class Senators flunked out last year, only two of three Freshmen who were in the Senate in October managed to stay in school, and frankly, with a dangerously low average.

While some Freshmen can (and have in the past) been able to make both their curricular and extra-curricular activities compatible, no Freshman really knows with certainty that he can do this until he has experienced a respectable portion of campus life. Without this knowledge, a Freshman entering the Senate is taking a completely unnecessary gamble with his future. By going to work on a Senate committee (as a non-Senator) a Freshman can get all the Student Government experience he wants without obligating himself to more than he can handle. Then, with a safe average and an ability to schedule his activities he can run for the Senate at the end of his first year and still look forward to three rewarding and enjoyable years as a Senator.

In the hopes of preventing other Freshmen from taking the same unnecessary risks we did, Senator Della Penna and myself have deliberately made our academic difficulties public. Unfortunately, it has come to my attention that the Collegian article concerning us not only discouraged Freshmen, but also some qualified upperclassmen who are sorely needed in the ranks of the Senate.

The sorry fact that I was not able to make my curricular and extra-curricular responsibilities compatible is no indication whatsoever that this would hold true for upperclassmen. When and if Senate duties have interfered unreasonably with studies, it has been because the Senator concerned just didn't know where to draw the line. In plain words, he didn't know how to schedule his time. Any student who has been here for a year or more should not have this problem and therefore has no cause, on these grounds, to hesitate to run for the Student Senate.

More Al Hero

To the Editor:

A recent editorial on the political activities of "Al Hero" seems to have aroused the ire of candidate Joe Campus.

After two years on campus, Joe has learned well how to divide his time between academics and extra-curricular activities. This experience will enable Joe to devote the necessary time to properly execute the duties of the office he seeks without lowering his cume.

So Joe Campus begins his campaign. Knowing that it is impossible to contact every voting class member personally, or even a majority of them, to explain his ideas and qualifications, Joe is forced to resort to the old poster board method of spreading the news of his candidacy. He next enlists the aid of his closest friends, and since Joe is in a fraternity, these close friends are his fraternity brothers. His brothers and others who believe Joe will make a good officer help him make his "400,000" posters. Is this aid a reason to assault Joe's intentions or condemn the fraternity system? Surely if Joe lived in a dormitory and recruited assistance from everyone on his floor, no editor would attack the dormitory system!

Right about here you are probably expecting a stunning rebuttal of the misuse of campus communication media. Well, I won't disappoint you. Year after year campus leaders call for more student participation in campus politics and activities, and yet because most of the student men volunteers are fraternity members willing to donate their time and experience, certain editors feel compelled to besiege the fraternity system.

Fraternities on a campus growing in size as fast as ours are facing the problem of expansion. As the number of students grows, so will the number of fraternity men. Fraternities will continue to furnish the leadership needed in student activties, despite unwarranted attacks by individuals.

The fraternity may encourage and enthuse Joe Campus to run for political office; but Joe is ready to assume the responsibility, and the initiative is his. It is too bad that other well-qualified men capable of holding office are not so encouraged, and this talent goes to waste. This is a problem not confined to the campus, but to the country as a whole. For providing this encouragement fraternities should be praised, not chastised. This lack of encouragement elsewhere leads to bitter outspoken so-called campus leaders who misuse our communication media!

Nowadaze at UMass

by MARCIA ANN VOIKOS '63

There was plenty of action at Friday night's rally and dance at the Student Union—all the "twisters" danced up a storm to a steady stream of rock 'n' roll by Tex and the Corvettes.

This was a good show and provided the entertainment and spirit many students anticipated—in fact, one exuberant freshman declared, "This is the best time I've had since I've been here."

And the spirit was good at the game the next day—let's hope it continues—on the other hand, we feel that spirit and enthusiasm should be consistent—not only for when the team wins, but when it loses—that's when it's needed, agree?

Phi Sigma Kappa was swingin' Sunday afternoon as the brothers staged a successful jazz concert—to the cool sounds of Tony Mercurio and his five-piece band, everyone fell into a sociable mood and mixed right in—this "mixer" was well-handled and made new-comers feel welcome.

On the other hand, Ted Bernard, vice-president of the House and chairman of the event, had this to say—

"There was good attendance from the students, but a poor showing from the administration. We sent personal invitations to nine—but got only two answers back. Frankly, I was disappointed."

The purpose of the jazz concert was to contribute to campus activities and, perhaps, encourage other fraternities and sororities to "pull off similar capers."

The classic look in women's clothing still retains its popularity on campus—neat skirts in tweeds and plaids with knee socks in complementary colors—oxford blouses and cardigan sweaters—the loafer is still the most popular shoe with the sneaker running a close second.

Among the men—chino pants and shirts in conservative prints or solids—huge, bulky sweaters and—sneakers. Yet, the dungaree and sweatshirt crowd looks just at home as anyone else.

Signs of good talent in the Music Room at the Student Union nowadays—seems to be a popular place—particularly for those interested in jazz.

Senate elections are coming up—enthusiasm and competition is keen already, especially among the girls—while many in the past have made "names" for themselves, including last year's Woman-Of-The-Year, Gail Osbaldeston, the list of would-be candidates for the coming year looks promising, too—nomination papers are available now at the Senate Office.

Hope everyone made the scene to hear "Taj Mahal" and his men outside the Commons last week. Quite a crowd!—Music is a drawing card anywhere—Taj played the guitar and led the cats in singing some of the day's popular numbers, including "Michael" and "In The Still Of The Night", among others.

DIG THIS by ed rodriguez '62

From the Summer Session News:

Well, what do you think? Is music better or worse than it was a decade or two ago? A matter of taste I suppose . . . nevertheless, I am inclined to believe that there has been a lot of chameleon-like activity going on in the music world since most Umies first discovered the 45. Oldtimers like Bing Crosby have virtually conceded to the electric guitar, bongo drum, echo chamber, and Fabian tonsils.

Look at this! Ten years ago, the principal record labels were COLUMBIA, CAPITOL, DECCA, MERCURY, etc. A quick somersault and we now find labels—if you may call them that—such as STARK, FLIP, SMASH, FURY, and various other sophisticated tags.

There has also been a culturization of record titles as seen by a look at the top tunes of the week five years ago today which were as follows: MY PRAYER . . I WANT YOU, I NEED YOU . . I ALMOST LOST MY MIND . . WAYWARD WIND . . WHATEVER WILL BE WILL BE . . ALLEGHENY MOON.

Now a look at top tunes in a few of the major American cities this past week along with the artists . . ARTISTS?
PITTSBURGH: STICK SHIFT—The Duals, SAN FRANCISCO: SINCE GARY WENT INTO THE ARMY—Marcy Jo, NEWARK: SONG OF NAIROBI TRIO—Fortune Tellers, BOSTON: COME ON AND GET IT — Maurice Williams, HOUSTON: DOES YOUR CHEWING GUM LOSE ITS FLAVOR—Lonnie Donnegan.

Music lovers . . . take heart! Howard Barlowe says that the music in the U.S. has surpassed that of all countries. He says that there are over twelve hundred symphony orchestras in this country . . . I wonder if he included Duane Eddy, The Electras, or The Northern Lights?

Administration Supports I.F.C. Fraternity Proposal

Hopkins—All Possible Assistance To Group

"Over the past few years, the fraternity system at the University, though maintaining its strength, has been decreasing the percentage of membership, in spite of the fact that fraternity men occupy many prominent positions on campus. The ultimate is the possibility that the system as we now know it may disappear entirely from the face of the campus.

"Personally, I regret this likelihood exceedingly for in spite of some shortcomings—and what group does not have them?—I maintain that fraternities have a place in an institution such as ours.

"Therefore I am very pleased to support fully the move of the Fraternity Presidents' Assembly to develop a new fraternity on campus at once. Such an action will cause a considerable amount of competition for the existing fraternities but I don't know of anything that is better for a group than good, clean, honest, forthright competition. I shall do all in my power to encourage a brisk spirit and I shall do all that I possibly can to assist the new group in getting started on the right foot and continuing to prosper in all the positive things for which fraternities stand.

"If it is determined at a later time that this group should affiliate with a national organization, I will be glad to assist the members in meeting the best nationals which are interested in expanding in our area. Whether or not it becomes a national affiliate is, in my firm opinion, a matter for the group itself to decide. There are many things to be said on both sides of such an affiliation.

"If the new group is composed of alert and eager young men, as I hope it will be, they will be a credit to the campus in every respect and certainly will add tremendous strength to the fraternity system. I think that they will make the other fraternities hustle and run and this is all to the good.

"I wish the activity success."

'No Group Comes Closer To The Realization of Fraternity Goals Than A Newly Formed One...'

by WILLIAM C. STARKWEATHER, Assistant Registrar

To the person who has studied the dimly marked path to happiness, it sooner or later becomes apparent that this elusive and quixotic state is a mirage. What appears to be the goal is actually the pathway — the satisfaction and pleasure is in the striving and the yearning. Once the goal is attained, the happiness has left it and is only to be found through the establishment of new aims and ideals. So it is, in a general way, with fraternities. The group that "has arrived"—that is well established, housed, and has adequate manpower—while providing some good experiences through the day by day task of existing, cannot (unless it establishes new and exciting goals) provide half the experience to be obtained from the conception, development, and perfection of a new group.

The real aims of fraternities are mostly abstract. As such, they are seldom completely realized and difficult to describe. I doubt that men would join any group because its stated aim was the "development of personalities, and of persons who have learned to live with idealism and respon sibility". Yet these are the goals and rewards of fraternity participation and the amount these goals are realized is, obviously, directly proportional to a participant's active involvement.

No group comes closer to the realization of these goals than a newly formed one, for success in the establishment of a strong group is directly related to the proportional involvement of the total membership.

Curiously enough, many fraternities are formed by students who "don't like fraternities"—students who think existing fraternities are missing the boat and who want a group that can do better. This kind of dissatisfaction with the status quo and this aggressive and pioneering approach should typify the student to whom the New-Fraternity ideal will appeal. I doubt that the "studiously casual" Esquire-stylized Joe College freshman will become involved in this project, for it would involve rolling the sleeves way up and disturbing the stereotype he wishes to present to the world. But some adventuresome students will be interested, and theirs will be a rewarding and exciting experience.

The role of the I.F.C. in this undertaking is that of a catalyst. It will attempt to foster the conditions under which friendship may ripen into fellowship. Each fraternity is "loaning" two of its most enthusiastic members to the I.F.C. committee. Together ,these men, versed in fraternities and far-sighted enough to think of the fraternity system above their individual preferences—will act as a "foster membership". Their aim will be to locate a group of compatible students and, as soon as possible, to help them set up their own organization. Where the usual rushing programs are "house centered" and try to establish a rapport between the present members and the prospective members with each other, this house will, of necessity, be "rushee-centered." In a gradual way, new members will assume a voice in the selection of additional members and control of the group.

Working with the Rush Committee will be the I.F.C. Executive Committee and a New Fraternity Faculty Adviser, Mr. Dan Melley '55, former Adelphian and I.F.C. President. This is a wholly new venture for all of us. There is no formula to follow because I do not believe it has been done anywhere else. It promises to be an exciting project for all involved.

FROSH CROSS COUNTRY DEFEATS COAST GUARD

by BUZ HOWELL '64

The Frosh Cross Country squad left little room for improvement in its decisive sweep over Coast Guard at Hartford, Saturday, in which UMass sent all eight men over the line ahead of its opponents.

The victors were paced by Tom Panke of Feeding Hills, who set a blistering 17:01 time record for the course, a faster than five minute mile pace for the uphill course. Following in rapid-fire succession were Bill Young of New Bedford, Robert Ramsey of Brockton, John Lavoie of Fitchburg, Richard Lavoie of Lakeville, Charles Sission of Needham, Alex MacPhail of Wellesley Hills, and Armand Millette of Leominster, the resulting team scores, in which points are awarded to the first five finishers of each team in order of finish, were a perfect fifteen for UMass to the Coast Guard's maximum fifty.

This Saturday the UMass team will vie to leave another team by the wayside when it tours to Boston to face its Northeastern counterparts. After two day's rest, the team is slated to meet Springfield in another away match.

The following are Saturday's results:

1. Tom Panki, UMass	17:01
2. Bill Young, UMass	17:09
3. Robert Ramsey, UMass	17:40
4. John Lavoie, UMass	17:54
5. Richard Lavoie, UMass	17:54
6. Charles Sission, UMass	18:03
7. Alex MacPhail, UMass	18:05
8. Armand Millette, UMass	18:21
9. Joe Coleman, CG	18:54
10. Joe Carrol, CG	29:32
11. Rizk Johnson, CG	20:06
12. Steve Kneeszewski, CG	21:32

This fall anyone interested in archery may come over to the WPE Building and shoot for her dorm or sorority. This competition will be held on Oct. 10, 11, 17, and 18 between 4 and 5:45 p.m. In case there are more than two girls the two highest scores will be accepted as the team scores. All score sheets should be turned into Miss Hubbard at the WPE or Nan Nichols at Leach House. Also, anyone interested in shooting for fun or practice may do so every Tues. and Wed. at the same hours.

All those interested in field hockey may come to the WPE Fields on Mon.-Thurs. from 5:00-6:00 p.m. There will be some stickwork and practice games, with special help for beginners. Anyone who has played hockey as well as those who haven't should come over—everyone will have a chance to play. A team is also chosen to play against other colleges in this area.

by DICK MACKLEM '62

The most interesting sports editorial of the past week comes from the "New York Times" concerning the future of the Knicks, New York's entry in the National Basketball Association. Last year the Knicks were by far the weakest team in the league, but that seemed to be just because of a lack of talent and nothing more. However, at the Knick's pre-season camp at Upsala College in New Jersey, Willia Naulls, the team's leading scorer and rebounder, was quoted thus: "I was totally embarrassed on the court last year. As a team we cheated the fans. We deserve to be booed."

Prospects Not Hopeful

Prospects weren't very hopeful for this season either because only six players of last year's ten returned for practice sessions last month. The big names of the Knicks, Kenny Sears and Carl Braun, were not present. However, under the watchful eye of new coach Eddie Donavan, who for the past few seasons has had such amazing teams at St. Bonaventure, the Knicks seem to be surprising a few people.

Returning from last year's squad are Richie Gueren, Johnny Green, Darrall Imhoff, Phil Jordon, Dave Budd, and Naulls. The biggest problem seems to be the lack of a team leader, a man who can sacrifice himself to steady the club. Richie Gueren, the All-Star guard, is a high scorer and racehorse, and someone must be found to complement him. New England fans have interest in this because one of the four rookies battling for the position is George Planey, the former co-captain and playmaker of the Holy Cross Crusaders. We doubt very much that Blaney is of NBA caliber; it should be interesting to watch.

Coach Donavan says, "We're all going to try to think alike. We want to run, get the ball down fast, and then be able to know what to do with it." Let's hope the Knicks can get together as a respectable club, because to survive the NBA needs a team in New York. Another year like last year would totally destroy fan interest in the team and put the franchise in jeopardy.

Bruins Gypped

During the last National Hockey League draft meeting, the Boston Bruins gave the Chicago Blackhawks $20,000 for penalty-killing specialist Earl Balfour. To make room for him on their "protected" roster, they dropped the high scoring veteran Bronco Horvath from the list. Chicago promptly drafted Bronco, finishing what in all reality constituted a trade.

However, over the past weekend, Balfour left the Bruins and returned to his home in Toronto saying, "I guess I was looking for an out, an excuse to quit hockey." Because of the manner in which the trade was completed, the Bruins are going to be left holding the bag if they can't settle their difficulties with Mr. knew that Balfour didn't want to Balfour. Whether or not Chicago play remains to be seen, but it is going to be a long winter watching old favorite Bronco playing for the Blackhawks, knowing the Bruins have no one to replace him with if Balfour stays home.

Bruins' Lineup

Here's a little inside information on the B's Roster. Their opening game is Oct. 11th versus the Rangers. Look for the goalie to be rookie Don Head, who has only one year of professional experience behind him. The lines shape up like this: Doug Mohns—Cliff Pennington — John Bucyk; Don McKenney—Orland Kurtenbach — Jerry Toppazzini; and Terry Gray — Murray Oliver—Andre Pronovost; with Charlie Burns and Dick Meissner killing penalties.

How much of you saw the last quarter of the Colts and Vikings game on television last Sunday? The NFL is so correct when they state that their league can't be beaten in professional sports for the drama and tension. Watching Johnny Unitas, Raymond Berry and Lennie Moore in operation is enough in itself, but to see Steve Mysha kick his winning field goal was perfection. With the ball on the Vikings' 45-yd. line still going up when it went over the bar, to win the game for the Colts. A good approximation of how far the ball traveled in the air is 70-75 yards. Quite an art!

Seeing that my batting average on predictions stands slightly lower than zero, there's nothing to lose in trying the World Series. Let's say the Yankees in six, with men like Johnny Blanchard, Tony Kubek and Bud Daley showing just how good the Bombers really are.

Quotable Quote

University of Massachusetts football coach Vic Fusia sounded like a man who has just received word a herd of wooly mammoths had been sighted on route 116 heading for the campus.

"They have two and one-half teams worth of good football players," he said. "The simplicity of their attack is frightening. They have two fine quarterbacks and four of everything else."

"They" is the Villanova football team, winner of three straight, conqueror of Holy Cross and on the schedule for a game of ball Saturday at UMass.

ASP, TKE, QTV Win While TEP Triumphs Over AEPi

by JAY BAKER '63

In Monday night's opener, TEP downed the men from AEPi 12-6. This was a hard fought contest as the Teppers and Sunset Strip men proved to be well matched teams.

TEP won the pre-game toss and elected to receive. After a few plays which moved the ball within striking distance of AEPi's goal, quarterback Charlie Gorden handed off to halfback Bob Schwartz who whipped a bullet pass to fleetfooted end Larry Bernstein who made a diving catch for the touchdown. The point after was unsuccessful. During the remainder of the half TEP dominated the game and came within inches of scoring several times.

In the second half after only a few minutes of play AEPi got off a long pass which was caught by end Dick Kleiman who was immediately tagged by Murray Kaplan. Then after three unsuccessful plays Steve Forman ran around end for the AEPi score. In the point after attempt Bob Schwartz tagged the quarterback before he had time to release the ball.

TEP's last and tie-breaking score was made with less than a minute remaining. Three double reverse plays in a row plus a long pass to Howie Alperin set up the game winning touchdown. Marcy Korn took the snap from center faked to the right and fired a bullet to Sol Yas who dove to his right to haul it in. Ray Berry style. The final score in the 1961 Nose Bose game was TEP 12, AEPi 6.

ASP TOPS AGR

In another early clash Alpha Sig beat Alpha Gam 13-6 to remain undefeated in IFC competition. AGR drew first blood early in the game on a long touchdown pass, but ASP came right back on the kickoff as Joe Devaux ran the length of the field to tie the score at 6-6. Bill Boyle provided the winning margin for the Alpha Sigs as he intercepted a pass and ran thirty yards to paydirt. Boyle took a pass from quarterback Jack O'Brien for the extra point, and the final score was 13-6. This was ASP's third straight win, having beaten PSD 25-6 and ATG 7-6 in previous games this season.

TKE RIPS PSD 34-0

In the late Monday night games TKE ripped through PSD by a hefty 34-0 score. Almost as soon as the game commenced quarterback Charly Noble threw a long pass to end Eddie Mintiens for the touchdown. The point after was good as Noble passed to his left and hit Ted Osetek. Eight plays later John Ottavani fired to end Dave Bates who scooted down the sidelines for the score. The point was successful on a pass play from Noble to Makie. The halftime score was 14-0 in favor of TKE.

The second half was almost a replica of the first and then some. TKE opened with a few fast pass plays, the topper a pass to Dave Bates from quarterback Noble. No point after was made. After a few minute Eddie Mintiens scooted around his right end and down the sidelines for his second score. Jim Duggin caught the point after. The final touchdown of the game came when John Ottavani sidearmed a pass to hit Makie in the end zone. Owen Tabb caught the final point. Final score TKE 34 PSD 0.

QTV STOPS SPE

In Monday night's final game QTV held Sig Ep scoreless as it won 12-0. Frank Pisiewski was the star in this contest as he score all the points for QTV. In the first half Frank ran down the sidelines being helped by one good block from Kim McDonald.

In the second half he duplicated his feat by running off tackle with some nice help from center Dick Doran. Both tries for the point after were unsuccessful.

Ed Cass sparkled on defense for Sig Ep as their offense just couldn't get rolling. Final score was QTV 12 SPE 0.

A 6'2" senior from Northampton, BOB FOOTE has lettered for two years and will see action as a starter this year. Bob performed well during the AIC game and showed the speed and desire that he has. He was named to the ECAC team twice during his sophomore year.

JIM HICKMAN, a 5'9" senior from Boston, lettered as a sophomore and junior and will see plenty of action this fall. Jim has already illustrated his speed and shifty legwork and will probably do some of the punting this fall. Jim is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

J. D.'s CORNER

by JUDY DICKSTEIN '63

Hi! J.D. back again. Today I'm going to show you that some perfectly ridiculous things can happen to just anyone . . . any day. Like this morning: I received a letter postmarked Richmond, Virginia. Now, I don't know a single person in that part of the country (least of all any children, for the handwriting reminded me of that of a 10-year-old.) So I eagerly slit open the envelope and unfolded a sheet of paper which read (in full):

"Come to Richmond Virginia to hear a Revival service, Judy this is thy new friend Robert Raynes 18 East Main, Richmond, Va. Come if ye can, if not answer this in thy spare time & if ye have a little picture of you, send the picture. I have never been married so write to me & send a picture or description of your church & I will do the same & pray for us"

Brothers and sisters, come and be saved!

Now, I've never heard of Robert Raynes, and as for where he got my name and address . . . well, your guess is as good as mine. (Incidentally, if any of you doubt the veracity of this episode, I'll be glad to show you the letter and postmarked envelope.)

Well, after pondering over the letter all day, I decided that I had to take some positive action. So I've just written a letter to my "new friend." I sent my regrets at being unable to come to Richmond, Va. at present to hear a Revival service, and I politely asked where he got my address. Not knowing whether to address him as "thee" or "ye", I took the liberty of using "you" . . . I hope he won't be offended. I added that I would appreciate an immediate reply, so when I receive an answer I'll let you all in on the latest details. Meanwhile, if any of you readers are interested in being "saved", or . . . Revived . . . or whatever, ye may write to thy new friend, with my blessings. Only, please, don't tell him that J.D. sent you.

FULBRIGHT DEADLINE NEARS

Fulbright applications are now available for interested senior students who desire to do graduate study abroad for the 1962-1963 academic year.

Since competition is keen, applications should be submitted only by students who have excellent scholastic records. All applicants should consult with their respective major field Department Head when filling out the application.

Information is available at the Office of Placement and Financial Aid Services in South College. The deadline for completed applications to be returned to the Placement Office is Tuesday, Oct. 17.

The University Board of Scholarships and Study Abroad exercises the responsibility of forwarding the most promising applications to the Institute for International Education for the final awarding.

UM Poll Shows O'Connor Second Voter Preference

A UMass political science team headed by Richard A. Baker '62, released the outcome of a poll among Springfield voters that showed the present major, Thomas J. OConnor, to be second in voter preference as of Oct. 2.

The team's project sampled opinion in every Springfield precinct over a 10 day period, according to the report.

The committee stated that the poll-taking would be continued right up to preliminary election day in an effort to take account of any last-minute shifts in voting trends. When the official returns are in, the student group plans to analyze them and make a report on the results of its project.

The standings as tabulated were: Tuller first, with 20.5 per cent of the vote; O'Connor second, with 19.3 per cent; Register of Deeds John Pierce Lynch, with 17.5 per cent; Charles V. Ryan, Jr., with 16 per cent; State Rep. Armand N. Tancrati, with 8.9 per cent; all others combined, 11.9 per cent; undecided, 5.9 per cent.

Methods similar to those used by public opinion surveys were used, according to the report. Each voter polled was first asked whether he intended to vote for a candidate for mayor in the Oct. 10 preliminary. If the answer was "yes" the voter was then given a card listing the names of the nine candidates for mayor in the order they will appear on the ballot, and asked to check which one of the nine he would vote for if the election was held that day.

Reasons Sought

An attempt was made, it was added, to select voters for questioning in direct proportion to the total number of voters of the same religious, ethnic, political and economic background.

Every fourth person polled was asked to give reasons for his preference. Most frequently heard reasons for voting for Tuller were, "He's a Republican," or "He'll clean up the Welfare Department," or "It's time for a change."

O'Connor voters gave as reasons for their support, "He's done a good job," "He's for the little man," or "He's helping the homeowners."

Those checking Lynch's name commented. "He's got a good record" and "He'll know what to do at City Hall."

Most frequently heard reasons for choosing Ryan were "He knows all about Plan A" and "He'll help business." Tancrati's "political experience" and maturity" were cited by his supporters.

National Poetry Contest Open to Juniors, Seniors

Any junior or senior college student is eligible for a free style poetry contest ending November 5, the National Poetry Association has announced.

There is no limitation as to form or theme. However, shorter works are preferred by the Board of Judges.

Each poem must be typed or printed on a separate sheet, and must bear the name, home address and college of the student

The winning poems will be published in the College Students' Poetry Anthology.

The Association is also inviting teachers and librarians to submit poetry manuscripts for consideration for inclusion in the Annual Teachers' Anthology.

Manuscripts from students and teachers should be sent to the Offices of The Association, National Poetry Association, 3210 Selby Avenue, Los Angeles 34, California before January 1.

Beloff To Be First Lecturer Under Grant to Gov't. Dept.

Dr. Max Beloff, Gladstone Professor of Government and Public Administration at Oxford University will give a major public lecture at UMass on Tuesday, Oct. 10, at 4 p.m., in the Commonwealth Room of the S.U.

Prof. Beloff will be one of several prominent national and international figures lecturing at the University under a Sperry and Hutchinson Company Lectureship grant to the government department, it was announced today by President John W. Lederle. In addition to the University lecture, Dr. Beloff will speak at Smith College on Oct. 11 at 8 p.m. in Sage Hall.

The British professor is currently at the Brookings Institution in Washington studying United States foreign policy. He is mainly concerned with the reasons behind U.S. efforts during the last 15 years to persuade the European nations to unite politically and economically. Author of 11 volumes dealing with history and political science, the well-known authority has also edited several other books and has taught at a number of institutions.

Prof. Beloff and the other experts visiting UMass will give lectures dealing with American foreign policy during the first year of the Kennedy Administration. The visitors will analyze American foreign policy toward Europe, the Middle East, Africa, south and southeast Asia. Emphasis will be placed upon some of the most important problems facing the President and State Department during the 1960's.

Presentation of the lectureship program will provide Connecticut Valley students with a knowledge of some of the economic, political, and social developments affecting current U.S. foreign policy. Some of the lecturers are scheduled to give public talk, speak' before several classes, and confer informally with both students and faculty at the University. In addition, several of them will speak at one of the other colleges in the area—Amherst, Mount Holyoke, or Smith.

Ed. Building To Be Open To Public

The new School of Education building at UMass will be open for public inspection each Saturday in October, it was announced today by Dr. Albert W. Purvis, dean of the school.

One of the finest facilities of its kind in the country, the building consists of a main section for the University's teacher training program and an adjoining wing which houses the Mark's Meadow Laboratory School. The latter is a 300-pupil elementary school used in conjunction with the regular program of the School of Education.

Visitors will be able to view the modern classrooms, library, and other facilities in the main section as well as the closed-circuit of TV equipment, observation galleries, and classrooms in the Mark's Meadow School.

Open house will be held from 9 a.m. to 12 noon each Saturday. The October dates coincide with the University's High School Guest Days when students, guidance officers, and parents from various parts of the state will visit the campus.

On each visiting day there will be guided tours for teachers, school administrators and other interested persons.

Four Colleges Will Renew Non-Western Curricula

As classes resume at UMass, Smith, Mount Holyoke, and Amherst, the special Four-college program of courses in non-western studies enters its second year of operations. The program is sponsored under a 1959 grant from the Ford Foundation's Fund for Advancement of Education.

Visiting Specialists

Underwritten for some $190,000 by the Foundation, the enterprise is designed to operate over a period of three years. It brings to the Four Colleges specialists on Africa, the Near East, and Southern Asia as visiting professors to give courses and lectures and to assist in developing stronger curricula in non-western studies.

The program under the direction of a committee of Four-College Faculty members had 52 students attend an opening lecture this week at Mount Holyoke.

Courses and Texts

Courses in the program include studies of the Middle East, French Africa south of the Sahara, the Art of India, two courses dealing with South-East Asia, and a course of instruction in the Arabic language.

The Foundation grant is also being used to improve the libraries of the co-operating colleges. There is an appropriation of $2500 per year to each school for the purchase of books dealing with topics related to the program of non-western studies. Next semester the program will hold its courses on the Amherst campus.

I.F.C. Begins Rush Week October 10

The I.F.C. will start its program of rushing students for membership in the new fraternity next week. Contact with the rushees will be accomplished by using the Student Union facilities to hold smokers. The calender for such events is as follows:

Negligence in the Hub

by JIM TRELEASE '63

There were enough positive echoes around the campus after the printing of our editorial, "UMass And The Boston Press" to indicate that a large portion have long awaited such as indictment. Perhaps one of the severest critics of our press negligence is Matt Zunic, UMass' basketball coach. Having spent some seven years at Boston University, Zunic learned first hand that unless you produce the big winner, the pros will grab your press coverage. Unless you pull off the overtime victory, the Bruins or Celtics will have an extra four inches added to their stories.

This lack of UMass publicity in the Hub is by no means the result of negligence in our University news and sports publicity offices. A copious supply of news and sports publicity is sent out daily to Massachusetts' major publications; to all, that is, except those who have previously requested us not to send them publicity. And there are Boston papers who have made just an outrageous request of our publicity offices. One Hub publication specifically told the sports publicity office that they could not use UMass material because there was no reader interest. If such be the case, then our alumni have certainly forgotten from where they were graduated.

In order to defeat this practice in Boston, we strongly request that you write to your friends, relatives, and our alumni in the Boston area, urging them to ask the Hub papers for more UMass coverage.

Villanova and the Critics

Many hours of deliberation and decision go into making out a football schedule for a university which is growing at the rate UMass is. With an enlarged enrollment, the caliber of our opposition must also improve accordingly. And when the Athletic Department and Warren McGuirk took on the challenges of Villanova and Holy Cross, they were quite well aware of the power each possessed.

This Saturday, the Huskies from Pennsylvania bring their Blue and White to Alumni Field for what may possibly be a defeat for UMass. Whatever the score, whether it be a Redman or Husky victory, we may thank the Athletic Department for improving the caliber of the opposition while not involving us in as bitter and demoralizing a free-for-all as Boston College saw last weekend when Northwestern blanked them 45-0. It is important that when we move up the ladder the ascent be slow and in accordance with our potentiality. Villanova and Holy Cross are accused by part of this campus of being "over our heads." Well, it was these same individuals who shouted MURDER just before McCormick-Conway and company climbed the banks of the Charles at Harvard one year ago this week.

A CRY OF SANITY

by GEORGE M. MASSELAM

In this decade of hate, hostility, fear, and depravity there comes a light in the darkness. When nations are struggling for the security of the earth, aligning themselves against one another in searing entanglements, a spark of reason—a kindling of sanity—emanates from the United States. I refer to the Peace Corps!! If there is some doubt as to the validity of my statement, a close analysis will say more in its behalf.

Take Joe Agape, an unusual element of American colleges, who wishes to do something constructive for mankind. Having qualified for the Peace Corps by passing the exams, he is sent with a group of other Americans to help rehabilitate a poverty stricken community overseas. He thus aids in aiding the community, morally, culturally, and physically. Who loses out by his actions? The people of the area certainly haven't! He hasn't . . . for he has fulfilled in himself a definite need to help his fellow man! The United States hasn't . . . for what could elevate its prestige higher than such a tangible expression of interest. Who then loses out (besides the John Birch Society)? No one!!!

This type of interest, contrasted with arms, missiles, and tanks, supplies a more powerful and dynamic weapon. The Reds are well aware of our power. In our foreign aid program with Quemoy and Laos, the U.S. built hospitals and schools in Quemoy and military bases in Laos. The Reds reacted immediately by pillaging the hospitals and schools; the natives of Quemoy doggedly fought back and are still putting up some resistance. The U.S. will never be forgotten by the natives of Quemoy!

On the other hand, in Laos, when the Reds tried to move in most of the resistance came from the outside and the natives were generally apathetic. This in comparison is evidence of the potentiality, effectiveness, and dynamism of the Peace Corps. Can we ignore it?

Thus, there comes a cry from the wilderness; a cry of hope and sanity. It is possibly a symbol of, pardon the expression, love for mankind. Instead of adding to the barriers of peace by accumulating more arms, the U.S. has introduced a constructive element for peace. —in lieu of a destructive element for peace.

The I.F.C. and Their New-Born

On September 13, 1961 the Fraternity Presidents Association appointed an expansion committee in order to investigate the feasibility of starting a new fraternity on the University campus. The committee, under the chairmanship of Dick Greene, has come up with the following plan:

An I.F.C. rushing committee has been formed consisting of two members from each of the 14 fraternities currently on campus. This committee will serve to acquaint the prospective members of this new fraternity with the purposes, benefits, and advantages which can be gained from fraternity life. Membership in this organization will be open to both upperclassmen and freshmen who are interested in fraternal brotherhood. The Dean of Men has assured this committee that a section in one of the dormitories and a line in the Commons will be set aside for the members of this new house.

We feel that the formation of a new fraternity may have several beneficial effects upon the fraternity system and the campus community at large. The most obvious benefit to be derived by the formation of a new fraternity is the extension of the fraternal experience to a greater number of students at the University. As a secondary result, the formation of this new fraternity by a group of young men who will be willing to work toward high ideals will force the rest of the fraternity system on campus to improve. As I.F.C. President Richard Greene said, this may help to "stir interest in all fraternities."

We believe that the idea of starting and the method of recruiting members for this new fraternity is a perfect example of creative thinking on the part of the I.F.C. and of the spirit of cooperation which should exist among the 14 member fraternal system at UMass. The new house is indicative of the fact that the fraternities are willing to grow and evolve with a growing and evolving University. Thus, we salute the men who are willing to take up the challenge of forming a new brotherhood and reaping the benefits which exist.

Relax, Bud!

For the student in search of an easy elective, George Williams College, a school for teachers and youth leaders in Chicago, will offer the most relaxing course in the United States this week. This new subject: Relaxation.

Some students were convinced they had eased their way into the snap course of all time when it was offered as a pilot project last year. But many learned to relax. How do you measure the success of such a course? Simple. "Students stopped biting their nails and cut down their smoking," said Dean Arthur H. Steinhaus, a professor of physiology at George Williams . . .

"You might say," commented Dean Steinhaus last week, "that this is one course where students will get credit for being lazy." Newsweek, Oct. 2, education—

Open to Theft

Few places and environments provide the multi-purpose opportunities and advantages which the college or university does. There are the opportunities for self-improvement in all sizes and shapes, but one area in particular stands out bolder than the rest . . . thievery. For the individuals whose personalities are warped to fit the mold of a thief, the university's trusting, open, and academic atmosphere is a gold mine.

Every year one reads of the large amounts of articles and money which are stolen from buildings and dormitories across the nation. And all too frequently the reader surmises that the colleges of today are filled with a thieving and warped generation. But it might be wise to look at this problem with a more discerning eye. In those instances where articles of great value are missing, frequently the police have proof enough to suspect, not the students, but outside efforts.

Recently at UMass, especially in our overnight parking lots, students have suffered thefts amounting to over $100. One individual found both his back tires removed. There is reason to suspect that this is the work of those outside the University. One can readily see how easy it would be for a youth of 18 or 20 to pass as a UMass student. It is with this in mind that we and the Campus Police urge you to pay particular attention to suspicious actions in or around the parking lots and not to hesitate in reporting such action to the University operator immediately.

Profs Learn Plans Made For Election

Political candidates or their representatives from several Connecticut Valley cities including Northampton, Holyoke and Springfield Monday night attended an annual get-together with political science professors from four colleges, held at Amherst College.

Purpose of the gathering, which was led by Early Latham, professor of political science at Amherst College, was to outline plans for participation in the campaigns of the municipal candidates by some 80 students at Smith, Mount Holyoke and Amherst Colleges and UMass.

The students play an active role in the campaigns of the candidates of their own choosing as a part of their political science and government courses. None of the students was at Monday night's session, which was to outline procedures and discuss how

by SUSAN LAMPRON

This year Baker House welcomed its new housemother, Mrs. M. Lillian Hunter. Mrs. Hunter was born in New York State, and was educated at Northfield School for Girls, Northfield, Mass., and at Simmons College in Boston.

She majored in food management at Simmons, and after graduation held positions as food manager in various hotels and clubs throughout the country, including the Lake Placid Club in New York. She was also the food director of the Student Union building at the State Teachers' College in Ypsalanti, Mich.

Mrs. Hunter has always been interested in handweaving. She taught for the School for American Craftsmen while they were organizing in Hanover, N.H., and afterwards opened her own studio. At present she is the president of the New England Weavers' Seminar which meets in Amherst every two years.

Her association with the Seminar acquainted Mrs. Hunter with the UMass campus, and as a result of this affiliation she has many friends in this area. Because she felt so at home on our campus, and particularly because seh enjoys working with young people, Mrs. Hunter came out of retirement to accept the position of head resident for Baker.

JUNIOR EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

Anyone interested in taking out papers for Junior Executive Council can pick up application forms at the Student Union Lobby Counter starting Friday, October 6. All applications must be returned to the same place by Wednesday, October 11.

Lt. Janet McManus To Inform Women About WAC Career

Lt. Janet McManus, of the women's Army Corps, will speak to interested juniors and seniors Tuesday in the S.U. Lobby.

Of special interest to juniors and seniors is a four week summer training program offered to show young women the life of an army officer.

The course is held at U.S. Wac Center at Fort McClellan, Alabama, and includes orientation into many phases of life in the Women's Army Corp.

College graduates may apply for a direct commission as a lieutenant in the United States Army Reserve.

Lt. McManus will have further information on the training program and actual enlistment.

Dorms Win Honors; Elect New Officers

DWIGHT

Dwight is proud to announce that it took second place in the Interdorm Sing last week. Carol Esonis directed a fine rendition of "Good News."

Plans are now under way for Dwight's Homecoming float. The girls are very anxious to win more points towards that plaque which the Interdorm Council has established.

The Dwighters extend their congratulations to all the girls in the dorm who have received bids from the sororities of their choice during the past week.

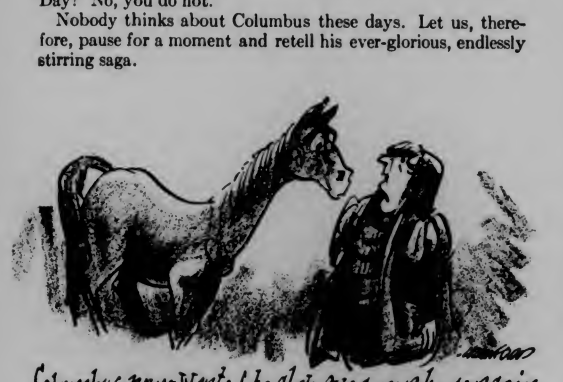
On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf", "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis", etc.)

SAIL ON, SAIL ON!

I suppose October 12 is just another day to you. You get up in the ordinary way and do all the ordinary things you ordinarily do. You have your breakfast, you walk your ocelot, you go to classes, you write home for money, you burn the dean in effigy, you watch Howdy-Doody, and you go to bed. And do you give one little thought to the fact that October 12 is Columbus Day? No, you do not.

Nobody thinks about Columbus these days. Let us, therefore, pause for a moment and retell his ever-glorious, endlessly stirring saga.



Columbus never wanted to clap eyes on a horse again...

Christopher Columbus was born in Genoa on August 25, 1451. His father, Ralph T. Columbus, was in the three-minute auto wash game. His mother, Eleanor (Swifty) Columbus, was a sprinter. Christopher was an only child, except for his four brothers and eight sisters. With his father busy all day at the auto wash and his mother constantly away at track meets, young Columbus was left pretty much to his own devices. However, the lad did not sulk or brood. He was an avid reader and spent all his waking hours immersed in a book. Unfortunately, there was only one book in Genoa at the time—Care of the Horse by Aristotle—and after several years of reading Care of the Horse, Columbus grew restless. So when rumor reached him that there was another book in Barcelona, off he ran as fast as his fat little legs would carry him.

The rumor, alas, proved false. The only book in Barcelona was Cuidar un Caballo by Aristotle, which proved to be nothing more than a Spanish translation of Care of the Horse.

Bitterly disappointed, Columbus began to dream of going to India where, according to legend, there were thousands of books. But the only way to go to India was on horseback, and after so many years of reading Care of the Horse, Columbus never wanted to clap eyes on a horse again. Then a new thought struck him: perhaps it was possible to get to India by sea!

Fired with his revolutionary new idea, Columbus raced to the court of Ferdinand and Isabella on his little fat legs (Columbus, though six feet tall, was plagued with little fat legs all his life) and pleaded his case with such fervor that the rulers were persuaded.

On October 12, 1492, Columbus set foot on the New World. The following year he returned to Spain with a cargo of wonders never before seen in Europe—spices and metals and plants and flowers and—most wondrous of all—tobacco! Oh, what a sensation tobacco caused in Europe! The filter had long since been invented (by Aristotle, curiously enough) but nobody knew what to do with it. Now Columbus, the Great Discoverer, made still another great discovery: he took a filter, put tobacco in front of it, and invented the world's first filter cigarette!

Through the centuries filters have been steadily improved and so has tobacco, until today we have achieved the ultimate in the filter cigarette—Marlboro, of course! Oh, what a piece of work is Marlboro! Great tobacco, great filter, great smoke! And so, good friends, when next you enjoy a fine Marlboro Cigarette, give a thought to the plucky Genoese, Christopher Columbus, whose vision and perseverance made the whole lovely thing possible.

And thank Columbus too for the king-size Philip Morris Commander. If unfiltered cigarettes are your choice, you'll find Commander the choice of the unfiltered. Welcome aboard.

LEWIS HOUSE

News from the highlands! The "Lewis Lassies" marched their way to fame at the Women's Interdorm Sing on Tuesday last. Dressed in kilts and sporting Scottish caps, the strong contingent captured first place with their spirited rendition of "Bonnie Hielan Laddie" and "Sons of the Valley". Helen Forsberg was the director, and Nancy Thompson was her assistant.

Lewis should be able to continue gaining renown with the competent leadership of its Interdorm Representatives, Edna Beighley and Barbara Reed; its W.A.A. Representative, Barbara Balakier; its treasurer, Peggy Pink; its social co-chairmen and Collegian reporters, Arlene Kuchyt and Eileen Verrier.

During the coming weeks, the "Lewis Lassies" will devote their time and energy to their float for the Homecoming Parade.

JOHNSON

Johnson House had its first dorm meeting on September 18. At this meeting the counselors were introduced to us and the dorm officers were elected. The counselors are Barb Viera, house chairman, Margie Olson, Judy Hankinson, Barb Lavalette, Bobby Hanna, Lisa Nordberg, Connie Creamer, and Carol Mozden.

The dorm officers elected were Elaine Baxter, Social Chairman; Gretchen Schultis, WAA Representative; Lona Ishoi, Treasurer; Elaine Feingold and Barbara Kelley, Interdorm Council Representatives.

Florida State—UMass Campuses Compared

By ARLENE KUCHYT
EILEEN VERRIER

Sun, surf, swim! Snow, sleet, skate! This is the contrast that two "Tallahassee Lassies" will experience during their stay here at UMass. Joan Monte and Ann Smith are our very tanned, vivacious visitors who are living respectively in Mary Lyon and Dwight.

Joan is from Fort Lauderdale and a student at Florida State University in Tallahassee. She is a member of the class of '63.

Ann is from Jacksonville and of the class of '64. Both are majoring in elementary education. They became interested in this exchange program after hearing that its purpose is to give prospective elementary teachers a broader outlook on educational systems throughout the country.

Both girls feel that our campus has been quite warm and friendly. After living in their sorority, Delta Zeta, they miss this aspect of campus life the most. However, several sororities here have compensated by inviting them for dinner, which they have enjoyed immensely.

The question most often asked of them is concerning their views on segregation. Both feel that "a truly mature and educated person should not be prejudiced because of another person's race or religion."

UMass, they believe, offers them more than just book learning The "twist", for instance, is something novel. They said it can be described only as "backfield in motion"!

Dress is more casual here. Neither Ann nor Joan ever wore knee socks, dungarees, or bermudas on the Florida State campus. They did admit, however, that the clothes are more "ivy league" here. To our surprise they were not forced to buy new wardrobes, since woolens are worn from the end of November until the middle of March in Florida.

There is little riding of bikes on the southern campuses, but many more sports cars are seen. Umbrellas are used much more frequently on those rainy days. The food, to their regret, is better southern style than northern style.

Ann and Joan would like to extend an invitation to all UMass. students to come to Fort Lauderdale Easter vacation and to drop in and see them at Florida State!

UPPER CLASS RUSHING YIELDS NEW PLEDGES

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Mrs. John Shaffer, Province President of the New England district, has been the guest of our chapter this week. A tea was held in her honor Wednesday afternoon.

Alpha Chi Omega welcomes six new pledges. Those pledged on Monday evening were: Katie Dix, Peggy Maloney, Dianne Tyrrell, Maureen Lyons, Pam Salvati, and Leah Shepherdson.

The Alpha Chi's are now proudly wearing their new red blazers.

CHI OMEGA

After a long, lazy summer, the Chi O's are back again looking forward to a great year. The sisters are pleased to welcome back Mrs. Young, the housemother. A special welcome is extended to Mrs. Rauche, the new cook, and three new houseboys, Paul Chalmers, Sandy Morgan, and Walter Crowdy along with Pete Ryan, a veteran.

The inhabitants of 315 Lincoln Avenue are bursting with pride over the new pledges. They are Judy Clark, Eileen Veiria, Marilyn Jackson, Janey Wehman, and Kathy Reed. Nancy Speight and Pam Hayes also joined the ranks of sisterhood.

The Chi O's extend a special welcome to Gabie Nunes who has just returned from Brazil where she has been studying.

The sisters have no excuse for not keeping up with the international news. Ruthie Butterfield is spending a semester in Europe and is keeping us all "clued in."

Besides being engaged with preparations for Homecoming, the Iota Beta chapter is looking forward to entertaining thirty girls from Chi Alpha chapter of Chi Omega at Jackson College. The girls will visit next Sunday and spend the day.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Theta welcomes her eight new pledges: Margie Olson '63, Sue Blood, Jane Buckley, Penny Burns, Sandy Grueber, Jan LaFlamme, Jan Saunders, and Kathy Walsh all class of '64.

Theta's first exchange supper of the year was with Kappa Sigma. Thanks to all, it was a huge success.

Mary Jane Stack was asked to join Phi Kappa Phi, a national honor society. Barb Lavetette was elected co-rush chairman of Pan-Hel.

All the seniors of the house came back to school early this fall to redecorate the upstairs. This included making new drapes and covers, painting and papering all the rooms, and selecting all the decorative accessories.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

Monday night, Oct. 2nd, five girls became the new pledges of KKG. They are, Ro Catalano '63, Linda Brilliant '64, Grace Dunn '64, Carol Hyde '64, and Berna Menz '65.

Last Sunday, a bowling alley in Northampton was "invaded" by the Kappas. It seems doubtful that the instructor has ever seen such a wide range of scores but this gave the evening many laughs!

The sisters thank Alpha Gamma Rho for a wonderful time at the exchange supper Wednesday night, and are looking forward to the supper next Thursday night, with Sigma Phi Epsilon.

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

The sisters would like to welcome the new sisters and pledges of Lambda Delta Phi who were initiated and pledged Monday. The new sisters are Donna Achille, Sandi Giordano, Delly Matthews and Joan Marble.

The nine new pledges welcomed are: Madeline Marcella, Kay Levin, Mary Agnes Pelton, Judith Robinson, Phyllis Traback, Barbara Gerry, Sandra May, Linda Wilcox and Nancy Andrade.

PI BETA PHI

Pi Phi is happy to welcome its new pedges. They are: Joan Carey, Leach; Joan Chiminello, Knowlton; Janet Crowell, Arnold; Patricia Hall, Thatcher; Susan Herron, Knowlton; Lois Koczera, Crabtree; Linda Sheckterle, Hamlin; Janice Smith, Crabtree; and Lynne Tanner, Thatcher. A special welcome to Marjorie St. Aubin, Mary Lyon, who is soon to become a sister. These girls were bow pinned on Saturday and pledged Sunday evening, October 1st.

The sisters thank TKE for the great exchange supper held on Wednesday.

Alumni Profiles

Murray Lincoln '14: President of CARE; Chairman, JFK Food For Peace Program

Murray Danforth Lincoln '14 Animal Husbandry University of Massachusetts; LL.D., St. Francis Xavier Antigonish.

Farmer, philanthropist, author, insurance executive, public servant and one of the world's better known leaders of cooperatives. A rugged idealist . . . A man whose activities have had an impact on the world of business, particularly the business of serving human needs. Among other assets, Mr. Lincoln seems to have a special talent for firsts. As a student at Mass. Aggie he was one of the founders of Lambda Chi Alpha. Upon leaving school he was the first county agricultural agent in Connecticut. The following year in Brockton, he organized the first milk cooperative in New England, which is still in operation. In 1920, after moving to Ohio he became the first executive secretary of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation and was general manager of the Farm Bureau Cooperate Association from its inception.

Feeling that the farmers were paying excessive auto insurance rates in Ohio, Mr. Lincoln helped them form their own insurance company. This company, now known as Nationwide Insurance, is a holding concern that comprises four insurance companies into an entity which has assets of $596,000,000. Mr. Lincoln is president of all four insurance companies, president of nine other business enterprises, chairman of three, and board member of all nineteen companies affiliated in some way with Nationwide. He is also president of the Cooperative League of the United States of America.

President Roosevelt appointed him to the first United Nations Conference on Food and Agriculture in 1943. In 1946, Mr. Truman made him a member of the President's Commission on Higher Education and in 1960 a member of the Advisory Commission on Civil Defense for the National Security Resources Board.

The Democratic party was looking for a good man to beat Robert A. Taft in 1950 for the United States Senate so they buttonholed Murray Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln declined the honor.

When the Cooperative for American Remittances Everywhere was formed in 1945 Murray Lincoln was elected president. So he became the first president of C.A.R.E., a post which he held for the first twelve years of its operation.

Among his more recent accomplishments is an autobiography called Vice President in Charge of Revolution. Currently he is a member of the Advisory Council to the Peace Corps and has just been appointed by President Kennedy as Chairman of the Food for Peace task force.

The only thing his varied interests have prevented him from operating personally is his 1,900 acre farm in Central Ohio. Still actively interested in his Alma Mater, Mr. Lincoln has been a main speaker at the Alumni College which is held at Commencement each year.

Dance Band Returns With Veteran Players

"The band has had a good start this year. We've been working hard every week since the Wednesday before registration and things are falling together quickly." These are the words of music major John Maggs, who, for the past two years, has been leader, writer and arranger of the University Dance Band. The Dance Band has lost only three experienced men since last year and their seats have been filled by highly competent musicians; freshman Jack Singer, trombone, and sophomores Bill Speeski, alto, and Dennis Morrissey on trumpet.

Maggs said that he was very pleased with the returning men and stated that several had gained quite a bit of experience during the summer. "Chuckie Reid (tenor) said he felt great about all the playing and listening he had done around Boston. You can pick up a good deal by just listening to and watching a guy blow and then talking to him about it. Tony Mercurio (drums) played around the Cape with a small combo. I think that aside from better timing he has toned down quite a bit. Dan Roseman (trombone) picked up a bass trombone this summer. This new horn should add quite a bit to the dimensions of the group. Ray Suzor (bari) and Rich Kmon (trumpet) played rock-and-roll jobs in their home towns."

Since he is modest Maggs did not mention that he had had a quite productive summer himself, having written several new scores for the band.

The fact which apparently pleased Maggs the most was that the vocalist who has been with the band for the past four years will return for a fifth year while teaching in Holyoke. He was obviously referring to Ann Shutty, a beautiful girl with a voice to match.

John was vague about future jobs for the band, but he did hint that it might be an added attraction at the Freshman Review in a few weeks. He mentioned that he hoped the band would be able to play more dances this year—especially on campus—since it is primarily a dance band.

The band rehearses every Wednesday night at seven and John welcomes anyone who is too anxious to wait for the band's first public appearance to come down and listen.

Upper Class . . .

and shall continue to do so for the coming month, as the SDT's try to cope with their busy schedules. The SDT's are proud of a new sister, Ann Cohen, who is now wearing the torch, and five new pledges, Leslie Schair, Judy Keane, Hinda Katz, Judy Wilcox, and Carol Chessler.

The Sig Delts are looking forward to exchange suppers this month, the first this Wednesday night, with Sig Ep.

The girls are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the regional advisor, Mrs. Cassel, who will be spending a few days at the house.

SIGMA KAPPA

The Sigma Kappas are proud to welcome their seven new pledges. They are: Barbara Ditmars, Carol Johnson, Joan Labozowski, Alice Pierce, Lee Porter, Elaine Prusky, and Barbara Takala. These girls were given their ribbons last Friday and were pledged at ceremonies held last Monday night.

These are the first Sigmas to be pledged in the UMass Dining Commons. The sisters are glad to welcome the pledges but regret that there is no "house" to welcome them into. Pretty soon though!

The SKs would like to extend a premature "Thanks" to the AGRs for tonight's spaghetti supper. The Sigmas really appreciate this invitation and are looking forward to attending.

Although the house is far from complete, the Sigma Kappas will be able to eat their meals there beginning Monday. The sisters really welcome this, especially those now eating at the Dining Commons. Chapter meetings will also be held in the dining room for the time being.

The sisters of Sigma Kappa say "Hi" to their new housemother Mrs. Melon who has recently arrived on campus. She is presently living across the street from the house.

Naiad Tryouts Start Oct. 11

Tryouts will be held on October 11-12 for Naiads and are open to all classes.

Optional practices are scheduled for October 9-10. Naiads will be present to help with the various strokes.

Those required are American crawl, sidestroke, breaststroke, and back crawl. In addition, a pike surface dive must be done.

Meetings this year are on Wednesday night at 7 p.m.

Redmen Meet Big, Unbeaten Villanova Squad Here Sat.

by W. JOHN LENNON '62

Undefeated, untied, and once scored upon Villanova seeks its fourth victory of the young season tomorrow when the Philadelphians tangle with the Redmen on Alumni Field at 1:30 p.m.

The Wildcats, who were nothing more than a tabby cat for the preceding two years during which they won only three of twenty games, must be regarded as one of the best teams in the East. After whitewashing Miami (Ohio), 33-0; and VMI, 22-0, the Main Liners whipped Holy Cross 20-6 last Saturday in Worcester.

Coach Alex Bell's squad boasts twenty-five lettermen which provides the Wildcats with excellent depth in every position. Junior quarterbacks Richie Richman and Ted Aceto will direct a well balanced attack behind a rugged line that outweighs the Redmen forward wall by 15 lbs. per man.

If the Redmen expect to tame the Cats, they'll have to stop right halfback, Larry Glueck, who has averaged 10.6 yards per carry this season. Should Coach Fusia's men who held AIC to seven net yards rushing last week, stymie their opponents ground game, the Wildcats may well go to the airways. Quarterback Aceto has completed 12 of 27 attempts for 164 yards, while Richman has connected for 8 of 23. These statistics may well be improved upon, however, if the Redmen don't improve their pass defense which was woefully inadequate last Saturday.

PRE GAME CHATTER

This week's Lambert Trophy ratings listed Villanova fourth behind Syracuse, Pittsburgh, and Army . . . The Wildcats will field a team comopsed of eleven lettermen while UMass has a starting unit of eight letter winners . . . Now that the flu has played havoc with the Redmen, the injury list has started to grow. Ken Kezer, who led his teammates in scoring last season, has failed to recover from a preseason back injury, and has been listed as through for the year. The backfield ranks were further deleted when Mike Salem, who averaged 3.4 yards a carry for Coach Studley's squad, broke a bone in his hand. It is doubtful that he will see any further action this season . . . Villanova has compiled 616 yards rushing while holding the opposition to 287 on the ground . . . Though UMass will enter the skirmish as a decided underdog, they were in the same position before the contest with Harvard last year. On that crisp October afternoon the Redmen stunned the football world by whipping the Jawns, 27-12.

"TWO WOMEN"

SPORTSENSE

by BEN GORDON '62, Sports Editor

The Huskies from Villanova will travel to the UMass campus tomorrow to provide what promises to be one of the biggest games we've seen on campus in Redmen football history. The big team from Philly boasts a combined score of 75 points to its opposition's 6, that lone touchdown being tallied by Holy Cross last week. If that isn't a formidable record, then nothing is.

UMass, rated a 17 point underdog by the A.P., will be up against a team with depth and power, the Huskies having two good teams and third team which is still nothing to scoff at. The Philadelphians average 15 pounds up on each Redmen, and their fullback, Billy Joe, is a mere 50 pounds up on Art Perdigao. Billy is the IC4A indoor and outdoor national shot put champ on top of that, and we can be sure he's got the muscle for football.

The Redmen will be facing double barrelled action as they try to put the damper on the Villanova pass attack, (the Huskies pass as much as they run) as two top notch quarterbacks, in the persons of Ted Aceto and Richie Richman will be throwing the ball. Aceto throws with his right, and Richman is a southpaw. That should keep Coach Vic Fusia's men guessing. The two helmsmen have averaged about 5.7 yards on each pass.

Let's take a look at their attack. The Huskies generally run from a straight T with an occassional flanker. They'll fake a belly series often, then roll out for the pass. You'll see a lot of off-tackle plays Saturday, on both sides. Using an Oklahoma 5-4 defense, the men from Philly often bring their fullback up to the line and let him charge the opponent's backfield. They call it the Army Monster!!

After being cute with the comment that "'there is no doubt that UMass will show up" for the game, Ray Fitzgerald of the Springfield Union went on to say that there is every reason to believe the Redmen will give the Wildcats a battle. The Redmen have a strong first squad and showed they have a good deal of talent, especially on the ground, against AIC last week. One key man in the UMass depth hopes was Mike Salem, though, and Mike broke his thumb Tuesday night and will be out of action for at least three weeks.

After viewing the films of the AIC cl "about the 100th time' noted a lack of UMass play. " plays every- is assignment, an thing would go wrong. We made several mental errors, and our pass defense broke down in the second half." But Fusia had plenty of praise for Sam Lussier's running and Freddy Lewis' great blocking performance during the opener. Bob Foote's performance at tackle rated him the A slot on the All-East team for the week, by the way.

"We'd like to pass some against Villanova, but I don't know," Coach Fusia commented. "We called 17 passes Saturday and the first 10 should have been caught. But some were dropped. We can't do that against Villanova. And I can see it now, our passing with 12 men rushing McCormick and 12 other men defending downfield. That's the way my scouts tell me it looks."

At any rate, it's game none of you will want to miss, so let's see a good turnout. For those of you who can't make the game, B.U.'s Steve Sinko will be the halftime guest of Jimmy Trelease and Howie Wainstein on WMUA. Bob O'Connell, Financial Manager of Athletics over at the Cage worked with the B.U. mentor for 14 years and pulled the strings to get him here. Sinko will be scouting the squad for the UMass-Terrier clash on November 4th. The Terriers will be taking on the once-top-rated Penn. State team tonight. Penn State dropped one to UMami last Friday night.

In Yankee Conference play this weekend, UConn takes on Rutgers, Maine meets Vermont and New Hampshire plays the Rams from Rhode Island.

Here's something which might make you laugh or make you sick, depending upon how you look at it. Just before the Yale-UConn game last week, in which UConn was dumped 18-0, the Yale Daily News called the Huskies a "group of professionals." Yale, which now has won the annual clash 13 of the 13 times it has been played, looked as if it was seeking a way out of absorbing a possible defeat. Heavens! What would it do to their reputation. Ivy League and all that! "Yale may win the game," the article said, "in fact we have a sneaking suspicion the Blue will win—but if they do, it will be an upset, the triumph of a group of amateurs over a team of full timers. For Connecticut has taken the path toward big-time football status. The path involved recruitment, subsidization and emphasis . . ." I guess the Eli's have proved that "cheaters never win". Tsk, Tsk.

JUST ONE YEAR AGO TOMORROW

Just one year ago tomorrow, The University of Massachusetts football squad traveled to Harvard Stadium in Cambridge and shocked the football world by rocking the Harvard Crimson, then slated to be tops in the Ivy League, 27-12.

The victory, which was carried in newspapers throughout the country, was the biggest upset of the season.

Harvard's bleary eyed patrons sat in stunned silence, staring in disbelief. They saw the Crimson collapse in the first quarter, and they saw the visitors total a lead of 20-0 in eighteen minutes. They saw what no one expected to see —a UMass victory.

Football is a game of upsets; that's what makes it a great spectator sport. What happened to Harvard could happen to anyone—even Villanova.

UM Cross Country Team Rolls Over Weak Union Squad, 15-48

BY [illegible]EINKER '62

Running easily all the way, the UMass cross-country team rolled up a perfect score while defeating Union College, 15-48, over the local course Wednesday. Although the Redmen's best five men took it easy and did not place, UMass took the first five places.

John Leavitt, Joe LaMarre, Charlie Proctor, Ken O'Brien and Gen Hasbrouck finished in that order ahead of the weak Union runners. Coach Bill Footrick found his team's great strength and power embarrassing as Bob Brouillet, Dave Balch, Dick Blomstrom, Jim Wrynn, and Bob Avery, his champion runners, went along for the workout.

Union has had good teams in ference champs have been too the past, but the Yankee Conmuch for them recently. This is the second year in a row that the Redmen have compiled the lowest possible score, 15 points, against the upstate New Yorkers.

Footrick will need all of his men at [illegible]est this Saturday however, as [illegible]harriers meet Maine [illegible]Northeastern at Franklin Park, Boston. These two squads are always strong. Last year the Redmen lost to Maine by a point in this meet while they beet the Huskies. Northeastern has met and outrun New Hampshire, 27-28, so far this year.

In this week's workouts, Bob Brouillet has shown that he's even better than Coach Footrick thought he would be. This durable sophomore was expected to chase YanCon champ Dave Balch, but the situation has reversed, even though Balch is as good as ever.

Dick Blomstrom looks and feels strong despite his bout with the grippe. His speedy recovery is fortunate since some tough competition is coming up. Wrynn, Avery and O'Brien are still coming along and should be in better condition for the championship meets. Leavitt and LaMatte were pleased with their one-two finish, although an easy one. This depth will soon be needed as the tougher competition lies ahead.

The place winners:

1. John Leavitt, UM 28:29
2. Joe LaMarre, UM
3. Charlie Proctor, UM
4. Ken O'Brien, UM
5. Gene Hasbrouck, UM
6. Laverty, Union
7. Bruce Thompson, UM
8. Gene Colburn, UM
9. Ron Thompson, UM
10. Huels, Union
11. Allen, Union
12. Sepper, Union

UMass Soccer Team To Meet Williams

Coach Larry Briggs' Varsity soccer team will take on a rugged Williams squad this Saturday at 2:00 here at UMass.

The team, which edged the Coast Guard booters last Saturday 2-1 in their opening match looks a lot sharper than it has in the past few years. Coach Briggs stated last year that he had a good deal of green men on the squad who should make for a good team this year, and it looks as if he was right.

For those of you who can't make it to the game tomorrow, tune in on the WMUA spot on your dial at 1:20 for the play by play commentary on the game by Jimmy Trelease, the Voice of the Redmen, and Howie Wainstein.

ENTHUSIASM REIGNETH

Pretty cheerleaders like the lovely lady shown above inspire both the team and the fans at UMass football games. So if you don't like football, come and see the cheerleaders. (Dentists should have a field day.)

Two YanCon Games Slated

The University of New Hampshire football team, rated as the possible spoiler in the Yankee Conference title race, will make its first conference appearance this weekend when it meets the University of Rhode Island at Kingston. The conference also has another game on tap with the University of Maine playing host to the University of Vermont at Orono.

The Wildcats, with Dick Mezquita a first team selection, and Bo Dickson, second conference choice, returning, started slowly but are expected to be in high gear when they meet the Rams. Last year, the Wildcats prevailed 13-6 at Durham and in 36 meetings have won 22, lost 11 and three games ended in ties.

The Black Bears from Orono appear to have too many guns for the improving Catamounts in their get together. The Bears hold a wide edge in the series, winning 14 and losing only two. One contest ended in a tie. Last year, Maine rolled up a 27-0 victory.

Connecticut will travel to New Brunswick, N.J. to meet the always dangerous Rutgers team.

Foreign Office Man to Talk Wed., Oct. 11

Carrol E. Cobb, a Career Foreign Service Officer, will be in the Barnetstable Room of the Student Union Wednesday to speak with students about the Foreign Service Exam and about the Foreign Service itself.

The Foreign Service Exam will be held December 9th, and applications for it must be in by October 23. The exam is open to seniors who would like to work in the Dept. of State in the Foreign Service.

Cobb will talk to interested students at the beginning of every hour from 10 a.m. until early evening. Cobb has served in San Jose, Havana, Bonn, and Caracas.

Further information concerning the exam can be obtained in the Placement Office.

Radford Heavily Opposes Admittance of Red China

"Red China's entry into U.N. would be the most catastrophic event since Munich!"

Thus does a leading American military authority launch an outspoken attack on the possibility of Communist China's admittance to the United Nations and on those who would help her gain entry.

Writing in the October Reader's Digest, Admiral Arthur Radford warns: "If Red China were admitted to the U.N., that body would be rendered ineffective. Its entire character would change."

The former chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff points out that the Communist tactics of deceit and delay in negotiation, which dragged the Korean armistice talks out over two years and 500 meetings, would stifle action by the U.N. any time the Reds so willed it.

Radford labels "completely defeatist" the sentiments, voiced by U.N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson and Under Secretary of State Chester Bowles, that Red China must be a U.N. member to be included in disarmament negotiations. He says:

"Red China does not have to be in the U.N. to discuss disarmanent and join in agreements. We have dealt with her numerous times—over the Korean and Indochina armistices, reciprocal renunciation of force and the release of our citizens."

But the most pressing reasons for refusing to seat Red China revolve around moral issues, Radford says. The U.N. charter insists that applicant nations be peace-loving. Radford suggests that the United States consider withdrawal from the U.N. if Red China gains entry.

Seating the Communists he states, "will indicate plainly that a majority of the present member countries are in favor of destroying the charter as it was originally written. It will mean that the character of the U.N. organization has changed so completely that it will no longer be in our national interest to associate our country with its actions."

New Exchange Service Allows Faculty to Travel

A new service to enable American university and college faculty members to visit different parts of the U.S. or Canada for the cost of transportation alone has been formed. Called Quid Pro Quo, the service arranges for the exchange of homes between university personnel in both the United States and Canada.

The new program maintains a registry of faculty members willing to offer their homes for a suitable exchange. The service will find equivalent accomodations in the area of the individual's choice. Faculty members interested in vacations, field work, or study can exchange their homes for periods ranging from one week to over a year. Married graduate students in good standing may also use the service.

Quid Pro Quo will also arrange for exchanges with European faculty members over the summer or for longer periods (Sabbaticals, grants etc.)

The organization, whose offices are at 865 West End Avenue, New York City, maintains a fee schedule ranging from $25 for domestic to $75 for European exchanges.

Applications Being Taken For Graduate Fellowships

The National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council has been called upon again to advise the National Science Foundation in the selection of candidates for the Foundation's program of regular graduate and postdoctoral fellowships. Committees of outstanding scientists appointed by the Academy-Research Council will evaluate applications of all candidates. Final selection will be made by the Foundation, with awards to be announced on March 15, 1962.

Fellowships will be awarded for study in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological, and engineering sciences; also in anthropology, psychology (excluding clinical psychology), geography, economics (excluding business administration), sociology (not including social work), and the history and philosophy of science. They are open to college seniors, graduate and postdoctoral students, and others with equivalent training and experience. All applicants must be citizens of the United States and will be judged solely on the basis of ability.

Applicants for the graduate awards will be required to take the Graduate Record Examination designed to test scientific aptitude and achievement. This examination, administered by the Educational Testing Service, will be given on January 20, 1962, at designated centers throughout the United States and certain foreign countries.

The annual stipends for graduate Fellows are as follows: $1800 for the first year; $2000 for the intermediate year; and $2200 for the terminal year. The annual stipend for postdoctoral Fellows is $5000. Limited allowances will also be provided to apply toward tuition, laboratory fees, and travel.

Further information and application materials may be obtained from the Fellowship Office, National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington 25, D.C. The deadline for the receipt of applications for regular postdoctoral fellowships is December 18, 1961, and for graduate fellowships, January 5, 1962.

Ribicoff Calls Officials Uncaring And Remiss

The following story was taken from the Friday, October 6 issue of the Boston Globe.

Abraham Ribicoff, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, blasted 1000 college presidents and deans today for not "caring" about education, not doing anything to improve it except for selfish interests and for wasting time at educational meetings where "you read your papers and spout your statistics and scrounge for funds among alumni."

The secretary, who was the principal speaker at the opening session of the meeting of the American Council on Education, drew prolonged applause for his barbed remarks, made after he threw aside most of his prepared speech.

Referring to the defeat of the Kennedy administration's education proposals in the last congressional session, Ribicoff said:

"Where were you educators? You each were looking for a piece of the program. None of you was interested in doing anything for all of education. And education was done in."

Further, he said, "I don't think you really care about education or that you are going to do anything about it. I don't know that you're ever going to solve the problems of education by coming to meetings like this."

Ribicoff pledged a renewed administration fight for Federal funds for education in the next session of Congress. "The President isn't a quitter and neither am I," he said. "We were licked this summer, but we will be back and we will make a fight again. If we're beaten again, we'll come back the next year."

Last Tuesday President Kennedy, "with extreme reluctance," signed a two-year $900 million Education Bill for Federal aid to extend provisions of the National Defense Education Act and to help "impacted areas," school districts swollen by the children of Federal personnel.

The bill was all that remained of his $5.99 billion education proposals of last February, which covered a wide range from school construction and teachers' salaries to Federal college scholarships.

Ribicoff urged the college presidents to "make your speeches in your own hometown" rather than at meetings. "How many people in this room," he asked, "have sat down with their congressman and told him why education is important? I won't embarass you by asking for a show of hands, but I would wager it is less than 5 percent."

The American Council on Education, which met in Washington for two days, is the largest college organization in the country, with more than 1000 colleges and 145 educational organizations in its membership.

Educator's Reaction

Its chairman, Dr. David D. Henry, president of the University of Illinois, said after the Ribicoff speech that "I think he misjudged his audience. I think we do have a commitment to education."

Asked if the council had tried to expedite passage of Federal-aid bills, Henry replied: "We have been working—but we want to hold up the secretary's hand in what he is trying to do."

At a banquet, the new president of the council, Dr. Logan Wilson, also criticized the nation's colleges and universities for not getting together to solve basic problems.

"Our collective endeavor," he said, "is being confused and weakened by vested-interest group pressures, splinter movements, and fragmented approaches."

Wilson, who was formerly chancellor of the University of Texas, described the large American university as "an agglomeration of entities connected only by a common plumbing system. Moreover, not even this connection exists among the separate campuses of the 2000 or so colleges and universities which comprise higher education in this country."

Veteran Actor Will Appear In Volpone

Veteran actor Mick Broadhurst '62, has been cast into the title role of "Volpone". Mick, whose many roles in previous campus productions include that of the Stage Manager in "Our Town" and the doctor in "Look Homeward Angel", will play the cynical, miserly Venetian trader in the adaptation of Ben Johnson's Elizabethan comedy "Volpone" which will be presented by the Roister Doisters, under the direction of Miss Doris E. Abramson of the Speech Department, November 16, 17, and 18 in Bowker Auditorium.

The entire cast for the risque and very theatrical comedy includes: Hal Hinds, '63, as Mosca; Rich Gardner, '64, as Voltore; Bruce Scholosberg, '65, Corvino; Peter Avratin, '63, as Corbaccio; Beverly DeMarco, '63, an Canina; Patricia Grimley, '63, as Colomba; David Manley, '63, as Leone; Norman Seigal, '62, as the Police Captain; Gordon Kiefer, '65, as the Judge; Robert J. Thornley, '65, as the Groom; Lawrence Wilker, '65, as a Policeman; and Elizabeth Foskett, '64 and Frances Castine, '64, as Maids.

WRONG WAY RIBICOFF

As able and as respected a governor as he was, Abraham Ribicoff last week played the role of the new kid on the block who took on the wrong guy for his first fight.

Speaking before 1,000 college presidents and deans at the opening session of the American Council on Education, President Kennedy's Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare declared that College administrators did not care about education, did not do anything to improve it, and wasted time at educational meetings where "you read your papers and spout your statistics and scrounge for funds among alumni."

When you label a group which includes California's Clark Kerr, Illinois' David Henry, and Massachusetts' John Lederle, as not "caring" about education, you are perhaps biting off more than you can chew." The time and effort expended by our nation's college presidents while facing the economic crisis in faculty pay increases, building needs, athletic costs and scholarship, are immeasurable. The one university or college headed by a "not caring" administration cannot survive in the highly competitive education drive in the '60s.

When the former Connecticut executive claimed that college presidents do not do anything to improve education, he forgets that the more than 2,000 colleges and universities which comprise higher education in this country are not united by the strong federation which binds the nation's 50 states. Within the conglomeration of institutions of higher education you will find a financial and legislative structure which each differs from state to state. The "autonomy" possessed by Michigan is only an aspiration to Massachusetts. And when Secretary Ribicoff wants to know why the nation's colleges were not united in backing Kennedy's education program, we may ask similarly why his 50 states and their governors are not united in dealing with the segregation issue.

Ribicoff's speech was not without its good points, though. "How many people in the room have sat down with their Congressman and told him why education is important?" he asked the college administrators. Not only may Massachusetts answer affirmatively on that score but we also hope to show soon that such efforts produce a relationship between the state government and the university which is conducive to the goals of higher education.

Letters

In the spring of 1957, following the Hungarian revolt of that period and as a result of the large number of refugee students who entered this country, the Inter-fraternity Council voted to support two such students through financial assistance and cooperative boarding. Each fraternity man, from the fall of 1957 until the spring of 1961, contributed $1.00 per semester for this purpose—a total of over $5,000.

Paul Varga graduated following Summer School this past year with a BS in ME. Robert Ratay completed his requirements for a BS in CE last January. He is now a UM graduate student and part-time instructor. This letter was recently received by the Council and the IFC has asked that it be conveyed to all fraternity men through the columns of this paper.

To the Interfraternity Council:

Four years ago when we came to this country as strangers, the Interfraternity Council provided us with scholarships to help us obtain a college education.

Now that we both are alumni of this University, we take the opportunity to express our sincere appreciation for all you have done for us, not only for the financial assistance but also for the friendship, advice and encouragement we enjoyed. We always tried to do our best and hoped to live up to the expectations of the University and your Council. That we have become part of this country and that one of us is serving the U.S. Army and the other is doing graduate work, proves that your efforts have not been in vain.

Please transmit our thanks to all those who made the past four years possible for us.

Tito and J. F. K.

To the Editor:

As a democracy-spirited American, I am both astonished and irate in watching the growing deification of the American President. Since his January inauguration, an unprecedented volume of newspaper articles and magazine photographs, depicting the President and his family, has reached dizzying heights.

Each week, on nearly every magazine cover, color photographs appear, showing one or more members of the Kennedy family team smiling benignly on the plain people.

Only in fascist or communist countries should democratically minded people expect to watch this irrational and destructive process.

In Yugoslavia, Tito's picture can be seen everywhere—monster-size posters on buildings, huge portraits erected on rooftops, twelve-foot statues in public parks, and even his picture on that nation's coin and paper currency as well as the postage stamps.

Every where those people work, an inflated picture of the Big Slav Brother looks down at you as a reminder of your own insignificance.

America, I fear, is allowing itself to follow this same deadly road. A road whose signs are everywhere marked by a growing intolerance, suspicion and conformity. A road leading to the deification of one man and the destruction of the democratic process.

David R. Halevy

In human society one is always conscious of a silent despair which seems to exist just under the threshold of communication. At certain times during periods of severe emotional stress, that point where the human mind can contain its desperation no longer, tension mounts and the despair rings out loudly—a shriek stark against the miracle plays, the meaningless actions, and the lost goals of the false morality. And this provides the anticipated prelude to a climax, nurtured by egotism and fear, which never comes to pass, for without sanity there can be no rational climax.

The despair is ours because the egotism and fear are ours. And the insanity is also ours. This is a national insanity and the desperation is a national desperation, a clawing battle with existence which, it seems to me, has begun lately to assume grotesque proportions. The despair is no longer engendered and fostered in darkness; it is engendered in the air and fostered by the mass-media, and by the panicked voices of the masses which can neither comprehend nor salve the raw nerve of hysteria.

The personification of this despair is seen in the insane race to build fall-out shelters; sarcophagi of the masses which the next age of men will unearth and probe with incredulity and which will bear the unmistakable stamp of the ridiculous and the final irony that overlies all hopelessness (for it is only on savoring that the futility in despair becomes apparent.)

In this confusion of roles and objectives the battle becomes fogged and lost; friend becomes enemy; love becomes hate; and the national bewilderment rapidly becomes national insanity—the external violence of an inward confusion.

CHRIST RECONSIDERED . . .

Now, in addition to planning and building the shelter, one must also supply the shelter. It is in these provisions that the futility becomes apparent. Recently the question has been raised as to whether one must provide his neighbor with shelter or whether one must force his neighbor from the shelter. Reverend L. C. McHugh states in the Roman Catholic weekly "America" that in a nuclear attack a man may use any means necessary, including a gun, to prevent others from breaking into his survival shelter. "Nowhere in traditional Catholic morality does one read that Christ, in counselling non-resistance to evil, rescinded the right of self-defense which is granted by nature and recognised in the legal systems of all nations . . ." The despair is in the open; the bewilderment is apparent; the threshold of communication is crossed. Rev. McHugh typifies the attitude in the confusion of roles and objectives and states the rule of conduct for a sixth of the Nation.

The irrationality mounts: MEDICAL ECONOMICS, Sept. 11th, asserts; "If nuclear war comes, you'll be expected to reverse medicine's usual order of caring for disaster victims. Doctors in reserve Army medical units are being trained to treat the least seriously injured H-bomb victims first, thus restoring their productivity. The most badly hurt will be treated last—if at all." The word "reverse" in this context is frightening, yet personifies the irrationality bred of hysteria.

Finally, President Kennedy sanctions LIFE magazine's drive for fall-out shelters. (LIFE magazine states that 97% of our population could be saved if shelters were provided.) The Leader of the People leads the panicked voices in a national dirge; when this happens the situation becomes only more apalling for the voice of the Church and the voices of the State are one and both are shrieking—the raw nerve of hysteria becomes teased on a national scale.

With industry impaired permanently, live-stock dead, food supplies contaminated, and the communications of despair finally smashed by the bomb, man wanders into a wasteland of dying plantlife and burned sod. It will be then, and only then, that he realizes that he has fouled his nest.

Redmen Cross Country Team Is Victorious Over Bears, Huskies

by ABE SHEINKER '62

Bob Brouillet continued his torrid long-distance running Saturday to lead the UMass Harriers to victory over Maine and Northeastern. The Redmen placed their five best in the first ten while finishing with 29 points to Mane's 37 and Northeastern's 61.

Brouillet, who set a blistering pace while running at full power all the way, missed the 4.2 mile course record by 16 seconds with a winning time of 19:54. He averaged 4:45 per mile and finished 150 yards ahead of the Huskies Chico Parillo with Mike Kimball of Maine another 50 yards back.

From fourth through ninth place it was Mass., Maine, Mass., Maine, and Mass., Maine, as Dick Blomstrom, Jim Wrynn and Dave Balch managed to keep one place ahead of their Black Bear rivals. Gene Colburn rounded out the first five Redmen in tenth place as the second Northeastern man came in twelfth behind UM's Charlie Proctor.

It was a well-deserved win for the Redmen who have been working hard running 8 miles a day. Had the tri-meet been scored as two separate dual meets, UMass would have edged Maine 25-31, and rolled over N.U., 19-42. It ran the Harriers' seasonal record to three victories over five teams with no losses. They now have a running win streak of six straight.

The Redmen now face two more tough opponents in Boston University and UConn, on Friday at Storrs. The superior UMass depth should be very helpful then as the Huskies and Terriers have good front line men but are weak in the number 3, 4, and 5 spots.

The first 10 finishers were:
1. Brouillet, Mass. 19:54
2. Parillo, N.U. 20:29
3. Kimball, Maine 20:46
4. Blomstrom, Mass. 21:06
5. Ellis, Maine 21:09
6. Wrynn, Mass. 21:12
7. Wentworth, Maine 21:30
8. Balch, Mass. 21:18
9. Hanson, Maine 21:30
10. Colburn, Mass. 21:35

Other UMass finishers:
11. Proctor 21:37
15. O'Brien 21:55
18. Hasbrouck 22:20
21. Leavitt 22:32
22. LaMarre 22:36
24. Avery 22:43
28. B. Thompson 23:24

Williams Team Overcomes Weakened UMass Squad

Williams College booters combined speed and skill Saturday afternoon to hand the UMass soccer team a 6-0 loss. For the Williamstowners it was their first win in as many games while the loss for UMass was their first in two games.

In addition to their offensive attack the Williams defense was tight and provided few opportunities for shots at their goal.

For the Redmen, two players stood out in the contest. Dave Amundsen and Ron Packard both played fine games on offense and defense for most of the game.

Redmen soccer coach Larry Briggs stated that his crew was not up to full playing strength as Stam Paleocrassus and several other members of the team were out with minor ailments. The squad is expected to be at regular strength when it takes to the road this week for games at Trinity College on Wednesday and at UConn on Saturday.

Knights Beat UConn, 35-12

The University of Connecticut football team made too many mistakes for its own good, Saturday, as costly errors and the powerful defense of the Rutgers squad dumped the Huskies 35-12 at New Brunswick.

The Scarlet Knights from New Jersey turned a poor UConn punt and two pass interceptions into touchdowns and piled up a 29-0 lead before the men from Storrs began to roll midway in the third quarter.

Rutgers made use of a versatile offense for a good part of the game, alternating quarterbacks Sam Mudie and Bill Speranza guiding the attack. Rutgers' halfbacks proved to be a deciding factor in the victory as they accounted for a good part of the yardage.

Connecticut, having lost to Yale last week 18-0 is now 0-2 for the season, while Rutgers boasts of a 2-0 slate.

The UMass squad will travel to UConn's Homecoming decked stadium next week.

Maine Downs Vermont Cats

Halfback Dave Cloutier of the University of Maine Bears exploded for four touchdowns, one at the end of a 75-yard pass play, as Maine overpowered Vermont 34-14 in a Yankee Conference football game at Orono, Saturday.

The Black Bears scored twice in the first three minutes as Cloutier shook loose on scoring jaunts of 20 and 11 yards. Later in the opening period quarterback Manch Wheeler hit the elusive halfback with a pass that traveled some 50 yards in the air, and Cloutier took it the rest of the way.

Wheeler and Cloutier clicked again with a 10-yard scoring aerial in the second period, and Walt Beaulieu closed out the Maine scoring with a 39 yard run in the final quarter.

Vermont, although still scheduled with YanCon teams, does not enter into the Conference competition for the Beanpot.

Three All-America Gridders Lead Pre-Season Star List

Three members of last year's first team All America spearheaded the pre-season list of prospects for the 1961 team to be selected by the American Football Coaches Association.

Fullback Bob Ferguson of Ohio State, halfback Ernie Davis of Syracuse, and guard Joe Romig of Colorado were leaders in the early balloting by 2,000 college coaches, it was announced by Jack Curtice, Stanford University head coach and AFCA president.

Eastman Kodak Company will sponsor the 1961 All-America and present Kodak Awards honoring the Coach of the year from a major and a small college for the second consecutive year.

The 1961 squad of the original and oldest All-America, started in 1889 by Walter Camp, will be based on careful evaluation of each player's complete season performance, including the slow-motion analysis of many game movies. The widespread exchange of game movies will give every coach maximum opportunity to select the outstanding players in all areas.

Curtice stressed that these pre-season selections were determined by practice and previous game performances and that, in previous seasons, many All-America players have not been listed in the early balloting.

Coaches will nominate again in mid-season and end-of-the-season polls. The final ballot will be reviewed by the All-America Board of Coaches.

Villanova Brawn Overpowers Mighty Mass. Effort

33-13 Score Doesn't Tell Whole Story As Redmen Battle Well

by W. JOHN LENNON '63

Villanova's undefeated Wildcats roared into Amherst Saturday, locked the Redmen in their tepee, and staged a war dance of their own as they clawed UMass, 33-13, before 7000 shirt-sleeved fans.

A capricious fate smiled benignly on the local gridders during the first half of the skirmish. The leprechauns, elves, and the little men were turned loose to help them. Vic Fusia's forces could do no wrong against the highly regarded Philadelphians.

Black magic blunted the visitor's skills to educe numerous errors against the defensive minded Redmen. Three times in this half, when the Redmen were outside their own 14, John McCormick relinquished posession via the punt. Nothing was working for the opposition though; they couldn't even take advantage of these gifts. Twice they fumbled and the third time retained posession for 16 plays, but failed to score. Fusia's heros just had the touch of Midas. Everything came out pure gold.

In the second half, though, the tables were turned. The Redmen earned what little they got during the final 30 minutes. During the third period UMass had posession for only nine of the 33 plays, and compiled a total offensive yardage of only 14 yards. Still, though, the Redmen refused to falter, and were still very much in the game with less than five minutes in the contest.

The Wildcats' well groomed, machine-like offense received the game's opening kickoff and ground their way goalward from the 50. The ten plays leading to the TD were highlighted by a 30-yd. Richman to Russo combination; and climaxed when Richman rolled out to the left side, and cut back eight yards for the TD. Tom O'Rourke upped the count to 8-0 by sprinting around the right end.

UM's initial score was set up when Bob Foote recovered a fumble on the opposition's 23 McCormick connected with Ed Forbush for 13 yards, and Sam Lussier slanted through the line on the next three plays to reach paydirt with 20 seconds remaining in the quarter. After John Bamberry faked a kicking conversion, McCormick missed connections on a pass for the game tying two-pointer.

Villanova returned to the battle early in the 2nd stanza, but their ten play attack was nearly stymied on the UM 2. Billy Joe, however, picked up a first down on a fourth down plunge through center. Right halfback Larry Glueck then knifed off tackle for the TD. Ron Meyer's kick for the conversion went astray and Villanova was atop a 14-6 score.

The visitors again scored on a second half, 84 yard drive during which they rolled up six first downs. Fullback Billy Joe culminated the drive by plunging off right guard for the six pointer. Richman's attempted pass conversion was incomplete.

The Philadelphians pushed the count to 26-6 in almost an identical manner as Joe cracked off right tackle for seven yards. Richman again missed an attempted pass conversion.

Old Man Time began to take its toll. The Redmen, down by three TD's, went to the airways; and McCormick connected with Paul Majeski on a nine yard scoring play with less than six minutes left. The seven play drive was highlighted by Fred Lewis' 36 yard sprint around right end. Bamberry toed the point to raise the score to 26-13.

The Main Liners culminated the day's scoring activities with seconds remaining in the contest when Ted Aceto found Ron Meyers in the endzone for another six points. Meyers then split the uprights to bring the count to 33-13.

THE TEAM CALLED DESIRE

A game Jimmy Hickman is snowed under by two big Wildcats during Saturday's game at Alumni Field. This picture in a way typifies the UMass-Villanova game, a battling squad playing their hearts out against an overpowering opponent. The UMass stands were well aware of their team's effort and showed their appreciation with boisterous cheers and a game-ending applause.

DOWNING A WILDCAT

The UMass defenders had a rough time of it containing the Villanova attack Saturday, but they came through in fine fashion, causing the Wildcats to fumble more than once. Wildcat Nick Russo, a 190 lb. halfback picked up a few through the line before he was brought down.

EXTRA POINTS

A press box poll resulted in John Kozaka and Tom Keper being named the best linemen for their respective teams. Lewis was named sophomore of the game while Richman was tabbed as the top back of the contest . . . Though the Redmen ware decisively defeated, it wasn't a loss without glory. Villanova players remarked in the locker room that the UM line hit harder than that of their three previous opponents. This was also the Wildcats first gridiron battle in which their third string didn't see action in the first half.

The cats' 230 lb. hard charging fullback Bill Joe—that's all, no one could hold him long enough to ask him his last name—is a top pro prospect. The Coatesville, Pa. native piled up 38 yards in his bull-like thrusts through the UM line . . . Steve Sinko, whose BU squad was routed by Penn State Friday night, had his eagle eyes trained on the Redmen throughout the afternoon. We haven't seen the last of the Terrier chief; he'll be back in search of a victory November 4 . . . Massachusetts may be the Bay State, but Villanova regards it as the land of plenty. After having buried both UM and Holy Cross on their home fields, they'll try to do the same to Boston College when the Philadelphians journey to the Beantown two weeks hence . . . Villanova compiled 419 total offensive yardage to 101 for UM. The Redmen tallied more than twice the number of points than the Wildcats' three previous opponents have totaled together . . Southpaw Richie Richman's talents extend beyond the gridiron. As a regular first sacker he batted a hefty .460 for the Cats nine this past spring . . . After a nine hour trek, the Main Liners arrived at 5:00 p.m. Friday afternoon at the Hotel Northampton . . . Next autumn the Redmen will be guests of Villanova.

The game's turning point occurred in the last quarter when the third Redmen TD was nullified because of a personal foul. Following this McCormick to Lussier play, McCormick, in a vain attempt to beat the clock, had one of his bullets intercepted. Villanova wasted little time scoring. Thus a probable 26-20 final count never materialized . . Next week the Redmen open their YanCon campaign when they journey to UConn. See you all there.

LEWIS TAKES OVER

Halfback Freddy Lewis eluded the grasp of these two Villanova defenders and broke away for ten yards and a first down. The Wildcats grabbed his shirt, and a moment after the picture was taken Fred spun around and lunged downfield.

First Years Of Israel Subject Of S.Z.O. Talk

On last Monday evening, Oct. 2, The Student Zionist Organization began its third year on the UMass campus by welcoming the new regional director, Philip Horn, who spoke on "Israel's First Thirteen Years, and the Next."

Horn received a B.A. in History at Brooklyn College where he was S.Z.O. chapter president, and his A.M. at Ohio State where he founded and became president of its S.Z.O. chapter.

Horn was in Israel in 1955-56 on The Institute for Youth Leaders from Abroad. Last year he was out on the West Coast as field worker; this year he has joined the New England region.

Talk Centered On 13

Horn's talk centered on the number 13 in reference to Israel, this being the thirteenth year of its independence.

Thirteen is the age of confirmation, the end of childhood and the beginning of maturity. Has Israel come of age? Has it, at the age of thirteen ended its childhood and entered into maturity?

Reports Given

Following the lecture was a short question period, brief reports on The Leaders' Institute, given by Micki Wenig '62 who has just returned from Israel, and on the 8th national convention given by Sheldon E. Glazer '64 and Marty Mould '63 who were the delegates this year. The meeting was adjourned with Israeli folk dancing.

S.Z.O. was pleased to welcome several new members into the chapter and invites all others who are interested in increasing their knowledge of Israel, its land, people, and culture, to come to our future meetings to get acquainted with the organization.

English Prof Will Lecture For Hillel

Crime and Punishment by Dostoevsky will be the topic of Marc L. Ratner, assistant professor of English in the second lecture of the series "Moral Problems in Great Literature" sponsored by the Hillel Foundation. The lecture will be given Tuesday, October 10 at 8 p.m. in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union.

Ratner graduated from Fordham University in 1950, received his M.A. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1951, and his Ph.D. in 1959 from New York University.

He was appointed to the UMass English Department in September 1960 where he currently teaches English I and English 25. Previously he has taught at the University of Colorado and New York University.

In the past he has published "'Anywhere Out of this World: Nathanael West and Baudelaire" in American Literature, January 1960, and "'The Longmont Experiment" in the Journal of Higher Education, May 1960.

Repertory Theatre To Present Plays In Northampton

The National Repertory Theatre will open its national tour at the Academy of Music in Northampton on October 19, 20 and 21.

On the evenings of Thursday, October 19 and Friday, October 20 as well as matinee Saturday, October 21, Maxwell Anderson's Elizabeth The Queen will be presented with Eva LeGallienne starring in the role of Elizabeth and supported, among others, by Faye Emerson.

On Saturday night October 21st the bill will be Schiller's Mary Stuart in which Faye Emerson will star in the portrayal of Mary, Queen of Scots, and, among others, supported by Eva LeGallienne in the role of Elizabeth.

Student tickets may be secured at a 15% reduction from the regular box office in Hamp.

Prof. Alviani Names Talent Show Judges

Professor Doric Alviani of the Music department recently announced the judges for the Freshman Scholarship Show, to be held Sunday evening, October 22 at Bowker Auditorium.

Professor Schwartz of the music department, Doris Abramson of the speech department, and the new Dean of Students, William Field, will judge the talented frosh.

Professor Alviani said that he feels this battery of judges to be an excellent one, and that he will have complete confidence in their selection of the students who will win three scholarships totaling $200.

The scholarships will be paid for by the money collected from sponsors of the Operetta Guild's "Oklahoma!". These sponsors are known as the "Oklahoma Statesmen."

There are still places open for freshmen who would like to try out. Anyone interested may see Professor Alviani in Old Chapel anytime, or leave his name with Mrs. Perry, the music dept. secretary.

Also appearing in the Scholarship Show will be the University Dance Band and the girls from Lewis House, who recently won the Interdorm Sing.

McCune To Speak At Dedication Here

Dr. Shannon McCune, director of the department of Education for UNESCO, will be the main speaker at the dedication of the new School of Education building at UMass.

Dr. McCune, noted geographer and educator who was provost of the University for five years prior to taking the UNESCO post early this year, will address an assemblage of 500 persons invited to attend the dedication on Friday, October 20, at 4 p.m.

The high-ranking official, whose headquarters are in Paris, France, is currently in the United States as a delegate to the eighth national conference of the U.S. National Commission for UNESCO.

Welcoming remarks at the School of Education dedication will be given by Dr. John W. Lederle, President of the University, and by Dean Albert W. Purvis of the School of Education. Serving as chairman of the program will be Dr. Gilbert L. Woodside, University provost.

The new building, at the northeast end of campus, is a two million dollar facility devoted to the University's teacher training program and research in child development. Completed in the summer, it has been in use since the beginning of the current semester.

The modernistic structure has more than 20 rooms, including classrooms, conference halls, reading and guidance clinics, library, an auditorium for large lecture-classes, and faculty offices.

SHANNON McCUNE

An important adjunct is the Mark's Meadow Laboratory School which occupies one wing of the building. Administered jointly by the town of Amherst school committee and the University's School of Education, the facility enrolls 325 Amherst children from grades one to six. Teacher trainees and researchers make use of closed-circuit television and special observation windows for studies of children in a classroom environment.

Dean Purvis has announced that the School of Education is holding open house for all interested persons each Saturday in October. Guided tours are conducted from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. All teachers, guidance officers, and school administrators are invited to attend.

Lisle Fellowship Traveler To Discuss Seminars Abroad

Miss Anne Tungren, a member of the Lisle Fellowship unit in Switzerland and Germany in the summer of 1960, and the Jamaican Lisle unit this past summer, will be on campus October 13-14 to speak with students and faculty members about the international educational opportunities for travel and study through the Lisle Fellowship.

Opportunities at modest cost have been offered by Lisle since 1936. Next summer there will be Lisle International Institutes in Human Relations in Washington, D.C. and near San Francisco, California.

Similar six-week International Seminars abroad will be held in Scandinavia, Germany, Italy, Japan and Jamacia. Plans are underway for participation in the student exchange program with the USSR, for a comparative education seminar to Africa, and for a small exploratory service unit in Latin America.

Miss Tungren will be available for interviews in Room 12, Old Chapel, Friday afternoon and Saturday. Appointments may be made by calling the Protestant Chaplain's Office (ext. 413).

NO CLASSES THURS.

There will be no classes at UMass this Thursday, Columbus Day. This reversal of "the no middle of the week holidays policy" took place yesterday afternoon on Beacon Hill. State Commissioner of Education, Owen B. Kiernan, stated that he did not believe that classes could or should be held on a legal holiday because of the Blue Laws.

Provost Woodside announced yesterday afternoon that in accordance with this ruling, no classes will be held at UMass this Thursday. It has been stated, but not yet confirmed, that this ruling also applies to private schools in the Commonwealth.

UM Elects Student Government; Lincoln, Yablonsky Class VP's

UMass went to the polls yesterday to elect it's student government for the present year. The Classes of '63 and '64 elected their vice presidents, and the Class of '64 also elected its senator at-large. In the race for Commuter senator, four were elected to represent commuters including a write-in who won with six votes.

The complete list of winners, including Dormitory senators, is given below.

All newly elected senators are asked to report tonight to the Council Chambers at 7 p.m. to be sworn in.

Beloff Suggests U. S. Face Situation Today

by ANN MILLER '64

Dr. Max Beloff, Gladstone Professor of Government and Public Administration at Oxford University gave a major public lecture yesterday, October 10, at 4 p.m., in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union.

Beloff, speaking on American foreign policy and Western Europe, brought out two main points. "The United States," he said, "has never accepted the division of Europe between Soviet and Non-Soviet powers." He further pointed out that this country looks forward to a United States of Europe.

He first suggested that the United States, in foreign policy, face the revolutionary situation which presently exists; the nature of this revolution has three aspects:

DR. MAX BELOFF

(1) In the Soviet Union . . . "the United States has come up against forces with objectives of their own, who are trying to change the face of the world."

(2) There has been an immense change in the world scene due to the destruction of traditional European powers, the multiplicity of new sovereign states and dependencies, and the beginning of some movements which may transcend them.

(3) "The emergence of nuclear weapons which has altered the conduct of foreign affairs . . . . The threat of armed force has, in a sense, become the threat of suicide."

Beloff said, "In Europe, the United States is dealing with a set of long-established countries . . . . U.S. policy in Europe, since the end of the Second World War, has shown remarkable continuity." But if it is most continuous, it is also most critical because . . . . "it has been recognized that Western Europe is the greatest single prize" in the cold war. United States policy toward Europe, as a whole, has recognized two separate elements, which although reconciled on paper, are inherently different.

First, the United States never accepted the division of Europe as a result of the war. American committment to unify Germany is the "most dramatic symbol" of this. The second element has been our attempt to assist those forces in Europe which have been in

Mass. Review Gets Support Of 4 Colleges

The Four College Cooperation Program conducted by the University, Amherst, Smith and Mount Holyoke colleges has added a new project to an already long list of joint activities.

Prof. Stuart M. Stoke, Four College Coordinator, Monday announced that the institutions have voted to give support to the "Massachusetts Review," a professional quarterly of the arts, literature and public affairs.

Founded two years ago by faculty members at UMass, the magazine is an independent, nonprofit enterprise receiving much of its support from subscribers, patrons and philanthropic organizations.

The decision to give joint assistance by the four colleges will assure continued production of the magazine through the next three years. At the end of that period the editors expect that the "Review" will be self-sustaining.

The magazine, which has received excellent reviews in newspapers and periodicals, is under the editorial supervision of two members of the University faculty—F. C. Ellert, head of the department of German and Russian, and Sidney Kaplan, professor of English. The quarterly draws on all of the area colleges for its general editorial board.

According to the editors, the "Review" is presently a national magazine and in a real sense becoming international. Subscriptions and manuscripts have been received from many parts of the United States as well as from foreign countries.

Main Editorial:

FARCE AT UCONN

In a move to exert complete and dictatorial control over the efforts, funds, and minds of the student body at the University of Connecticut, the UConn Administration has made the Board of Trustees the publishers of the campus daily newspaper, given the Board complete control over the radio station, and refused to recognize the Student Senate, its constitution, and its lawyer. As of today, freedom of speech is a farce at Connecticut's State University.

The move, which is interpreted as an effort on the part of the Administration to run a much "tighter" campus, provoked the Student Body into a mass riot last week and moved the Inter-fraternity Council to boycott this week's Homecoming festivities. While the Collegian cannot respect the unruly riot of last Friday night, we most certainly back the IFC's ordered Home coming abstention.

When a college administration resorts to the suppression of the printed word or the radio waves, then their campus ceases to be a spawning ground for the principles of democracy and instead becomes a model totalitarian dictatorship. The ORDERLY demonstrations slated for this weekend and the Homecoming football game against UMass have our wholehearted support in the name of student rights and student government.

by GEORGE MASSELAM '63

Down through the ages, Man has developed to the highest degree the art of communication. His ability to impart feelings to others through verbal images is the most precise and definite in the animal kingdom. Through language, he has learned to clearly state, to articulate problems and to deal with them more scientifically through logic and reason. Unfortunately, Man has also adopted the practice of denial, which is to ignore a problem and thus refuse to deal with the reality of a situation. I am afraid that this is the decision that the United States faces in recognizing Red China as a nation and the accepting of it into the United Nations. The decision is either to communicate with the problem by stating, deliberating and forming conclusions with those involved in the problem, or to deny the existence of the problem's entanglements.

If the U.S. does recognize Red China, she has met the challenge and faced the existing problem. She can now deal with Red China on her own level, which is the only suitable condition for arbitrating problems. But why should the U.S. bother to deliberate with Red China? The answer to this is that Red China has been developing itself at an apprehensive pace and now exists as a threatening problem to world peace. The government is controlled by extremist dogmatic Communists, unlike the Communists of Russia who tend to be more liberal. These extremists intend to conquer simply by sheer military onslaught, while Khruschev's communists wish to conquer by showing their cultural and economic superiority. If Red China is ignored, the problem of military might may grow to magnamious proportions. How can the U.S. most effectively deal with these extremists? Is to deny their reality, thus allowing the Chinese Reds to develop at their frantic pace, is not having to answer to any one for their actions, a solution to the problem for the U.S.? If Red China were allowed into the U.N., then as a member of the United Nations she would have to answer to the U.N. for her actions. This admittance would force responsibility into the lap of Red China. On the tense floor of General Assembly the U.S. and western culture would match wits, philosophies, and ideologies across the table with Red China instead of on the battlefield. Is the United States afraid to face this challenge? I hope not!!

If the U.S. continues to reject Red China and thus prevent her from entering the United Nations, she would push the Chinese Reds into a very insecure position. Communist China would be forced to put up or shut up, a situation which will force her to prove herself as a nation. What would be the outcome? Probably a surgence forward economically, culturally, and militarilly. If she still has not found recognition after her resurgence, she may coerce other nations to accept her, thus ulitizing her military might; or she could even launch overt attacks against other nations. This is the position the U.S. is forcing her to assume. The United States must be sensitive to the precarious involvements and deal with the problem accordingly by voting for the admittance of Red China into the U.N.

Can we break away from our provincial "only in our national interest" attitude and look at the world with a new perspective, a perspective that generates responsibility for all the peoples in the world? I think that the United States has a higher destiny than that of isolationism. The United States can't function at her best as a several entity—that is by cutting herself off from certain countries who will soon be playing a great part in the history of the world. It has been the policy of the State Department in the past to recognize functioning governments. Red China now governs 600,000,000 people, and, by the year 2000 A.D., she will contain 1,000,000,000 peoples within her boundries. How can we deny the existence of these peoples and their government, and accept as a functioning government a small group of aging people living outside the boundries to whom history has denied the hope of ever attaining entrance onto the Chinese mainland again? The United States must, as she has done in the past, accept the political reality of the situation. Has she not recognized Spain's Franco?

If the question is not put off for another year, the Chinese Communists will probably be admitted soon. This has been predicted by United Nations' correspondents! The support of the new African Nations will probably give her enough votes. The United States must realize its purpose in a new world-wide perspective and accept the challenge by recognizing the People's Republic of China.

SYRIA AND THE U.A.R.

by MICHAEL PALTER '63

It is still too early to arrive at meaningful conclusions as to the ultimate implications of the Syrian revolt. It is, however, possible to analyze the initial consequences of the situation and to speculate upon the future of the U.A.R., Nasser, and Syria.

The provisional government set up by Premiere Mamoun al Kuzbari, a conservative, was quick to obtain recognition from Nationalist China, Guatemala, Jordan, Turkey, and Iran. All of these nations are Western oriented, particularly Nationalist China, and Guatemala. Turkey and Iran are members of the Central Treaty Organization.

Certainly the Syrian revolt cannot be called a popular movement. Although the New York Times (Oct. 2) in discussing the revolt headlined: "Economic Edicts Angered Syrians," implying Syrians in general, the paper goes on to report that "The makeup of Syrian's insurgent cabinet indicates that it represents chiefly bankers, land-owners and traders of the United Arab Republic's former northern region." Then, (Oct. 4) the Times says: "President Gamul Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic remains popular among the "little people," the lower middle class and the workers."

The fact that this was not "a revolt of the people" must be our central consideration, for surely a military junta lacking popular support cannot possibly hope to survive in Syria. Nasser and his Radio Cairo are much too close. Yet, it appears that Premier Kuzbari's pledge to hold elections within four months constitutes an intelligent step towards initial stabilization.

Of course, it is possible for the junta to stave off counter-revolt by employing suppressive measures. Indeed, the government has already banned political parties "for fear of subversive movements." The government has, in addition, closed all schools and universities and prohibited civilians from possessing arms. These may all be distasteful harbingers of the future. We cannot, however, condemn the government for these actions, for it might easily be said that the political atmosphere in Syria remains volatile. The new government thus is forced to deal with the pro-Nasser elements and must have the tools with which to do this.

Yet, after this idle speculation, one must come to the inevitable question: What was the reason for this split? To understand this, it is first necessary to discuss Nasser's "economic reform program." In general, Nasser has been moving toward complete socialization of industry. Argiculture, although remaining in private hands, was to be "guided by strong co-operatives supervised, in turn, by the Ministry of Agriculture." The government, however, was to exercise effective control over the basic industries such as textiles, cotton, iron and steel, and construction. New measures were to facilitate further distribution of land to the peasants and farmers, shorten the work week to forty two hours, and distribute 25% of business profits to funds for "worker's bonuses, housing, schools, and medical care. Incidentally, the latter program has apparently been adopted by the Kuzbari government.

Although Nasser's "socialization program" might have looked like peaches and cream to the lower and lower-middle classes, certain elements suffered greatly from these decrees. It was these elements who engineered the revolt. Yet, why was it that this revolt was not immediately put down by the vast masses of "little people" who would presumeably have benefitted from Nasser's program? Of course, one can say that these people did not control the army and consequently possessed little political power. This is a partial answer. The better answer is that the very people who were to benefit at the end of Nasser's economic rainbow were resentful of his means to attain these ends. These people could see the political and economic power drifting towards Cairo. These people suffered suppressions at the hands of the secret police, headed by Col. Hamid Serraj, who until recently supported Nasser, and who was instrumental in bringing Syria into the fold of the U.A.R. These people saw Egyptian officers elevated above their comrades. These people saw the independence of their nation dwindling. Yet, one must concede that the independence of Syria had to diminish if it was to exist in the U.A.R. Nasser could never have tolerated a federation of independent states. Nasser could not have tolerated serious dissention. Nasser feels that dissention leads to division and weakness. In this he is correct.

The writing, however, is not yet on the wall. Now, the Soviet Union and Bulgaria have recognized independent Syria. But is it in Moscow's interest to recognize a government which promises to be comparatively conservative? The answer to this is probably yes. By recognition, the Soviets have opened the gateway of non-alignment to the new regime. The West would do well to quickly recognize the new regime, if only to avoid needless animosity.

Thus, Premier Kuzbari enters his first weeks of leadership with visions of sugarplums in his head, the sugarplums consisting of fat packs of aid from both East and West. Out of this confusing situation perhaps one fairly accurate speculation can be made: Tel Aviv must be a little happier tonight!

WMUA Spotlight

SPOTLIGHT ON WMUA . . . In this kickoff column and each week hereafter we shall be attempting to give you a deeper insight into one of the largest and most complicated of the University's extra-curricular activities. WMUA has its virtues and its failings. We shall be attempting to point out the good points, and, without making lame excuses, to explain what is being done to alleviate its problems.

Perhaps the best way to begin this project is to state briefly just what is WMUA and what are its purposes. WMUA is the student operated, student financed, student oriented radio voice of the University. It is licensed by the FFC as a non-commercial educational radio station. This license allows it to broadcast only on FM. It can be picked up on any standard FM receiver within a fifteen mile radius. It can also be heard in the dormitories of the University via a system known as carrier current.

What is carrier current and how does it work? Simply stated all carrier current does is pick up WMUA's beam and convert it to an AM beam by means of compact coverters which are placed in every dorm. Now we find ourselves plunged into the biggest problem facing WMUA. Why isn't the converter working in this dorm? Why isn't there a converter in that dorm? And on and on and on. When WMUA first started using converters five or six dorms were enough to house the entire under graduate student body. At present there are 26 dorms and new ones are going up every year. There is no company which makes a converter of this type on a commerical basis. As a result every converter now in use has been made by students who have found the time and have the knowledge to do so. If we are to ignore the economic problems of this arrangement (actually we cannot; each converter costs over $150) we can see more clearly the problem of finding individuals who are skilled enough and have the time not only to build these converters but also to keep them in a constant state of repair.

And so the problem is there and until such time as a satisfactory solution can be found (and the problem is not being ignored) WMUA will continue to present programming designed by and for the student body of the University of Massachusetts.

Synthesis To Sponsor Renowned Theologian

ANDRE TROCME

On Thursday, Oct. 12, at 8 p.m., Dr. Andre Trocmé, internationally known theologian, will deliver a lecture entitled "Colonialism, Communism, and the Future of Democracy" in the Senate Chambers.

Doctor Trocmé studied at the University of Paris and Union Theological Seminary, New York. He is a pastor of the French Reformed Church (Huguenot) as well as a founder of the College Cevenol. He is former pastor of the Protestant Church at Le Chambon sur Lignon, and at the present time is travelling secretary of the International Fellowship of Reconciliation and director of Maison de la Reconciliation, Versailles.

During the Nazi occupation of France, Dr. Trocmé and his associates helped some hundreds of Jewish children to escape to Switzerland. Because of his defiance of the Oath of Allegiance. he was imprisoned by the Vicky government.

He is the author of The Politics of Repentance as well as several articles in the Christian Century, Fellowship, and Cashiers de la Reconciliation. In 1951, he was appointed to deliver the Robert Treat Paine Lectures in several American Seminaries.

While most of the campus is aware of the work of the Christian Association, Synthesis is a comparatively new group. This will be the initial lecture of a series which Synthesis will sponsor or co-sponsor. In the coming weeks Synthesis will present discussions dealing with the utilization of atomic energy, the Latin American situation, the Cuban situation, as well as discussions of integration and disarmament.

The primary purpose of these lectures will be to educate the student body and to stimulate thought on vital issues. In times such as these, it would not be unfair to say that this lecture is of the utmost importance.

Adams' French Corridor Holds Introductory Tea

Wednesday, Sept. 27 was the introductory tea of the French Corridor in Abigail Adams House. Instead of hearing "coffee", "tea", "cream", one heard café? thé? de la crème?

Guests of the evening were Dr. Goding, Dr. Clark, Mrs. Gonon, Mrs. Gutowska, Miss Versis, and faculty advisor Mr. MacCombie. Madame De Kerpely, the Abbey's new head of residence, helped welcome the guests. She has been housemother previously in French Houses of Wellesley and Tufts.

The French Corridor was organized last spring by its chairman, Ruth Levine, and it now accommodates 13 sophomores, juniors and seniors on the first floor Abbey. The girls are Susan Goldsmith, Marie Coveney, Joyce Gorman, Lina Compagnone, Carolyn Heitin, Ruth Levine, Eve Silberstein, Dolores McCullough, Ruth Wallace, Marilyn Pallys, Madeline Marsella, Linda Kaplan and Sally Winters. The girls' majors are varied.

French is spoken in the rooms and on the corridor and a planned French program is held once a week.

Faculty members and students interested in speaking francais can contact Ruth Levine, Abbey.

Literary Society To Present Informal Reading

An informal reading of The American Dream is being presented by the Literary Society this Friday, October 13. It will be at 8 p.m. in Old Chapel Auditorium.

The cast—Peter Avratin, Ann Meltzer, Patricia Wood, Eve Silberstein, and Paul Thoroux—are being directed by Mr. Seymour Rudin, assistant professor in the English Department.

The playwright Edward Albee is also known for The Death of Bessie Smith, The Zoo Story, and The Sandbox.

This, his newest play, is currently playing in New York and has been the subject of much controversy among its critics. While being condemned as immoral, nihilistic, and defeatist, the play is also regarded by some critics as profoundly moral.

Albee attacks many of the artificial values prevalent in modern American society. While it is meant to offend, it is also meant to entertain and to amuse.

The New Yorker critic, Whitney Balliett, challenges the potential audience. "This is," he says, "a play for the resilient young and the wise old. All those paunchy, sluggish targets in between had best stay away."

J. D.'s CORNER

by JUDY DICKSTEIN '63

For the particular benefit of the class of '65, today's column will begin with a few basic definitions pertinent to UMass life:

HATCH: short for "fly hatchery".

SOUTH COLLEGE: One of UMass' oldest buildings. Despite the fact that it is ramshackle and obsolete, it remains the UMass' administrative center . . . for sentimental reasons. This edifice is kept from collapsing by miles of red tape.

UNIVERSITY STORE: A place where, in order to be permitted inside, you must leave outside everything you'll need once you're inside.

VAN METER: Residence for male students minoring in alpinism (. . . mountain-climbing, to you)

ABIGAIL ADAMS: (ex)-residence (no wonder!) for male engineering students minoring in female anatomy.

HOUR EXAM: an ingenious device, the correction of which is intended solely to keep grad students busy.

METAWAUMPEE: a Red spy

R.O.T.C.: short for "Royal Order of Tree Climbers.

If you want to try your hand at making the 1961 version of "bathtub gin"—quite legally—here's how:

Get a marrow squash, cut a small slice off one end, and scoop out part of the inside. Fill the hollow with raisins and brown sugar, up-end the marrow over a wide-necked jar, and drill a small hole right through so that the liquid drips through into the jar. The result will be a kind of raw, unseasoned rum which will taste best if you can cork it up and leave it for almost a year. Start now and it will be ready for your Labor Day picnic.

Northampton Volunteers To Conduct Orientation

Northampton Student Volunteers will hold their first orientation meetings of the year on Thursday, October 12th at 4:30 and on Saturday, October 14th at 1 p.m. Both meetings will last approximately two hours and are designed to introduce this relatively new therapeutically oriented program to the interested student.

The meetings will be held at Northampton State Hospital, located one mile from Northampton center on Route 66, in the Memorial Building. Visits to the wards will be included.

The idea of college students assisting in understaffed state mental institutions originated at the Phillips Brooks House, Social Service organization of Harvard University.

Last April about 15 UMass students, together with representatives of 7 area colleges, heard PBH volunteers speak on their own work in planning and organizing a volunteer program at Metropolitan State Hospital in Waltham. A nucleus of students from Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Amherst, and the University began working immediately one night per week on a chronic ward. By the end of the semester about 30 University students had visited the hospital.

This year applications have been distributed in the dorms and 70 students have expressed interest in this program. The volunteer program is not a Recognized Student Organization, nor is it affiliated with any one department or religious organization on campus.

Any interested student or faculty member is invited to attend either of these first meetings and see for themselves the setup of the Northampton State Hospital.

Transportation has been a serious handicap to the program and many interested students may be unable to attend these first meetings. Therefore, if you are driving over either Thursday or Saturday afternoon please take a full car with you.

Notices of further activities and information concerning the Volunteer Program will be released in the Collegian and be posted on dorm bulletin boards.

Over 300 Persons Attend Successful Baker Dorm Dance

Saturday evening, Baker House was the scene of a successful dance. The dance, Baker's first of the year, was attended by over three hundred people.

The music was provided by Carl Alsing and Jack Allan, both from Baker. They used their own stereo hi-fi equipment with records donated by dorm members.

This dance shows the spirit with which Baker House is starting off the year. In the past, social activities in Baker have lacked any semblance of enthusiasm. Saturday night, however, enthusiasm seemed to be the byword.

Since the dance was so successful, another has been planned for the evening of November 4 at 8 o'clock.

TEP, TKE, TC, PSK Victors; KS and TKE Still Hold Lead

by JAY BAKER '63

TEP edged out Lambda Chi as TKE, TC, and PSK shut out their opponents in Monday nights IFC clashes.

TEP TOPS LCA

In the opening game the Teppers took the lead early in the first half and managed to maintain this lead throughout the entire contest.

TEPs first and last touch down was set up on a series of three plays culminating in the score. Charley Gorden fired to Sol Yas for ten yards, then hit Fred Shotz who lunged within the twenty yard marker. The topper was an eighteen yard lob which Sol Yas caught one handed and rolled into the end zone.

The second half was very evenly matched as Lambda Chi pulled off their only score. Gig Khouri took the snap from center, faked a pass towards end Charley Lapier and took off through the center of the TEP line for a thirty yard run for the score. The big point after was unsuccessful as Gerry Kramer and Freddy Slater managed to corner Khouri.

Late in the last quarter Lambda Chi started to move. They got within the TEP twenty yard line when Al Levick intercepted a short pass and scooted up the sidelines for thirty yards. TEP kept the ball for a few plays before the game ended. Final score, TEP 7, LCA 6.

In the other early game Phi Sig shut out AEPi 6-0.

PSK OVER AEPi

Phi Sigma Kappa scored very early in the first half on a pass from quarterback Billy Hogan to halfback Neil Cullen. The point after was unsuccessful.

Phi Sig dominated most of the game as two of their touchdowns were nullified due to penalties. Bruce Linton sparkled on defense for Phi Sig while Steve Forman managed to keep AEPi hustling. Final score, PSK 6, AEPi 0.

In the late Monday night games TKE romped over ATG as quarterback Charley Noble and end Henry Mackie starred.

TKE BOMBS ATG

TKE scored twenty five points the first half. The first score came as Noble pitched a long pass to Makie. The point after was unsuccessful. After a series of downs ATG took over and threw a long one that was intercepted by Paul Klisiewicz who ran it back into the end zone. Joel Lerner caught a pass for the point after. The remaining two touchdowns of the half were on almost identical plays as Noble threw to Makie for the scores.

The second half was also dominated by TKE. Noble again hit Makie and then fired to Ted Osetek for the extra point. The final score came when Paul Klisiewicz intercepted his second pass and shot up the sidelines for the TD. Defensive honors for the game went to Jim Duggan and Bob Mulryan. The final score, TKE 38, ATG 0.

In the final event of the night Theta Chi rolled over Alpha Gam 19-0.

TC 19, AGR 0

Gordie Lewis started the game off with a hard pass to end Lou Bush for the score. However the extra point was unsuccessful. Later in the half Neil Harris caught a beauty forty yards away from passer Gordie Lewis. Jeff Wheeler received the pass for the point after. The final score of the game came on a thirty yard pass play involving Lewis and end Brian Saltus. The defenseman of the day was TC's Bob Ellis who came in with some pretty nifty blocks. Final score, TC 19, AGR 0.

SAE, last year's champ, remains unbeaten in two games, and looks like the possible winner unit."

UMass Meets Huskies Sat.

A contest which could go a long way toward determining the Yankee Conference championship is on tap this weekend when the co-champions from UConn and UMass meet at Storrs. The other conference games are also scheduled.

It will mark the first appearance in conference competition for both UConn and UMass as the latter's games with Maine, scheduled for Sept. 23, had to be postponed until later in the season.

Last year, UConn handed the Redmen a 31-0 setback but UMass gained its share of the title when UConn was upset by New Hampshire. In 31 meetings between the two schools, UMass has won 16 and UConn 15.

In other conference action, Maine travels to Durham to renew an old rivalry with New Hampshire and the improving Vermont Catamounts are hosts to the Rhode Island Rams at Burlington.

Freshman Football Squad Will Meet B. U. Terriers

by AL COHEN '63

Coach Don Johnson and Frosh football are in the spotlight this Friday when Boston University's freshmen eleven helps the Brave's open their 1961-62 season here in Amherst. Game time is 2:30 p.m.

Coach Johnson UMass Grad

Coach Johnson, a redheaded graduate of UMass in '56, got his M.A. in Education in '57 here and is currently the elementary physical education superior in Amherst. Don, captain of the '55 UMass grid team, begins his fourth year of coaching aided by four members of last year's varsity squad, which compiled a 7-2 record. John Burgess, Jerry Cullen, Armand Caraviello, and Roger Benevenuti are the four.

Last year, the little Redmen were 4-1 on the season, the lone loss being at the hands of B.U., the Terriers winning in the last second of play. Conceding that B.U. is always a tough team, Don plans to play them "fairly close to the seams, a bit on the conservative side with emphasis on what should be a good defensive unit."

Sixty candidates have turned out for practice. There are more capable men in each position than there were on last year's squad. Some key men now on the injured list include: Joe Doyle, Worcester; Dave Egan, New Haven, Conn.; Dick Pulsifer, Quincy; and Joe Morris, Columbus, Ohio.

Frosh Cross Country Team Raps Maroons

by BOB BUSSEWICZ '64

The junior harriers, under the direction of Coach Justin L. Cobb, compiled the 14th consecutive win for UMass freshmen squads as it rolled over Springfield yesterday, 24-33. The opposition posed no real threat as it was unable to cope with superior depth of the UMass men and the fine running of first place Tom Panke. UMass men accounted for eight of the first thirteen and seven of the top ten to finish, but the time scores remain a mystery thanks to defective stop-watches

This Friday the squad will again take to the road (contrary to schedule information), as it will engage in a triangular meet against BU and UConn in Connecticut. Looming ahead as future opponents are Harvard and Army, who will provide the real test of strength. The Frosh squad was last defeated in 1959. The following are the results of Monday's meet:

1. Tom Panke, UMass
2. Parker, Springfield
3. Wm. Young, UMass
4. McMullin, Springfield
5. Robert Ramsey, UMass
6. Charles Sission, UMass
7. Putnam, Springfield
8. Schneider, Springfield
9. Alex MacPhail, UMass
10. John Lavoie, UMass
11. Richard Lavoie, UMass
12. Tyvie, Springfield
13. Armand Millet, UMass
14. Bullock, Springfield
15. Hillermeyer, Springfield
16. Bick, Springfield
17. Zimmerman, Springfield
18. Cowise, Springfield

As an extra curricular event the UMass Frosh team entered the Daniel Lawlie Memorial five-mile road race Sunday, and the first place team award. Two copped the first place team award. Two UMass finishers, Tom Panke and Bill Young, placed in the top ten—8th and 9th respectively. Duane Merchant, 16th place finisher of this year's Boston Marathon set the place in 24 min., leading the field of 34 entrants for the five mile course.

Ski Team Reactivated As Skiing Becomes Varsity Sport at U. M.

The Executive Committee of the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference has announced that the University of Mass., as well as Worcester Polytechnical Institute and St. Anselms' has been invited into the Conference for the start of the 61-62 ski season.

Because of this, work has been going on for the past few months to get a ski team organized. Other members of N.E.I.S.C. include Amherst, M.I.T., Northeastern, B.C., B.U., A.I.C., Brown, Tufts, and Princeton.

Eight team members will be chosen by tryouts as soon as "the snow flies." The team will then be divided into A and B groups with four members in each. Our A and B teams will race teams from the other schools in the Conference. The A team will participate in ten events while the B team will participate in five.

The Conference also announced that Women's teams from UMass, Mount Holyoke, Northeastern, Wellesley, and Pembroke will participate.

Mr. William MacConnell of the Forestry Department will be the advisor and coach of the team. A call for ski team candidates will be made the latter part of November. The team members will be able to practice at Hogback Mountain in Brattleboro, Vt. any time during the winter season. There is a possibility of a one week winter training camp at a large Vermont ski area.

The tentative racing schedule is as follows:

Date	Team	Place
Jan. 7	Women	Mt. Tom, Mass.
Jan. 27	Men B Teams & Women	Intervale, N.H.
Jan. 28	Men A Teams	Cranmore, N.H.
Feb. 3-4	Men A Teams	Killington
Feb. 10-11	(Open)
Feb. 17	Men A Teams	Belnap, N.H.
Feb. 18	Men B Teams & Women	Whittier, N.H.
Mar. 3	Men B Teams & Women	Sunapee, N.H.
Mar. 4	Men A Teams	Sunapee, N.H.
Mar. 10	Everyone	Suicide Six, Vt.
Mar. 10	Spring Banquet & Meeting at Woodstock, Vt.

The Executive Committee of N.E.I.S.C. has invited all interested persons to the annual fall meeting which will be held Sunday, Nov. 12th at 1:00 P.M. at the M.I.T. Campus.

Student tickets at $1 and reserved seats at $2.50 for the Connecticut game as well as reserved seats for Homecoming Rhode Island game are now on sale in Room 10A of the Men's Physical Education Building.

Fencing Exhibition To Be Seen in Ballroom Tonight

A demonstration of the sport of fencing will be given this evening at 8:00 p.m. in the Main Ballroom of the Student Union. The demonstration, to be sponsored by the University of Massachusetts Fencing Club, will include some of the members of the club as well as those of the Holyoke Fencing Club.

The Hungarian-born Coach of the Holyoke Fencing Club, John Lishak, is an excellent sabre man, having competed in Europe for a number of years. He, himself, along with other members of the club will demonstrate the sabre.

The Holyoke Club has put on a number of demonstrations on T.V. and has competed with teams in Massachusetts and Connecticut for a number of years.

Gene Murano, a sophomore premed major at UMass, and Steve Metz, a graduate student in preveterinary, will assist in the demonstration which will include a brief history of the sport of fencing, and the three weapons, the foil, sabre and epée.

At the present time, the UMass club has approximately twenty members, including five faculty members.

Gene Murano has two and a

SPORTSENSE

by BEN GORDON '62, Sports Editor

There can be no doubt of the truth of Coach Vic Fusia's preseason comment that the football team will "endear itself to the University community" after witnessing Saturday's game against the Wildcats from Villanova.

The squad played a great game, fighting their hearts out against a physically superior team. They couldn't have fought a harder contest. In the Villanova locker room after the game the general consensus of opinion was that UMass was the toughest competition to come up against the Philadelphians all season. "We've never been hit harder" was on the lips of many a Wildcat, and this was quite evident during the course of the game. Villanova fumbled five times during the contest, and they haven't approached that number in the two preceeding games combined.

Coach Fusia chuckled as he recalled the 5'8" 175 pound Jimmy Hickman slamming into a burly Wildcat who had at least 40 pounds on him. "When Hickman hit that man atfer the punt it looked as if a fly was hitting an elephant." But Jimmy hit him, and hit him hard, bringing him down.

Coach Steve Sinko, who was the halftime guest of Jimmy Trelease up in the press box, was quite impressed with UMass' showing. He was more than impressed, he was surprised. He may be biting his nails in anticipation of the UMass-B.U. clash coming up on November 4. The Redmen lost to the Terriers in Boston last year 20-7 on all-too-many fumbles.

Fusia had special praise for many of the Redmen, Hickman and Kozaka being on top in that category. Word has yet to come as to whether or not Kozaka will be ready for the UConn game, having injured his knee during the final minute of Saturday's game.

But there's one man who may well be back in uniform for the struggle with the Huskies. That man is Ken Kezer. Kenny, who has had a bad back all this season, was just about relegated to the inactive list by many at the Cage, but he wouldn't take no for an answer and should be suited up for today's practice session. He should be a lot of help in the backfield this year.

There were a lot of groans in the UMass stands last weekend when the fans witnessed the Redmen punt on many third down occasions. These fans still need some football savvy. Coach Fusia was playing a brand of football he calls "barnyard football", and the punting situations jibed with his strategy all the way.

The strategy was to keep the Wildcats in a hole, down by their own goal line. The average touchdown drive, said Coach Fusia, is about 47 yards, and if a team as big as Villanova has the ball within that distance of UMass' goal, it's a nine out of ten chance that they'll make it over for the T.D.

The Redmen were playing the human factor against the Wildcats. Forcing them to take over in their own territory they were counting on making them fumble quickly (which happened more than once) and then moving for short yardage to the goalline. If the Cats didn't fumble early after gaining possession, then the chances were that the human factor would cause them to make a mistake in the progress of an eighty yard march to the UM goal. Kicking on the third down reduces the chances of a UMass fumble deep in their own territory, and gives them another chance to put if something goes wrong with the first attempt.

The strategy paid off very well, and only chance prevented it from being a 26-20 ball game late in the last period. If this had come about there were good chances that, the way the Redmen were hitting, UMass would have gained the ball again in time for a final drive.

The University can be proud of the Coaching staff and the team, and it is obvious that they are. It's the first time in four years that I've seen the UMass stands give an ovation for a losing Redmen squad. Everyone's talking of THE TEAM CALLED DESIRE.

A big UConn team, co-owners of the Beanpot with UMass, awaits the coming of the Redmen this weekend at their homecoming game. If the Redmen can play the kind of ball that they did against Villanova, it'll be a sad homecoming for Connecticut. The UMass contingent, both team and fans alike, will be walking into a lion's den when they reach Storrs. Riots and revolts against alumni and administration have shaken the campus since the trustees took over the student paper; as a matter of fact, alumni won't be admitted into their fraternities, and are taking a big chance going to the game.

Starting left halfback of the Huskies, Tony Magaletta, was put out of action for the duration of the season during the Rutgers game last week Tony suffered a torn ligament and cartilage in his left knee. UConn lost, 35-12.

ODDS AND ENDS

It looks as if Wheeler dorm has established a precedent at UMass. The Wheeler dorm intramural football team now has sweaters. This is a big step in the dormitory life and dormitory intramural play. Hats off to Wheeler.

Doug Grutchfield, who last year proved himself to be the greatest basketball player UMass ever had, is now teaching and coaching basketball at Amherst Regional High. Look for some good teams from that school.

Track Coach Bill Footrick is quite pleased with his cross-country squad. A dedicated worker, Coach Footrick beamed Tuesday at the Cage and said "I've waited eight years for it." The coach and his wife, along with Coach Bud Cobb have been working for years to establish cross-country as a major sport at UMass, and it looks like they and the team have arrived. You'll be reading a lot of the Coach and his team this year, both in track articles and in this column.

Rehearsals are reaching their final stages for the Operetta Guild's fall production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma!", which will be presented in Bowker Auditorium on October 18, 19, 20 and 21.

Back-stage crews are busy coordinating their technical aspects which will form the finished production. Heads of back-stage committees are as follows: Costumes—Linda Anderson; staging—Dick Boyden; lighting—Jack Watson; makeup—Charlene Prentiss; properties—Priscilla Hynes; ushers—Jean Alden; publicity—Steve Daly and Judy Noren; and scenic designer—Chris Hosford.

Tickets for "Oklahoma!" can be purchased at the S.U. Box Office. Choice seats at reduced rates are available for Wednesday and Thursday performances.

The actors depicted are: Steve Daly, David McQueston, Robert Slesinger, Robert Oldach, Frank Mencuso, Thomas Dodge, Joseph Egan, Edward Radding; Kneeling, Goron Breault, Paul McAvoy.

favor of closer union between European countries.

He went on to explain the ambiguity of conflict which exists between these two policies, and spoke on the United States' activities in trying to unify Europe.

According to Dr. Beloff, the United States has shown certain lines upon which future policy is likely to be developed. The difficulty is that lines and minds of policymakers are still overshadowed by the Berlin crisis. Until this is settled, it is impossible for them to look at long-term problems. How the problems are settled will "depend more on temperment than intelligence or knowledge."

During the past two years the magazine has carried articles by such writers as Presidential Adviser W. W. Rostow, British philosopher H. B. Acton, Harvard scholar Renato Poggioli, art critic and connoisseur Lincoln Kirstein, and many others.

Some of the poetry in the "Review" has been reprinted in the New York Times Sunday Book Section, the Boston Globe Book Section, and in other publications. A special feature of the quarterly is its art section, devoted to fine reproductions of the work of major artists.

The first issue, published in October, 1959, contained a poem written expressly for the magazine by Robert Frost. Copies of that issue are now collector's items, selling at well over the original price, according to Prof. Ellert.

The Four College Cooperation Program is a nationally recognized venture in joint educational activity. Qualified students in any one of the four institutions may enroll in courses given at the other three. This arrangement has now extended to the graduate level, and in a few areas students may receive a new Cooperative Ph.D. degree from the four institutions. The first such degree was granted last June.

In addition to the course exchange program and pooling of certain library resources, the cooperative project has entered the field of educational broadcasting. The colleges presently operate Radio Station WFCR-FM which is part of an educational network extending from Boston to Philadelphia.

Frost Will Lecture In Memorial Series

Poet Robert Frost will be the first speaker in this year's series of Alumni War Memorial Lectures at UMass.

Frosh will give a reading of his poems before what is expected to be the largest audience ever to hear him in this college town where he has appeared as a speaker many times before.

Open to Public

Scheduled for 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 25, in the ballroom of the University's S.U., the event is open to the general public.

A former teacher at Amherst College, Frost has maintained a close association with the town of Amherst for many years. Two years ago he was honored at a public dedication of the Robert Frost Room in Amherst's Jones Library.

The town's tribute has been repeated many times over, in various forms, by organizations of all kinds in this country and in other nations.

Appointed to the post of Literary Consultant to the Library of Congress in 1958, Frost was later given the unique honor of giving a poetic reading at the inauguration of President Kennedy.

Under a current proposal, Frost's farm at Ripton, Vt., would be preserved as a national shrine memorializing the poet and his contribution to world literature.

To Be Broadcast From Boston To Washington. D.C.

According to an announcement of the Associate Alumni organization at UMass, the forthcoming reading will be broadcast over an educational network extending from Boston to Washington, D.C.

Originating on campus over the facilities of the student radio station, WMUA-FM, the broadcast will be carried by the Four College station, WFCR-FM. Transmission in the Boston area will be by WGBH-FM which will join with other stations in the Educational Radio Network to carry the Frost reading as far as Washington.

The Alumni Memorial Lectureship was established in 1960 as a means of honoring the University's war dead. Last year's speakers included Presidential adviser W. W. Rostow, historian Samuel Eliot Morison, and Harvard scholar Oscar Handlin.

The Council Chamber is taken over by new faces as the Senate welcomes 35 new members at Wednesday night's meeting. The new Senators were sworn in by Chief Justice Fred Karshick.

Four Senators Dropped; New Members Sworn In

by MAUREEN ROBIDEAU '65

Four senators were dropped last night at the fourth senate meeting of the year. The four, whose names were not disclosed, were dropped for exceeding the limit of three unexcused absences. By-laws were then suspended in order that a meeting could be held without a quorum.

Thee meeting was called to order at 7:10 p.m. followed by roll call and a reading of the minutes of the last meeting. Senator Andy D'Avanzo stated in his finance report that a new budget act would introduced at the next senate meeting. The results of the recent senatorial elections were reported and accepted by the Senate.

It was announced that nomination papers for class officers of the Freshman class will be available October 19 and are to be returned October 26 by 4 p.m. Primary elections will be held in the S.U. lobby October 31, from 9 to 4 p.m. The final elections will be held November 7.

Several appointments were made to various Senate committees: Ken Buck, Activities; Judy Woodbury, Harriet Goldwaithe, and Dick Forester, Services; Sandra Baird, Budget. In further Senate action, Joan Blodgett resigned as Senator at-large from the Class of '62.

Newly elected Senators were sworn in by Fred Karshick, Chief Justice of the Men's judiciary.

D'Avanzo Challenges Tacelli For Senate Presidential Spot

The UMass Student Senate, itself newly elected, will hold perhaps its most important vote of the year at its first meeting Wednesday night, when it will elect its president.

"TEX" TACELLI

The election, which promises to be one of the closest and hardest fought in recent years, will find Arthur "Tex" Tacelli, present president pro tempore, being opposed by Andy D'Avanzo, chairman of the Senate Budgets Committee.

Second Meeting of Pair

This is not the first time the two opponents have met. Back in May, Tacelli and D'Avanzo ran for President pro tempore after last year's president Dennis Twohig stepped down.

Tacelli was the victor that time, and now, in his bid for the permanent office, faces a challenge from D'Avanzo once again.

Both Senators have changed their districts since last year. Tacelli, who formerly represented the fraternities, now comes from Van Meter, and D'Avanzo has moved from Adams to Wheeler House. Thus both men have already come successfully through elections that might have disqualified either of them.

Because 35 of the 42 senators are new this year, and in order to give the student body as a whole a chance to see who will be representing them, Tacelli and D'Avanzo have agreed to hold a public debate on Tuesday, October

ANDY D'AVANZO

17, at 8:00 p.m. in the S.U.

This debate is vital to the interests of all students. The President of the Student Senate is the one person most called upon to represent the entire Student body, here at the University and off campus.

Each Will Speaker

At the debate each candidate will speak for a few minutes on his qualications, then they will address themselves to questions from the floor. This is the only chance members of the student body will have to exert any influence on the choice of their student senate president.

Fall Highway Conference Slated Oct. 25 at UMass

Highway officials from every town, city and county in the state will be invited to attend a fall highway conference at the Univeristy of Massachusetts Oct. 25. The conference will be under the direction of the state Department of Public Works. The invitations will be extended jointly by UMass. President John W. Lederle and Public Works Commissioner Jack P. Ricciardi.

First Parley Success

The outstanding success of the first annual highway conference under DPW auspices held in Boston last May, led Ricciardi and conference chairman Burton C. Parker to schedule a second conference before winter.

The "Share the knowledge" idea which prompted the first conference offered local and county highway officials an opportunity to learn more about their special highway problems.

The fall highway conference will differ from the earlier conference in that there will be no prepared papers or formal talks —all discussions will stem from specific problems and questions raised by the participants.

Jazz Concert Will Feature W. Herman

WOODY HERMAN

The S.U. Arts and Music Comm. is presenting Woody Herman in a jazz concert on Nov. 2 in the Student Union Ballroom from 7-9 p.m.

Tickets will be on sale at the ticket office in the lobby Monday through Friday, Oct. 16 through 21. The hours will be from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. on the above days. To obtain tickets this week a student I.D. must be shown. There are a limited number of seats and none are reserved.

Humanities Center Meets To Plot UM Centennial Role

Leaders in higher education, government, and industry convened today at the UMass campus to plan cooperation of their American Humanities Center in the UMass Centennial observance.

The leadership group of the Humanities Center, a national agency with its headquarters at the state universities, will be holding sessions to plot out details of its cooperation with the UMass Centennial.

The Humanities Center came to national attention in 1953 by fostering exchanges between industry and education. The tenth anniversary of its first national institute will coincide wth the University's Centennial activities. The Center has sponsored conferences and institutes drawing together leaders of industry, government. and higher education. The institutes have involved as many as 2,500 participants.

The sessions, which opened today, brought to the UMass campus representatives of governmental agencies such as the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and the U.S. Air Force Historical Division; educational agencies such as the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the College English Association, educational television station WGBH-TV (Boston); several major corporations, such as Standard Oil (New Jersey), United States Steel Corporation, Westinghouse Corporation; and institutions such as Harvard, Columbia, Michigan State, Wayne State and the Universities of Delaware, Florida, and Massachusetts.

COLLEGIAN'S OBLIGATION TO CAMPUS

In the past, the Collegian has practiced abstention in dealing with campus politics of all kinds. The newspaper, whose primary functions have been to inform and to formulate the opinions of the campus, has been relegated to a strictly informative status.

With more than 5,000 undergraduates here at UMass, there exists a serious communications problem. This problem is particularly acute in the area of campus politics. It is now impossible for a candidate for a major campus office to meet each of his voters. As long as this situation exists candidates must resort to the "poster" campaign.

It is obvious that such a system has many defects. Too many incompetent people have been coasted into office with posters. Since the President of the Student Body is too important and responsible a position to entrust to a "poster" campaign, the Collegian feels that its role should be to help the campus decide on the proper person.

While publishing the acts and ideas of the entire campus and its leaders throughout the academic year, we at the Collegian come in contact with all important campus leaders. Through daily contact with them, we are made aware of their capabilities, shortcomings and experience; and are able, perhaps better than any other people on campus, to form logical and correct conclusions about our campus leaders.

This is a year for responsibility. Our R.S.O. organizations and their officers are becoming uniquely aware of the fact that leadership and responsibility can no longer be taken for granted. We must be certain that the office of President of the Student Senate—the most important student office on campus—be occupied by the person most qualified to do so. There can be no question of "who does the most campaigning" or "who is the best politician" or "who has been able to meet the most amount of new senators" in determining the result. The man elected as President of the Senate must undoubtedly be the best man for the job.

It is with all those facts in mind that the Collegian will set a precedent. For the first time the Executive Board of the Collegian will attempt to insure the efficiency and well-being of the student body by supporting a candidate for President of the Student Senate. The Board will make such an obviously important decision only after carefully weighing the respective merits of all candidates.

The decision of the Board, and the reasons for that decision, will be announced in Monday's issue.

A Difference In Outlook

by JIM TRELEASE '63

In this first of a new series for the Collegian in which we spotlight the event in the news as well as the individuals behind the event, we highlight the very crucial times at the University of Connecticut from the point of view of UMass' Student Senate President Arthur "Tex" Tacelli. We spoke with Tex yesterday and our interview produced the following:

The Event In Focus

Trelease—Has the University of Connecticut approached the UMass Student Senate in regards to their student government problem with their Administration?

Tacelli—I was recently approached by a former member of the UConn Student Senate and we spent considerable time discussing the problems which have beset their Senate. The individual wanted to know whether or not we at UMass could pass a resolution through our Student government in behalf of the efforts made by UConn in their drive to regain lost responsibilities and financial controls.

Trelease—Since our only source for information in their problem has been the Connecticut Daily Campus (the UConn daily newspaper which is now under the direct control and supervision of the University Board of Trustees) perhaps we are not getting the complete story as to what has happened at U-Conn. Tex, what is the story down there according to what this former Senator told you?

Tacelli—In 1933 the Student Senate had complete control of the $10 student tax at UConn. The Administration has from that time till the present time usurped nine of those $10. The student leaders at UConn have strong suspicions that University President Jorgenson has been savoring Connecticut gubernatorial aspirations and that by taking complete control over the students, their activities, and their funds his respect in the state would increase. Because of these actions, the UConn Senate has hired a lawyer to work in its behalf against the Administration. Assistant Dean of Students John Dunlop has also led the fight against the students so strongly that the big song down there is 'Hit the Road, Jack.'

Trelease—Will this lawyer be able to do anything in their behalf?

Tacelli—I doubt it very much, Jim. For the most part, the University President has every right in the world to do what he has done. So we can see he is within his legal capacities. But we must also look at the moral side of the situation. This tightening of the Administration's controls centers around the highly controversial and highly offensive 1959 issue of their humor magazine called the Daily Scampus. Due to the offensiveness of this edition ,the University decided upon a definite crack-down on activities. With the loss of responsibilities, student organzations are a farce. The student is here to develop a sense of responsibility. Why delay the maturity process until after we have graduated? Fortunately, we here at UMass believe that responsibility and maturity are a series of challenges set and met.

Trelease—Which brings us to the question of how do our two campuses compare in the area of student government?

Tacelli—There is a very marked distinction between their Student Governmental structure and ours. We shudder at the thought of a comparison. Our administration has the same authority as UConn's yet we possess a different outlook here. The doors of the President, Provost, Dean of Students, Dean of Men, etc. are always open to our Senate. Our administration interprets Student Government literally—government by the student and for the student. Our faculty—people like R.S.O.'s Mr. Buck, the Collegian's Professor Ratner—are advisors in the sense that they help to bring about continuity and direction to student organization and not this paternal attitude that is so evident at Storrs, Connecticut.

Trelease—How would you describe the increase in position, importance, and respect among the Student Body and Administration for the Senate?

Tacelli—Primarily, we can see the increased importance of the Senate by the continual freedom to allocate over $140,000 in student tax money. There are no administration controls or directives in regards to allotments. And secondly, the fact that I, as President of the Senate, was invited to speak at President Lederle's opening convocation and also at the first meeting of the new faculty members seems to me to be a clear indication of the Administration's regard for the Senate as a representative of the undergraduates at UMass. President Lederle told me that as long as he is President here there would never be an incident to rival that which is occurring at UConn.

BOSTON SUPPORTED

To the Editor:

I read your recent attack on the Boston press last week and I must congratulate you on the splendid article. It expressed my thoughts right down to the last word, and I am sorry I hadn't written sooner.

However, I have now written to all the Boston newspapers, and I hope many more parents and friends will do the same. Many voices make a loud roar. I am also writing to our Councilor and State Representative to register their protests also.

UCONN DEMONSTRATORS

To the Editor:

As a graduate of the University of Connecticut, and especially as one deeply disturbed at the totalitarian acts of its administration, I appreciate the interest and the stand taken by the Collegian on the recent moves it made there regarding the student government.

However, I was disturbed by the reference to the demonstrations as "unruly riots." The demonstration of last Thursday was an orderly and well-led protest march by over 3000 students that wound up in front of the administration building where the crowd was addressed by student leaders. The whole thing was loud and large, but according to my own friends there, never unruly. It was, in fact, considered a perfect demonstration of protest.

The students of UMass who attend the game Saturday will witness another demonstration at half-time sponsored by student leaders including the I.F.C. It will probably be much like the one staged at the Yale Bowl two weeks ago, one which created a desired reaction of attention and curiosity on the part of the 35,000 people there, but which no one could call unruly. The UConn students know that only through peaceful but large and enthusiastic demonstrations will they be able to bring about the necessary outside pressure to correct the abuses. They will never be corrected if the pressures remain internal —this they know from past experience and the attitude of the administration as it was expressed through the double-talk at a recent meeting with the student leaders.

The issues are: The take-over of control of the student activities fee, and the refusal to recognize the Associated Student Government as the representative of the students despite the overwhelming approval of the body's constitution by the students last year.

A Student-Run Bookstore

The following article is reprinted from the New Times, October 4, 1961; page 39).

The opening of a student-run discount bookstore in a bare-walled, one-room flat at Broadway and 11th Street has stirred a controversy at Columbia University.

The store was opened last week "in protest against the high prices of the campus book store" by two graduate students, Lee Cooper and Larry Spiro. It offers discounts of 10 and 20 percent on all purchases of textbooks by faculty members or students.

The Columbia University Press, which acts as distributor to the campus store and other neighborhood shops, said it had refused to deal with Mr. Cooper and Mr. Sipro. Donald Brown, sales manager of the Press, said in an interview yesterday that the new store, which does not stock books, could not be considered a bookstore.

"We're obligated to follow the 'bookstore system' ," Mr. Brown said, "These boys are merely an order-taking agency. By dealing with them, we would not be fair to the other bookstores in the area." He said ordinary bookstores stocked an inventory of books.

The new store, according to Mr. Spiro, grossed $2,000 and netted profits of about $80 in its first week of operation.

"We're not professional business men," says Mr. Cooper, who is studying for his doctorate in philosophy. "After two years at Columbia, we simply are mad at the high prices students are forced to pay at the campus bookstore. This is as much a protest as an experiment."

Staff of Literary Magazine Announces Deadline for Student Contributions

The staff of the Literary Magazine of UMass announced the deadline, Wednesday, November 1 for student contributions for the first issue. The first issue of the tri-annual student publication will be published in December.

The Literary Magazine provides an opportunity for undergraduate and graduate students to have published their original works of writing and art. Short stories, one act plays, poetry, and experimental pieces of writing, as well as essays and reviews are welcomed.

In the field of art, pen and ink drawings and prints and creative work in photography are suggested for submission.

A collection of Haiku poems to be written by both student and faculty is planned as a special feature of the first issue of the Literary Magazine. Open to everyone on campus, it is hoped that many of these three to four line poems will be entered. The spirit of the Haiku is reflected in this Japanese one: Life? Butterfly

On a Swaying grass
That's all . . .
But exquisite!

The deadline for submitting the Haiku poetry is also November 1.

Since all work must come before the staff of the magazine for consideration, literary work should be submitted in a double envelope with the contributor's name, class, and address on the outside envelope. All copy must be in good form and typed; it may be placed in Box 104 of the R.S.O. office or left in Room 465, Bartlett. Artwork should be left in Bartlett.

THE TRUE AND HARROWING FACTS ABOUT RUSHING

It is well enough to sit in one's Morris chair and theorize about sorority rushing, but if one really wishes to know the facts, one must leave one's Morris chair and go out into the field. (My Morris chair, incidentally, was given to me by the Philip Morris Company, makers of Marlboro Cigarettes. They are great-hearted folk, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, as millions of you know who have enjoyed their excellent cigarettes. Only from bountiful souls could come such mildness, such flavor, such filters, such pleasure, as you will find in Marlboros! For those who prefer crushproof boxes, Marlboro is available in crushproof boxes. For those who prefer soft packs, Marlboro is available in soft packs. For those who prefer to buy their cigarettes in bulk, please contact Emmett R. Sigafoos, friendly manager of our factory in Richmond, Virginia.)

But I digress. I was saying that in order to know the true facts about sorority rushing, one must go into the field and investigate. Consequently, I went last week to the Indiana College of Spot Welding and Belles Lettres and interviewed several million coeds, among them a lovely lass named Gerund McKeever. (It is, incidentally, quite an interesting little story about how she came to be named Gerund. It seems that her father, Ralph T. McKeever, loved grammar better than anything in the world, and so he named all his children after parts of speech. In addition to Gerund, there were three girls named Preposition, Adverb, and Pronoun, and one boy named Dative Case. The girls seemed not to be unduly depressed by their names, but Dative Case, alas, grew steadily more morose and was finally found one night dangling from a participle. After this tragic event, the father abandoned his practice of grammatical nomenclature, and whatever children were subsequently born to him—eight in all—were named Everett.)

They pledged more girls than they had room for...

But I digress. I was interviewing a lovely coed named Gerund McKeever. "Gerund," I said, "were you rushed by a sorority?"

"Yes, mister," she said, "I was rushed by a sorority."

"Did they give you a high-pressure pitch?" I asked. "Did they use the hard sell?"

"No, mister," she replied. "It was all done with quiet dignity. They simply talked to me about the chapter and the girls for about three minutes and then I pledged."

"My goodness!" I said. "Three minutes is not very long for a sales talk!"

"It is when they are holding you under water, mister," said Gerund.

"Well, Gerund," I said, "how do you like the house?"

"I like the house fine, mister," she replied. "But I don't live there. Unfortunately, they pledged more girls than they have room for, so they are sleeping some of us in the bell tower."

"Isn't that rather noisy?" I said.

"Only on the quarter-hour," said Gerund.

"Well, Gerund," I said, "it has certainly been a pleasure talking to you," I said.

"Likewise, mister," she said, and with many a laugh and cheer we went our separate ways—she to the campanile, I to the Morris chair.

NOTICE

Anyone interested in auditioning for the University Talent Show to be held on Nov. 11 is invited to come to the S.U. Program Office on Mon. or Tues. Oct. 16 or 17 between 4 and 5 p.m.

Those interested and unable to attend may call ALpine 3-7625 any night next week.

'American Dream' To Be Presented

This evening The American Dream is being presented by the Literary Society. The informal reading is at 8 p.m. in Old Chapel Auditorium and will be followed by a discussion.

The play promises to be challenging. The creative talent of Edward Albee, one of America's newest playwrights, has portrayed the horror that is implicit in many of our relationships, especially within the family. Many of the cliches in conversation are exposed.

Daddy, the ineffectual male, is overpowered by Mommy, a destructive influence in the lives of everyone she meets. The efficient and just as destructive American business, club, and charity woman is not left unscathed.

The battle is wisely regarded by Grandma, the only one who realizes the horrors of what these people have become. She also discovers the truth behind the handsome facade of the Young Man.

This is not unmixed with brilliant comedy. "It is packed with untamed imagination, wild humor, gleefully sardonic satirical implications, and overtones of strangely touching sadness, and I thought it was entirely delightful," says Richard Watts, Jr., critic for the New York Post.

YR Speakers Will Discuss Mass. Toll Road Issue

The UMass Young Republican Club will present the first in a line of distinguished speakers at its first meetng this Tuesday evening at 8 p.m. at the Student Union.

Dwight S. Strong and Neil Ayer will discuss the "Toll Road Issue," and its relation to corruption, good government and Mass. Turnpike Chairman William F. Callahan.

Strong, a graduate of Springfield College and a native of Amherst, now resides in Boston. He is the executive secretary of the New England Citizens Crime Commission and the Chairman of the Protect the Hub Association.

Ayer, a West Point graduate, is a resident of Hamilton. He led the successful campaign to correct abuses in the State House Office Building law. He was also successful in his petition to give the people a vote on the Pension

Anyone wishing to attend this organization meeting of the YR is welcome. Coffee will be served.

Newman Club Hears Talk On Recovery

Director Oleksak of Recovery, Inc. of New York City, spoke to the Newman Club Tuesday evening in the Dining Commons.

Oleksak said that Recovery, Inc. had been compared to Alcoholics Anonymous in similarity of structure, but he explained several differences between the groups.

Although Recovery, Inc. is concerned with mental patients, all adults are invited to attend the group meetings. The meetings are conducted entirely by laymen, who perform no diagnosing or counselling, but strictly follow the rules of Dr. Abraham Lowe, founder of the organization. There are no dues or fees required to attend the meetings and all persons remain annoymous. No mention of religion is made during the sessions.

Dr. Lowe, a Jesuit trained doctor and psychiatrist from the University of Vienna, presents a common sense psychology for the mentally ill—that man can direct his actions by his free will. Antidotes to laziness, excessive ambition and pride are found in Christian humility. The patient is encouraged to develop self-discipline to control anger and fear. Cultivating a sense of humor is used to restrain seriousness.

Oleksak spoke of the favorable reaction Recovery, Inc. had received from doctors, psychiatrists and priests.

Greeks Begin Season Of Exchange Suppers

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

The Kappas extend their appreciation to all the housemothers of the dorms, sororities and fraternities and to the many members of the Greek organizations who helped to make our tea in honor of Mrs. Martindale a huge success.

The sisters thank the brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon for a good time at the supper Thursday night.

Although we miss her terribly, all the sisters are so proud of Judy Rajecki, who was chosen from the Education Dept. as an exchange student to attend Florida State this semester.

News from up North was supplied for us by president Carol Veno and Jean Bruen at the weekly house meeting Monday night. These two girls represented Delta Nu at a Province Convention for Kappas in Toronto, Canada, early last September. They gained many helpful suggestions from other Kappa chapters.

PI BETA PHI

On Sunday, October 8th, Pi Phi held initiation for twelve girls. Our new Sisters are: Beverly Brent, Johnson; Sandra Edmands, Knowlton; Eileen Holland, Leach; Jane Kline, Crabtree; Karen Kober, Crabtree; Marie Makinen, Lewis; Janet Rose, Mary Lyon; Marjorie St. Aubin, Mary Lyon; Patricia Stankawicz, Knowlton; Carol Townsley, Lewis; Marcia Trimble, Knowlton; and Leslie Wilcox, Arnold.

The Pi Phi's would like to thank Kappa Sigma for the good time had at the Exchange Supper Wednesday, October 11th.

SIGMA DELTA TAU

The house is in an uproar over a very serious omission. The names of our illustrative house boys, who are five very important members of the SDT family, have not been mentioned. They are, Marcy Korn, John Gounaris, Dave Nealon, Steve Morris, and Alan Levick.

SDT is also very proud of our three new sisters. Judy Addelson, Bev Enstrom, and Judy Rosenthal were initiated on Sunday, October elghth.

The sisters also want to thank the brothers of Sig Ep for the wonderful time we had at our exchange supper last Wednesday. We are looking forward to this Wednesday night for another supper with Alpha Sig, and to this Friday night when we will have a pizza party at TEP.

Hinda Katz is SDT's nomination for Homecoming Queen.

Another good reason for Confidence in a growing America

YES—THIS IS A RADIO!

—It's one way the miracle of the transistor is changing your life

The transistor started out a dozen years ago as an amplifier for telephone signals, and look what's happened to it!

Now they're widely used in midget portable radios. A single missile may carry as many as 6,000 transistors, and its control equipment may use thousands more. The "magic brain" computers all use transistors and kindred devices, up to several hundred thousand for a really big one.

The transistor is just one more example of the drive for discovery that is sparked by America's big and growing research and development operation. Our research expenditures are running at $12 billion a year—and constantly increasing! For new products and processes build new companies, whole new industries. They create new, better-paid jobs by the tens of thousands. They mean better living for everybody. We'll have our problems, just as usual. But with these first-class problem solvers on the job, we can look forward to the greatest era of progress in all our history!

FREE—Write for illustrated booklet, "The Promise of America." Box 350, New York 18, N.Y.

GET READY FOR AN UPSWING!

MORE RESEARCH—We're now spending $12 billion a year—and that's due to double during the Sixties!

MORE INCOME—Today's $6500 per family represents an all-time high!

MORE SAVINGS—Now at the highest level ever—$375 billion!

MORE JOBS—There are 15 million more jobs than in 1939—will be 22 million more by 1975!

MORE EDUCATION—By 1970 we'll have 20 million more high school graduates, and 3 million more college graduates. They'll earn more, live better!

MORE LEISURE—40 million Americans get paid vacations, and there are 16 million people over 65, many of them with retirement income to spend!

MORE MARKETS—U.S. exports, plus output of U.S.-owned plants overseas, already account for over $50 billion in sales!

MORE NEEDS—Schools, hospitals, highways, homes—we need billions in improvements right now!

Abbey Housemother Is Traveled Author

Abigail Adams House is fortunate in having Mrs. Theresa deKerpely, author of two novels, as their housemother. Mrs. deKerpely was born in England. For eighteen years she traveled through foreign countries, eventually settling in Budapest with her husband, a famed Hungarian cellist.

She remained in Hungary throughout the war, Russian liberation, and eventual occupation. After three years of Communist tyranny the deKerpelys realized that the country no longer belonged to the Hungarians. She said "We felt that life was not worth living under these conditions." Mrs. deKerpely always wanted to be a novelist but "traveling with 15 trunks, four children, a governess and a dog, left little time for writing!"

The deKerpelys than came to the United States and Mrs. deKerpely began her novel. "I had an experience to communicate living through a seige of an enemy country" said Mrs. deKerpely.

A Crown For Ashes, her first novel published in 1952, was selected by the Catholic Book of the Month Club. It has since been published in several foreign languages. Mrs. deKerpely than started her second novel, The Burning Jewel, A study of jealously.

Upon the loss of her husband, she became an assistant editor for a literary quarterly. She was then invited to spend four months at one of the three literary colonies in the U.S., and here began her third novel. A contemporary suggested the possibility of a position as head of residence and thus for three years she was a house mother at Wellesley College.

Desiring the broader scope a university would offer, she has come to the UMass campus. A woman of contemporary thought, she stated, "I learn not to be static from intellectual youth."

Interdorm Council Elects New Officers

The interdorm council has recently elected their officers for the coming year. They are: Pres. Kay Reagan, V.P. Joan Chiminello, Sec. Elaine Fingold, Treas. Ann Snouffer.

The Council is a relatively new campus organization. This is the first year it has been a recognized women's organization with a Constitution and bylaws.

The main purpose of the group is to promote dorm spirit. Each dormitory has two representatives who attend weekly meeting in the rec room of Dwight House. Mrs. Field, Dwight's housemother, is their advisor. This year the girls plan to work closely with the Scrolls in promoting freshman spirit.

A plack has been purchased to be presented to the dorm with the most points awarded during the year. Points are awarded for the inter-dorm sing, the float parade, Christmas decorations, scholarship and athletics.

Last spring the council sponsored an auction which was a huge success. Another one is planned for this fall. Look for signs as to the time and place of the coming auction.

Last year's officers deserve a note of recognition for the work done in getting this valuable organization on its feet. They are: Pres. Karen Peterson; V. P. Linda Swenson; Sec. Paula Turco; Treas. Elaine Carlson.

Dorms Prepare For Homecoming

ARNOLD

On Monday evening, October 9, the third floor Freshmen of Arnold House conducted a successful tea.

After refreshments were served with Madame Dotowska pouring, an extremely interesting talk was given by Mrs. de Keperly. Mrs. de Keperly, Head of Residence at the Abbey, is a new member of the University coming here from Wellesley College. She talked about her experiences in Hungary during World War II in 1944.

The Tea was very successfully conducted under the chairmanship of Joan Janik, '65.

DWIGHT

Dwighters have been working hard all week under social chairman Joan Hudyma and assis. Berna Menz on the float for Homecoming. All seem very optimistic.

In elections held Tues. Joan Labuzoski was elected Dorm senator and Priscilla Bradway sophomore executive board member. Carol Esonis is Dwight's nominee for Homecoming Queen.

Dwights social season will get underway next week as the sophomores present the freshmen at a "Coming Out" party.

Excitement reigns at Mary Lyon as the girls prepare for Home Coming. Carolyn Lizio was chosen as a candidate for the coming celebration. Carolyn is a junior majoring in Mathematics. Besides having a 3.0 accum., she is an active dorm counselor and takes part in many campus activities.

Other events have kept the girls equally as busy. Not only are they having suppers for each of the floors, but they also have picked the following girls to represent the dorm; Dorm Senator—Carolyn Oliver Executive Board—Nancy Andrade Alternate—Margie Fiske.

S.U. May Inaugurate A Foreign Films Bill

by JOE BRADLEY

C. B. Shelnutt, Student Activities director, is in the process of acquiring a program of foreign films for the S.U. The titles of the films in the deal have not yet been disclosed, but foreign celluloid should provide at least a different fare of entertainment as opposed to Hollywood's offerings.

KAT Slave Auction Tonight

Kappa Alpha Theta will stage a slave auction tonight despite the best efforts of our sixteenth president. The Theta slaves will parade through the Hatch this afternoon, and the business will begin this evening at 7 p.m.

The man of the many herds, Woodrow Charles Herman, will be at the S.U., complete with clarinet, Thursday, Nov. 2. Woody Herman was one of the big attractions of the Big Band era of the '40's, swinging out with "Woodchopper's Ball" and "Caledonia".

This reporter can clearly remember Herman's performance at the Boston Arts Festival 1960 jazz show. With Herman on clarinet and a local man on drums, the pair swung out with a 15 minute rendition of "Golden Wedding" which resounded from Beacon Hill to the Back Bay.

Dave Brubeck At UConn

UMass students going down to UConn for the Saturday football frolic may attend a UConn sponsored Dave Brubeck concert. The concert, which is a part of the UConn homecoming, is open to UMass students for $1.

Tickets are going fast for the Operetta Guild production of "Oklahoma". The curtain call for the first night's show will be Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Opera Tickets Offered For Sale Monday

Tickets for the Amherst Community Opera's double bill in November will go on sale Monday, October 16. According to Ruth Teichner, ticket chairman, tickets for all four performances may be procured in the foyer of the Jones Library Auditorium, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, from 1 to 4 p.m. and on Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9:30. Telephone reservations may be made by calling AL 6-6779 after October 16.

C.A. Lectures To Be Given Here By Dr. John Maguire

The Christian Association Embassy begins this Sunday, October 15, in the Small Ballroom of the S.U. John Maguire of Wesleyan University will speak on the 'Scandal of Christianity'. It is anticipated that he will portray the offensive character of the Christian faith which disturbs the affluent society.

Mr. Maguire is a member of the Religion Department but his interests go beyond the dogma of faith. In 1960 he was awarded his Ph.d for a dissertation on the relationships between theology psychoanalysis. He teaches courses on the relationship of contemporary theology to modern literature and the behavioral sciences.

A native of Montgomery, Mr. Maguire recently returned home and became engaged in the fight for intergration as a Freedom Rider. He was arrested on May 28 with Mr. Coffin, last year's Embassy speaker.

Relying on this past experience he will speak on the achievements of the 'Freedom Riders' on Monday, October 16, at 4 p.m. in the S.U.

Conrad L. Wirth '23 Conceived The National Parks' "Mission 66"

If you've ever traveled around the United States and visited a National Park you're sure to have seen the accomplishments of "Mission 66". Having seen these you'd be proud to note that the program was conceived and launched by a graduate of the UMass. The program . . . "is intended to provide such development and staffing as will permit the National Park Service by 1966 to provide the maximum of benefit to the American public while safeguarding its resources." This has been termed the most forward looking program for the protection and development of the National Park System since the National Park Service was established in 1916. The graduate is Conrad L. Wirth, director of the National Park Service.

Mr. Wirth entered the National Park Service in 1928. One of his early assignments was that of supervising the work of the Civilian Conservation Corps in state, county, and metropolitan parks throughout the nation; in 1935 he was given direction of all emergency activities in the National Park System as well. Largely instrumental in initiating the legislation known as the Park, Parkway, and Recreation Area Study Act, Mr. Wirth directed the extensive program of cooperative studies which resulted from its passage. He developed a program for land acquisition that is doing much to solve many problems in the park system. In recognition of Mr. Wirth's many abilities be became the Director of the National Park Service in 1951. Mr. Wirth has been honored in many ways for his accomplishments in the field of park and recreation. Besides three honorary degrees and many other awards he has received the Pugsley Gold Medal for services in behalf of the National Parks and he is a life member of the Board of Trustees of the National Geographic Society. The Secretary of the Interior, in 1956, bestowed on Mr. Wirth that department's highest honor, the Distinguished Service Award. His most recent recognition was the 1960-61 Rockefeller Public Service Award which went to six outstanding career civil servants. One of the other recipients was Charles E. Bohlen, special assistant to the Secretary of State.

Mr. Wirth's son Peter Conrad, entered the University in 1951 from Woodrow Wilson High School, Washington, D.C. He received his B.S. in Civil Engineering in 1955.

Six Colleges Participate In Student Work On Northampton State Hospital Program

This is the first of a three part serial on the student volunteer program to the Northampton State Hospital.

One of the largest and most important of our programs is the Northampton Association of Student Volunteers. This program involves students from six neighboring colleges—The University, Amherst, Smith, Mount Holyoke, Springfield, and A.I.C. Presently, student leader representatives at each of these colleges are recruiting students for volunteer activities at Northampton State Hospital.

The basic premise of the project is that the hospital and the community can work in close association with each other to mutual advantage. The emphasis has been on the six educational institutions which are within a twenty mile radius of the hospital. The hospital can use the educational resources (faculty and students) toward improving itself in the care and treatment of the mentally ill, while providing a training facility for both faculty and students. For some students the hospital provides a training experience that will prove valuable for future job placement.

Application forms for student volunteers are available on the campus. Nancy Gregory and Steve Daly are in charge of recruitment.

In December of 1960 the idea was conceived of establishing a therapeutically oriented student volunteer project at this hospital. On March 10, 1961, interested students journeyed to Cambridge to meet with Harvard and Radcliffe students who were working from Phillips Brooks House. At this conference there were student representatives from most of the New England colleges as well as several from other Eastern colleges extending down to Virginia. Plans were made at this time to hold a student conference at Northampton State Hospital involving the six colleges around Northampton and the Harvard students from Phillips Brooks House.

On April 15, 1961, representatives from seven area colleges heard PBH volunteers speak of their own work in planning and organizing a therapeutically oriented volunteer program at Metropolitan State Hospital in Waltham. From this the students discussed the formation of an administrative body composed entirely of students who conduct the affairs of the organization. The students appointed leaders from their own ranks who serve as an executive board. Each group submitted their ideas to the board for a recruitment drive in the fall of 1961.

The ideas of ward adoption and case aide were advanced. The students were advised that the project would, in some instances, coordinate their activities with qualified faculty members of neighboring colleges and that a psychiatrist and/or a psychiatric social worker would be hired to work with the students in a consultative and supervisory role. It was repeatedly impressed on the students the projects of ward adoption and case aide should consider the "back" or chronic wards on a priority basis.

Redmen Go After Win Over Toughest Yan Con Rivals Sat.

The UConn football team attempts to crack into the win column when the Huskies meet the Mass. Redmen in a Homecoming attraction at Storrs, Saturday. The starting time has been changed from the usual 2 p.m. kickoff to 1:30 p.m.

Ticket sale for the contest has been going at a brisk pace; however UConn officials state an ample supply of ducats will be available at the gate at noon on Saturday.

UMass and UConn tied for Yankee Conference honors last season; and league experts see the UConns and Redmen in the thick of the battle for title honors this semester.

The Redmen will travel to the UConn campus with high hopes of spoiling UConn's Homecoming Day the way the Huskies spoiled our own "Old Grads" day last year. That time UMass had won all three previous games, including an upset of Harvard, and the Huskies whomped the Bay Staters by 31-0 before the biggest home crowd of the year.

UMass owns a victory over A.I.C., and carried undefeated Villanova (4-0) into the final quarter before losing by a 33-13 score. UConn shows two losses in its record book—to Yale (18-0) and Rutgers (35-12).

Redmen's standout, quarterback John McCormick, is a triple threat, he runs the ball well, punts for a 41-yard average and has completed nine of 25 passes for 79 yards and a touchdown. Against Villanova, he kept the Wildcats back with his effective punting; and his mates hit so hard that they caused them to give up the ball five times on fumbles.

Other UMass stars are halfback Sam Lussier who has carried 24 times for 164 yards and leads the team in scoring with three touchdowns, 18 points; end Paul Majeski who has received three passes for 27 yards and a touchdown; and sophomore Left-halfback Fred Lewis who has carried 24 times for 126 yards.

The UMass line averages an even 200 pounds, compared to a 219 average for the Husky starters.

Both men who nailed down guard positions on this week's ECAC major team will be in the contest: Guard John Kozaka of UMass and UConn's Captain Fred Stackpole. In addition, two sophomore left halfbacks who received honorable mention on the same team are due to start: Dave Korponai of UConn and Fred Lewis of UMass, both exciting speedsters who are breakaway threats.

Korponai is leading the Huskies in rushing with an 8.1 average on six carries, 49 yards. Another left half, Danny Gervasi, has a 4.4 average on 40 yards in nine carried. The right halkback position packs plenty of punch in Pete Barbarito (3.4 average) and Gerry White (4.5 average).

Probable starting lineups:

UConn
Tony Pignatello, 216	LE
John Contoulis, 252	LT
Fred Stackpole, 204	LG
Tom Doty, 203	C
Fred Koury, 212	RG

Wayne Nakoneczny, 171	RE
Jim Muldowney, 199	QB
Dave Korponai, 163	LH
Pete Barbarito, 191	RH
Dave Bishop, 200	FB
Kickoff: 1:30 p.m.
UMass
Paul Majeski, 190	LE
Bob Foote, 214	LT
Sam Slick, 180	LG
Tom Kirby, 196	C
Dick Eger, 190	RG

by DICK MACKLEM '62

During the last week we were happy to see the improved amount of publicity given our Redmen football team by the Worcester Telegram. Each year Worcester County provides many fine boys for our teams, but the Telegram, like the larger Boston papers, had tended to forget that our State University exists. Extra large build-ups and stories are given to the Boston schools as they continually lose week after week, while we here in the Berkshires, who sincerely believe that we have something to be proud of, are left in oblivion.

I wonder how many of our alumni know that the Villanova boys said that we were the best ball club they had yet faced? Where are these men, who are proud of their alma mater, that could be remedying the existing situation?

The Fateful Day

Meanwhile we are encouraged by what the Worcester Telegram has done and we hope that they will keep it up. To Mr. Roy Mumpton and Mr. Paul Johnson, sports editors of the Telegram, we say that we are looking forward to a date almost a month away. November 11 is the date and Holy Cross' Fitton Field is the place. We'll be proud to be there that day. Gentlemen, I think we can prove our point.

Now a paragraph about each of Boston's three professional teams now in action. From the Boston Celtics camp comes the news that the great Bob Cousy might be lost to the team. Cousy has a serious elbow ailment which needs surgery. At the present Bob has two choices: either have the surgery now and sit out most of this season with a chance to play in the future, or hope that it clears up enough to play now and have the surgery done after this season. However, the latter choice would be a risk of permanent injury. Knowing what a fierce competitor Bob is, we think that he will choose to try to play. It will be a long and nerve-wracking season hoping that he doesn't get hurt.

Finally the big shake-up that loomed in the future has hit the Boston Patriots. They are a better team than the 7-12 record they have compiled in their short two-year history. With the replacement of frantic Lou Saban by the more stable Hike Holovak, maybe now the Pats can get untracked. It is rumored that the breaking point came when Saban released Mel West from the squad.

West, the Missouri star who defeated Joe Bellino for the Most Valuable Player trophy in last year's Orange Bowl, was one of the Pat's top draft choices and was being slowly groomed as a starting back. However when he didn't live up to expectations in the last two games, Saban released him. Let's look for a little more spark in the Patriots' attack this weekend.

The Bruins started their season in the usual horrible manner on Wednesday night ,being swamped by the lowly New York Rangers 6-2. Outside of the big line of Johnny Bucyk, Cliff Pennington, and Jerry Toppazzini, which scored both goals, the Bruins looked rather dull. They played their second game last night against the Rangers again.

The B's are labeled by NHL President Campbell as the league's "question mark team." However, the only question I can see is whether they beat out the Rangers for fifth or completely fall apart and finish last.

Only three years ago, Bob Turley was the pride of all baseball, having a 21-7 season, starring in the World Series, and winning the Cy Young award as baseball's outstanding pitcher. During the Series this year, I think it would have been interesting to watch bug Bob as he stood on the outside looking in, not having pitched a game in over three months.

Yesterday in New York City Turley had an operation for removal of bone chips in his pitching elbow. Dr. Gaynor, the Yankee team physician, says that Bob should be "as good as ever" come next spring. This year the Yankees had seven pitchers who won 10 or more games; if Turley comes back to win 15 or 50 next year, it will be a short season for the rest of baseball. We always admired "The Bullet" and his blazing fast ball, and knowing that it's a long road back, we wish him the best for the future.

Are you going to Storrs tomorrow? I was really proud of the large number of UMass students at the away games last year. Let's have more at UConn as we make our first goal for the Beanpot. Congratulations to the contingent of sophomores who have worked their way into Vic Fusia's first two units. At last reports nine sophs are among the approximately 26 Redmen slated to see heavy duty. If you can possibly go, make the trip. It should be well worth your effort.

Attention Fans: Here's An Easy Route to UConn

Many students should be making the trip to UConn this weekend to cheer the Redmen on to a victory over the Huskies. If the team can play like they did against Villanova, and if the fans get down to Storrs and cheer like they did against Villanova, UMass could go all the way in spoiling UConn's Homecoming, just as they've spoiled ours in previous years. Last year the Huskies took the honors at Alumni Field 31-0, but it won't be that way this year.

Many cars will be going down Saturday morning, and here we suggest a quick, easy route to take. Take Route 9 East until you reach Ware (just after Belchertown) and then turn right onto Route 32 South. 32 will take you down to Connecticut, across the Wilbur Cross Highway to Mansfield, Connecticut. From there it's just a matter of looking for Storrs signs, Storrs being just down the road from Mansfield.

It should be a great game, and the more fans from UMass the better for all concerned. See you there.

Intramural X-Country Due For Homecoming

This year for the first time at Homecoming an Intramural cross country race, which might turn into an annual event, will be staged.

The route of the race will go from one end of the campus to the other. The starting and finish line will be in front of the union. It will proceed up Ellis Drive to the lights, go right and heads toward town as far as Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity house. From this point it will head back on campus toward the union: a short trip around the college pond and then to the finish line.

There will be numerous prizes awarded especially to the winner. There will also be a team prize.

This race is open to all male students at the university except cross country and track men. The exact time will be Saturday October 22 at 12 noon. All those interested sign up with Bob Avery in 423 Mills.

QUARTERBACK CLUB

For those of you who are interested in meeting the coaches, watching movies of the UConn game, and hearing scouting reports on other teams, drop in on the Quarterback Club in Student Union Tuesday noon at 12:00. Reserved tickets are required. Price 99 cents.

Kozaka Takes A.P. Honors

John Kozaka, who played brilliantly in the AIC game, played even better during the Villanova game and was named to the Major College All East team by the A.P. for his work at the guard slot.

John, a 6', 196 pounder from Pittsfield lettered at guard as a sophomore where he proved to be a rugged linebacker on defense. John was slowed down with a leg injury last year, and hurt his knee again in the final minutes of the Villanova game. He probably won't be ready in time for the UConn game.

Other members of the team who were nominees on balloting for All New England Polls were John McCormick, Paul Majeski, Bob Foote, Sam Lussier and Freddy Lewis.

TOUCHÉ, MONSIEUR

The action was fast and furious during the exhibition of the art of fencing Wednesday night. Stan Metz referees.

Coach Fusia Hints of Air Attack Against UConn Team

University of Massachusetts football coach Vic Fusia hinted yesterday that his Redmen may throw an aerial bombardment at winless Connecticut when the rivals launch Yankee Conference play Saturday at Storrs.

Interviewed by telephone from his Amherst, Mass. office Fusia said senior quarterback John McCormick, of Belmont, Mass., "has the finest arm of any quarterback I've ever coached."

"McCormick hasn't really declared himself yet," Fusia told the press. Massachusetts has two linemen who may not play Saturday, reported Fusia. One is guard John Kozaka, a standout linebacker, and the other is center Matt Collins.

Connecticut Coach Bob Ingalls announced two more backfield changes in addition to previously naming sophomore Dave Karponai of Stratford to take the place of injured Tony Magaletta at halfback.

Ingalls said that Jim Muldowney, a third stringer, would start at quarterback and that linebacking ace Dave Bishop would also play offensive fullback.

Lineman Bob Treat, Bishop and Jim Brunelle are virus casualties and Captain Fred Stackpole has an ankle sprain, but all are expected to be available.

The Connecticut coach also said his team was working "extra hard" all week.

MATT COLLINS, a 5'11" junior from Lanesboro who started as a fullback during his freshman year has played excellent ball for the Redmen at the center slot last year and this. Matt may not be able to see action against UConn. He's now wearing a collar for his neck, as are a few other members of the squad.

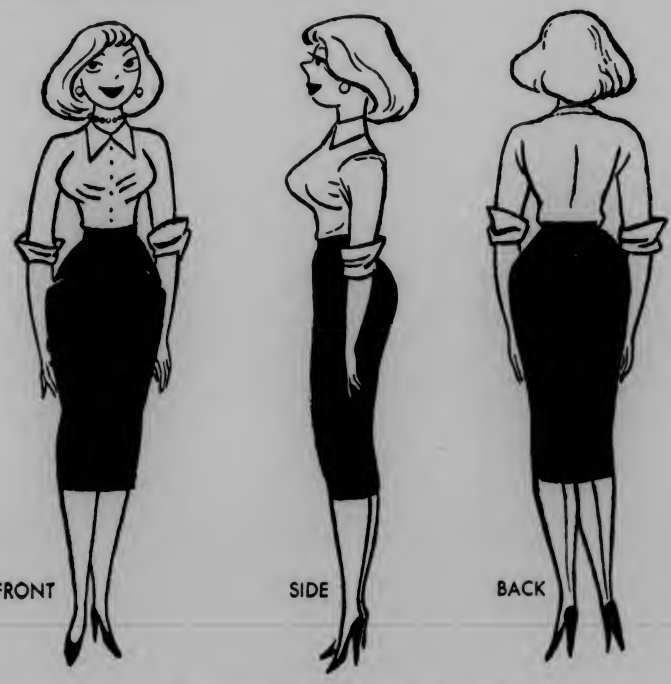
Girl Watcher's Guide

Presented by Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes



Three views of an average, healthy girl

LESSON 1 - How to recognize a girl

It is not surprising, in these days of constantly changing fashion standards, that girls are often mistaken for men.

Certain popular items of apparel, such as slacks, baggy sweaters and boxy suits, contribute to this unfortunate situation. Therefore, we suggest that new students of girl watching start with the fundamentals (see above diagram). As you can see, girls are easiest to identify from the side. However, even the beginner will soon achieve proficiency from front and rear as well.

Advanced students can usually tell a girl from a man at five hundred paces, even when both are wearing asbestos firefighting suits. (You might try offering the subject a Pall Mall, but you won't prove anything. It's an extremely popular brand with both sexes.)

Six Appointed to Staff Of College of Agriculture

Six appointments to the College of Agriculture staff at U-Mass were announced this week by Pres. John W. Lederle. Four are assistant professors and two are instructors.

New staff members are:

Donald A. Caven, assistant professor of landscape architecture, who received his B.S. degree from the University of Kentucky in 1939 and the Master of Landscape Architecture from Harvard University in 1952. From 1952 to 1955 he was associated with a commercial firm of landscape architects and planners, and since 1955 has been assistant professor of ladnscape architecture at Michigan State University.

John J. McCritchie, assistant professor of entomology and plant pathology with headquarters at the Waltham Field Station. He received his B.S. from DePauw University in 1954, and his M.S. and Ph.D. from Ohio State Univeristy in 1956 and 1960. He served as a research assistant in the department of M.S. from the University of Vermont in 1961. From 1947 until 1954 he was gengaged in general farming operations at Blackbriar Farm, Dover Plains, N.Y.; Powisset Farm, Dover, Mass; and Windrow Farm, Moorestown, N.J.

Richard E. Bowen, instructor in veterinary science, received his B.S. from the University of Kansas in 1954. He obtained his M.S. from Kansas State College in 1960, and his DVM degree from the same school in June. Engaged in research on poultry respiratory diseases, he also is working for his Ph.D. in bacteriology in the department of bacteriology.

John J. Bacharz, instructor in veterinary science, who received his B.A. degree from American International College in 1957 and his M.S. from the University of New Hampshire this year. He was in charge of the bacteriology laboratory at St. Luke's Hospital in Pittsfield just prior to joining the staff. He previously occupied a similar position at the Springfield Municipal Hospital.

Earl Fuller, assistant professor of agricultural and food economics, who received his B.S. degree from Michigan State University in 1955 and his M.S. from the same institution two years later. He was awarded his Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota in June of this year. He served as an analytical chemist for Studebaker-Packard Corp. in 1953. From 1955-58 he was chief barnman, graduate student and Extension farm management specialist at Michigan State. Since 1958 he has been a research fellow in farm management at the University of Minnesota.

Robert B. Bruce, assistant professor of dairy and animal science, who since 1954 has been engaged in general farming operations at Southern Aces Farm, Shelburne, Vt. He obtained his B.S. degree from the University of Connecticut in 1947, and his botany and plant pathology at Ohio State from 1954-60. Since 1960 he has been engaged in soil microbiological research at the Ohio Experiment Station, Wooster.

INTERNATIONAL WEEKEND

There will be a meeting of the International at 8 p.m. on Tues., Oct. 17, in the S.U. This is a very important meeting; at this time the officers for this year's weekend will be elected. All persons interested in administrative or staff positions are urged to attend. Only those present will be considered for various elected posts and appointive committee chairmanships.

INTER-VARSITY CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

There will be a meeting Fri., Oct. 13, at 7 p.m. in the Plymouth Room of the S.U. "Death of a Buddhist", an autobiographical account of his own conversion, by Cornelius Iida, will be read and discussed.

NEWMAN CLUB

On Fri., Oct. 13, Mrs. Foster Furcolo has requested to meet Newman Club students in the Governor's Lounge from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Refreshments will be served. All other students are welcome.

SPORTS CAR CLUB

The Amherst Region Sports Car Club will meet on Wed., Oct. 18, at 8:30 p.m. in the Village Inn. All those interested are invited. Ownership of a car by no means necessary.

WOMEN'S SERVICE ORGANIZATION

There will be an open meeting of WSO on Mon., Oct. 16, at 8 p.m. in the Worcester Room of the S.U. All upperclass and Freshmen women are inited to come to their meeting and get acquainted with the organization and its purposes and plans for the coming year. Refreshments will be served after the meeting.

IFC and PanHel To Aid Book Fund During R. I. Game

The Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils will hold a balloon sale for the benefit of the Library Reserve Book Fund again this year during Homecoming Weekend. The balloons will be sold on Friday night along the float parade route and Saturday at the Rhode Island game.

It is traditional that all balloons be sent skyward after the first UMass touchdown in the Homecoming game. This year Westover Air Force Base has been alerted not to send a pack of fighter planes to the campus if their radar detects a large number of unidentified flying objects over the area.

Lost & Found

LOST—Lady Shaeffer pen in W22 on October 3, between 9-10 a.m. Sentimental Value. Carolyn Mozler, Johnson House, or leave at S.U. lobby counter.

LOST—Olive green jacket with pile lining. Return to 373 Hills South, Howie Temkin.

Not on the Menu—Five men were ordering breakfast in a restaurant. "I'll have pancakes," said the first.

"Hot cakes," said the second.

"Wheat cakes," said the third.

"Griddle cakes," said the fourth.

"They're all synonyms, aren't they?" asked the fifth.

"No," replied the waitress, "but if you want synonym I can give you toast."

Fire Dept. Exhibits Apparatus

by ANN MILLER '64

Tuesday afternoon, October 10, the Amherst Fire Department, with the UMass Auxiliary, held a demonstration drill in front of Arnold House. In recognition of Fire Prevention Week, town chief Ed Cavanaugh worked in cooperation with UMass Fire Marshall Ed Goetzl in planning the drill as a means of demonstrating fire prevention and fire safety on campus.

The Amherst first truck, accompanied by the UMass Auxiliary, arrived at the girl's dorms at 1:15 and were there until about 2:30. Among the Auxiliary participants were chief Mal Sarna, deputy chief Dick Floyd, members Steve Bowman, Rick Clark, Elwin MacNamara, Dick Channing, Ted Gerber, Don Crasca.

They demonstrated the use of the life net, the aerial ladder truck, an the effectiveness of the fire extinguisher. Later, the truck drove around campus and at Paige lab demonstrated the effectiveness of the two and a half inch hoseline.

The UMass Auxiliary, composed of students from the campus, is working with the Amherst Fire Department and is auxiliary to the town department of Civil Defense.

UM Delegates Meet Peace Corps Staff

by ALLAN BERMAN '62, Editor-in-Chief

Over 200 students and faculty members representing nearly every institution of higher learning in New England convened this past weekend at the Hotel Statler in Boston for the 11th regional Peace Corps Conference.

The Friday evening program was informal, designed so that the delegates could meet the Peace Corps staff that had just flown in from Washington. On Saturday morning, Dr. Asa S. Knowles, President of the hosting Northeastern University, started the official conference by introducing Dr. John Munro, Dean of Harvard College, who gave the opening address.

DEPLORES SKEPTICISM

Munro deplored the skepticism that exists among most college students concerning the Corps and pointed to the Corps as a possible means of rescuing the world from its present period of high tension.

He admitted that working in the Peace Corps can be extremely frustrating and completely lacking in material reward. Dr. Munro expressed hope that when world tensions reduce, Peace Corps training might take the place of R.O.T.C. in colleges.

After Dr. Munro's speech, a symposium was held with five members of the Washington staff participating. Chairman was William Delano, General Counsel of the Peace Corps.

One of the most important points brought out was a clarification of how joining the Corps affects military obligations.

Service in the Peace Corps does not exempt an individual from the draft. Those in active service will be exempted until their term of duty is through, then they will be subject once again to military service call.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE

Any American citizen over 18 years of age may apply. There is no upper age limit. Married couples with no dependents will be considered only if both mates are acceptable and wish to serve. Couples with children may serve in supervisory positions.

HOW TO APPLY

Applications are avialable from the University Peace Corps liaison, who at UMass is Robert Morrissey, Director of Placement. Applicants should fill out the questionnaire completely, listing five references.

No person can be accepted until all references have been investigated.

No college degree is required for service. The Corps intends to work with the labor unions in securing skilled laborers.

After application, interested persons are urged to take the Peace Corps exams. The next exams will be given on November 28 and 29, and persons may take the exams on either date.

Exams measure general intelligence, knowledge of U.S. philosophy and history, language aptitude, and contain personality inventories. The exam as a whole is only a part of the battery of criteria used to evaluate candidates.

BE EXPLICIT

In applying, candidates are urged to be explicit about their skills. Candidates won't be asked to serve until a request for their specific abilities are received from foreign governments. It should be remembered that it is only upon request of a foreign nation that Peace Corps members are sent. The U.S. does not make the first move.

TRAINING DOESN'T ASSURE APPOINTMENT

Selection for training does not imply actual appointment to service. Many prospective workers drop out during the training or are found unqualified for service.

Gov. Volpe Visits Campus To Assist at Italian Fete

Gov. John A. Volpe visited campus yesterday shortly after noon to take part in the observance of the Centennial of Italian Unification, part of which took place in the S.U. Ballroom yesterday afternoon.

After inspecting a Flying Redmen-Bay State Rifle honor guard, the Governor viewed a drill exhibition by the Rifles, on which he commented "Very Good."

UMass Breaks UConn Hex With Mighty 31-13 Triumph

by W. JOHN LENNON '62

F-U-M-B-L:E spelled victory for Massachusetts Saturday before more than 10,000 Homecoming fans who attended the Huskie's wake under an ominous, leaden sky. Connecticut — the team which had won or shared the Yankee Conference crown for the previous five years; the team which had lost only one league contest during this period—this team was decisively defeated, 31-13, by the superior forces from UMass.

Jubuliant coach Vic Fusia is carried off the field by triumphant Redmen players following the victory over UConn. The UMass win was only the third in 20 years.

Although the setback was the third in as many starts for the hosts, the afternoon's one-sided developements proved surprising. Connecticut presented a line that averaged 210 pounds from end to end and 220 pounds from tackle to tackle.

The outweighed Redmen handled the burly barrier like a motor man driving his trolley down main-street. Instead of trying to match brawn for brawn, the Redmen turned in a dazzling display of speed and jolting tackles. These tactics made the difference.

Leading the vaunted UM offensive attack was Sam Lussier, who constantly riddled the right side of the opposition's line; and John McCormick, who directed his teammates on their scoring jaunts. The hard hitting, 175 lb. Lussier toted the ball for 104 yards in 17 attempts while his backfield mate found his target on six of eleven attempts. Twice McCormick connected on six yard missiles with Paul Majeski in the Huskies' end-zone.

Joining the scoring parade were Lewis, who also contributed six pointers, and John Bamberry, who converted on a 30 yard field goal attempt and two one pointers.

Although rain fell intermittently on the throng, it failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the

Coordinator Keeps Watch On Four College Programs

by MONETTA WRONSKI '63

In an office beneath the clock tower of Mary Lyon Hall on the Mount Holyoke campus, Stuart M. Stoke labors on the problems of coordinating activities of the four colleges in the area. Mr. Stoke, a former professor of psychology and education for thirty years at Mount Holyoke, before being appointed 4-College coordinator this year, keeps student newspapers at Smith, Amherst, Mount Holyoke, and UMass informed on the cooperative programs in which the colleges are participating while keeping a close watch on these activities and noting areas in which new programs could further benefit the area students.

The cooperative program offers courses in the fields of astronomy, history of science, and philosophy. Students needing courses in other fields which are not offered on their own campus may also qualify for the courses at any of the other three colleges. Transportation is provided by two free buses which run the four-college circuit for the benefit of the students in this program.

Some departments have set up a joint Ph.D. program and one Ph.D. has already been granted under such a program. The Ph.D. hood bears the colors of all four colleges, arranged in order from longest-established to newest.

The joint educational radio station WFCR-FM is also operated under a four-college cooperative plan, broadcasting daily except Sunday on 88.5 megacycles.

Another consolidation of effort has resulted in the quarterly publication of the literary magazine, The Massachusetts Review.

One of the proposed programs is a film center that will enable the four colleges cooperatively to purchase and use educational films, thus allowing a greater collection than one college alone could afford.

The Presidents of the four colleges meet four times a year on matters of cooperation, and their deputies meet monthly. Joint committees are often set up to manage specific enterprises, such as transportation and the four-college radio station.

Other programs sponsored jointly by the four colleges will be noted in a new four-college column soon to appear in the Collegian.

HOMECOMING DANCE TICKETS

Tickets for the Homecoming Dance will go on sale at the S.U. lobby counter, Tuesday, Oct. 17, for $1.50 per couple. Only 1000 tickets will be sold this year.

Hours for the purchase of tickets are as follows:

Oct. 17-20: 11-5

Oct. 21: 4-5:30 p.m. and 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Presidential Contestants To Debate In Chambers

Arthur "Tex" Tacelli and Andy D'Avanzo, both candidates for the Senate presidency, will debate tomorrow evening at 8 p.m. in the Council Chambers of the S.U. The debate will consist of four minutes of argument for each man, then six questions by the debators alternately given by each man.

Questions will then be directed to Tacelli and D'Avanzo alternately from the floor.

The following is reprinted from the New York Times on the advisability of political debates:

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower told a national television audience recently that if he were in office he would not debate a political rival on television.

General Eisenhower's views on televised debates between contenders for high office were given in discussing Mr. Nixon's defeat —an eventuality General Eisenhower had not anticipated.

The former President implied, without saying so, that Mr. Nixon's debates with Mr. Kennedy had contributed to his defeat.

Asked for his views on television debates, the former President remarked:

"I can't think of anything that's worse. Any man that is an incumbent has to stick to the facts. He is a responsible man debating with someone who, if he chooses, can be irresponsible.

"No, if I were giving one political piece of advice to my associates in government, or past associates, I would say: 'When you're in, never debate with an outer.'"

"Suppose Mr. Kennedy takes that advice?" he was asked.

"He probably will."

A Call For Experience

The burdens and events facing the Student Senate today are more crucial than ever before. The growth, financially and physically, of the student government over the last few years has been ever increasing. The duties of Robert Zelis (Senate President 1960) were surpassed by those of Dennis Twohig (Senate President 1961). And this year, the Student Senate Presidency will draw even more upon the man in the chief executive's chair.

Under the Lederle administration, more so than under Mather's, the Student Senate is called upon to provide a living and responsible example of the Student Body in general. Over the course of the last six months, the Senate President has been called upon to speak at the University's Presidential Inauguration ceremonies, address the new faculty members, open the 1961 Presidential Convocation, and represent UMass at the 11th Regional Peace Corps conference. While in the past there has never been an official President of the Student Body, today the Senate President is assuming more and more of the earmarks of such a position.

In the recent Senate elections, 35 new Senators were ushered into Senate seats while only seven veteran Senators remain in the name of experience. With the lack of depth, the President's chair will be burdened with even more responsibility and calls for leadership. The increasing number of campus organizations each year, along with the increase in enrollment and student taxes, have provided the Senate and its Budget Committee with a need for competent leadership and experience. When you are dealing with more than $140,000 the budget for a fiscal year must be seriously considered.

With these moments of need in mind, as well as the qualifications of the individual candidates, the Collegian feels that only Arthur Tacelli can handle the desperate calls made upon this office. With three full years of experience (one more than his competitor), a versatility in his representation (dormitories and fraternities), and a sound foundation established between himself and the administration and the campus during his pro-tem tenure, Tacelli has shown that his qualifications are based upon a wider area of the campus populace and lend themselves to a greater sense of continuity between the Senate and the campus.

His opponent, Andrew D'Avanzo, has shown a very competent hand and mind in the field of finance while holding the chairmanship of the Budgets Committee. But because his experience trails his opponent's by one full year, and his relations outside finance have been somewhat shallow in comparison with Tacelli's, and because the Senate Presidency lends itself more this year to becoming a Presidency of the Student Body, we feel we must endorse Arthur "Tex" Tacelli for the President's seat in the Student Senate elections this Wednesday evening.

--LETTERS--

D'Avanzo Speaks

To the Editor:

In reference to the main editorial in last Friday's Collegian, I believe the Collegian's support of a candidate for Senate Presidency is in extremely poor taste. Since the Collegian is the only mode of communication between the student body and the candidates concerned, its major responsibility is to present both sides of the issue. I hope the Collegian's responsibility will not be overlooked in spite of its recent change of policy.

Also, I am not contesting the Collegian's right to express its own opinion, but I am intent on correcting some comments that are just NOT TRUE:

1. The President of the Student Senate is not the "President of the Student Body." As of now, there is no such position called "President of the Student Body." The President of the Student Senate, since he is the chief executive of the Student Government Association, is frequently called upon to represent the student body in general. However, this office itself is not simply a "figure head" position. Although the representative responsibility of this office is very important, it is not the dominating responsibilty of that office.

2. Since the student body does not vote directly on the candidate for Senate Presidency, a "poster" campaign was never conducted for this position. I do not see how the Collegian can say in relation to the Senate Presidency: "Too many incompetent people have been coasted into office with posters."

The student body can vote on the Senate Presidency, indirectly, by exerting influence on their student senators. I sincerely encourage such active concern about the selection of the best candidate.

3. I do admit that the members of the Executive Board come in contact with both my opponent and myself quite frequently, and perhaps they do know more about both of us than the average student. Since none of the Executive Board members have attended almost all Senate meetings and Executive Committee meetings, I do not consider them experts on the qualifications of either of us. The only people who could be considered experts are the experienced senators themselves. They have seen both of us in action, and they are aware of where Senator Tacelli and myself have succeeded or failed in executing our responsibilities.

UMASS LEADERS VOTE

In sampling the soundness of the Collegian Executive Board's Senate Presidential decision, we have approached the major campus leaders. We have done this without regard for, or previous knowledge of, their individual preferences. We have tried to include those leaders who represent a cross-section in campus living, including of course, the Senate and its veteran members.

Bernie Murphy '62
Senior Class President

"I feel Tex can best provide the needed leadership ability for this most important campus position."

Mary Jane Stack '62
Mortar Board Secretary
Sorority President
Former Senator

"Having worked with Tex on the Senate, I know that he truly represents the voice of the Student Body in all decisions and in his policies. I wholeheartedly endorse Tex, and I sincerely feel the Student Body does the same."

Richard Shields '63
Former Senate Treasurer

"I feel very strongly the need for continuity in Senate leadership. This is vitally important; for without it, the Senate's program would be set behind several weeks. Tex Tacelli is therefore my choice for Senate President."

Peter Haebler '63
Senator-at-Large Class of '63

"I am supporting Andy D'Avanzo for President because I feel that of the two candidates Andy will get the job done. Andy has proven this as chairman of the Budgets Committee last year and on many other occasions. We need a worker as Senate President, not a figurehead."

Betsy Robicheau '63
Senator-at-Large Class of '63

"As a senator, I feel that Tex Tacelli is fully qualified to hold the office of president of the Student Senate. He has the experience and the personality to represent the University in contacts with the administration and off-campus as well."

Linda Achenbach '62
Senate Vice-President

"No Comment."

Beaver Coyle '62
Women's Judiciary
Cheerleader

"Tex's victory over Andy last spring indicates the confidence which the Student Body has in Tex's ability to head this vital branch of our student government."

Fran Lovejoy '62
Pres. Adelphia

"President Lederle has frequently remarked that the Presidency of the Student Senate is the most important student-held office. Tacelli, in his three public appearances and in his private duties as President pro-tem, has exhibited the requisite qualities of leadership and ability and at the same time is truly representative of the Student Body."

Wes Honey '62
Ya-Hoo Editor

"For President of the Student Senate? Tacelli . . . put the records side by side . . . who else?"

Ed Rodriguez '62
Index Editor

"The Senate Presidential post must command respect and provide aggressive leadership . . . Tex is already filling the bill."

'62 CORVAIR MONZA

NEW FACE, SAME SPORTING HEART

We might as well tell you straight off: Corvair's the car for the driving enthusiast. Think that lets you out? Maybe. Maybe not.

Until you've driven one, you really can't say for sure, because Corvair's kind of driving is like no other in the land. The amazing air-cooled rear engine sees to that. You swing around curves flat as you please, in complete control. You whip through the sticky spots other cars should keep out of in the first place. (Especially this year, now that you can get Positraction as an extra-cost option.) You stop smoothly, levelly with Corvair's beautifully balanced, bigger brakes.

And Corvair's found other new ways to please you this year. A forced-air heater and defroster are standard equipment on all coupes, sedans and both Monza and 700 Station Wagons. So are dual sunshades and front-door armrests and some other goodies. You'll note some new styling, inside and out. Nice. And safety-belt installation is easier, too, and cheaper. Another extra-cost option well worth considering is the heavy-duty front and rear suspension; it turns a Corvair into a real tiger.

So you can see we haven't really done much to Corvair this year. Why on earth should we? If this car, just as she is, can't make a driving enthusiast out of you, better take a cab.

CHEVROLET

A New World of Worth

And here's America's only thoroughbred sports car, the '62 CORVETTE. We warn you: If you drive a Corvette after your first sampling of a Corvair, you may well end up a two-car man. And who could blame you?

See the '62 Corvair and Corvette at your local authorized Chevrolet dealer's

Centennial Newsletter Available

The first issue of the UMass Centennial Newsletter. will be available this afternoon at the SU lobby counter. This is the first of several editions to be issued. between now and the Centennial.

The purpose of the newsletter, as stated by Professor Maxwell H. Goldberg, "is to provide periodical progress reports and background stories on Centennial events, as well as to stimulate interest in Centennial activities."

The first issue will be bound into the October issue of the Massachusetts Alumnus, and according to James Reinhold, editor of the Centennial Newsletter, 14,000 alumni will receive this first issue.

He said the alumni receiving the newsletter will be able to subscribe for free copies.

Prof. Heller To Discuss Meditations

Professor Peter Heller of the German Department will speak on Kafka's Meditations on Tuesday, October 17 at 8 p.m. in the Middlesex Room.

Born in Vienna, Professor Heller attended the "Realgymnasium" there, studied music in England, received his B.A. at McGill University, Montreal, Canada in 1944 and the Licentiate of Music from the McGill Conservatory of Music in the same year. In 1951, he received his Ph.D. in Germanics from Columbia University.

Previously he has taught at Rutgers, Columbia, and Harvard. Currently at UMass he teaches German 1, 2, 25, and 26; 18th, 19th, and 20th century literature; and Masterpieces of German Literature in Translation.

Professor Heller is a very productive research scholar, publishing regularly in outstanding literary and aesthetic journals both here and abroad.

At present he is president of the "Connecticut Valley Chapter" of the American Association of Teachers of German. This lecture is the third in the Hillel Foundation series "Moral Problems in Great Literature."

Odds 'n Ends

WAVES REPRESENTATIVE

Lt. Johanna Young of the WAVES will be in the S.U. lobby Monday and Tuesday to speak to college women interested in a career with the U.S. Navy.

GRADUATE STUDY FOR WOMEN

A program on "Graduate Study Opportunities for Women" will be presented Tuesday evening at 7:00 p.m. in the Barnstable and Franklin rooms of the S.U.

Dr. Thomas Woodside, Dr. T. O. Wilkinson, and Miss Carole Leland will discuss fellowships, scholarships, application, and other items of interest to any woman interested in attending grad school. This should be of special interest to junior women.

FEDERAL SERVICE EXAM

Seniors and graduate students interested in taking the Federal Service Entrance Exam should pick up their applications and file them by November 2, in order to take the next exam, to be given on November 18.

All should file for this except engineering, math, physics, and accounting majors.

Applications are available in the Placement Office.

UMass Cross Country Squad Romps Over Connecticut and B.U.

by ABE SHEINKER '62

Superior depth behind outstanding front line runners enabled the UMass cross country team to score over Connecticut and Boston University. The Redmen totalled only 27 points to UConn's 42 and B.U.'s 71 at Storrs, Conn., on Friday.

Although continuing his consistently fine running, Bob Brouillet finally met his match in the Terriers' Art Freeman, who edged "Digger" for first place by less than 10 seconds. It was the first loss this fall for the Phillipston Flash. It wasn't an easy second for Brouillet since teammate Dave Balch finally showed that he's not far behind the great sophomore when he finished three seconds behind him.

Reliable Dick Blomstrom, in his second year as the varsity's consistent number three man, did it again with a strong fifth. Then came the fighting five who crushed the Huskies' victory hopes: Bob Avery, Gene Colburn, Jim Wrynn, Ken O'Brien, and Charlie Proctor, who took 8th through 12th place, respectively. Coach Bill Footrick will be faced with a difficult decision as to which of these five to leave out of the championship meets soon, since he can enter only seven in the YanCons and New Englands.

UConn had three men right up near the front although a few places behind UMass' three B's, but the next five Redmen shunted the fourth Husky all the way back to 13th. It was evident that only one man at B.U. is interested in long distance racing since the Terriers grabbed first place and found their next four runners coming in only after everyone from the other two squads had finished. B.U.'s second best was 22nd this time.

The Redmen harriers now face their toughest opponent of the season: Harvard. The Crimson downed UMass, 20-41, last year and are still strong. The meet will be on Tuesday at Franklin Park starting at 2:00.

The top ten finishers:

1. Art Freeman, B.U. 24:43.6
2. Bob Brouillet, UMass. 24:53
3. Dave Balch, UMass 24:56
4. Seale, UConn. 25.03
5. Dick Blomstrom, UM. 25:27
6. Kosinski, UConn 25:38
7. Cross, UConn. 25:41
8. Bob Avery, UMass. 25:51
9. Gene Colburn, UMass. 25:52
10. Jim Wrynn, UMass. 25:58

Other UMass finishers:

11. Ken O'Brien 26:29
12. Charlie Proctor 26.32
14. Tom Leavitt 26:51

Booters Drop First YanCon Match to Huskie Team, 6-1

by STEVE HEWEY '63

In its first YanCon soccer match of the season the Redmen varsity suffered a 6-1 setback at the hands of UConn Saturday morning at Storrs. The once-beaten Huskies, in control of the match from the outset, were the superior team in every respect with skill and speed at every position.

For the Redmen, it was their third loss in four starts and the second loss of this week. On Wednesday, Trinity whitewashed the UM varsity in an away contest.

The lone UM tally in the UConn match was scored by junior center Bob Chenery who booted one past UConn goalie Mike Kibbe at 21:30 of the first period. UConn star Myron Krasy led his team with 4 goals, 2 in the first period and 2 in the third.

Although the UConns dominated throughout most of the game, the last seven minutes of the contest for the Redmen were fense showed considerable imtheir best of the game. Their ofprovement and the defense did not allow a goal. This final period was the only one in which the winners did not score.

Sophomore Mike Repeta, according to Coach Larry Briggs, is one of his most improved squad members. In the past two games he has been playing top notch ball. In Saturday's match he was the top defensive star. On offense against UConn it was right wing Stam Paleocrassus that kept the UM attack going. Stam has been an offensive standout since the season's start.

Two matches are on tap for the Redmen crew this week. On Tuesday undefeated WPI plays host to the Briggsmen. Next Saturday, UM Homecoming, will see the Redmen vs. URI in a home contest starting at 12 noon.

Frosh Trackmen Defeat UConn, Boston University

by R. W. BUSSOWITZ '64

The frosh cross country team set the weekend precedent for Massachusetts as it handed our YanCon foes the first of their defeats. B.U. and host UConn were the losers Friday as the Mass yearlings ran away with a triangular meet, 23-39-78.

Bill Young of New Bedford turned the tables on fourth place Tom Panke in respect to team position and also beat the remaining competition in a field of twenty-four. His time was 16:45 for the 3.1 mile course, only ten seconds off the record.

The UMass victory, however, can be credited only to a fine team effort, as has been the case all season. In this meet, eight of the first 11 berths were occupied by our men. UConn was obliged to settle with second, third, and eighth spots, while B.U. could do no better than twelfth.

Tomorrow, the squad will be shooting for its fourth seasonal win and sixteenth in a row for frosh teams, when it meets Harvard in Crimson Territory.

Friday's Results:

Here are the Contest Rules —Read 'em and Win!

1. Any student or faculty member on this campus may enter except employees of Brown & Williamson, its advertising agencies, or members of their immediate families. All entries become the property of Brown & Williamson—none will be returned. Winners will be notified within three weeks after each contest. Winners' names may be published in this newspaper. You may enter as often as you wish, provided each entry is sent individually. Contest subject to all governmental regulations. Entries must be postmarked or dropped in ballot box on campus no later than the Wednesday midnight before the games are played and received by noon Friday of the same week. The right to discontinue future contests is reserved.
2. Entries must be in contestant's own name. On the coupon in this ad or on an Official Entry Blank or piece of paper of the same size and format, write your predictions of the scores of the games and check the winners. Enclose an empty Viceroy package or a reasonable rendition of the Viceroy name as it appears on the package front. Mail entry to Viceroy at the Box Number on the entry blank or drop in Viceroy Football Contest Ballot Box on campus.
3. Entries will be judged by The Reuben H. Donnelley Corp on the basis of number of winners correctly predicted. Ties will be broken on the basis of scores predicted. Duplicate prizes awarded in case of final ties.
4. Winners are eligible for any prize in subsequent contests.

Hard-Hitting UMass Team Swamps UConn 31-13

Conquest Heralds A New Yan Con Era

UM fans. The Redmen's display caused the large delegation of students to go whooping back to Amherst, jabbering in terms of a "championship".

It was evident early in the contest that the Huskies were going to be scalped; but most of the fans were well covered with sundry raingear, and sat through what amounted to a long-long afternoon for the home partisans.

The victory pattern was set in the opening minutes when Tom Kirby pounced on a UC fumble on the opposition's 32. After nine plays the Redman attack bogged down with 4th and 3 on the Husky 12. John Bamberry then projected the Redmen into a 3-0 advantage when he parted the uprights.

The initial UM touchdown was also set up by a UC miscue, which occurred when the ball squirted away from Pete Barbarito on the UM 46 where Bob Foote pounced on it. The Redmen, led by the running of Lussier, Lewis, and McCormick; and the latter's 12 yard pass to Majeski, again marched goalward. From the six, the Belmont ace again connected with Majeski. Bamberry upped the count to 10-0.

The stage was then set for the game's most spectacular play. With 20 seconds remaining in the half Joe Klimas faded back from his own 37, and connected with Jim Bell on the 22. The speedy end eluded Art Perdigao, and sprinted to the end zone. Klimas made good on his placement, and the UConns had narrowed the Redmen's margin to 10-7.

McCORMICK TO MAJESKI FOR A T.D.
Quarterback John McCormick fires the ball to Paul Majeski who waits for it in the end zone in the final minute of the game. The play was identical to a previous touchdown play. The play, which accounted for the final UMass T.D. followed a gamble by UConn which flopped.

HICKMAN STOPPED
Jimmy Hickman, a speedy Redman halfback, is brought down by a Husky. Jimmy amazed the fans throughout the game with his deft running.

After receiving the second half kick-off, UM drove to the UC 3 and Lewis plunged over for the TD. Bamberry's conversion attempt from the 30 (as a result of a personal foul) was short.

Later, after Pete Barbarito forgot to take the ball with him on a double reverse, Foote recovered. Lussier's fancy footwork enabled him to dance forty yards down the left sidelines on the first play from scrimmage. Bamberry's foot moved the score to 23-7.

Early in the final stanza Jerry White electrified the crowd with a 63 yard return of a McCormick punt. Ken Palm finally dragged him down on the 22. Connecticut then drove to the 6 and Klimas hit Noveck to raise the score to 23-13.

As the clock ate up the final seconds, Dave Korponai faked a fourth down punt, but Dave Harrington dragged him down on his own 3. Then, after Jim Hickman's two fruitless attempts to penetrate the line, McCormick rifled a pass to Majeski for the score. The Belmont ace then hit Lussier for the two pointer, and the scoring parade was over.

An individual is considered qualified or unqualified only with regard to specific projects. Candidates may request to be sent to specific countries. One thing stressed by the symposium was that the filing of an application does not in any way oblige a candidate to accept an invitation for training. The candidate might wish to wait until the specific type of service he wishes to perform is needed, or he might change his mind and decide not to serve at all.

Once an applicant has been invited to train for a specific project, and once he has accepted to do so, he is sent to one of several Universities throughout the counery, where training for the different services take place.

Elements of Training

There are many sides to the training. On the academic side, there is the study of Ameican policy and social institutions, with an emphasis on contempoary problems. Next is a learning of internal affairs of the U.S.

Following that comes a study of the nation and language where the candidate will serve. Then there is training in the specific skill required. Finally, there is a vigorous program of health conditioning, including: health education, first aid, and physical conditioning.

In addition to the rigorous physical training and the often extremely difficult study of a foreign language, there is training on how to answer the many sticky questions which the people of the foreign nation will be asking.

After Serivce

After completing two or three years of service, Peace Corps workers are given aid in securing employment in the U.S. which will take advantage of their new-found skills. In case of disease or injury while abroad, Corpsmen are covered by Workmen's Compensation.

This brief account of the Peace Corps is intended to answer the questions most asked by college students. Space considerations make it impossible to enter into further detail. Those interested, however, may obtain further information in the Collegian office. with members of the administration and the Board of Trustees.

It was the first opportunity that any members of the student body have had to talk over University issues directly with the trustees. Among the topics discussed were: the housing problem, expansion, desirability and development of medical and law schools, and improvement of University-wide communications.

This pooling of ideas and discussion of problems was considered by all participants to be very beneficial. It gave the trustees an idea of how the students feel concerning present issues, and it helped to increase the rapport between students, administration and the Board.

Plans are now being made for further meetings of the same type.

Leaders Discuss Issues With Board of Trustees

Sen. Tex Tacelli discusses University problems with Miss Victoria Shuck, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Student Activities Committee, and Dr. William Field, Dean of Students.

A new experience in student-administration relationships occurred Friday when several UMass student leaders had lunch

Many Programs Planned To Use Students' Talents

This is the second of a three part serial on the student volunteer program to the Northampton State Hospital.

Application forms to be disseminated by the student executive members of the new program at their respective schools were made out and distributed. Correspondence regarding the forms were sent to these students. Student meetings at the hospital were planned for October 2 and 5, 1961.

Judging from last year's response and other programs similar in nature the students who appeared have talents in many areas. In order to utilize these talents programs have been designed that can best be adapted to hospital facilities.

Remotivation — Restoration of basic human contact with patients who have ceased to communicate adequately. A specialized technique open to students and interested employees.

Athletic Programs—Leadership and participation in games, calisthenics and other physical activities.

Recreation — Establishing communication with patients through activities which utilize all recreational resources.

Entertainment and Volunteer Activities — Activities with the dual purpose of entertainment and resocialization.

Occupational Therapy — Arts and Crafts—Assisting occupational therapy in stimulating patients through their creative ability.

Cooking—A training program for patients who are able to derive practical and or rehabilitative value from this experience.

Music — Community singing or instruction of individual patients in the use of voices or instruments.

Case Aide—A prolonged series of weekly meetings between one student and one patient plus regular conferences among the participating students and a professional worker.

Patient Government—Organizing and creating interest in the patients' personal responsibilities for his own care and activities.

CAMPUS GRAND PRIX

An exciting, fun-filled "Grand Prix," open to students at the University of Massechusetts and other major colleges and universities in New England, is coming soon, and you don't have to be a professional sports car driver to enter.

The L & M-Chesterfield "Grand Prix" Contest is set for the 1961-1962 school year, and each of the eight contest prizes — four in the Fall semester and four in the Spring semester — is an Austin Healey Sprite MK II, the hottest small sports car going. This audacious little rascal is a consistent winner in Class H Production competition. At the Sebring trials this year, the rugged Sprite MK II not only drove off with all the prizes in its class, but finished along with the bigger, more powerful Ferraris and Maseratis in the 12-hour endurance trial.

Special "Grand Prix" ads in the Collegian are scheduled to give students the scoop on how to "get with the Grand Prix." The simple Contest rules are printed right on the official entry form, the "Grand Prix" Registration Envelope, and Carl Valone, Liggett & Myers Campus Representative, will personally distribute them on campus. Supplies of the "Grand Prix" entry forms are going to be available, at all times, where cigarettes are sold on and about campus.

Float Parade Heads Homecoming Plans

by DICK HAYNES '64

Homecoming weekend will open this Friday evening at 6 p.m. with a float parade. Over forty floats have been entered in the parade by fraternities, sororities, and dormitories.

Assembly of the parade will start at 5:15 p.m. on Ellis Drive. The parade route will be: Ellis Drive, North Pleasant Street, Route 9, Lincoln Avenue, North Pleasant Street, Ellis Drive, and dispersal will be into the North Lot in front of the Engineering Building. Four judges will be stationed along the route and prizes will be awarded in these divisions: fraternity, sorority, womens' dormitories, and mens' dormitories.

Rally Follows Parade

The "Beat Rhode Island" rally will start following the parade at about 8:30 p.m. At the rally, Robert Gordon '48, President of the Alumni Association; Richard Davis '26, Past President of the Alumni Association; and several football coaches are expected to speak.

The traditional bonfire will then be lit by Metawampee.

Homecoming Queen Finalists Announced

The Queen will be crowned at the rally Friday night by Robert Gordon '48, President of the Alumni Association. Winners of the Float Parade will also be announced at that time.

The five finalists for the title of Homecoming Queen are: Sue Lydon '65, nominated by Arnold House; Pam O'Donnell '63, nominated by Pi Beta Phi; Marcia Lockhart '65, nominated by Tau Epsilon Phi; Sandra Jones '65, the candidate of Phi Mu Delta and Hills South; and Jan Wehmann '63, nominated by Greenough.

Jam Session to Follow Rally

From 10 till 11:45 p.m., Friday, there will be a Jam Session in the S.U. Ballroom with "The Big Six" from Ludlow. Tickets for the Jam Session will be on sale in the S.U. Lobby after the rally.

'A Carnival of Flowers' Will Be Hort Show Theme

Designed, constructed and operated by students in horiculture and related fields, this year's Horticultural Show at UMass will feature "A Carnival of Flowers" theme complete with a ferris wheel and gay, colorful cranival atmosphere.

October 27-28-29 are the dates for the event to be held in the Cage. Both four-year and Stockbridge students will mastermind the annual educational feature with the help of faculty members in the College of Agriculture.

This year, for the first time and to help defray expenses, a small admission charge will be made.

Design and construction for the show are now underway, but the real staging of exhibits and displays will be done during the week of the show.

Randolph A. Jester, professor of floriculture and faculty chairman, has announced the following student chairmen and their responsibilities.

General co-chairmen: Peter F. Grigas, UM '62, Stoughton; and Malcolm Graham, SS '62, Woburn.

Main feature: Ivan M. Heath, SS '62, Taunton. Entrance: Samuel D'Angelo, SS '62, Andover. Borders: Everett E. Mino, SS '62, W. Upton, and Richard Reed, SS '62, Salem. Balcony: Tauno Aalto, Jr., SS '62, Millis; and Raymond Robichaud, SS '62, Athol.

Publicity: Ann F. Anderson, UM '62, Braintree. Supplies and tools: John Dolly, SS '62, Great Barrington; and William J. Mistretta, SS '62, Woburn. Floriculture Store: Norman Bergeron, SS '63, New Bedford; and Eric H. Wetterlow, III, SS '62, Manchester. Corsages: Jeffrey S. French, SS '63, Reading; and David F. Smith, SS '62, Waltham.

Debate Yields Candidates' Opinions, Charges, Replies

by AL BERMAN, Editor-in-Chief

A flip of the coin by Dave Clancy of Men's Judiciary picked Senator Andy D'Avanzo as the first speaker to present his opening four minute argument at the Tacelli-D'Avanzo debate last night.

D'Avanzo pointed out that in his two years with the Student Senate he has been "very closely linked with the past two presidents". He pointed out that he has had experience in directing people within the Senate.

He continued "I think I have learned how to deal with people" and went on to mention his association with the Student Senate Budgets Committee. He challenged, "Let's face it—the Student Senate controls the purse-strings."

D'Avanzo, whose speech was under four minutes, mentioned in closing that he had established contact with the administration.

Senator Tacelli began his brief speech, which lasted considerably under four minutes. Tacelli said he planned to "coordinate, direct, and control the Student Senate".

Tacelli pointed out that experience not only in the Senate, but on campus, is necessary for the job of Senate President. Tacelli stated, "Senator D'Avanzo has done nothing from May to today."

The two most stinging questions asked by the candidates of each other were:

D'Avanzo asked Tacelli why "he was unable to execute his responsibility" in regard to Mr. Contino of the University Bands. D'Avanzo alleged that Tacelli was negligent in not forwarding a letter to Mr. Contino concerning the bands' budget.

Tacelli answered that the letter was written by D'Avanzo himself and that the letter had been forwarded, and, therefore, he considered it a dead issue.

Tacelli followed up with perhaps his biggest bombshell of the evening. He asked D'Avanzo, "Are you a front for Senator Achenbach?" D'Avanzo replied, "I am planning to run for president. I am not a front for any other candidate."

Floor questions produced one notable query. After stating continually during the entire proceedings that he had thought Tacelli to have failed in his role as president pro tem, D'Avanzo was asked specifically to explain what Tacelli's failure was.

D'Avanzo brought out the fact that a letter from the Senate to President Lederle, complaining about crowded housing conditions, was supposed to have been written and sent by Tacelli in May. However, due to what D'Avanzo claims was Tacelli's "negligence", D'Avanzo himself had to write the letter. Even then, said D'Avanzo, the letter still didn't reach the president until last month.

After D'Avanzo railed Tacelli at some length on this point, moerator Clancy announced that the time limit for the debate had expired. Thus the proceedings ended before Tacelli had a chance to answer D'Avanzo's charges.

Gage Warns Of Danger In Missiles

Robert W. Gage, M.D. of the UMass Infirmary, has sent an open letter urging students to refrain from "the temptation of assaulting riders" of floats in the Homecoming float parade.

The letter is reprinted in full.

"Last year one of the passengers on one of the floats in the Homecoming Parade had an accident which could well have been tragic. She was struck in the eye by a missile (tomato?) thrown by one of the bystanders. Fortunately, she suffered only a brief loss of time and no loss of vision. It could well have been otherwise; she could have lost the vision in the eye.

"Those participating in the parade have gone to great effort to produce one of the most colorful spectacles which the campus enjoys during the year. Pelting the siders with missiles is a "non-creative" way of contributing to the production. More important, however, it is positively dangerous and unfair to do so at night. Riding on a lighted float at night, a participant has no opportunity of seeing and avoiding the object thrown until it is too close.

"Students along the way are urged to resist the temptation of assaulting the riders of floats, and other participants, with objects hard or soft, sweet or sour. Let's keep it safe and enjoy the fun.

Signed:
Robert W. Gage, M.D.
Director,
University of Health Service

Administrators Urged To Unite By Lederle

President John W. Lederle called on administrators in public schools and colleges yesterday to present a common front on behalf of public education.

Speaking before the New England Association of School Superintendents, Lederle declared that "public education administrators should all be dedicated to the proposition that public education at all levels can be—and indeed must be — excellent. We should hold the candle to no one. As administrators we should spend every waking moment planning for excellence and seeking the wherewithal to achieve it."

Educational Turning-Point Seen

The country is at a "great turning-point" in the development of its educational resources and "a free public school system, capped by a system of public higher education based on a low-tuition principle, is the crowning glory of America."

He pointed out that "certainly in New England, excellence in higher education has meant, by and large, our distinguished private institutions. Theirs is the long, notable and continuing tradition. But we in the public institutions find that the tide of population is increasingly sweeping us toward the forefront of educational activity," he declared.

Supports Low Cost Institutions

On the problem of costs, the president said, "It is beyond me why anyone in America could favor dropping the free or low-cost educational principle at a time when Russia, seeing its value, is picking it up and threatening through its use to surpass us."

"Let's support in a positive way the basic proposition that education at all levels is an investment by the public in its greatest natural resource—its youth."

Turning to the problem of fiscal control of university operations, the president asked for "greater flexibility and freedom in management."

Free Press and Politics

The Collegian has been in operation since 1910. In the intervening years between today and those initial publishing days, there have been hundreds of political battles and controversies. And for some strange reason, the Senators and editors involved in these controversies have never seen fit to prohibit an endorsement policy on the Collegian by amending its constitution. What is that strange reason which restrained them?

Over the last 50 years of Collegian publishing, Senators and editors have exhibited a true faith in us. They believed that their predecessors could not be intimidated or "courted." There has permeated our journalistic tradition here: a "trust" in our integrity and sound judgment. When the Collegian announced last Friday that we were setting a precedent in editorial policy, the "precedent" was in regards to most recent years. But a check of past issues will indicate such an endorsement practice is not completely new to the University of Massachusetts' student newspaper.

In 1951, the Collegian endorsed a candidate for the Senate Presidency and an identical furor arose. The Collegian Editorial Board reply was: "... we decided to favor the experienced Senators who, in our opinion (which we have every right to expound ... whether or not some people are intelligent enough to realize it), are the most capable men for the offices. THIS IS OUR STAND and we are determined to go to all lengths to stick to it. The Collegian is a free and responsible press. Yes, free, and we cannot be intimidated by all the dirty politics and juvenile letters from here to Turners Falls and back."

The question today is—who is qualified to lead? Better yet, who bothers to lead? Name us someone or some organization on this campus which is willing to stand above the apathy and face the crowd with a decision? This campus has offered a growing deterrent to leadership in the form of an indignant "Who are they to decide anything" whenever leadership is offered.

The fact that the Collegian is supported by compulsory taxes is irrelevant. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower was and still is supported from our compulsory taxes and yet he endorsed Richard Nixon while he himself was still in the office of the President of the United States. Should we ask—who was he to take sides? Were we not buying the bread for his breakfast table with our tax dollars? We have been told also that we are the only student voice here. Yes, it is quite easy to forget that there are 5,000 undergraduates attending this institution for all the opinions they express over the course of a year. They are easy to forget when only 56 students appeared for the D'Avanzo-Tacelli debate.

We are proud to take a stand, to cross the line of student apathy on this campus, to face the crowd, and present an endorsement which we know is a product of a FREE and RESPONSIBLE press.

The Candidates: How They Stand

Arthur Tacelli

1. Chairman, Public Relations Committee
2. Member, University State House Day Committee
3. R.S.O. ex officio member
4. Student Union Governing Board, ex officio
5. WMUA Policy Board
6. University Representative to Peace Corps Conference
7. Published Student Government information booklet for freshmen, informing them about the workings of all branches.
8. Originated "Gripe Sessions"
9. Initiated radio recording of Senate meetings
10. Our program was designed to relate to the student public, the operations of the Senate. By the effective co-operation of the Collegian, WMUA and mass leaflets we let the student body know what the Senate did.
11. Sent postcards to all freshmen inviting them to Senate meetings.
12. Asked that suggestion boxes be placed in conspicuous places in the dormitories.

"I feel that I can capably direct the Student Senate this year. My demonstrated ability to participate in campus organization, my leadership qualities, and my desire to promote the better interests of the student body, will prompt the Senate to make the proper choice tonight."

Andrew D'Avanzo

1. Originator of Ya-Hoo-Quarterly Distribution Act
2. Active Member of budgets committee
3. Senate representative to Student Leader's Conference
4. Chairman of budgets committee
   a. First budget act in Catalogue in Oct., 1960
   b. First budget presented to committee in December (usually done in February)
   c. First budget presented to Senate floor Jan. 4, 1961 (usually not done until March)
   d. For the first time no special Senate meetings had to be called to deal with budgets
   e. Budget committee relieved of time-consuming committee work that characterized committee in the past.
   f. Last budget passed by Senate before end of March (usually not done until April)
   g. Budget act book presented to each senator one week after the act was passed by the Senate (in previous years, book not published until mid-summer)
   h. Revised edition printed in the fall this year for the first time.
   i. Financial reports were published in the Collegian several times to inform student body of tax structure.
5. Active member of executive committee (1 yr.)
6. Senate representative to SWAP Conference
7. Revised student government association by-laws in regard to financial procedures.
8. Originator and chief supporter of motion passed by the Student Senate "protesting the administration's policy of increasing enrollment without adequate dormitory facilities."

"I am not running for this position simply because I have done a tremendous amount of work for the Student Senate. I really believe that the experiences that I have gained in executing my responsibilities as Chairman of the budgets committee are essential qualifications needed by the president of the Student Senate."

LETTER

To the Editor:

As a member of the student body of the University of Massachusetts, I was quite disturbed when I read that the Collegian has decided to endorse a candidate for the important office of the President of the Student Senate. It would surely be wiser instead, to give any and all candidates an opportunity to state their platforms, qualifications, and views in the Collegian. This way all may judge the candidates for themselves.

True, there is freedom of the press, but the Collegian is an important and influential power here at the university. If one candidate were endorsed, what are the rest of the candidates to do, start their own newspapers?

At the University of Connecticut the administration took over the reins of the student paper and the Collegian agreed that the protests were, "though noisy," correct. In this same vein, is it correct that the student paper should "interfere" with the election of the President of the Student Senate? Would it not be better merely to inform rather than endorse?

D.B. '65

From The Senate V.P.

To the Editor:

After reading page two of Monday's Collegian, I feel that this letter is very pertinent. I cannot remain silent any longer, and therefore, my "no comment" is now out of order.

In the first place, I agree with many, many students that the Collegian as a tax-supported, non-competitive newspaper should not endorse candidates for campus offices. However, if you choose to do so, I expect you at least to get the facts straight and offer some concrete evidence in your supporting statements. For these reasons I feel that you did injustice to Senator D'Avanzo in your article, poll, etc.

Since I have been in the Student Senate for two and one-half years, which I would like to remind you is longer than any other Senator, including Senator Tacelli, I have the advantage of knowing both candidates' Senatorial backgrounds even better than the Collegian. I would like to cite some examples from my memory which can be checked in the Senate minutes.

Although you credited Tex with three years' service in the Senate both he and Andy were sworn into the Senate for the first time two years ago on October 14, 1959. Tacelli was appointed to the Public Relations Committee, and D'Avanzo served on the Budgets Committee. During that first year Andy introduced a motion which improved the delivery of YaHoo and the Quarterly. His name may also be found frequently in the Budget Committee activities. I wish that I could say as much about Tex's first year, but I have looked, thought, and found nothing.

In the fall of 1960, both men were re-elected from their residence areas. Both also served as chairmen of their old committees (D'Avanzo-Budgets, Tacelli-Public Relations), and were members of the Executive Committee. This points to the fact that neither man has real depth, each having served on only one committee while in the Senate. But each candidate deserves a brief sketch on his activities last year.

Andy and his committee carried out the introduction of the category system which streamlined the budget system. He was also one of the students directly involved in the reestablishment of the Fine Arts Council.

Tex's Public Relations Committee was responsible for listing the Senators in the Collegian, sending post cards to freshmen inviting them to Senate meetings, running a gripe session, reporting Senate activities on WMUA, and preparing a pamphlet on student government for entering freshmen.

Last May Senator Tacelli defeated Senator D'Avanzo for the position of President Pro Tempore. This was an important victory, but certainly not the end of the line for either man. Since then a new Senate has been elected, and it has the right to choose its own leaders. I agree that continuity is an important factor, but the pro tempore officers should under no circumstances necessarily become the holders of the same positions on a permanent basis.

I have already pointed out several weak spots in your endorsement of Mr. Tacelli, but I want to emphasize a few more. You stressed repeatedly the importance of the financial aspect of the Senate, but nevertheless, chose Tex over Andy, who is the financial expert. If your justification lies in the fact that the President of the Student Senate is in reality the President of the Student Body, I shall be only too willing to propose constitutional changes to make creation of this position possible. I will also do everything within my power to make this a popularity contest if that is what you want. Until then, I suggest that those persons who know little about the position of Student Senate President (and I do not mean Student Body President) not be used to influence student opinion. I suspect that most of the UMass leaders polled and pictured in the Collegian with the exception of the Senators, past and present, know Tex much better than Andy. After all, three of them are fellow Adelphians with Tex, and the other two non-Senators are also seniors. (Tex is a senior; Andy a junior.)

Among the five Senators polled only Pete Haebler and myself are returning veterans with at least one year's experience. After weighing the assets and liabilities of each candidate, we are both supporting Andy because we feel that he is the better man. We know that this position is more than just the student representative to the outside world. It also involves chairing Senate meetings on Wednesday evenings, as well as providing inspiration and leadership to the Senate.

Each man has proved himself competent and capable in the eyes of others. Last week Andy soundly defeated the incumbent Steve Hewey, 76-47, in Wheeler, while Tex was the top vote-getter in Van Meter. Outside the Senate the candidates are examples of striking contrasts. Andy is a better than average electrical engineering student. Tex, on the other hand, has been active in an assortment of extra-curricular activities.

In the final tally I realize that I have only one vote, but I feel that it is a vital one. No one can deny my experience and knowledge in this issue. Therefore, I hope the students, especially the Senators who will be casting votes with me, will consider the above points along with others previously presented. I hope each Senator gives this matter as much thought and consideration as I have, regardless of whom he chooses.

Senator Linda L. Achenbach

Ed. Note—We recognize our mistake in printing Senator Tacelli's tenure in office. On that score—we stand corrected.

WMUA Broadcasting Early Morning Shows

While most other students are catching their last forty-winks, each morning Monday thru Friday, a member of the WMUA staff is broadcasting the new early morning show, "Coffee on Campus". This show is heard 7-9 a.m. and features light, bouncy wake-up music, latest world and national news, weather forecasts and important campus information.

"Coffee on Campus" was originated this fall when WMUA decided to add two additional hours of broadcasting per day. WMUA wanted to increase its services for the students by providing the latest news, weather, and time for the students so that they could catch up on these details while preparing for their first class. Another reason for "Coffee on Campus" is that the S.U. regulations will not allow the juke-box to be played during these hours, but light music from commercial stations is broadcast by the S.U. and the Dining Commons.

From the start of "Coffee on Campus" the WMUA staff has had to face difficulties because the S.U. and Dining Common employees do not tune in the campus unless reminded repeatedly. Preference has been given to commercial stations.

"Coffee on Campus" is being broadcast on an experimental basis for the next few months. In the future, a survey of student opinions will be taken to determine the popularity of this show. If "Coffee on Campus" has been well-received, the broadcasting hours will be lengthened.

Protestant Chaplain's Staff To Present Religion Course

Opportunities for non-credit courses in religion sponsored by the Protestant Chaplain's Staff will be offered this semester by the Reverend Jere S. Berger and the Reverend William Scar.

Rev. Berger will offer a six-week course one hour per week entitled "God Comes Alive." This course will attempt to answer the questions, "How can I find God?" "Is he in church traditions and doctrines or is he found in my own life?" Man's Need and God's Action by Ruell Howe will be read and discussed. The time of the class meeting will be arranged.

Rev. Scar, Lutheran Pastor in charge of college work for Lutherans in New England, will be on campus as a visiting lecturer and offer a five-week course entitled "Current Church Problems in the Light of Biblical Experience." It will be offered Thursdays at noon beginning October 19th.

Any interested students or staff are invited to register for these courses in the Protestant Chaplain's Office, Student Union.

'Hamp Plans Programs For Future

This is the third and final part of the serial on the Northampton State Hospital Volunteer program.

Future plans include a "ward adoption" program where ten to fifteen students select a "back" or chronic ward which becomes their own project. Through consistent weekly visits, the students help the ward personnel and work with the patients. Using initiative and ingenuity, they mobilize patients into activity geared towards general ward improvement and morale of patients.

Over the years the hospital has made the patients ready and available for further rehabilitation. The isolation of the mental patient has been greatly reduced and has created the need for more therapeutic activities. This has resulted in undue pressure on the employee who simply does not have the human energy to meet all the demands he sees before him.

Volunteers can be used to augment the already existing programs in the mental hospital. While they are helping with the very human need for personal contact with patients, they are learning from their experiences and applying it in their course work and their personal lives. They also represent the community and they become, in a sense, community spokesmen for the hospital. They can feel they are doing something important as students and as responsible citizens.

While developing student volunteer programs will repay heavily on the students' own initiative, it will be helpful, indeed necessary, for psychiatric people to participate in a consultative and supervisory function. The students will be guests in someone else's house; useful guests looking for guidance and understanding from hospital personnel so they can be of the most assistance.

J. D.'s CORNER

Out of Greenwich Village comes a weekly newspaper, The Village Voice, which can always be counted on to provide some fascinating reading, particularly in the classified ads section. One week the following ad appeared: "ADD ZEST TO YOUR TUXEDO PARK PARTY . . . RENT A BEATNIK! Completely equipped: Beard, eye shades, old Army jacket, Levis, frayed shirt, sneakers or sandals (optional). Deductions allowed for no beard, baths, shoes or haircuts. Lady Beatniks also available, usual garb: all black (Chaperone required). Special rates for two or more. Send requirements to Village VOICE Box 490."

Elsewhere in the paper appeared a regular box ad with a cartoon of a bearded, book-laden individual, "RENT GENUINE BEATNIKS," proclaimed the ad, "Badly groomed, but brilliant (Male and Female). To lecture at your club/ model for photographs/ entertain or read poetry/ for fund raising or private parties/ Reasonable rates/ . . ."

Well, as though that wasn't bad enough, a counter-ad was run in the classified section the following week:

"BEATNIKS . . . Add zest to your village party; rent a Tuxedo Park matron, fully equipped: rhinestone studded dress, size 44, muscrat coat, wedgies, firmly corseted, (pincenez optional) Special group rates . . ."

I happen to know that some Westchester and Long Island society gals actually did rent beatniks for their parties; . . . I wonder if the second ad found any takers . . .

The Village VOICE also has the stupefyingly asocial habit of running startling birth announcements such as these:

"DAUGHTER TO KRIM AND SHEILA BRYANT

An 8-pound daughter was born to Sheila Bryant and to Seymour Krim . . . on Wednesday, August 18, at New York Infirmary. Both Mr. Krim and Miss Bryant are long-term residents of the Village. Their daughter will be named Elizabeth Julia Krim."

"SON TO VILLAGE POET

Cade Hugh Merritt was born on April 20 to Brigid Murnaghan and James Merritt at the Infirmary for Women and Children. Miss Murnaghan is a poet, writer, and well-known Villager."

Something like this could only be seen in a Greenwich Village newspaper; here's hoping it's not a sign of our times . . .

'Eeyore' To Make Debut In Amherst November 3

When the curtain goes up November 3rd on the first of four Amherst Community Opera performances, a Mexican burro named Eeyore will be about to make his first stage appearance. In "Sister Angelica", opera in one act by Puccini, Eeyore will appear in the second to last scene.

Eeyore is owned by Camp Windigo in West Cummington, but has spent the cooler months in North Amherst since 1955. That year Pat Briggs attended Windigo and offered to bring Eeyore back to Amherst until the following summer. Sixteen year old Pat is the daughter of Professor and Mrs. Lawrence Briggs of North Amherst and a junior at Amherst Regional High. She stables Eeyore in a neighboring barn and has taken care of him almost five years now.

Eeyore and Pat have appeared together in two Community Fair parades and our Amherst bicentennial parade. For the past four years Eeyore has provided rides for children at the Amherst Community Fair.

Eeyore loves children, buttons and almost anything edible except banana peels according to Pat. When asked, Pat did admit that Eeyore is somewhat self-centered and thrives on attention, but that his gentle disposition compensates.

Pat, too, will be in "Sister Angelica"—in costume—to handle Eeyore onstage. She is not too concerned because she feels Eeyore will be noticed more than she will!

PACK OR BOX

Grand Prix CONTEST

FOR NEW ENGLAND COLLEGE STUDENTS

REGULAR OR KING

Here's the story, man. Eight, count 'em, eight of these swinging Sprites will go to eight guys or gals in New England colleges. The other 44 states strictly don't count. Get the picture, get the odds? This is one deal you've got to get in on.

First thing to do, get your hand on a Registration Envelope, which gives you the easy Contest Rules. You'll find Registration Envelopes everywhere—all around campus and in your local smoke shops. Our Liggett & Myers Campus Rep has stacks of them, too—so track him down.

Next, you take a little quiz. It's printed right on the envelope, see, it's about sports cars and you can do it in like 47 seconds. Then smoke 5 wonderful packs of Chesterfields or L&M's (or, if you're a menthol man, Oasis), tear the bottom panels off all 5 packs, tuck them in the envelope, sign your name and mail it.

8 PRIZES
8 NEW ENGLAND WINNERS
'62 SPRITES

Now comes the brain work. If you pass the quiz you'll receive a limerick in the mail with the last line missing. So finish it! Send in the best rhyme you can think of. If the judges (an independent, impartial lot) think your line is the cleverest, you're like behind the wheel of your Sprite already.

Enter incessantly! Because there are 8 Sprites up for grabs, dad! The 4 winners of the Fall Contest will be announced at the end of the Fall Semester. Then the whole jazz goes into high gear again—and toward the end of the Spring Semester the other 4 Sprites go on the block. So stay with it all year – keep smoking those wonderful Chesterfield, L&M or Oasis cigarettes—keep trying! Win, man!

Buy 5 packs and get started. There will be 8 new '62 Sprites on the campuses of little old New England by next May, and you might as well jingle the keys to one of them in your jeans... right?

SAE Edges Out Kappa Sig 14-6 To Gain Lead In IFC League "B"

by JAY BAKER '63

In Monday night's big contest SAE proved its league leading superiority by downing a rough Kappa Sig squad 14-6.

Kappa Sig took the lead in the first half on a tremendous catch by Rod Corey forty yards away from quarterback Doug Hedlund. The point after was unsuccessful.

In the remainder of the first half Kappa Sig controlled the ball almost continuously. However when SAE started to get rolling late in the half they were stopped on an interception by Corey. The score midway in the game, KS 6, SAE 0.

Connelly Stars

However, the second half was the exact opposite of the first and then some. Ed Connelly played magnificiently as he hit Bobby Paretti on a fifty yard screen pass play. On a mixed up point after, the quarterback sneaked up the middle for the tally.

SAE's second touchdown was set up by a twenty yard run by Connelly with the help of some good blocking by Ken Fallon. On the next play Connelly scooted six yards around end for the final touchdown. The point after was a pass play from Connelly to end Kevin Judge. The final score was SAE 14 KS 6.

Sig Ep Shuts Out PSD

In another important game of the night Sig Ep walloped Phi Sigma Delta by a score of 21-0.

Early in the first half Billy McLeod of Sig Ep took a kick on his own fifteen and went all the way into the endzone. The point after was good on a pass from Max Savage to center Pete Hodges.

Later Pete Hodges intercepted a pass and ran up the sidelines all the way only to be called back because of a penalty. On the following play however quarterback Max Savage hit Hodges for the score. There was no point after made.

With seconds remaining in the first half Woody Tarbuck of Sig Ep caught the PSD quarterback in the endzone for a touchback. At half time it was SPE 15, PSD 0.

The second half was similar to the first except that Sig Ep scored only once. This was done when safety man Bill McLeod intercepted a pass and ran up the sidelines for the score. Ziggy Halizac of PSD played exceptionally well for the losers. Final score, SPE 21 PSD 0.

QTV Tops ATG

QTV shut out ATG 13-0 in an exciting game midway in the evening. QTV's star quarterback Fran Pisiewski ran both times for the tallies.

Other Games

In the other Monday night games Phi Mu Delta managed to edge out a victory from Phi Sigma Kappa 12-7. Also league leading TKE managed to solidify its first place hold by bombing AGR 28-6.

Wednesday night's feature game at 7:30 will pit league leading SAE against a determined TEP crew.

Freshman fullback RAY VITALE crushes through the center of the line in what was to be an upset victory. The Little Redmen went on to win 13-12.

Freshman Eleven Edge Favored B. U.

by AL COHEN '63

Coach Don Johnson's frosh gridders, sparked by Cochituate's Jerry Whelchel, produced a big second half rally in downing Boston University's terrier pups 13-12 last Friday here in Amherst. This was a reversal of last year's contest which B.U. won in the final seconds by an identical score.

Two touchodwn spurts by terrier quarterback John Mulvaney resulted in a 12-0 B.U. lead at the half. However, the host Braves, behind quarterback Whelchel, climaxed a 50 yard drive in the fourth period with Whelchel sprinting six yards to paydirt on a roll-out. The kick for the extra point was off and B.U. still lead 12-6.

Later, an electrifying 60 yard punt return by Norwood's Phil DeRose brought the ball to the 6 yard line of the Pups. It was a key block by Whelchel that freed DeRose. UMass tied the score three plays later when fullback Ray Vitale of Waltham snagged a Whelchel aeriel in the endzone.

Belmont's Terry Swanson gave the Braves the win, calmy splitting the uprights with the con version point.

Coach Johnson's charges are now 1-0 on the season. They next meet Springfield College in an away game on the 27. The Maroons will have to cope with the Braves' defensive unit which was very impressive in last Friday's game.

Women's Field Hockey Team Defeats UConn

by MARILYN GATES '65

The UMass Women's Field Hockey Team added to the humiliation of UConn by defeating their team 7-0 in a one-sided contest, on Sat. October 14. The entire UMass team played a fast and aggressive game resulting in the solid victory. Five of the seven goals were scored by Left Inner Jean Condon, while Jess Piecewicz and Martha Graves each scored one.

Other members of the hard-working, hustling team were: Barb Viera, Judy Martino, Marilyn Wood, Marilyn Carins, Judy Duggan, Ellie Harrington, Diane Fuller, Karen Jokisaari, Andrea Carr, Jane Morgan, Nancy MacDuffee, and Peg Bagdon.

The Team also played a scrimmage game on Thurs. Oct. 12, against MacDuffy School winning on goals by Jean Condon and Barb Viera, score 2-1.

The gymnastics club will hold its first meeting on Tues., Oct. 17. A brief demonstration will be given on the various pieces of equipment to acquaint students with what is offered in the club. Meetings will be held regularly on Tues. and Thurs. from that time on. All classes welcome.

During the fall the WAA offers a great variety in sports. Archery, field hockey, modern dance, and tennis, have been active for a month; gymnastics is beginning now.

Archery, directed by Dr. Hubbard, meets Tuesdays and Wednesdays 4:45-5:45 p.m. They are now holding a Jr. Columbia Round, that is, interdorm and intersorority competition. Later this year when it will be impossible to work outside there will be indoor shooting. Archery also has instructions for beginners. The meetings will continue throughout the year.

Field hockey is directed by Misses Pratt and Wooliams, they meet Monday through Thursday 5-6 p.m. These meetings consist of instruction, practice and games, and will continue until about Thanksgiving. Occasionally teams are chosen to compete with other schools.

Modern dance is directed by Misses Reed and Roby. There are two groups, the freshmen and beginners meet Tuesdays at 7 p.m., the advanced group meets Wednesdays at 7 p.m. Work is now being started for a show to be put on later in the year.

Tennis, directed by Miss Rupp, meets Tuesdays and Thursdays 4-5:45 p.m. Practice and instruction is offered to all. Teams are chosen to compete with other schools, a team is to meet Mt. Holyoke Thursday. The meetings will continue through October.

Prof. Alviani Creator Of Operetta Guild And Several Other Student Organizations

Tonight the Operetta Guild will present Rodgers and Hammerstein's Oklahoma!. The musical will be presented each night through Saturday evening, October 21, at 8:15 in Bowker Auditorium.

The musical is under the direction of Professor Doric Alviani, Head of the Music Department, who joined the University staff in 1938 after graduating from Boston University and teaching for a year in the Amherst public schools. There was no department of music at UMass, but in 1938 in his very first year at the University Alviani encouraged a gorup of interested students formed around the nucleus of an existing men's glee club to perform in Gilbert and Sullivan's The Mikado. This was the beginning of the Operetta Guild which has since annually produced one or more operettas, musical comedies, or musical plays.

Other Alvinani creations include: the Precisionettes; the University Chorale; the University Dance Band; the Statesmen; their new female counterpart, the Musigals; the Opera Workshop; the Concert Association, bringing distinguished musical attractions to the campus and the community; and most recently, the Panhellenic Chorus, a 100-voice girls chorus composed of sorority members.

Lederle Speech . . .

Pointing out that UMass presently shares "the decision-making process with a number of agencies external to the academic community," he said that the University is limited in its ability to hire high quality teachers because of "state-prescribed salary scales which are quite unrealistic, which make no distinction between subject-matter fields, even though the economic market for talent ruthlessly so distinguishes."

Lederle continued: "The splintering of authority over our affairs inevitably leads to mediocrity, to delay at a time when speed is called for, and chills the effort of the dedicated staff seeking to achieve excellence for the University of Massachusetts and hence for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

Educational Re-evaluation Needed

Lederle said that in Massachusetts "a major survey and re-evaluation of all our educational resources is vitally needed. And beyond that we must have, as a feature built into our educational system, a means for continuing such studies on a regular basis by the most high-minded and most competent educators and lay leaders. If change is indeed the order of the day, then now is the time to expect constructive results."

Other points made by President Lederle:

Close liaison and "interplay" must be maintained between the public schools and state universities and colleges in the development of academic programs.

Better admissions procedures must be developed to lower the percentage of "poorly motivated, immature students" entering college.

Emphasis should be placed on good teaching at all levels.

Too much educational effort is directed toward the average student. "If we aim at the average, we do not sufficiently stimulate and challenge those with superior gifts."

Teaching of social science in pre-college classes should strengthened and made more realistic.

Homecoming Parade . . .

The events Friday night are sponsored by Adelphia, Mortar Board, Scrolls, Maroon Keys, and Alpha Phi Omega.

Redmen-Ram Game On Saturday

Saturday afternoon will feature the Redmen-Ram game at Alumni Field. That evening, fraternity parties and the annual Homecoming dance will take place.

The dance will take place in the S.U. Ballroom from 8 to 12.

Returning as guest vocalist with Paul Waldron's Band will be a campus favorite, Miss Ann Shutty, '61, who formerly sang with the University Dance Band and appeared in numerous Operetta Guild productions.

Art Exhibition Traces Karl Zerbe's Career

A retrospective exhibition tracing the artistic career of the noted American painter, Karl Zerbe, opened to the public yesterday in the Commonwealth Room of the S.U., and will continue through Oct. 31. The 44 pieces on view have been selected from works created by Zerbe over a period of 32 years. They have been borrowed from numerous public and private collections.

Organized by The American Federation of Arts under a grant from the Ford Foundation, this retrospective exhibition represents a part of the Foundation's Program in the Humanities and the Arts devoted to increasing opportunities for the public throughout the United States to view the work of established artists. Cooperating in presenting the Zerbe exhibit is the University's Department of Art.

The subject matter of Karl Zerbe's work includes landscapes, cityscapes, figure paintings, and portraits.

Born in Germany, Zerbe was a victim of Nazi oppression. He became an American citizen in 1939. For a brief period he participated in the W.P.A. In 1937 he was appointed Head of the Department of Paintings in the School of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, a post he held until 1954. During 1954 he visited Florida State University where he was offered a position as Professor of Art. He accepted the appointment and has remained there, teaching and painting, to the present time.

EVERY COLLEGE STUDENT needs this book

to increase his ability to learn

An understanding of the truth contained in Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy can remove the pressure which concerns today's college student upon whom increasing demands are being made for academic excellence.

Christian Science calms fear and gives to the student the full assurance he needs in order to learn easily and to evaluate what he has learned. It teaches that God is man's Mind—his only Mind—from which emanates all the intelligence he needs, when and as he needs it.

Science and Health, the textbook of Christian Science, may be read or examined, together with the Bible, in an atmosphere of quiet and peace, at any Christian Science Reading Room. Information about Science and Health may also be obtained on campus through the

Plans For Expansion Viewed by Graduate

by DAVID E. SEYMOUR '55

After graduation from UMass, David Seymour attended the University of Pennsylvania Law School. Since 1960 he has been law clerk to Chief Justice Bell of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. An experienced lawyer, he states here his views on whether UMass needs medical, dental and law schools.

The University of Massachusetts is at the crossroads in its deevlopment as an institution of higher education. Great strides have been taken since its formation nearly 100 years ago as a school dedicated primarily to instruction in the agricultural and mechanical arts. Particularly great have been its achievements since 1947 when it officially became a "University". In many respects the University has yet to reach its zenith in providing higher education to the Commonwealth, New England and the nation.

The concept of a University envisions providing educational opportunities in all field of intellectual endeavor at not only the undergraduate level and post graduate level but also in providing a stimulating atmosphere throughout the community for study and thought for those not directly associated with the University.

In this connection the University must think not only in terms of the tradtional studies in the arts and sciences but also in terms of providing research opportunities and facilities for those actively engaged in the workaday world of government, industry, commerce and the professions.

How To Reach Goals

These are the goals but they cannot be achieved overnight or without thorough planning. At present the University is—as it was during my undergraduate days — primarily an undergraduate institution devoted to courses of study preparatory to careers in business, engineering, science, teaching or graduate study in one of the professons at some other institution. There was and is lit-the opportunites for advanced study at the University.

Let us analyze the problem. There is no question but that there is a need today for all types of specialists and professional people. This need is not restricted as the press would have us believe to scientists, engineers and teachers. There is a need for administrators, lawyers, doctors, writers, artists, musicians, political scientists and the like. Today's rocket and missile age society is complex with everyone engaged in some kind of specialty. The scientist or the engineer cannot exist independently of the doctor, lawyer, grocer, baker or

Winner of Frosh Show To Get $200 Scholarship

A $200 scholarship will be given to the winner of the Freshmen Scholarship Show, which is being presented in Bowker Auditorium Sunday evening, Oct. 22. The scholarship will come out of money collected by the "Oklahoma Statesmen", sponsors of the Operetta Guild's "Oklahoma!"

Judges for the show are Professor Schwartz of the music department, Doris E. Abramson of the speech department, and William Field, Dean of Students.

Participants include: Taj Mahl —singer; Harold Gushue—accordian player; Gordon Breault and Jeanne Cronje—vocal duet; Marilyn Jones—accordian player; William Wilkinson — singer; Francia Seifel and John Francisco—Charleston act; Carol Viem—pantominist; and Linda Willis—singer. Also appearing in the show will be the University Dance Band and the girls from Lewis House, who recently won the interdorm sing.

Tickets for the Freshmen Scholarship Show may be obtained at the door.

Senate Elects 'Tex' Tacelli; D'Avanzo Pledges Cooperation

Arthur "Tex" Tacelli swept into the Student Senate presidency Wednesday night by a count of 23 to 14. Two Senators abstained; one write-in was recorded.

Andy D'Avanzo, smiling after his hard fought battle with Tacelli, was the first to congratulate the new president. D'Avanzo stated "I will do all in my power to help him (Tacelli) get started."

"Like UMass After Villanova"

D'Avanzo wryly stated later, "Somehow I think I have a very good idea how the UMass football team felt after the Villanova game."

Tacelli was nominated by Senator Steve Grey and D'Avanzo by Senator Peter Haebler.

President "TEX" TACELLI

In his nomination speech, Tacelli stated that he thought D'Avanzo was trying to revive old issues, this in reference to a letter which D'Avanzo charged had not been sent on time.

Tacelli went on to outline his platform as he stated there would be more communication between the Senate and the student body. He also said he thought that Senate committee reports should be typed and distributed to the Senators to reduce time now consumed in reading and discussion.

D'Avanzo then delivered his speech, accusing Tacelli of allowing unconstitutional Senate elections later than the time designated by the constitution. He also attacked Tacelli for stepping down to the floor and interjecting his ideas on certain topics.

D'Avanzo then stated that he would not hold any other office or continue on the Budgets Committee. He later clarified his position: "I congratulate Senator Tacelli on his victory. As for myself, I plan to undertake a new area of Senate activity; that is, something other than financial. I intend to co-operate with him and help him as much as I can to break in the new chairman of the Budgets Committee."

Haebler Attacks Collegian

Pete Haebler spoke for D'Avanzo attacking the Collegian for its publication of views of student leaders. He stated that he had interviewed some of the leaders and pointed out that three were of the same fraternity as Tacelli, one was a high school "buddy", and only two had more than a year's experience in the Senate.

Haebler continued saying that he felt the Collegian was trying to be dictatorial and that the choice of Senate President was up to the Senators.

Finally becoming positive in his speech, he noted that D'Avanzo was a "worker", pointing out the work done on the revised budget.

Senator Abdul Samma then stood up to speak for Tacelli. In the most forceful argument of the night, Samma stated he favored Tacelli because of the way in which he presented himself; a manner which he felt was worthy representation for the Senate.

Election or Censorship Asked

Senator Betsy Robicheau asked the question, "Is this an election for president of the Senate or censorship of the Collegian?" Linda Achenbach stated that Tacelli was a leader and D'Avanzo a worker, explaining that D'Avanzo had shown more capability to hold this office than Tacelli. She urged the senators to stop and think before casting their votes to be sure that they were making the right choice.

The Senate then voted, sweeping Tacelli in by a considerable margin.

Other Senate elections followed. In the Senate Treasurer fight Betsy Robicheau won out over Bob Brauer, 20-15. For the office of Senate Secretary, Marilyn LeGoff ran unopposed. Thus Senate President Tacelli in his first official act in that office, cast the lone vote required to elect Miss LeGoff.

Coffee Hour Is Held For Clements

Tuesday, October 17, from 4:00 to 6:00, the UMass government department held a coffee hour for Senator Earle C. Clements in the Colonial Lounge. Faculty and students had an opportunity to meet with and talk informally to the former U.S. Senator from Kentucky.

Clements is Distinguished Professor of Public Affairs at the University, and teaches a seminar in practical politics.

Established under a Ford Foundation grant, the public affairs professorship is designed to bring to the campus persons who have held top-level positions in federal, state, or local governments.

In his new appointment, the Kentucky legislator succeeds former Senator Ralph Flanders of Vermont, who was the first to serve under the Ford Foundation program. Appointees serve on a one-semester basis, teaching in the department of Government.

Senator Clements will present a series of four public lectures on certain aspects of American politics. The dates set for these lectures are November 15, November 29, December 6, and December 13.

FLOAT INSPECTION

The UMass Auxiliary to the Amherst Fire Department will inspect the floats entered in the Homecoming parade.

Three teams of three men each will inspect all floats from 4 to 6 Friday afternoon, with detailed instructions from Ed Goetzl, UMass fire marshall. Each team will be equipped with materials to repair any fire hazards which they find.

Each float will be required to carry a fire extinquisher.

Floats not conforming to fire prevention ruling will not be allowed to participate in the parade.

Agriculture Staff Receives Four New Appointments

Pres. Lederle recently made four new appointments to the staff of the College of Agriculture.

They include: Richard A. Damon, Jr., professor of biostatistics, who received his B.S. degree from UMass in 1947 and his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Minnesota in 1949 and 1951. He was associate professor of animal industry at Louisiana State University from 1951 to 1958, and since 1958 has been a biometrician with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Deane M. Chamberlain, associate professor of veterinary science, who received his B.S. degree from U.N.H. in 1943. In 1949, he was awarded his D.V.M. from Ohio State University and he received his M.S. from the same institution in 1951. He taught at Ohio State University from 1950 to 1953 and was research associate for the R. B. Jackson Laboratory from 1953 to 1957. Since then he has been engaged in private veterinary practice.

Donald R. Marion, assistant professor of agricultural and food economics, who received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from Cornell University in 1954 and 1955. He was associated with the member-training program of the Southern States Cooperative in Kennedyville, M.; then manager of a retail store for the same organization from April 1958 to March 1959. He has been a regional marketing agent with the New York Agricultural Extension Service since March, 1959.

Sebastian Cavallaro, instructor in agricultural and food economics, who received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from UMass in 1959 and 1961. He was a half-time instructor in agricultural and food economics at UMass from 1959 to 1961.

Your Responsibility

After a long and heated debate in a humid Senate chambers last night, the forty-two student Senators elected Arthur "Tex" Tacelli to the Senate Presidency spot.

It is now imperative that we withdraw our undaunted support of President Tacelli and promise, instead of endorsement, a policy of constructive criticism and co-operation throughout the coming session. We hope the issues appearing in the chambers this year possess all the color and controversy as did last year's. And we hope this year's forty-two Senators do as fine and thorough a job as did their predecessors.

This week's controversy has heightened the interest rate in student government and we hope such a level of enthusiasm will not taper off to apathy. We urge all students to seek out their Senators and make their ideas and preferences felt . . . just as the Collegian has done. This is YOUR university and YOUR student government and the degree to which it flourishes or dies is left upon YOUR shoulders. President Tacelli and his forum will have to make decisions as well as mistakes in the coming months. The mistakes will arrive less frequently if the Student Body offers constructive opinion and support to the legislative branch here at the University of Massachusetts.

WMUA Spotlight

WMUA, the student radio voice of the University of Massachusetts, was organized on campus in 1948 after a merger with the WFDM facilities at Fort Devens and the WMSC facilities of Massachusetts State College. The first location of the studios was on the fifth floor of South College. Because of crowded conditions on the AM band, in the fall of 1951, WMUA was licensed to operate on the FM educational band by the Federal Communications Commission. With the change to FM, WMUA has a broadcasting range of approximately 25 miles or 1000 watts AM current carrier. The total station moved to the Engineering Building in 1952.

The present physical setup of the station includes two broadcasting studios, observation room, record library, technical repair shop, UPI teletype machine, and a piano and Hammond organ for live musical broadcasts. The station is considered to be very well equipped for its size.

The University and students have combined ownership of the older facilities of the station while the newer equipment is purchased out of student funds. Approximately $6000 from the student tax fund is used for the oeration of the station each year.

A unique aspect of WMUA is that its educational goals are achieved in a manner different from the other educational stations. The aim of education is towards the student who participates in the operation of the station rather than towards the audience. Membership is voluntary and the students gain valuable practical experience in radio production. As evidence to this, one can find alumni and present student officers active, full or part time, in radio and fields related to communications.

Some of the future plans of WMUA include the broadening of the broadcasting program by featuring more campus news and activities, presenting speeches of visiting lecturers, and presenting live student musical shows.

Membership is open to all students and at present there are many openings as announcers, audio-engineers, technical crew workers, and record librarians. If anyone is interested in working with WMUA, he is asked to contact Llyod Teran, Station Manager, or to drop over to the station in the Engineering Building.

LETTERS

Misguided

To the Editor:

The new policy of the Collegian in regard to supporting a candidate for President of the Student Senate would indeed be funny if it were not for the serious implications of this decision. Not only is ths decision theoretically unsound; it is also practically absurd.

Firstly, the Executive Board of the Collegian is to have us believe that they are qualified to make intelligent decisions upon the relative capacities of the candidates.

Secondly, the Board would have us believe that they have the right, the "obligation" to make this decision.

But let us examine the facts—

1. The Executive Board is composed of the Editor-in-Chief, the Editorial Editor, the News Editor (Assignments), the News Editor (Make-Up), the Sports Editor, the Business Manager, and the Photography Editor. With the exception of the first three, the board, by the very nature of their positions, can not be said to be qualified. And bear in mind that we have generously conceded the qualifications of the first three.

2. The Collegian exercises a monopoly over our campus. We recognize and accept this. There is, in fact, no need of an opposition press. This is because the Collegian, instead of expressing political preferences, is obligated to report the news, objectively, concisely, and accurately. Under this system, the reader is expected to have the capacity to make his or her own decisions in regard to the internal politics of the Student Body. As uninformed as the average student may be, there can be no reason to believe that when presented with the facts he or she will not act with a reasonable degree of intelligence.

3. Although the task of a student newspaper is to lead, it is not to propagandize, no matter how well meaning its propagandization may be.

4. This policy will encourage the courtship of those on the Executive Board of office seekers as well as office holders. This will develop into a dangerous situation. Confronted with the general apathy of the Student Body, the Collegian has taken a sincere, though terribly misguided step towards the mass propagandization of the campus. In the long run, this will hurt infinitely more than it will help!

M. Palter '63

Impossible

To the Editor:

The Monday, October 16th issue of the Collegian was an outrage. The issue showed a gross misuse of student funds in that a political advertisement, disguised as an article and an editorial, covered nearly one whole page of a student financal newspaper.

How can a student newspaper which is a monopoly on campus represent the student body if it decides to dabble in one-sided politics? It is unfair to back one candidate because an opposite viewpoint or support by another newspaper on this campus IS IMPOSSIBLE.

The new editorial policy of the Collegian clearly shows how a monopoly may be misused.

Lab Fee Refund

To the Edtor:

When you, fellow students, signed up for those lab courses you undoubtedly found that a lab fee was demanded from you and that this was payable at the University bookstore.

Perhaps you have wondered how they figure how much to refund if you should drop out of the course during the semester. Perhaps you think that the supply room for the lab of your course ends its slips listing equipment ordered to the bookstore and that the cost of this equipment is subtracted from your lab fee; the remainder being given to the student.

No fellow students, don't be so naive. Your refund is based not on how much equipment you have used, stolen or broken, unless of course this amount has become excessive in which case you are billed extra. Your refund is based instead on the percentage of your semester bill that would have been refunded to you had you dropped out of school which at this point in the semester is 20%.

Review: Oklahoma!

by ALLAN BERMAN '62

Anyone who is going to be in the packed house tonight or tomorrow night to view OKLAHOMA! is in for a treat. The Operetta Guild has once again come through with a polished performance of a Broadway hit. Despite opening night jitters the show went off virtually without a hitch as all members of the company performed their functions smoothly and effectively.

Even though Michael Hench (Curly) and Sue Spearen (Laurie) were warm and convincing in their lead roles as the two young lovers, the actual life of the production was injected by several of the minor comic characters. Foremost was irrepressible Jean Alden as Ado Annie. From the moment Miss Alden stepped onto the stage and sang the hilarious "I Cain't Say No," she stole the show and kept it for the remainder of the night. Her bouncing vitality and fine singing voice made her the center of attention whenever she was onstage.

She was played off to perfection by her two comic opposites, Frank Mancuso (Ali Hakim) and Paul Cwiklik (Will). Mancuso turned in a articularly fine performance as the Persian peddler who tries vainly to avoid marriage. Jane Abbiatti was perfcet as laughable, understanding Aunt Eller.

Another good acting job was turned in by Ken Goodman as the mentally unbalanced villain, Pore Jud. Ken, no stranger to UMass music fans, also is outstanding in his dramatic solo, "Lonely Room."

As OKLAHOMA! was sung and acted upon the stage, many people were prompted to think back to the Guild production of two years ago, BELLS ARE RINGING. It was the consensus of opinion at that time that BELLS was one of the finest of Guild productions, and the natural impulse was to compare it with OKLAHOMA! One of the areas in which the present production did not measure up to BELLS was in chorus work. That, however, is explained by the fact that there are very few opportunities in OKLAHOMA! for intricate choral harmony. Two such opportunities were exploited very well by the Guild in its fine renditions of "Out Of My Dreams" and the title song.

But there was one phase of OKLAHOMA! that far superceded any previous attempt, and that was the choreography. A round of applause is deserving for Georgia Reid, who engineered the dance routines that ranged all the way from dainty minuets, to square dancing, to a long, beautifully executed modern ballet routine. Norma Fairbanks starred in the latter dance.

The orchestra, which gets better every year, provided a surprisingly rich background, considering that there were only twelve pieces playing a score designed for experienced professionals. Especially fine was the work of the reed section.

And a special hats off to the stage and technical crews who provided the fine scenery and effective lighting for the show.

In summarizing our impression of the show, we might simply echo the final words of the title song in saying "OKLAHOMA! . . . O.K."

At first glance . . .

In our editorial, Your Responsibility, we withdraw our endorsement of President Tacelli and promise instead constructive criticism for the coming months . . . WMUA spotlights its history on campus . . . Our Editor-in-chief, Al Berman, reviews Oklahoma with four stars . . . And the Letters to the Editor invoke the wrath of the Gods upon our endorsement policy along with a criticism of the lab refunds.

Kappa Alpha Thetas Auction Off Pledges

Kappa Alpha Theta held its annual slave auction last Friday. Due to the large attendance the event was quite a success. To initiate enthusiasm among the student body, the KAT pledges were led through the Hatch wearing their togas and laurels.

Later that evening, everyone gathered on the lawn at 778 No. Pleasant Street waiting for the auction. Auctioneers Nancy King and Julie Atwood started the bidding.

The participation indicated that Theta's philanthropy, the Navaho Indians, will be assured of financial aid this coming year.

Teas, Coffee Hours Are Dorm Events

KNOWLTON NEWS

On Wednesday evening, October 11, Knowlton House held their annual tea. Guests included Miss Helen Curtis, Dean of Women; Mrs. Isabelle Gonon, Assistant Dean of Women; Miss Mary Mahar, Dean of Nursing; Miss Carole Leland, Women's Placement Officer, and Miss Ruth Totman, Head of the Women's Physical Education Department.

The guest speaker was Dr. Marion Niederpruem, Dean of the UMass. School of Economics. Miss Niederpruem previously taught at Michigan State University, where she directed the retailing program at the School of Home Economics. She has also worked in connection with many midwestern and eastern stores. She was introduced by Miss Hawes, Assistant Professor at the UMass. School of Home Economics.

The topic of Dr. Niederpruem's talk was The Time, The Place, and The Dress. She discussed hints for being becomingly and appropriately dressed, and stressed the importance of using individuality in selecting clothes. An interesting demonstration was also given on selecting and wearing a basic dress. Miss Pat Conway, a design-retailing major in the School of Home Economics, modeled the basic dress with various accessories.

The Knowlton lounge was decorated in fall colors and refreshments of cider and donuts were served by the fourth floor freshmen.

The tea was planned by the Knowlton Social Committee.

Knowlton has two representatives to the Sophomore Executive Council, Sandy Edmands '64 and Merry Arnold '64.

Knowltonites are busy preparing for their Homecoming float, under the direction of Social Chairman, Connie Gardini '63.

'Duke' Politella Recalls 1947: S-533, M.S.C. Becomes U.M.

by DARIO POLITELLA '47

Dario Politella is currently Senior Public Relations Coordinator, Lockheed Aircraft Service, Inc.

You're asking quite a bit when you prod the memories of 15 years ago. For 15 years is a long time to the young. And I've just celebrated by first birthday with no-cal cake, five short years after making the Serutan Set.

In 1947 we produced a lively newspaper that reflected the campus times. We did a lot with "Maternity Row"—you all have never heard the term, probably. The Row was an area on the site of the old Cavalry ROTC corral, which housed 90 married vet families who studied for the present and produced for the future. The extra-curricular activities of this group reached such proportions that the creation of a "Stork Club" column was demanded. Other domestic coverage included stories on "Co-operative Campus Market. to Ease Food Problems for Vets and Wives"; "Veterans' Wives Club Starts Interest Groups"; "Married, Single? Damsel's Dilemma"; and "Sound Springtime Strike of Storkers"—a whimsical item inspired by the dearth of listings for the births column. The story began, "The Collegian regrets that a breakdown in production in Maternity Row . . . has resulted in no birth announcements for this column, which was just beginning to arouse reader interest." And the story went on to guesstimate the situation as being a work stoppage for a closed shop and more dresses. That was the year of the Taft-Hartley labor law, you remember.

But the Big Story of 1947 was the name change from Massachusetts State College to the University of Massachusetts. The Collegian was among those sounding the clarion call for the new home in the years immediately preceding WW II. We took up the fight again with the Peace. We showered the State House with mailings of the newspaper and its descriptions of our facilites and statements from prominent individuals in support of the name change. We stressed repeatedly that no additional monies were involved.

When the Bill, S-533, passed the Senate on April 10, 1947, we set banner headlines for the following edition, ran off 2,000 copies and waited for the confirming phone call that would permit us to announce to the waiting campus that the House had confirmed we were, in fact, the University of Massachusetts. They didn't act as quickly as did the upper House. And we were stuck with a couple of thousand sheets of inky paper we couldn't eat. Av Romm and Ed Cynarski, who had hitch-hiked to Boston to flash the news, haunted the House chambers for three days. When they messaged the OK to run, we made over the paper and got out two days late. But it was a Collegian reporter who tolled the news throughout the Valley by sounding the chimes in the Old Chapel, and the Collegian Editor who took to radio journalism over the lines of Station WMSC in the old South College tower to tell the campus about it.

There's just one thing all of us can be sure will never change. And that is the memories that each of us builds in spite of himself.

The trick is to remember.

UMass Graduates Should Stand Up And Be Counted

by ROSEMARY SPEER ARCTANDER '47

I have not been in Amherst for seven years. I know that when I do return I shall be thoroughly astonished at the changes in my Alma Mater. This is as it should be. I, thank heaven, have changed too! My one hope is that the University is turning out graduates, whatever their specialization, who are willing to stand up and be counted. There are so many "blobs" in the world—people who never have any opinions or are unwilling to work to support any beliefs they may have. Let us stand for something even if it's only peanut butter and jelly!

Graduate Expansion . . .

the myriad of managers and administrators needed to insure the orderly progress of the projects upon which the scientists are engaged.

UM Is Rapidly Growing

As I have already noted the University is primarily an undergraduate school. It is also a rapidly growing school. Since I left the University in 1955, its enrollment has nearly doubled. In a few years the enrollment is expected to double again. As a result of this growth a threefold problem is presented: First, the faculty an dstaff must keep pace in quality and quantity with the rise in enrollment. Several years ago the administration wisely adopted a policy to keep the increase in enrollments to a level consonant with the acquisition of a faculty worthy of the school. I personally hope this wise policy is continued. Second, there must be a continued expansion of the physical plant including the library. Thrd, and most importantly, an intellectually stimulating atmosphere must be maintained. It is to this third problem that I wish to address myself next.

One method of maintaining an intellectually stimulating atmosphere is by expanding the graduate schools in each field. This has the advantage of attracting scholars from all over the state, nation and world to pursue advanced studies. It also tends to attract a better faculty because of the opportunities to pursue research into problems not possible where the teaching load must necessarily encompass only those subjects covered at the undergraduate level. Furthermore, the presence of graduate students tends to exert a more stabilizing and professional atmosphere on the campus.

For the immediate future, then, the university needs to expand its graduate programs leading to masters' and doctors' degrees in its existing colleges and schools, i.e., in the arts and sciences, engineering, agriculture and business administration. For the present the establishment of medical, dental and law schools, for example, would not be wise. In the first place these schools are highly specialized and present different disciplines than currently offered at the University. They would also require a tremendous capital expenditure and the acquisition of faculties qualified n these subjects.

They Are Necessary

But this is not to say that such schools are not necessary. While everyone knows of the need for doctors and dentists, most people think that there are too many lawyers already. As a lawyer I can state that this is not true. First of all the population is constantly growing although the number of law graduates is not. Secondly, the number and complexity of legal problems is becoming greater every day. Today, for example, lawyers are faced with problems created by the advent of the nuclear and space ages. Lastly, the courts almost everywhere are congested with backlogs of thousands of cases each year. For example, in my adopted city of Philadelphia alone there is a backlog of 21,000 civil and criminal cases awaiting trial. Some of these cases have been awaiting trial for three or more years. And, this is not true of Philadelphia only but of nearly every major city throughout the country. The causes of this backlog has been laid to (1) a lack of lawyers to try the cases, (2) a lack of judges to hear them, (3) antiquated court procedures and (4) an astronimical increase in the number of cases due to automobile accidents, labor disputes, increased commercial activity and crime. To help meet and solve these problems our colleges and universities must educate more lawyers better prepared to meet the modern problems as they arise. Towards this end I hope that one day the University administration and the General Court will see fit to establish medical, dental and law schools at the University without injuring its growth or the quality of the education it offers.

The University must continue to grow and expand its services to the people of the Commonwealth, but such growth must be carefully planned. It has been doing this, and if continued in the same manner as in the past, the services and facilities of the University will continue to make it one of the better state universities.

Past Homecomings: Rain, 'Hoaxes' and Rope Pulls

by GRACE ANN FITZPATRICK '63

As long as there have been alumni there have been homecomings. The Alumni always like to come back to see their old friends and to keep informed of the changes made since their own days in college.

Often these visits by the old grads have been on the occasion of a big rival football game. There were rallies and float parades and after the game the alumni would return to their old fraternity and sorority houses where they were entertained at teas, luncheons and open houses. There they met with and talked to the undergraduates.

First Homecoming 1953

The first formal Homecoming Weekend was held in 1953. The occasion was marked by a Homecoming Dance and the crowning of a Queen, A rope pull across the college pond, a rally and float parade and a football game with URI rounded out festivities Homecoming then began to involve more students and school spirit was put into high gear.

Each succeeding Homecoming has been marked by some event which held special significance or notoriety for the students and alumni.

The 1957 Homecoming Weekend was held despite the adverse circumstances of the Asian Flu which cancelled the dance and of the pelting rain on the evening of the float parade which drenched the participants but not the spirit.

Scandal Alleged in '58

The Homecoming of 1958 will always be remembered for the big scandal which arose out of the alleged "fixing" of the election of Homecoming Queen. There could not have been so much controversy among the students even if this had happened in the choice of Miss America.

Forgetting the many losses which the Redmen have incurred during the long history of Homecoming Games each year, there is increased enthusiasm and faith among the students that the team will not fail them and that spirit always encourages the team to play their best so as not to disappoint the old grads as well as the student body.

'Ten Thousand by 1965' — Alumni Realize More Seeking Education

by LARRY RAYNER '61

Larry Rayner is now an agent for the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company.

"Ten thousand by 1965" has virtually become the theme of the rapidly expanding University of Massachusetts.

And nearly everyone realizes that the University must and will expand to much greater enrollments, evidenced by the fact that the Student Union Expansion is based on a much higher enrollment figure.

Why the rapid expansion now? For the sake of hugeness? Is it a good idea? Is it necessary? Why?

These are some of the questions that go through the minds of returning alumni, some of whom attended the school when enrollment figures were at one or two thousand.

More People Seek Education

Most people realize that it is connected to the increasingly pronounced trend of more and more of our public school graduates to seek higher education. The 1950's and 60's are relatively similar to the period when public high schools came into being over a century ago, under the leadership of Massachusetts' first Director of Education, Horace Mann.

Just as Mann campaigned for the public high school system then as the right of every child, educational leaders of today are fighting for low-cost college education as the right of every qualified high school graduate.

N.E. Attitude Hurts

Most will agree that every qualified child should go to school. However, the basic New England attitude of favoring private over public education argues that as an education is an investment in one's future, the student or his family should pay the full cost.

While a college education is an investment in one's future, it is also an investment in the state and nation's greatest resourse—its youth. University President John W. Lederle argues that development of this resource is essential if we hope to meet the Russian threat. The question which can here be raised is, "Why not a free college education as well as a free high school education?" The former certainly is just as essential today as the latter was 125 years ago.

Pay If You Can

In this vein, Arthur Adams, former director of the American Council on Education, suggests that we should let a man pay for his education when he can best afford it (in the form of taxes) rather than when he can least afford it as a student.

Actually, private schools follow this principal to some extent, as their alumni make heavy contributions to support the school. But private colleges lack the capital necessary to expand rapidly, as they operate on a relatively fixed income from gifts and endowments. Many of these schools have been forced to raise their tuition up to 1500 or 2000 dollars, pricing themselves right out of the market.

State Schools Must Expand

It is for this reason that state schools, such as the University, must expand rapidly to meet the influx of applicants; students who should go to college can't afford private schools on the one hand, and private colleges haven't the room for them on the other.

While this rapid expansion is quite necessary, is it a good thing?

President Lederle says, "Yes!"

The president believes that given the right attitude on the part of the faculty, there can be more concern for the student as an individual than in the average small schools. He feels that the attitude of the faculty in this area is important, and those who have worked with him know that he has worked hard to increase this attitude, with a great deal of success.

Advice From An Alumnus

But no one knows better than an alumnus that undergrads must expose themselves—whether it be academic or extracurricular, in both small schools and large—to reap the full benefits of a college education.

And so fellow alumni, whether you are members of the class of 1961 or the class of 1901, the new facilities and increased number of students we see around us not only make this a better University, but it is our responsibility to see that it does keep expanding to provide the youth of today with the opportunity we had.

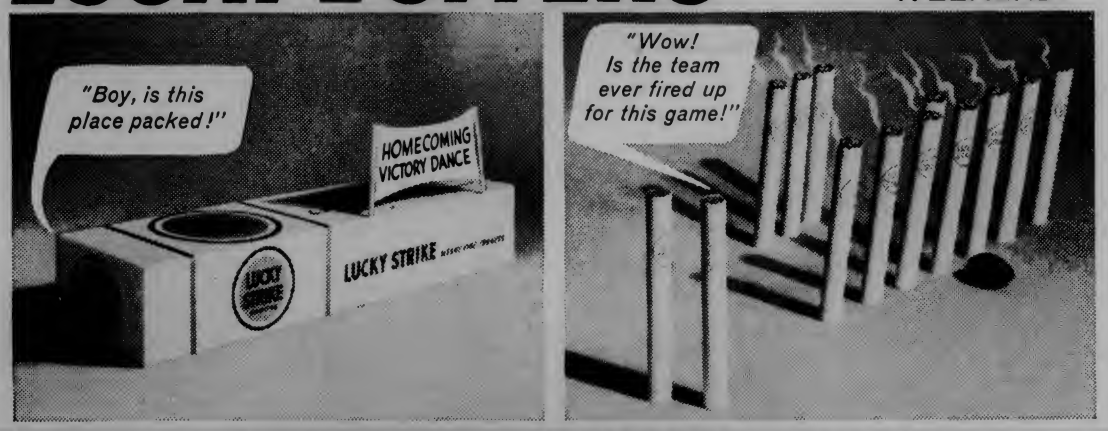
"HOMECOMING WEEKEND"



WHAT DOES AN OLD GRAD LIKE BEST ABOUT HOMECOMING? Next to shaking hands, he likes reminiscing. About fraternity parties, girls, sorority parties, girls, off-campus parties, girls—and, of course, about how great cigarettes used to taste. Fortunately for you, Luckies still do taste great. (So great that college students smoke more of them than any other regular cigarette.) Which shows that the important things in college life stay the same. Parties. Girls. Luckies.

Sam Lussier Is High Scorer On UM Squad; Majeski No. 2 Man

Sam Lussier, junior right halfback from Northbridge, Mass. dominates the University of Massachusetts football statistics with the first third of the 1961 schedule, now history.

The 186 lb. back is the squad's leading ground gainer with 268 yards net in 41 carries for an average of almost seven yards per attempt. Lussier is also the team's leading scorer with twenty-six points accumulated via four touchdowns and one two point conversion pass from John McCormick.

Sophomore halfback, Fred Lewis of East Longmeadow, is the second leading ground gainer averaging four yards a carry in 39 attempts for 161 yards net and has also scored twelve points.

End Paul Majeski, a junior from Westfield, is the squad's leading pass receiver with seven receptions good for 60 yards and three touchdowns and his eighteen points scored puts him second in the scoring department behind Lussier.

Quarterback, John McCormick, has completed fifteen of his thirty-six passes for a gain of 134 yards and three touchdowns. McCormick has also averaged 41 yards per kick for his 15 punts in three games.

SAM LUSSIER

Senior tackles, Bob Foote of Northampton and junior guard, John Kozaka of Pittsfield lead in the fumble recovery department as both linemen have been on top of three of the opposition's fumbles.

In three games, the Redmen have scored 65 points to 58 for the opponents and this Saturday, Coach Vic Fusia's squad will be looking for its second Yankee Conference win of the year when it plays Rhode Island on Alumni Field at 1:30 p.m. in the annual Fall Homecoming game.

UGH!

Expressions weren't very enthusiastic or jubilant last year during the Homecoming Game against UConn. The Huskies shut us out 31-0. The defeat came a week after the Redmen shocked the football world by crushing Harvard 27-12, in Boston. The prospects of winning tomorrow's homecoming game are good, and expressions should be somewhat happier than that on the face of our cheerleader.

Crimson Harriers Stop UM Cross Country Squad, 21-36

by ABE SHEINKER '62

The Harvard harriers came up with their best performance of the season Tuesday to defeat the UMass cross country team, 21-36. The loss ended the Redmen's winning streak at nine straight over two seasons, the last defeat coming at the hands of this very same Crimson team last year.

It was obvious that Harvard was up for this meet as their best runners put their previous records to shame. The winner, Ed Hamlin, had been the number three or four man for the Johns this year, but just missed the five mile course record by six seconds. Harvard's Mark Mullin, winner in this meet last year, beat his 1960 time by 50 seconds in taking second place, while several other Cambridge runners cut nearly a full minute off their best marks for the course.

The Redmen also put forth a superior effort but it was no match for the pace set at Franklin Park that day. Sophomore Bob Brouillet ran one of this best races of the season while finishing third. He passed the one mile mark in less than 4:40, only 8 seconds slower than his best mile race last spring, but the leading pacer at that point clocked 4:30.

Harvard must certainly be rated the top team in New England as the Johnnies have also outrun last year's champion Brown. The Redmen will fight it out with Brown for the area's second best in the New England title meet next month. Meanwhile the Brandeis coach has cancelled next Friday's meet with UMass since he feels his squad can give the Redmen little competition. Coach Bill Footrick has managed to schedule a practice meet with Army for next Wednesday at West Point.

The top ten finishers:

1.	Ed Hamlin, Harvard	25:12
2.	Mark Mullin, Harvard	25:20
3.	Bob Brouillet, UMass	25:41
4.	Ed Meehan, Harvard	25.57
5.	Bob Knapp, Harvard	26:24
6.	Dave Balch, UMass	26:42
7.	Jim Wrynn, UMass	26:50
8.	Dick Blomstrom, UMass	26:53
9.	Gregg Baldwin, Har.	27:00
10.	Don Kirkland, Harvard	27:02

Other UMass finishers:

12.	Ken O'Briend	27:09
13.	Bob Avery	27:10
14.	Gene Colburn	27:12
16.	Tom Leavitt	28:00
19.	Charlie Proctor	28:14
20.	Gene Hasbrouck	28:30
22.	Bruce Thompson	28:42
23.	Joe LaMarre	29:27

GAUNTLET

The UMass Redmen, who have played like a major team, and who have been classified as an ECAC major team, deserve the support of the fans in a big way at the Homecoming game tomorrow. Let's start a precedent and form a gauntlet through which the squad can run as they come onto the field just before the game. Just watch the Keys and cheerleaders and let's really hear it for a great UMass squad.

Rhode Island halfback John Rollins, who played for a short time with the Green Bay Packers this year, eludes would-be tackler Sam Lussier in last year's game at Rhode Island. The Redmen, trailing going into the final period, scored three touchdowns in rapid succession to defeat the Rams 34-16. The Rams will be out to spoil the UM Homecoming as they did two years ago.

Redmen Set To Break Homecoming Jinx Sat.

The University of Massachusetts Redmen will be battling two old nemeses this Saturday at 1:30 p.m. on Alumni Field: the University of Rhode Island and an old Homecoming Jinx.

Not since 1954 when the Redmen toppled Connecticut, 20-13, have the Old Grads seen a Massachusetts victory on their day; and only once in the last nine years has UMass been able to defeat the Rams. This most recent victory occurred last year when the Redmen came from behind with three touchdowns late in the final quarter to triumph, 34-16.

Coach Vic Fusia, who is not contemplating any changes in the starting lineup indicates that his charges are not taking the visitors lightly. The lone URI success in four outings was its 8-6 verdict over Vermont last weekend in Burlington. According to reports from Kingston, Coach John Chironna feels that his squad showed a great deal of improvement in this contest. The victory, however, was costly for the Rams, since their starting quarterback, Mike Pariseau, broke his collarbone and will miss the rest of the campaign.

After their season opener against Maine was postponed until Nov. 22, (Wed.) because of a virus epidemic that affected most of the squad, the Redmen have been improving considerably in their games with AIC, Villanova, and Connecticut. An effective defense and an offense that has been averaging 22 points a game have been key factors in these early season outings.

Our job is providing communications of all kinds, wherever needed—whether in the northern snows to flash word of possible enemy missile attack, or in your home or college, or in serving the nation's business.

When we can't fill a need off the shelf, then we start fresh and create the answer to the problem. We've done that hundreds of times.

We began transatlantic radiotelephone service in 1927. Then we developed the world's first undersea telephone cables to speed calls between continents.

We handled the world's first telephone conversation via satellite. And we have started development of an important world-wide communications system employing satellites.

When industry and government needed a way of gathering huge amounts of coded information from distant points, we were ready with our vast telephone network and Data-Phone, which can transmit mountains of data at extremely high speeds.

And so it goes—Long Distance service, Direct Distance Dialing, the Transistor, the Solar Battery—a succession of firsts which goes back to the invention of the telephone itself.

Universal communications—the finest, most dependable anywhere—are what we deliver. Inside: for home, office, or plant. Outside: on land, under the sea, through the air, or into space.

Concert To Be Given By Herman At UMass

by OLEH PAWLUK '65

Woody Herman, noted jazz musician and bandleader, and his band, "America's Greatest Entertaining Unit," will present a two hour jazz concert, Thursday, Nov. 2, at 7:00 p.m. in the S. U. Ballroom.

A professional clarinetist for over 30 years, Woody entered the musical business as a vaudeville trouper when he was only nine years old. By doing an act in which he sang and played the clarinet, he gained the title "The Boy Wonder of the Clarinet." After completing a year of study at the Marquette Music School in Milwaukee, he began working with local bands.

In 1929, Woody joined Tom Gerun's band, one of the leading orchestras of that time. For a number of years he worked with Gerun's band as a singer and instrumentalist. During the mid-forties he played with another outstanding music group, "The Band That Plays The Blues." This band developed a new swing style which produced such popular records as "Caledonia", "Apple Honey", and "Northwest Passage".

During the early fifties, Woody formed his newest jazz orchestra, "America's Greatest Entertaining Unit." The band made a month tour of Europe in 1954, receiving wide acclaim for its performance. "America's Greatest Entertaining Unit" has won the Metronome poll and has been praised by Time, Parade, and other publications as "the band that brought back dancing."

Herman's band features seventeen renowned instrumentalists and a girl vocalist. Woody himself is a triple treat for he sings, and plays the clarinet and alto saxophone.

Admission to the concert will cost $1.50. There will be a presale of tickets to students in the S. U. Box Office before a general ticket sale is opened to the public.

Neighbors wave good-bye to Curley and Laurie in the final scene of Oklahoma! which is being presented by the Operetta Guild Oct. 18-21 under the direction of Professor Doric Alviani.

Smorgasbord Will Be Held On Saturday

A public Smorgasbord, under the auspices of the Eastern Star, will be served on Saturday, Oct. 21 at Masonic Hall in Amherst. Service will be continuous from five to seven o'clock. Tickets for the Smorgasbord are $1.25 and will be available at the door.

Chrysanthemums, Balloons Will Be Sold This Weekend

Once again the Panhellenic Council will sell mums at the Homecoming game and dance. The corsages will be in the traditional University colors and be priced at one dollar each. Proceeds from the sale finance various Panhellenic functions throughout the year. When you come, buy a mum!

This year again also, the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils will sponsor a balloon sale along the parade route tonight and at the Rhode Island game tomorrow for the benefit of the library reserve book fund.

The I.F.C. representatives from each fraternity and the Panhel representatives from each sorority will be distributing the balloons among the student body and Homecoming public.

Traditionally, at the Homecoming football game, all balloons are released into the atmosphere immediately after the first UMass Touchdown.

Chem Engs. Hold Tours Of Labs Sat.

Alumni of the chemical engineering department at the University of Massachusetts will hold their first homecoming get-together on Saturday.

Scheduled as part of the university's Homecoming Day, when approximately 3500 graduates are expected to return to campus, the chemical engineering program will feature tours of new facilities, events for wives and children, and a luncheon before the football game between Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

First event on the agenda will be a coffee hour in the Goessmann Chemistry Laboratory at 9 a.m. At 10 the alumni will hear brief remarks from Dean George A. Marston of the School of Engineering and Dr. E. E. Lindsey, head of the chemical engineering department.

Alumni will then be conducted on a tour of new laboratories and facilities, including the Research Computing Center, the nuclear reactor and equipment, and other kinds of apparatus.

New Ed. Building Dedicated Friday

A top UNESCO official was one of some 500 educators gathered on the UMass campus Friday at 4 p.m. to dedicate a major new state facility in teacher training and research.

McCune Speaks at Dedication

Dr. Shannon McCune, director of the department of education for UNESCO and former provost of the University, called the new center a site for possible "major breakthroughs in the study of the process of learning."

Urging Americans to be concerned with education "both locally and globally" as a means of survival, the UNESCO leader said that the Massachusetts facility "should represent a gleaming symbol of the efficiencies of education" so badly needed in many underdeveloped countries of the world.

Pointing to some of the problems encountered in such countries, the former provost said that "we in more blessed lands, remembering our own history, must be alert to these great urges for improvement of the lot of mankind through education."

He said he hoped that in such centers as the University's School of Education new and effective techniques would be developed to aid in what he called the worldwide problem of education.

Lederle Welcomes Officials

Welcoming remarks at the dedication were extended by Dr. John W. Lederle, University president, and Dean Albert W. Purvis of the School of Education. Gov. John A. Volpe was represented by Major Daniel J. Manning of Northampton who extended the Governor's greetings. School administrators from all parts of the state were in attendance.

Tours Given Before Dedication

Prior to the formal dedication, invited guests were taken on a tour of the building, inspecting the modern classrooms, reading and guidance clinics, conference halls, library and auditorium in the School of Education wing.

Visitors also viewed the facilities of the Mark's Meadow Laboratory School, an integral part of the center where teacher trainees and researchers can observe elementary classrooms in operation. On display were examples of modern teaching aids and the one-way windows used in observing children in class.

Center Open to All Saturdays

Dean Purvis announced at the dedication that the entire center will be open to all interested persons each of the remaining Saturdays in October. Guided tours will be conducted from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. All teachers, guidance officers, and school administrators are invited to attend.

Homecoming Weekend Begins With Mile-Long Float Parade

by DICK HAYNES '64

About 10,000 people witnessed the mile-long, fifty-unit parade that started off Homecoming Weekend festivities on Friday night as it marched into Amherst and back.

First prizes in the float competition in the four divisions went to: Van Meter for their "Shooting Rams," Kappa Alpha Theta for their "Paintin' A Fusia Victory," Theta Chi for their "Over the Rhode to Victory," and Dwight House for their entry, "Looks Like We'll Dunk 'Em Do-nut?".

Second and third places, respectively, were awarded to Chadbourne and Baker, Chi Omega and Alpha Chi Omega, Sigma Phi Epeilon and Alpha Epsilon Phi, and Lewis and Mary Lyon houses.

Crowning of Queen Highlights Rally

Highlight of the "Beat Rhode Island Rally," which followed the parade, was the crowning of Janet Wehmann '63 as Homecoming Queen by Richard Davis '48, President of the Alumni Association. She was also presented with a bouquet of long-stem, red roses.

In an impromptu speech after the crowning she said, "I am extremely happy and proud to represent UMass as Homecoming Queen. This is one of the most wonderful weekends of my life. I wanted to thank everyone concerned with making this possible and for my first long-stem roses. Only one thing is left to make this a perfect weekend—that's to beat Rhode Island, tomorrow."

Members of the Homecoming Queen's Court were Pamela O'Donnell '63, Sandra Jones '65, Sue Lydon '65, and Marcia Lockhart '65.

Following the rally there was a jam session in the S.U. Ballroom with "The Big Six" from Ludlow.

Alumni Picnic Held Saturday

Alumni and their families enjoyed a tailgate picnic before the game Saturday afternoon at Alumni Field.

About 400 alumni attended a tailgate picnic Saturday morning at Alumni Field which started at 11 a.m. The picnic was run by the Alumni Association. Members of Alpha Phi Omega and Womens' Service Organization assisted by buying game tickets for the attending alumni.

Lederle Presents Cups at Halftime

During the halftime ceremonies at the victorious game against Rhode Island, President John W. Lederle presented the members of the Homecoming Queen's Court with silver goblets inscribed, "University of Massachusetts Homecoming Queen's Court 1961".

To the Queen, Janet Wehmann, the President presented a silver bowl, inscribed "University of Massachusetts Homecoming Queen 1961"; then he gave her a kiss.

Parties and Dance Brighten Saturday Night

On Saturday night the annual Homecoming Dance and many fraternity parties were held.

The dance took place in the S.U. Ballroom from 8 to 12. An estimated 600 couples danced to the music of Paul Waldron's Band. With the band was Ann Shutty '61, guest vocalist, who formerly sang with the University Dance Band and made many appearances in Operetta Guild Productions.

Dr. Kaplan To Speak At UMass and Smith

The government departments of Smith College and UMass are jointly sponsoring a series of lectures by Dr. H. Eliot Kaplan, president of the New York State Civil Service Commission, Oct. 24-27.

He will speak at an open meeting at Smith College on Wednesday, Oct. 25, at 8 p.m., at the Alumnae House. The public is invited to attend this meeting, which will be devoted to the subject, "The Public Service as a Career."

He will speak on this same topic on Thursday, Oct. 26, at 4 p.m. in the S.U.

Dr. Kaplan will speak on both campuses under the auspices of the Murray Seasongood Good Government Fund, which sponsors the appearance of experts on state and local government at college campuses.

Kaplan has a long and distinguished career both in teaching and government service. He has been a professor of government at New York University since 1943. He also served for 20 years as Executive Director of the National Civil Service League, which has worked successfully for many civil service reforms in many states. He also served as Deputy Controller of the state of New York for four years, and was apponted by the President of the United States as national chairman of the Committee on Retirement Policy for Federal Employees. He has also worked with many other public and private agencies devoted to better government.

Professors John P. Mallan of Smith College and John Harris of UMass are serving as coordinators for Dr. Kaplan's appearance here.

ELECTIONS NOTICE

Nomination papers are still available for Class of '65 officers, and can be picked up at the R.S.O. office.

Thursday, Oct. 26—the papers are due at the R.S.O. office by 4 p.m.

Tuesday, Oct. 31 — primary elections will be held in the S.U. lobby 9 a.m.—4 p.m.

Tuesday, Nov. 7 — final elections in the same place, also 9 a.m.—4 p.m.

Ed. Network To Broadcast Frost's Talk

Poet Robert Frost will be featured in a special broadcast to be carried on Wednesday, Oct. 25 over an educational radio network extending from Massachusetts to the nation's capital.

The emergency facilities of WGBH--FM, whose Cambridge studios were gutted by fire two weeks ago, will be used to originate the broadcast from UMass, where Frost will speak before what is expected to be one of the largest audiences ever to hear the 87-year-old poet in this college area.

The University event is the first presentation in this year's series of Alumni War Memorial Lectures. Scheduled for 8 p.m. on Wednesday in the ballroom of the S.U., the lecture is open to the public.

Cooperating in broadcasting the event will be the campus radio station, WMUA-FM, and the Four College station, WFCR-FM, Amherst. Coordinator of the network broadcast will be Vincent C. Brann, assistant professor of speech and theater at Smith College.

E.C.P.O. Picks Morrissey For Its Next President

Robert J. Morrissey, Director of Placement and Financial Aid Services at UMass, was elected President of the Eastern College Personnel Officers' Association at a three-day conference of the organization at Lido Beach, Long Island recently.

ECPO, one of seven regional college placement officer associations, has a membership of 142 college placement officers from New England, New York, and New Jersey colleges, and an equal number of personnel directors from business an industry.

Morrissey has served as a member-at-large on the Executive Committee and was Vice President of the organization for the past two years.

A native of Dunkirk, New York, Morrissey received his B.S in Education at Buffalo State Teachers' College, and his M.S. in Education from St. Bonaventure University. Since then he has done graduate work in guidance at Harvard University, UMass and UConn. After many years of experience in teaching and counseling he came to the University in 1952.

As President of ECPO, Morrissey will become a member of the College Placement Council, a national group devoted to serving the regional associations through production of the College Placement Annual; project studies of appropriate activities in national placement problems; and publication of the Journal of College Placement, to which Morrissey has contributed several articles.

Tradition and Fear

Ever since the Englishmen landed on this continent in 1620 there has been a breaking down of tradition. With this breakdown there has evolved a lessening of values, ideals, and specific trends in our culture. Unfortunately, in the process of this regression, American society has failed to implant or nurture aspects of traditions and values where the void has been created. What is the result? We become unsure of our decisions, and if crises do appear there occurs a dread and hesitation to act. What else could happen? If we don't have a definite strain of character and ideals which may serve as a criterion and guide by which we may judge, an aura of uncertainty and insecurity pervades the air. Thus, because there are no stabilizing trends in our values as a society, many times we wander and flounder when new situations are approached. We in the United States have become instead of an active initiative society, a reactive society. Many times we are the activated upon instead of being the activating element!!

A fear then enshrouds us!! A fear that has been inbred in us by this very excommunication from our traditions and ideals. Because there exists nothing to which we can grasp onto as a guide, we grope and probe along a fear-ridden path. What many of us are lacking is the protection which says 'I don't want to tell you what to do but the ideal path is . . .' New situations then create dread! Therefore, when an explosive incident or crisis does arise, like Berlin, or 100 megaton bombs, it immediately appeals to, and draws on this very basic and possibly latent fear, which underlies our society and culture.

We, the infected, cry "Help"!! Can anyone blame us. What else can we do to escape or deal with this problem? Off this point, there evolves a segment of our society which, through our mass media, manages to allay some of the fear. It says, "Now calm down, an atomic holecaust won't be that bad. In fact, we can even survive one if we build little brick huts under which we can hide. Then there appears an article in a national magazine which informs us, that 97% of the population will be saved if we build little brick houses. The American public, driven by this raw insecurity and fear, looking for something to grasp or hold, immediately clings to this impression of security. Unfortunately a problem develops here. This security is superficial. The underlining fears and insecurities have not really been fulfilled or quenched. People are ignoring the problem of how to prevent war, not how to live with war! We are burying our heads in the ground, hoping that the problem of preventing an atomic war will dissolve in the meantime. We haven't dealt with the problem for it is still there no matter how long we hide.

In conclusion, we the American people are looking for something much deeper than these material objects. We are looking for standards, values, culture, tradition or even morals and ethics, around which we may form our lives. Through history and experience we can make judgments, and also by means of logic and reason criteria can be formed by which we will be able to judge, evaluate and then act positively on various crises.

The Next 30 Years

"The Next Thirty Years in the Colleges"
by Christopher Jencks, Harper's Magazine Oct. 1961

"Universal college education has already become inevitable in America-although it probably will not be accepted for another generation."

Are the students of today ready for college? This article suggests the student should first marry and work at a regular job before settling down to serious higher education or professional training.

There appears to be a dividing line among undergraduates that separates those seeking "a college education" from those seeking "a university education". A college education is defined as a four-year affair, leading from high school into a year or two of near-remedial general education, through a couple of years of semiprofessional training, and culminating in a B.A. and a respectable middle-class job.

By contrast, a university education is defined as one which begins with four years of largely general education, leads through two-five years of graduate professional training, and may culminate in an M.D., LL.B., Ph.D., etc., and an influential upper-middle-class or upper-class career.

"The next thirty years, then, will probably bring about a society in which most of our children will enroll in college."

YanCon Unrest

Following the wave of protest and demonstrations at the University of Connecticut, there appears to have grown a Yankee Conference state of unrest.

From the front page of THE BEACON, the University of Rhode Island's student newspaper, there comes this story of parallel interest to that of UConn's:

"The URI Student Senate, in a resolution passed last Monday night, has condemned the URI 'in loco parentes' doctrine for permitteng what the Senate calls 'arbitrary and extensive repression of student pursuits' and the impairment of the 'total significance of the university as the center for the conflict of ideas.'

"The Student Senate declared that 'the theory established the university as paternal guardian over the moral, intellectual and social activities of the student . . . Apart from the individual student, the university, operating within the framework of "in loco parentes," may and does establish restrictions on the operation of the student organizations, as well as on the individual student.'

The resolution listed the following as examples of the 'in loco parentes' philosophy at this campus: 1. The arbitrary expulsion of students. 2. Unnecessary control by the university administration of social affairs. 3. Administrative influence of the Interfraternity Council and the Association of Women Students. 4. Interference by the administration with the constitutional rights of petition. 5. The unnecessarily restrictive women's regulations, especially the harsh and inequitable punishments."

Looking at the light from which the YanCon flames of unrest originate, this Associated Press story is the latest from the University of Connecticut campus:

"The chairman of the University of Connecticut Board of Trustees says if UConn students don't like the administration rules and regulations they should be told they can go elsewhere to continue their education.

Chairman John Budds urged the trustees today to issue a strong statement declaring that administration regulations will be strictly enforced . . ."

The UConn Daily Campus countered with this editorial against the Trustees and Administration:

"The Administration is up to their old tricks again. At the Board of Trustees meeting yesterday afternoon, the Administration, as usual, clouded the issues that the students are fighting for . . . The Trustees have been told that the student activities have been left alone in the past, and now are diseased, and need administrative control to survive... If we want to find out about mismanagement we should look into the finances of the University. We might learn some revealing lessons. . ."

Field Station Director Relieved

Dr. John R. Havis, head of UMass' Waltham Field Station at Waltham since 1954, has requested to be relieved of his administrative post in order to devote full time to research on the physiological problems of nursery crops and other ornamentals.

He will join the department of horticuture staff at Amherst as soon as necessary arrangements can be made, according to Dr. A. A. Spielman, dean of the College of Agriculture.

Pending the appointment of a new head at the Waltham Field Station, Warren D. Whitcomb, professor of entomology and plant pathology, has assumed the administrative duties of acting department head.

Requirements Raised For All New Teachers

Every American grade school teacher will take at least two years of college mathematics as the first step in a planned revolution in college mathematics instruction, according to a recommendation adopted by the Board of Governors of the Mathematical Association of America.

This proposal is being supported by a two-year $350,000 Federal grant from the Association's Committee on the Under-graduate program.

Plans would at least triple the average high school teacher's preparation, and would wipe out what many studies have termed a mathematical illiteracy among elementary teachers. School superintendents, state education officials and colleges and universities will be urged to adopt as absolute minimum these standards:

1) Every elementary teacher should have two years of college preparatory mathematics and four college courses totalling 12 semester hours.

2) Those teaching rudiments of algebra or geometry (junior high school) should have seven mathematics courses totalling 21 hours.

Distinguished Scientist Named Chemistry Department Head

A 39-year-old scientist, Dr. William E. McEwen, has been named Commonwealth Professor and head of the department of chemistry at UMass, it was announced today by Provost Gilbert L. Woodside.

In making the announcement, the provost said "the appointment is a distinguished one made possible under the Commonwealth professorships reserved for teachers and researchers of outstanding ability."

As head of a department of some 20 faculty members, Dr. McEwen will coordinate extensive teaching and research programs, the latter conducted under major grants from government agencies, private foundations and corporations.

A specialist in organic chemistry and presently professor of chemistry at the University of Kansas, he succeeds Dr. I. Moyer Hunsberger, who was appointed Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences here in March. The new department head's appointment is effective Sept., 1962.

Author of numerous articles in the field of organic chemistry, Dr. McEwen is also co-author of three volumes used as standard texts in many colleges and universities.

A former visiting lecturer at Columbia University, where he received his doctorate in 1947, the young scientist has also taught at the University of Illinois.

Active in the American Chemical Society, he is chairman of the National Committee on Membership Affairs and a member of the Council Policy Committee and the subcommittee on communications within the society.

ETS To Give Teachers Test In February

The National Teacher Examination, prepared and administered annually by Educational Testing Service, will be given at more than 200 testing centers throughout the United States on Saturday, February 10, 1962.

At the one day testing session a candidate may take the Common Examinations, which include tests in Professional Information, General Culture, English Expression, and Non Verbal Reasoning; and one or two of thirteen Optional Examinations, designed to demonstrate mastery of subject matter to be taught. The college which a candidate is attending, or the school system in which he is seeking employment, will advise him whether he should take the National Teacher Examinations and which of the Optional Examinations to select.

A Bulletin of Information (in which an application is inserted) describing registration procedures may be obtained from college officials, school superintendents, or directly from the National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey.

Completed applications, accompanied by proper examination fees, will be accepted by the ETS office during November and December, and early in January, so long as they are received before January 12, 1962.

Career Cues

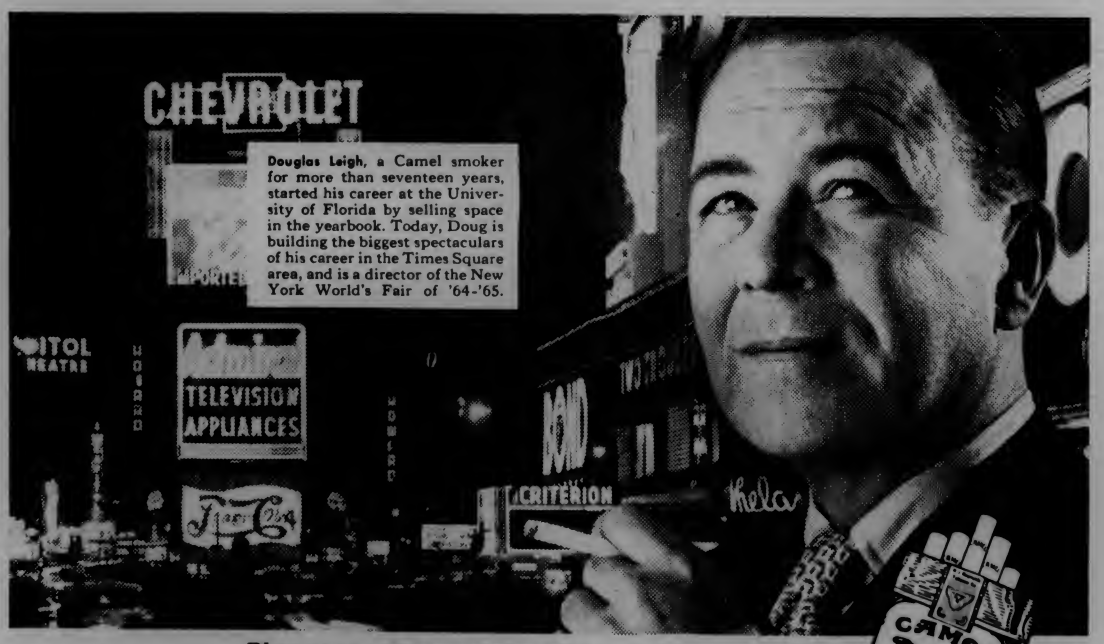
"Hitch your wagon to a 'growth' industry— and grow with it!"

Douglas Leigh, President
Douglas Leigh, Inc.

"A growth industry is a new industry that is on the way up — moving quickly, expanding fast. When you join a company in one of the growth fields you have something extra working for you . . . you grow up with it. To find out which industry is right for you, try this: Ask someone in a good investment office to give you a list of the industries he considers 'growth industries'. Data Processing, plastics, and electronics are a few examples. Then pick the one you have a leaning toward, and get the names of the most progressive companies in that field.

One thing I'd like to point out from my own career is . . . a growth industry may also be an old business that's on the verge of new development. Shortly after leaving college I found this situation in the Outdoor Advertising field. What my associates and I did was to employ color, action and motion to dramatically personify the product, brand or services being advertised. In doing so, we developed the modern type 'Spectaculars' that talked, blew smoke rings, soap bubbles, etc. . . . signs that changed the face of Broadway and the famous Times Square area.

This is just one example. The really important thing to remember is this: When you set your sights on a career, aim for an industry that is going to grow, so you can grow with it. It's the difference between a rocket that blasts off, and one that just sits there. Good luck!"



Douglas Leigh, a Camel smoker for more than seventeen years, started his career at the University of Florida by selling space in the yearbook. Today, Doug is building the biggest spectaculars of his career in the Times Square area, and is a director of the New York World's Fair of '64-'65.

Plan your pleasure ahead, too.

UMass Grads See Redmen Whitewash Rams 25-0

UM Team Takes Step Toward Beanpot; Maine Contest Nears

by W. JOHN LEMMON '62

The "Old Grads," beaming with pride and confident of a Yankee Conference Championship, filed out of Alumni Field Saturday after witnessing the first Massachusetts Homecoming Victory in seven years. The throng of 8500 fans returned home with fond remembrances of this game when their Redmen threw a saddle on the URI Rams and rode them to a 25-0 victory.

Coach Vic Fusia's charges made the Rams look like a flock of lambs in the first half of the contest. The forward wall of the Massmen held the visitors to 12 net yards rushing and only 46 via the airways. While the defensive gears were meshing the offense was rolling along in overdrive as it piled up 239 yards, and tallied three touchdowns and a field goal.

Though the Redmen had the Rams by the horns in the initial half, the tables were turned after intermission. Substitute quarterback Chuck Vento overcame his first half nervousness, and proved to be very capable in directing his mates. Although the locals scored on a fluke play late in the contest, they were completely outplayed in the final thirty minutes.

After Dave Harrington returned the game's initial kickoff to the UM 35, Sam Lussier and his running mate, sophomore Fred Lewis, combined their rushing talents on 12 of 14 plays. The latter speedster climaxed the drive by diving over from one yard out. John Bamberry added the finishing touches to make it seven.

KEN KEZER

Ken Palm electified the crowd when he opened the second stanza with a 70 yard sprint off tackle. After being dragged down on the 23, Ken left in favor of Art Perdigao, who picked up a first and ten on a draw play. There, however, the attack bogged, and Bamberry's talents were again utilized. The twenty-five yard boot raised the score to 10-0.

Midway through the quarter, Ken Kezer, who romped for six TD's in the Redmen's final two encounters last year, returned to action for the first time this season. The 5'10" Walham junior carried three times from the 13 to the one where a holding penalty thwarted the drive. John Bamberry's attempt for seven successive points was short. As the clock wheeled off the final seconds, McCormick faded back from the URI 43, and lofted the leather covered projectile to Kezer on the right sidelines. The 170 lb. right half balanced the ball on his fingertips for one precarious moment then dove into the endzone. The double "K" was back in the scoring picture on the next play when, after Bamberry's fake one pointer, McCormick found Ken wide open. Thus, the Redmen headed for the dressing room with an 18-0 advantage.

BOB FOOTE

Midway through the third quarter Loren Flagg pounced on a Paul Faulkner bobble on the UM 5. This was Rhode Island's deepest penetration into Redmen territory, and their only scoring threat.

The Redmen capped the afternoon's scoring spree when left tackle Bob Foote grabed Steve Bosker's fumble and made his way to the endzone. Bamberry returned to the battle, and split the uprights to raise the final score to 25-0.

Redmen Rantings

After Lewis broke the scoring ice, jubilant Redmen fans released skyward 1500 multicolored balloons. The sundry display was in direct contrast to the rather bleak afternoon experienced by the few Rhody fans who dotted the east stands . . . Speaking of Lewis—the fleet-footed Springfield boy totted the ball 14 times for a 4 yard average . . . We don't want to disillusion gridiron students, but according to Saturday's statistics, possession football doesn't produce victories. The visitors had possession for 61 of the 120 plays and 25 of the third quarter's 30 . . . Bob Foote's heroics have earned him ECAC honors twice this season, but his TD will probably be the play he never forgets. Though it's considered a rarity for linemen to tally TD's, URI fans may be dubious. Last season at Kingston, UM guard Ben Fernandez grabbed John Rollins' fumble and scampered across for six points . . . Bill Footrick's 100 yard dash champ, Loren Flagg, again sparkled on defense. The fast developing junior nearly added a TD to his laurels, when he returned a punt 46 yards on the game's final play . . . speaking of defense—a tip of the hat to right guard Dick Eger for his fine work . . . The Redmen gained a total of only six net rushing yards in the entire second half . . . Since Maine's Black Bears are undefeated in conference play, indications are that the November 22 battle in Orono will be for the Beanpot—the Redmen have only to topple UNH . . . following the victory the Redmen band marched off the field with their hats on backwards and another victory under their belts.

SAM SKIRTS THE END

UMass halfback Sam Lussier took a handoff from John McCormick and sped around the left end for a seven yard pickup during Saturday's win over the Rhode Island Rams.

Football Becomes Big Sport On Mass. Campus — That's In 1919!

October 4. That was a big day for Massachusetts football. For that was the day football at this school was launched as a major sport, soon to become what it is today on this campus. The year? Why, it was 1919, and things were looking good for the U.S. and for sports.

Here the Collegian reprints the leading article of The Massachusetts Collegian on the Wednesday following that eventful date. We were then Massachusetts Agricultural College and, it is evident, the style of sports writing has undergone changes just as names and teams have changed through the years. See if you can notice any change!

M.A.C. WINS FIRST FOOTBALL GAME

Saturday afternoon saw the renewal of football at M.A.C. when Connecticut Aggie came to Amherst and was defeated 15-7 on Alumni Field.

Although M.A.C. won, it was not until the second half that she really showed a superiority over her opponents. During the first half both teams made several substantial gains. Those for M.A.C. were made on line plunges by Whittle, while those for C.A.C. came as the result of a backfield shift and end runs that baffled our men for quite a time. Several penalties were given on both sides for offside.

In the second half the Aggie team showed a new pep. Although Connecticut scored seven points, at the end of the third quarter Captain Pond caught the kickoff on his 18 yard line at the opening of the last quarter and ran 80 yards for a touchdown. For about 40 yards he had a clear field, but the last 40 yards of his run was spent dodging his opponents.

The game in detail was as follows: Connecticut kicked off to M.A.C. Pond caught the ball and ran it back 15 yards. After a 5-yard penalty Pond ran through the Connecticut defense for 19 yards, while giving Aggie first down again. After three attempts to gain ground the ball went to C.A.C. on an incomplete forward. Connecticut gained 12 yards in four downs and the ball went to M.A.C. on a blocked kick recovered by Glaven. Connecticut next intercepted a forward pass and ran it back 12 yards. Following a penalty for M.A.C. offside play Connecticut was held for downs and failed in an attempted field goal. Aggie carried the ball 15 yards in seven downs. Grayson caught a forward from Pond and ran 20 yards. The first quarter ended here. No score . . . .

Connecticut kicked off to start the fourth quarter and Pond, aided by perfect interference, made the sensational run already mentioned. Aggie kicked off, C.A.C. held and Pond tried a drop which missed by inches. After C.A.C. tried a series of passes M.A.C. intercepted, and with 30 seconds to play Pond kicked a field goal from the 20-yard line. Final score, 15-7.

The good physical condition of the team was well brought to notice by the fact that the M.A.C. team was not forced to call time at all during the entire forty minutes of play.

HOCKEY

There will be a meeting of all varsity hockey candidates in room 9 of the Curry Hicks Cage at 5:00 p.m., Wednesday, October 25.

Bears Edge UConn, 2-0

The University of Maine notched its fourth YanCon victory of the season when it edged the UConn squad Saturday, 2-0. This victory makes Maine the team to beat for the Beanpot.

Co-Captain Dick Kinney of the Bears accounted for the game's only points with an end zone tackle in the first period of the clash. Kinney came back in the final stanza to save the game for the Bears when he blocked an attemped Husky field goal in the final ten seconds of the game.

Kinney tackled Joe Klimas in the end zone after a bad pass from center sailed over the Connecticut punter's head.

Van Meter Wins In First Annual Cross Country Event

Bob Moore of Van Meter House led his team to victory with his first place finish in the first intramural cross-country championship meet ever held at UMass. Moore clocked 7:24 over the approximately 1½ mile course which started at the Student Union, ran around Hasbrouck Lab down to the campus entrance, and back to the Union, with an extra loop around the College pond.

Greenough, led by gymnast Charlie Paydos, finished second, while wrestler Al Brouillet paced Hills into third place.

The Summary:

1. Bob Moore, Van Meter 7:24
2. Bob Cormier, Independent
3. Bill Oldach, Chadbourne
4. Pete Stevens, Van Meter
5. Charles Harris, Van Meter
6. Charles Paydos, Greenough
7. Al Brouillet, Hills
8. John Parker, Hills
9. Frank DeFreitas, Greenough
10. Gordon Breault, Chadbourne
11. Dave Williams, Independent
12. Maurice Ryan, Brooks
13. Henry Kelsey, Greenough
14. Alton Brann, Van Meter
15. Bob Bullock, Independent
15. Tom Kilroy, Kappa Sigma
17. Dana Clark, Hills

Scores: Van Meter 10, Greenough 28, Hills 32.

Booters Beat R.I. Rams, 4-1

The Redmen soccer team won its first Yankee Conference match of the season, Saturday afternoon as it slammed the University of Rhode Island team 4-1 in a home contest. The win gives the Redmen a 1-1 record in Conference play and a 2-3-1 slate for the season.

Two penalty shots, both by Dick Leitch, and single goals by Catpain Dave Amundsen and Bob Chenery accounted for the Redmen scoring.

Next Friday the Redmen booters will play host to the Tufts University squad in a home contest starting at 3:00 p.m.

Chadbourne Blanks Mills

Chadbourne opened its intramural schedule by shutting out Mills 21-0. Offensively, quarterback Dick Monteiro ran and passed effectively, leading the team to a 14-0 halftime advantage. A second offensive unit added seven more points late in the game. John Faino and John Zdanowicz made some fine catches against the capable Mills squad.

The defensive line comprised of Dick Goldberg, Chuck Gibson, and Wayne Elliot also deserves credit for its fine play. The next evening Chadbourne ran into Wheeler, the tough defending champs of dorm league A. An early Chadbourne score was nullified because of an offside penalty, before the game settled into a vicious defensive battle.

The hard play of the huge Wheeler line and the aggressive Chadbourne counterpart contributed to the final outcome, a scoreless tie. The uniformed, well organized champs pressed in the second half as Chadbourne turned back three Wheeler scoring attempts from fifteen yards or closer. Particular credit goes to Wayne Elliot for his tremendous line play and to Paul Bellini for his determined work on pass defense.

Butterfield Is Dual Victor

A strong Butterfield grid team, which looks like the team to beat in the Dormitory Intramural competition, has racked up two victories in its first week of competition. The team proved to be much too powerful for its rivals, defeating Brooks House 32-7 in its initial clash, and following this victory with a 26-6 win over Hills South.

The team combines a strong line and fine ends with an adept backeld. In the first game, Don (Bart) Starr carried the ball for two T.D.'s while Skip Freeland and Ron Rainka hauled in three passes (two and one, respectively). The same players figured in all of the scoring against a game Hills South team, Starr legging it 40 yards for the first T.D., and Rainka catching two in the endzone. Freeland latched on to a short pass and went all the way for the final tally. Butterfield's Dick Annino looked very good in the end slot.

Hills' T.D. came when their quarterback uncorked a beautiful pass which covered about 40 yards and landed in the hands of an elusive halfback in the end zone.

2.5 Required For Students To Major In Journalism

by KAREN BURGESS '64

In order to take the interdepartmental journalism major, a student must have an average of 2.5 or better at the end of his sophomore year.

This information was given to a group of freshmen by Dr. Arthur Musgrave, Professor of English and journalism, at a meeting in Machmer on Thursday.

Students prior to the class of '65 taking a journalism major were required to have a 2.2 cum.

There are twenty-four members of the class of '65 participating in this program at present. The interdepartmental major is for students who are interested in writing as a career and students interested in the study of how the communication process has been organized in our society.

By raising the cumulative average required in order to major in journalism, Dr. Musgrave has set a precedent in University standards.

Dr. Musgrave explained the reasons for his action. According to him, any student interested in writing as a career should be academically minded enough to be capable of obtaining a 2.5 cum by the end of his sophomore year. He said, "I hope and expect all journalism majors will be honor students by their junior year."

Students who don't have the required average at the end of their sophomore year will have to complete the major requirements in English or some other department and minor in journalism. The students participating in the interdepartmental major must elect five junior-senior courses (15 credits) in journalism and five junior-senior courses in one other liberal arts area.

Two types of journalism courses are offered: 1) writing or technical courses and 2) content courses. The writing courses are given in the English and Speech departments, and the content courses are given in the Journalism department. The interdepartmental nature of the major was given by Dr. Musgrave as the main reason for the 2.5 requirement.

Less than a third of last year's freshman class had a 2.5.

DEAN'S LOANS

Effective November 1, 1961 the hours for procurement of Emergency Loans from funds held by the Dean of Men will be between 3:30 and 5 p.m. Students who borrow money which is payable to the Treasurer's Office may pay it back anytime as usual before 3:30 Monday through Friday.

"I have seen dawn upon the mountain tops too often not to trust that it will presently descend into the shadowed homes and the sleeping hearts of men" . . . Emerson.

Red Cross Leaders' Code:

Such is the philosophy of James T. Nicholson, which he has adopted as a result of 39 years in American National Red Cross work in the United States and overseas.

Earns Executive Positions

Nicholson joined the American Red Cross in 1919 after World War I service as a machine gun lieutenant and rose through various important Red Cross posts. He was manager of Chicago chapter and National Vice Chairman for Junior Red Cross and for Insular and Foreign Operations, prior to his appointment as Executive Vice President in 1946. His international efforts and service as Vice Chairman of the League of Red Cross Societies Board of Governors and as a member of the Standing Commission of the International Conference of the Red Cross, won him numerous awards from leaders of Red Cross Societies and Governments of foreign countries.

In 1958, when Nicholson retired from the Red Cross he received regrets and felicitations from all over the world expressing the esteem in which he is held. Walter G. Hartman, retired head of the German Red Cross, wrote from Bonn, "I shall never forget our meeting in Geneva during very bad years amidst a most malignant war, how we could shake hands not only as men of the Red Cross, but, moreover that you gave us strength and pleasure through your vigor of your always strong and confident humanism."

In World War II, Jim Nicholson was on duty for the Red Cross in all theaters. Before the United States entered the war he served on the United States British mission to Moscow that paved the way for Lend-Lease to the Soviet Union.

Nicholson just happened to arrive in Geneva the morning after the Hungarian uprising and was able to rally 52 Red Cross Societies to help the Austrian Red Cross aid the Hungarian refugees.

Receives Several Commendations

Because of his participation in such affairs, Nicholson has received numerous foreign decorations, including the Officers' Cross of the French Legion of Honor; Poland's Polonia Restituta; the Commander's Cross of the Royal Order of Dennebrog, which he received by honor from the King of Denmark. Nicholson has, in addition, received decorations for honorary recognition from the Red Cross Societies of 22 different countries.

Retires, But Still Active

Since his retirement from the Red Cross in 1958 as the Executive Vice President, he has devoted himself to work as a member of the U. S. State Department's Committee on Voluntary Foreign Aid. Currently he is serving as General Chairman of the UMass Centennial and is a Director of the Associate Alumni.

Faculty Backs Lederle On Low Tuition Stand

Meeting Monday evening, under the chairmanship of Dr. Shafer Williams, President of the University Chapter of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, this faculty organization unanimously adopted a resolution presented by Prof. Walter G. O'Donnell pledging support of President Lederle's firm public stand against higher tuition costs for students at the University of Massachusetts.

The resolution was adopted following an address given by Lederle before the New England Association of School Superintendents at which he declared "It is beyond me why anyone in America could favor dropping the free or low cost educational principle at a time when Russia, seeing its value, is picking it up and threatening to use it to surpass us."

Resolved:

Whereas, in these times of global crisis it is of the utmost urgency that all potentialities in the human resources of the democracies be given equitable opportunities for educational development; and,

Whereas, the mounting costs to parents and students in many institutions of higher learning precludes 150,000 capable youths annually from appropriate educational opportunities beyond high-school; and,

Whereas, public universities were conceived and established to extend higher educational opportunities to deserving and capable youth irrespectively of the accidents of birth and family income levels; and.

Whereas, the Community, the Commonwealth, and the Nation, as well as the individual student, derive benefits and values from the enhanced creative powers of the graduates of these institutions of higher learning; and,

Whereas, pressures have recently been exerted to shift more of this financial burden of higher public education from the Commonwealth to the student and his family; and

Whereas, this regressive move would impair, obstruct, or destroy the democratic and cultural purposes of public institutions of higher learning, by further restricting educational opportunities among young people with deserving capabilities but inadequate financial means; and

Whereas, the American Labor Movement for one hundred and thirty years has been the traditional friend and firms supporter of adequate and equitable educational opportunities for deserving youth at all levels of learning; and,

Whereas, the University of Massachusetts Chapter of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, is bound to a constitution that commits its members to continuous striving for more and better educational opportunities in our democracy, and more democracy in our educational system; therefore,

Be it resolved, That the University of Massachusetts Chapter of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, hereby publicly commend Dr. John W. Lederle, President of the University of Massachusetts, for his forthright and determined stand against higher tuition costs to students entitled to equitable opportunities in public higher education; and

Be it further resolved, That this professional body of the University of Massachusetts, in coalition with the Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, and 600,000 members of organized labor in this Commonwealth, pledge its active support in the upholding and effectuation of these principles, in cooperation with the University Administration, on any future occasions when these principles of equitable educational opportunity are endangered.

World Broadcast Scheduled For Robert Frost Lecture

The University of Massachusetts will take its first step in international radio broadcasting when the Robert Frost lecture, scheduled for 8:00 p.m. tonight in the S.U., is beamed to three continents.

The world broadcast will be made through the facilities of WMUA, the UMass campus radio-station, without whose co-operation coverage would be impossible. Station manager Lyod Teran, program director Eric Sandel and technical director David Mainwaring will be in charge of picking up the lecture in the S.U. Ballroom and sending it over telephone wires to the WMUA transmitter.

ROBERT FROST

Bram Sent To WGBH

From there the program will be picked up off the air by the four college radio station, WFCR. It will then be relayed to WGBH in Boston and subsequently sent over the Educational Radio Network to several U.S. cities.

Included in the Educational Radio Network, besides WBGH, are: WAMC, Albany; WRVR, New York; WHYY, Philadelphia; and WAMU, Washington, D.C.

In addition to this network broadcast, the World-Wide Broadcasting Corporation will record the Frost program for delayed broadcast to Europe and Latin America.

Marks WFCR Milestone

The event is significant in that it marks the first major contribution by the new WFCR to the Educational Radio Network. Of more importance to the UMass community, it will spread the cultural aspects of the University further than ever could have been accomplished ordinarily.

UM Blood Drive On; Donors Being Sought

The Campus Religious Council and the Faculty Women are seeking volunteer blood donors for the annual campus blood drive. Registration cards are available now in all dormitories, sororities and fraternities and at the S.U. lobby counter for Commuters.

Anyone in normal health between the ages of 18 and 59 is eligible to give blood. Those under 21 years-of-age must receive their parents permission.

The Faculty Women, under the direction of Mrs. Henry Korsen, will send letters home to parents of those who are under 21 and wish to donate blood.

Donors Will Be Insured

Students who give blood become insured under the Hampshire County Blood Insurance program. This entitles them and their families to all the blood they may need for one year.

Previously any student at UMass was eligible to receive blood, but since the formation of the blood program only those who donate are eligible to receive blood.

Bloodmobile To Be At Arnold

The bloodmobile will be at Arnold House both Wednesday and Thursday, November 15 and 16 in order that students may donate blood at their convenience and without interfering with their schedules.

The Campus Religious Council has stated, "Should you or your family need a blood transfusion, present your Blood Insurance card at the hospital where the blood is to be used, or contact any Red Cross chapter office.

Blood Credited Anywhere

Blood donated here can be credited anywhere in the United States or Canada. There is no charge for blood supplied through the Red Cross, however hospitals and physicians charge for administering blood.

By donating blood through the Campus Religious Council the donater and his immediate family are assured of receiving free blood for a 12 month period. Also the member will not be required to replace the blood that he or his immediate family might use.

Cadet Corps Will Chose Ball Queen

Thirty-one nominees selected by the various dormitories, sororities and fraternities will vie for the title of Honorary Colonel at the combined AFROTC-ROTC Military Ball to be held Saturday, December 9.

Jack Wylde, General Chairman of the Mili Ball Committee, has announced that five finalists will be selected.

The Queen will be elected through an election conducted by Ted Bernard, Chairman of the Mili Ball Queens Committee and Howie Wainstein, Publicity Chairman.

Only members of the AFROTC-AROTC Cadet Corps will be allowed to vote. The time for the election will be 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday, October 26 in the S.U. lobby.

The Mili Ball will feature the music of Bob Batchelder and his band, a top flight musical aggregation from the Totem Pole Ballroom at Norumbega Park, Auburndale. The ball will be held in the S.U. Ballroom.

Soph-Frosh Night Publicity Committee Readies Posters For Oct. 27 Activities

Members of the Soph-Frosh Weekend Publicity Committee take time out from poster making to pose for the Collegian camera as they prepare publicity for the Soph-Frosh Night to be held Friday evening October 27 and the Soph-Frosh Track meet slated for Sunday afternoon at Alumni Field.

BLOOD SAVES LIVES
CALL RED CROSS BE A DONOR

YOUR PRESIDENT AND YOUR OPINION

There has been a recent discussion over the degree to which the Collegian is a responsible and free press, serving as the voice of the student body. For some time now, an editorial idea has been rolling about on our cluttered desk, gathering opinions as well as dust. But last week, a letter and News Letter reached our hands which cleared the dust from the editorial idea and prompted action.

The University of New Mexico and its political science department have initiated a governmental intern program in close connection with an Intern News Letter. One particular portion of this Letter expresses the combined opinions of the students in regards to some very basic elements in our United States; such as prestige, honesty, stupidity, money, panic, sex, goals, and "the idiot in the street."

These opinions were so extreme and negative, that they prompted the President of our own University, Dr. John W. Lederle, to write us a personal letter which said of this News Letter: "One expected a measure of cynicism but nothing quite as extreme as this. Do our University of Massachusetts students share the New Mexico view? . . . While the moral tone of our society is by no means as high as it should be, it is still far better than it was in the days of the robber barons . . . I still believe that integrity and honesty are not only the wisest policy but they are a requisite if one is to live with himself for long. I cannot believe that there is any staying power or any prestige associated with stepping on other people or doing the other things the New Mexico students say is regularly done by the majority of those who have succeeded . . . I wanted . . . to raise the question whether the same views would be widely shared here." So wrote President Lederle last week. His concern with such issues and that he took the time to inquire of his Student Body provoked us to invoke our new editorial idea.

Appearing regularly in future Collegians will be articles appearing under the title—THE STUDENT FORUM. A topic will be selected and announced, after which the Student Body will be free to write on this topic . . . not as Letters to the Editor but as spokesmen in a public forum. Not only should this provide our readers with a greater voice in their newspaper, but it should stir up some lively opinions.

The title of our first forum will be PRESTIGE —THE BIG GOAL? This is what the New Mexico students had to stay on this same subject:

"Today Americans respect the man who is on top regardless of who he stepped on getting there. The big goal is prestige. The time has come when the goal should be respect. This is something to be laughed at in today's world . . , In today's homes parents don't have time to listen to their children's problems. They don't even take time to listen to the good things that might be happening to their children. If a child wants something, the parents buy it to shut him up even if what he has bought is harmful. Today's mother hasn't the time to read her child a story or go for a walk, because she has a bridge date or the golf course will fold up without her presence . . . Society puts so much pressure on the individual to get ahead that a person can't enjoy life. Advertising is continually bombarding the human race with ten easy lessons on how to win friends and influence people. In these ten easy lessons you learn how to hate, cheat, and become dehumanized but you reach the top. There is very little love for our fellow man today . . . People today believe that education is to produce better robots for technology. The status of the teacher is below that of the janitor. He is a well-educated baby sitter . . . We are on the verge of thermonuclear war and the people are worrying about a Negro sitting next to them on the bus . . ."

All efforts under the Student Forum should be typed at 60 spaces, limited for the most part to 300 words maximum, and left in the Collegian office, care of Jim Trelease.

The challenge to voice your opinions has arrived; we hope your concern is as great as your University President's.

—J. T.

In Changing Times

MICHAEL PALTER '63

Of late, there has been much criticism of the United Nations operations in the Congo. The central difficulty revolves around the legality of the Katanga regime, headed by Moise Tshombe. Actually, there should be no conflict of opinion upon this question. Firstly, one must admit that the Central Government has established a continuum of political stability since its establishment. Premiere Adoula, a moderate, and Vice Premiere Gizenga, a leftist, have apparently patched up ideological differences in an attempt to create a truly African government in the Congo.

On the other hand, Tshombe, with the help of white and black mercenaries and soldiers of fortune, has resisted the heretofore rather feeble advances of the United Nations forces. Tshombe cannot be considered to be anything other than a stooge of lingering Belgium imperialism. Indeed, it is no accident that the Belgians have attempted to retain an economic stranglehold around Katanga. It is by far the richest province of the Congo.

It should also be remembered that Tshombe protested against the utilization of black United Nations units in the Congo. Tshombe knows that the winds of change which are sweeping through the black continent are on the side of African Nationalism and self-determination. Those who argue that Katanga Province itself has been denied this self-determination ignore the fact that Tshombe represents economic determination of foreign investors rather than political determination of Africans. Those who defend the regime of Tshombe stand on no valid grounds of international law.

The weekly cost of U.N. operations in the Congo is $10,000,000. France, Belgium, Portugal, and South Africa are withholding funds for these operations, as is the Soviet Union and most of the Arab States. France has great economic interests in Katanga (as does Belgium.) Rather than discussing the economic motivations of Portugal and South Africa, let us merely say that the former is ruled by a fascist who specializes in killing black Angolese with napalm, while the latter is ruled by a racist.

Unfortunately, the United Nations has announced that it has only enough funds available to continue the Congo operations until October 31. Apparently, after this date, the U.N. forces will be forced to withdraw. The Central government, however, will not stand by while Tshombe consolidates his military position within Katanga. Adoula could call in Soviet troops. This move would be perfectly legal. Premiere Adoula will not take this step, however, unless it becomes absolutely necessary. Obviously he cannot overlook the power which Gizenga commands around Stanleyville. Yet, if Adoula is forced to make a choice between a divided Congo and an appeal to the Soviet Union, he will certainly take the latter path.

Adoula, although a moderate, remains a nationalist. He certainly resents imperialism more than he dislikes Lumumbrian Nationalism. He will not remain aloof. He will move against Katanga upon the slightest provocation. If he does this, he will take Katanga.

At First Glance

In our main editorial, we point to a new feature prompted by a letter of concern from President Lederle. This new editorial feature may provide Collegian readers with the most controversial print they have seen in years . . . Mike Palter dips his pen into the black pool of African politics and draws a portrait of the Congo today . . . The recent battle between the Boston Press and UMass for more coverage may not be the only persecution complex in our state's universities. The Harvard Crimson is our source for the story, Poor, Poor Harvard . . . And finally, the philosophy that you can't have love without marriage (or so the song says) is now being replaced with: you can't have advanced studies with marriage. That story is Marriage And Books.

Marriage And Study

There are enough reasons for the supposed lag in American education to fill several volumes of the Encyclopedia Britannica. There is the shortage of teachers, the increasing costs in higher learning, the housing shortage, the classroom shortage, and so on for several hundred lines.

Yesterday, the latest in the growing list of impediments to study arrived direct from the desks and slide rules of the Bureau of Social Research, Inc. Their study, which is the initial portion of an overall report scheduled for 1962, is based on questions answered by 40,000 June, 1958 graduates from 1,200 institutions. The consensus of opinion among these answers is that MARRIAGE is the most serious stumbling block in the completion of graduate study.

According to the survey, the majority of 1958 college graduates were married. Thus, after graduation, family obligations and the fact that there is an abundance of "good jobs" for bachelor's degrees offer a strong deterrent to scholastic improvement. At the end of May, 1960, three-fourths of the 1958 graduates were employed and only 10 per cent of the remaining one-fourth had attained any further degree in education.

Another area spotlighted in the study showed that there is a glaring percentage of teachers who are teaching subjects full time in which they have not majored in college. Only 56 per cent of the men and 39 per cent of the women teaching mathematics have majored in that subject.

The average salary struck by the 1958 graduates proved to be from $5,000 to $6,000. The highest salaries were earned by engineers, physicists, mathematicians, and business executives, all of whom earned in excess of $6,000.

Poor, Poor Harvard

The following is reprinted from the CRIMSON REVIEW of Friday, October 20, 1961. If UMass had not suffered so much and for so long under the strains of the Boston Press, we might join in sympathy with the Johnnies. But as it stands, all we can say is "Tsk! Tsk! Poor, poor Harvard. They never get good publicity in Boston. UMass gets it all."

During the recent Henry Miller trial at Suffolk County Courthouse, the Boston papers came up with some disturbingly incompetent coverage which resulted from sloppiness and practically no concern for the trial. And on a more puerile level, coverage suffered from the ridiculous "get-Harvard-and-all-those-red-intellectuals" prejudice which has periodically spotted the Boston press.

A sophisticated trial involving the important cultural problem of the ethical-esthetical balance between society and the arts, it received no forementioned from the Boston press, and only limited coverage during the proceedings.

To the Boston press, apparently, Harvard and intellectuals were on trial, not the Tropic of Cancer. In an ostensibly proletarian, circulation-conscious fashion, reporters picked away at piddling points that might make Harvard or eggheads look foolish.

On the second day of the trial, for example, the distinction was made between reading by "literary people" and "ordinary people," the former allegedly finding artistic value in the book and the latter not. Because the four-letter words are so undeniably prevalent in the book, the prosecuting attorney probed the relationship between four-letter words and learned people. He asked Professor Bloomfield of Harvard, "Have you ever heard four letter words in the Faculty club?"

"No, I haven't," was the reply, and the next day a long and bold eight-column banner headline in a Boston paper announced, "No Four-Letter Words in Faculty Club, Prof. Says." This was one way of viewing the trial, but certainly not the most honest.

With sideline-coverage of this type, misslanting and emphasizing minor points, the Boston papers—with surprising regularity—offer an unpredictable threat of twist news events and stifling honest communication.

Pan-Hel Chorus To Represent UM As Female Sing Group

THE NEW PAN-HEL CHORUS

The main purpose of the newly formed Panhellenic Chorus is to provide an opportunity for sorority women to represent UMass together through singing.

The slate of officers is as follows: Jean Alden, Business Manager, KKG; Pat Valiton, Personnel, KAT; Betsy Walker, Publicity, LDPhi; Joan Rubenstein, Secretary-Treasurer, Chi O. Other members of the governing board are Linda Gardner, Alpha Chi O; Elaine Chelmyn, KKG; Roberta Scally, Pi Beta Phi; Elaine Carlson, Sigma Kappa; Wendy Green, SDT.

For its first campus appearance, the chorus will sing at the Intersorority Sing on December 3. The group has tentative plans to sing at various men's colleges, and to provide the background music for a performance of "Hansel and Gretel" and "Amahl and the Night Visitors," before the Christmas Recess.

Child's Costume Party Is Planned

There will be a Halloween costume party for faculty children ages three to ten Sunday, October 29.

Prizes will be given for the best costumes. Games will be offered to different age groups, movies will be shown, and trick or treats given.

The time is 2:30-4 p.m. This event is sponsored by the S.U. Special Events Committee each year. It will be held in the large and small ballrooms of the Union.

J. D.'s CORNER

by JUDY DICKSTEIN '63

Ever since the day I first received a letter from someone named Robert Raynes, the mail between Amherst, Mass. and Richmond, Va. has been heavy. I replied, and Mr. Raynes sent me two more letters. He solved the mystery by explaining that he found my name along with a poem of mine that had been published in a Presbyterian book. He invited me to two more Revival meetings and sent me a pamphlet entitled "How to Get Saved" as well as a few other religious tracts; he reminded me that in order to be saved we must give a tenth of our income unto the Holy & True, and he asked me to pray that there may be more Revival meetings. I was further informed that they "preach Spiritual healing and that it is all right to marry if ye are not divorced . . ."

Meanwhile, some boys up the hill were busy. A group of them wrote to Mr. Raynes telling him of their prayer meetings in the old abandoned Pelham schoolhouse and of their efforts to raise funds for a new church. I'm told that they have already received several friendly and inspiring replies. Has anyone else written to Mr. Raynes? Do let me know!

As for the tracts, they were published by two different sources. Christian Service, Richwood, N.J. prints tracts, booklets, and calendars. "Samples free"—if any of you are interested. The other group in the Pilgrim Tract Society, Randleman, N.C. "Tracts free, as the Lord permits. Send postage for over 100 assorted tracts."

Well, how many of you have decided to join the "We Don't Care" Society? Here's big news for you members to ignore, an urgent bulletin just as it came off the UPI teletype machine on 3 October:

(LONDON)—QUEEN ELIZABETH HAS BESTOWED AN EARLDOM ON ANTHONY ARMSTRONG-JONES, COMMONER HUSBAND OF PRINCESS MARGARET.

TONY WILL BE KNOWN AS VISCOUNT LINLEY AND EARL OF SNOWDON.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT CAME TODAY JUST WEEKS BEFORE THE EXPECTED BIRTH OF A FIRST CHILD TO JONES AND HIS ROYAL PRINCESS WIFE.

Try to not care about that!

Recently I got hold of a stack of membership cards to the American Society of Girl Watchers. I'm certain that many of you guys will want one of these, so if you know me, stop and ask for one when you see me around campus. Or you can put a stamped, self-addressed envelope with a note in my box in the Collegian office. It says "J.D." on it, and is, naturally, in the corner.

And for today's "parting shot," let's salute the anonymous genius who came up with this one:

History Club To Organize Thurs. Nite

The History Club will hold an organizational meeting on Thursday, October 26, at 6:30 p.m. in the S.U.

All history and social science majors are invited to attend. Any freshman who is interested is also urged to come.

The purpose of the history club is to develop a personal contact with the professors in the department and with well-known historians in the area.

Other highlights of the program include visits to historical sites in this area, debates between the faculty of the history department, and also coffee hours at professors' homes.

TKE And Theta Chi Victors: Clash For Title Wednesday

By JAY BAKER '63

As the IFC football season is coming to a close, the center of activity is focused on League A.

TKE and TC both with identical 5-0-1 records will clash Wednesday night for the league championship.

TKE Shuts Out ASP

In Monday night's games TKE shut out an amazed Alpha Sig squad 25-0.

In the first quarter, getting off to a quick start, Charley Noble fired to end Joel Lerner for the initial touchdown. The quarterback then threw to Henry Mackie for the extra point.

Mackie Starts

Late in the first half Charley Noble passed to Henry Mackie who lateralled back to halfback Eddie Mintiens who trotted up the side lines for the score. The point after was unsuccessful. On another tally quarterback Noble hit Mackie in the endzone.

The second half was almost played entirely on defense. However Charley Noble did it again as he threw to Henry Mackie in the endzone.

Standouts on defense for TKE were John Crandall, Bob Mulryan, and Don Tabb. The final score was TKE 25 ASP 0.

In another important clash Monday night Theta Chi managed to outlay a determined SPE team 12-0.

TC scored once in each half; the first touchdown was a pass play from Lou Bush to end Brian Saltis, the point after was blocked by Ernie Goff.

In the second half TC started rolling again as Gordie Lewis hit Lou Bush for the tally. The extra point was not made. Defensive honors went to Joe Moro and Neil Harris of Theta Chi and Ernie Goff of Sig Ep. The final score was TC 12 SPE 0.

PSK Downs LCA

In the first late game Monday night Phi Sigma Kappa shut out Lambda Chi 18-0.

It was Neil Cullinan day as he lead the Phi Sig team to all its touchdowns.

In the first half Billy Hogan fired a long pass of forty yards which was nicely hauled in by Neil who then jogged into the endzone. The extra point was not made.

Cullinan Stars

In the second period, Phi Sig was on their own ten with a fourth down situation when Billy Hogan heaved a beauty to Neil Cullinan who made it 12 to 0.

Although PSK dominated the game they were held to six points in the last half. This came about as Neil Cullinan swept around his right end for the tally. Good blocking and fine ball playing can be attributed to Steve Gray and Terry Murphy of PSK and Gige Khouri of LCA. The final score PSK 18 LCA 0.

In the night's final game Alpha Gam managed to pull out its initial victory by defeating PSD 6-0.

AGR's only score came late in the first quarter as John Yablonski intercepted a pass and scooted up the sidelines getting good blocking from Kenny Robbins. The final score AGR 6 PSD 0.

Esquire's CLUB & CAMPUS FASHIONS

BY O. E. SCHOEFFLER, ESQUIRE'S Fashion Director

Correct campus fashion begins with the basic dress suit. The backbone of any undergraduate wardrobe is a minimum of three basic suits. Here, then, are the trio that suit all occasions from every-day-wear to evening dress.

TOWN TWEED... Here's a fresh interpretation of a smart but casual suit that is virtually a campus classic. It's in an olive tweed with a bright Tiger Tone overplaid; a versatile addition to your wardrobe that puts you at ease in town or on campus.

"BLUES MAKE FASHION NEWS"... The wheel of fashion turns back to blue for dress-up wear. Here's a three-piece blue serge suit... sartorially smart, traditionally styled in the natural shoulder silhouette. It's an elegant vested suit featuring a three-button front and notched lapels; in perfect taste for both daytime or dressy evening wear.

NATURAL SHOULDER NEWCOMER... A striking three-piece suit with an olive bronze suede finish. Its vest features matching suit fabric on one side, patterned fabric on the other. It's a smart, rugged, good-looking suit in a traditional styling.

TWO ALTERNATE SUITS always correct for campus wear... One is the classic grey flannel, an old standby, and always dependable for daytime or evening wear. The other alternate is the glenurquhardt plaid. It affords a sprightly change of pace if you are in a position to expand beyond the three suit minimum.

COLLAR POINTERS... Your shirt collar complements your suit. A basic wardrobe of campus dress shirts should include the smart, elegant, crisp looking tab (there are several variations—the British tab, the grip tab with short point, and the snap tab). The oxford button down is still the perennial campus favorite and the short round collar is always neat and correct.

TIE YOUR WARDROBE TOGETHER... your neckwear should coordinate with suit and shirt. ESQUIRE's Fall campus choices are regimental stripes in bright, contrasting and soft mellow colors; the classic repp with a deep olive hue; wool challis in smart "new blue" and olive mixtures and a second challis in geometric tones of tiger and blue—a knit to note is a striking looking model in winter tiger shade.

HEAD AND FOOTNOTES... Your dress hat for Fall is the narrow brim campus classic in bronze brushed felt. This season's model will have a slightly higher center crease crown... In footwear, dark brown cordovans, both plain tip and wing tip, will be the overwhelming campus choices... Ribbed dress socks in colors related to your campus clothes complete the current picture in dressy campus wear.

Best of luck for the Fall semester... see you next month when we'll have a look at what's new and fashionable in campus sportswear.

McGuirk Travels To N.Y.C. As NCAA Representative

Warren P. McGuirk, Dean of the School of Physical Education and Director of Athletics, is one of 18 members of the National Collegiate Athletic Association present at the fall meeting of the Council in New York City.

Mr. McGuirk, vice president for District L (New England), is a member of the NCAA Eligibility Committee and will submit a report of the committee concerning Recruiting and Financial Aids.

The council will focus its attention on the gambling-bribery problems and association recommendations for improvement of the U.S. Olympic organization. One program under study includes a recommended ban on summer basketball competition.

UMass-Northeastern Conflict One Of N.E.'s Top Games Sat.

If both teams follow patterns set in their early games this season, the UMass - Northeastern football game this Saturday at Brookline should be a corker.

In five outings to date, Coach Joe Zabilinski's Huskies have won four out of five games and have averaged 23 points a game while doing so. On the other hand Coach Vic Fusia's Redmen squad has averaged 22 points a game while winning three of its four games. The last three outings between these two squads, however, have been strictly defensive battles with Northeastern prevailing three years ago 12-0; two years ago at the Huskies' field the teams battled to a scoreless tie in the rain; and last fall at Amherst the Redmen managed to squeeze out a 7-0 verdict.

The physical makeup of both squads is quite similar this fall with starting lines averaging about 200 lbs. and the respective quarterbacks, Jerry Varnum for Northeastern and John McCormick for UMass, the boys who have been making their teams go.

Offensively, the Redmen attack has been most effective on the ground this year with halfbacks Sam Lussier, Fred Lewis, and Ken Kezer being the most impressive, but McCormick, who has thrown four scoring passes, has indicated in his sophomore and junior years that when the occasion warrants he is one of the East's top throwers.

Both Zabilinski and Fusia have been extremely happy with the performance of sophomores on their squads who have taken over starting assignments and performed like veterans, and no matter which side of the fence you sit on, the Huskie-Redmen grid clash this weekend has all the earmarks of being one of New England's top attractions this Saturday.

Football Through The Eyes Of Sigmund Freud

How would football have looked to the late Dr. Sigmund Freud? What the father of psychoanalysis might have said is presented in "Freud, Football and the Marching Virgins," a November Reader's Digest article by Thomas Hornsby Ferril, Denver poet-editor-publicist.

"Obviously," he writes, "football is a syndrome of religious rites symbolizing the struggle to preserve the egg of life through the rigors of impending winter. The rites begin at the autumnal equinox and culminate on the first day of the New Year with great festivals identified with bowls of plenty; the festivals are associated with flowers such as roses, fruits such as oranges, farm crops such as cotton, and even sun worship and appeasement of great reptiles such as alligators . . .

"The egg of life is symbolized by what is called 'the oval,' an inflated bladder. The convention is repeated in the architectural oval-shaped design of the last outdoor churches in which the services are held . . . Literally millions attend . . . in anticipation of violent masochism and sadism about to be enacted by a highly trained priesthood of young men . . .

"The ceremony begins with colorful processions of musicians and semi-nude virgins who move in and out of ritualized patterns. This excites the worshippers to rise from their seats, shout frenzied poetry in unison and chant ecstatic anthems."

Foote ECAC Choice Again

Bob Foote was named to the All-East Football Team for the second consecutive week. Last week he recovered a fumble, his fourth in Massachusetts' last three games, and carried it six yards for his first varsity touchdown in a 25-0 rout of Rhode Island.

The weekly team: Ends Mather and Graham B.C. Tackles Assack and Foote. Guards Lasch and Brewster and Center Kroll. Backs Hennessey, Hall, Deegan, and McCarthy.

The Frozen Rope

By DICK MACKLEM '62

The latest National Hockey League standing shows that the feeble Boston Bruins have lost more games than the rest of the NHL combined. How poor a hockey team can get might be proven this year. Many years ago some forgotten entry in the NHL won only four games all season. At the rate the Bruins are going now, they might never win a game.

The offense has done well so far in even getting organized. The conglomeration of fated veterans and untried rookies has averaged about three goals per game. However, the "defense," which has allowed about six goals a game, must be considered one of the weakest in many years in the NHL.

After five losses, the young rookie goalie of the Bruins was shipped back to the minors, and veteran Ed Chadwick, was called up to cure all the ills. However, in the two games he has played so far, Chadwick has allowed fifteen goals, which must be some sort of a record.

Either another drastic revamping of the Bruins' coaching setup or a mass callup from the minors or some quick trading and buying of players is in store. I sincerely believe that the present organization has no hope of getting started, changes must be made, or the respect (and the all-important attendance) of the club will dwindle.

While big time competitive tennis sinks lower and lower in America, golf is swiftly rising; as each year its following grows larger; its tournaments are more attractive; and its performers, both professional and amateur, are more and more in the limelight.

Today interest centers around one Mr. Jack Nicklaus, U.S. Amateur champion, America's Cup star of last week, and Ohio State University student. His great desire is to win the Masters as an amateur, a feat never accomplished, and then to someday try for the Grand Slam, accomplished only by the incomparable Bobby Jones.

Staring Jack in the face, however, is an offer for an income of over $100,000.00 a year if he turns professional now; with a contract which includes a cross-country exhibition vs. Arnie Palmer, recognized as this generation's best.

As opposed to the bickering in tennis, very few really care if Nicklaus turns professional or not, because golf gives its performance a chance to shine whatever their choice might be. The best of luck to the OSU senior, whose name we should learn; because he will be before us for many years to come.

This weekend is by far the slowest for college football in New England in many years. B.C. is idle, B.U. plays George Washington, UConn plays Buffalo, and our future YanCon opponents, Maine and UNH, play Bates and King's Point, respectively.

In the really big contest, the Holy Cross Crusaders tangle with Syracuse, annually the top team of the East. The Crusaders are strong, don't underestimate them, but Syracuse has a little too much every year for the New England teams. However, this year's Crusaders are proud, and it should be quite a game.

Did you go to UConn? Did you see the Homecoming Game? Are you going to be at Northeastern on Saturday? I hope you are, because one of New England's finest football teams, Vic Fusia's Redmen, will be there. It is a good feeling to stand behind these boys each week, as UMass football matures before you. Be there do to your share to keep the balloons going up. I promise you won't be disappointed.

The Celtics started off the season in grand style by driving the Detroit Pistons into the ground, in a game which they led at one time by over forty points. The Green's newcomers, Gary Phillips, Al Butler, and Carl Braun, all looked impressive as the Celts romped home in their only game so far.

Meanwhile, Wilt Chamberlain scored 158 points for the Philadelphia Warriors in three games, an average of 53 per game; but did the Warriors win all three? Of course not! A one-man team cannot win in the NBA; thus the Warriors, no matter how hard Gola and Arizin try to keep them together, will probably finish a distant second again this year.

The St. Louis Hawks received bad news yesterday when the sensation of their training camp, rookie Ron Horn of Indiana, broke his hand when a car door slammed on it. He will be out for three or four weeks. The Hawks are still trying to fill the same guard position which has plagued them for years. The strong front line of Petit, Lovelette, Hagen, and Sauldsberry is terrific; but outside of playmaker Johnny McCarthy, who scores about five points a game, the back court is weak. Lenny Wilkins was great last year, but young Len is not with the team right now, we know not why. Until this position is filled adequately, the Hawks must be considered weaker than last year.

Wm. Herbert To Talk At Ed. Club Meeting

On Wednesday, October 25, at 7:30 p.m., the Education Club will hold its first monthly meeting of this year, with President Gail McKrensky presiding.

WILLIAM H. HERBERT

William H. Hebert, Executive Assistant of the Massachusetts Teachers Association, will be the guest speaker for the evening with a topic concerning the Profession of Teaching.

Doris Hollis, President of the Student Teachers Education Association of Massachusetts, will report on her experiences at the Student NEA Conference at Penn State, and the NEA Convention in Atlantic City, New Jersey. Miss Hollis represented STEAM and UMass at both of these during the past summer.

Gail McKrensky will describe her week-end at Peterborough, New Hampshire, October 13-15, where she attended an education conference with several other states' representatives.

All students interested in education are invited to attend.

Sun Destined To Expand, Destroy Earth

The sun has been described as a hydrogen bomb of cosmic proportions. Like a hydrogen bomb, it produces energy by changing its hydrogen into helium. Every second, the sun fuses 600 million tons of hydrogen into 596 million tons of helium — the 4 million tons that are lost are converted into light and heat.

This has been going on for 6 billion years. The sun is middle-aged; in another 6 billion years, bang! The sun will expand to 30 times its present size. Our Earth will be scorched, our oceans will boil away into clouds. The oceans will rain down and the Earth will become freezingly cold.

Possibly, Man will move to other planets in time, or even evolve into a new form of life that will survive. Nonetheless, earthling, you have been warned!

Rec Leadership Dept. To Hold Conference

The Department of Recreation Leadership of UMass, in conjunction with the National Industrial Recreation Association, Chicago, Illinois, will sponsor the National Industrial Recreation Conference in the S.U. on October 30 and 31.

The conference, consisting of Region One delegates, will be represented by industrial recreators from the five New England States, New York, and Pennsylvania. This is the second time in the history of the NIRA that an industrial recreation conference has been held on a University campus with an academic department cooperating.

The impact of organized recreation in industrial settings is of prime concern to management today. It is considered one of the major factors in the elimination of absenteeism, and in employee recruitment and retention. Additionally, leisure interests and planned recreation programs and facilities play prime roles in the industrial site selection by industrial planners.

Keynoting the conferences will be the Honorable Kevin H. White, Secretary of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, who will address the delegates on "The Economic Importance of Planned Leisure for Industries in the Sixties."

Feature presentations will include "Layout and Design of Recreation Facilities in the Industrial Community" by F. Ellwood Allen, head of Allen Recreation Planners and Associates, Bennington, Vermont. Allen, author, lecturer, and internationally famed authority on the planning and development of recreation areas is a UMass graduate in landscape architecture.

General sessions also include "Employee Family Camping" which has taken a rapid rise upward in recent years. "Recreation Interests Surveys" will deal with the surveying, methods, and materials of in-plant interests and how these interests might be incorporated in the program. Another feature will include, "International Travel Programs"—one of the successful programs serving many of the New England industries.

While the conference will concern itself with problems related to the industrial seeting, invitations are being extended to superintendents and directors of recreation in municipalities, hospitals, military, service agencies and the like through New England.

Girl Watcher's Guide

Presented by Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes

Bare-Backed Beachbomb

LESSON 2 - What about standards?

Advanced students of girl watching never waste eyeball effort watching girls who are not beautiful. Standards must be kept high.

But how do we judge whether a girl is worth watching? Although many strict academicians will shudder at our aesthetics, we must insist that a girl is beautiful if she is beautiful to you. (That's the beauty of girl watching. Every girl is beautiful to someone!) For example, many observers have pointed out that the Bare-Backed Beachbomb (see above) has a weak chin.

Yet none of these keen-eyed experts would deny that she is indeed an attractive specimen. And, speaking of standards, don't forget to keep your smoking standards high. Smoke Pall Mall!

FSU Adopts More Liberal View on Cuts

A more liberal policy on absences from classes before and after holidays has been adopted by the Council of Deans at Florida State University. Students who plan to be absent more than one day at vacations will no longer need permission from their dean.

Absences before and after holidays will be treated just as any other absence, Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby announced. He pointed out the policy change actually puts dealing with absences back into the hands of the professors involved.

Musical Tone System Initiated by Waring

by PAT STEC '63

FRED WARING'S "GLEE CLUB GIRLS"

Seven performances at the White House before such notable guests as Premiere Khrushchev, Queen Elizabeth and the King of Siam are only a few of the many accomplishments of Fred Waring, conductor of the "Pennsylvanians".

Born in Pennsylvania Waring proudly states that he was one of the first Club Scouts in the United States. He was too young to join the Boy Scouts. Therefore he became an honorary scout in 1912. He has since been on the National Council of Boy Scouts for twenty years.

Known as Eisenhower's "favorite musician", Waring is the father of five children, one of which sang in the chorus before her marriage. Another, Fred, is majoring in music at Indiana University and a third is attending Cornell University.

Waring attended Pennsylvania State University where he organized his band and played for fraternity parties. He got his "big break" in 1921 when he filled in for a big name band at the University of Michigan, stole the show, and received many offers and bookings.

When asked how he managed to outlast the fads, the conductor stated, "We went along with all the fads. We were a fad and we went along with it. We want everyone to enjoy what they want. There is a smattering of everything for everyone."

Among other accomplishments waring introduced the phonetic system, known also as the tone system in which all the letters in a word are pronounced heavily. He established a summer musical workshop organized for music teachers. Over 15,000 teachers have been taught such things as technical techniques of chorus singing, programming, microphoning and lighting.

When asked if he ever got tired of doing so many tours and one-night stands, Waring laughed and said, "It's funny. Only young people ask us that." Then he proceeded to give his recipe for success. "Work, and work is

Red Cross Says UM Second In Student Blood Donations

The University of Massachusetts is second only to Harvard University in the number of pints of blood donated according to figures released by the American Red Cross. MIT is third in number of pints of blood donated.

However, the figures are misleading. The Red Cross bloodmobile makes 10 visits to the Cambridge institution while at UMass the bloodmobile makes only four visits. Harvard averages about 201 pints per visit and UMass averages approximately 165 pints per visit.

Harvard Donates Less Per Visit

Harvard also has an enrollment of about twice that of UMass. Thus a half of the total donated by Harvard is over 50 pints less than that donated by UMass per visit.

The Campus Religious Council urges all those who wish to donate blood to return their completed donor cards today so that the Faculty Women might send home letters for parental permission of those under 21-years-of-age.

The bloodmobile will be at Arnold House November 16 and 17.

Frost Is Warmly Welcomed On Return Visit to Campus

by ANN MILLER '64

"I always come back with something and want to tell it", began Robert Frost Wednesday night in a public lecture in the S.U. ballroom. Frost first spoke on this campus in 1917 and has appeared here several times since.

Ballroom Begins to Fill at 5 p.m.

The program was scheduled for 8 p.m. People were sitting in the ballroom at 5:30; at 7 the ballroom was filled and the only available seats were in the Commonwealth Room; by 7:30 arrivals were standing and the ballroom doors were closed. Frost was given a standing ovation when he entered.

Frost began enthusiastically "I'd like to think that all over the educational world everyone has something he's dying to tell you".

Frost's program, a reading of his poems with commentary, was informally presented and received with laughter by an audience that seemed to be put at immediate ease by the poet's humorous remarks.

Russians Know

A thought on the American nation, he continued, "Maybe we don't know how good we are, but I'll tell you who does know, the Russians."

He began reading with "October", "The Walk", and "America's Hard to See". After he read "Dogstar", written in rhyming couplets, he remarked "You don't know me if you don't know how interested I am in couplets . . . That's the way the world goes round—by coupling."

When he finished this famous "Stopping by Woods On a Snowy Evening"—"You know, I have a friend who's told everyone what this poem means—told me too."

First Alumni Lecturer

Frost was the first speaker in this year's series of Alumni War Memorial Lectures, presented by the Associate Alumni of the University.

The program was transmitted through WMUA to the four college radio station WFCR, to WGBH in Boston, and broadcast between 8 p.m. and 9 p.m. over the Educational Radio Network from Boston to Washington, D.C.

Dr. Salwak To Keynote Ed. Parley

Dr. Stanley F. Salwak, on leave of absence from the provost's office at the University of Massachusetts, and currently associate director of the Committee on Institutional Cooperation of the Big Ten Universities and the University of Chicago, will give the keynote address on Sunday, Nov. 5, at the National Conference on General Education, to be held at Michigan State University. His topic will be "Dimensions of the problem: what's ahead in the '60s." The complete conference dates are Nov. 3 to 5. The goal of the Committee on Institutional Cooperation, which represents the University of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa (SUI), Michigan, Michigan State, Minnesota, Northwestern, Ohio State, Purdue and Wisconsin, as well as Chicago, is to improve educational and public services while minimizing costs by: (1) encouraging cooperative efforts among the 11 institutions, (2) identifying specialized areas of teaching and research in which cooperative arrangements may be desirable and, (3) initiating and research, particularly in graduate areas, among the institutions.

Hort Show Will Be Held This Weekend

The annual Horticultural Show will be held this weekend, Oct. 27-29, in the Cage. This year's theme is "Carnival of Flowers."

There are five classes in the competition: formal, informal, natural, educational, architectural and/or modern. Over $400 in cash prizes will be given to the winning students. A $50 sweepstakes award from the Massachusetts Nurserymens' Association is included in the prize money which comes from the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture.

The show is open to the public from 2 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Friday, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Saturday, and from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Sunday.

Rejection of Medical School Recommended by Legislature

Rejection of plans to build a state medical school at this time because of the high cost involved was recommended recently at a State House hearing by the Massachusetts Taxpayers Federation.

Leo D. Bouthillier, legislative counsel for the Federation, told a recess commission studying the question that his group is not opposed to the principle of establishing a fourth medical school in the state but that there are no funds for such a project.

Make Impression

He estimated that the construction of such a school would cost upwards of $30,000,000 and, which later witnesses doubted the accuracy of the estimate, the high figure made a visible impression on commission members.

Bouthillier actually listed six reasons why his group opposes the medical school plan, including the one about the high cost which he said could not be financed out of existing revenues.

The other five points he gave were:

1—The existing public education facilities in the state are all competing for additional funds and their demands should be considered first.

2—The possibility that the 1962 Congress will reverse the action of the 1961 session and pass President Kennedy's federal aid to medical education bill, which would decrease the state's costs.

3—There may not be enough Massachusetts college graduates seeking admission to medical school to require the new facility.

Figure Challenged

4—The problems of recruiting teaching personnel are very large. He noted that present state schools are having a difficult time with this problem.

5—The question of whether or not to build a medical school should be coordinated with the solution to problems in the areas of education as a whole, mental and public health.

Bouthillier's $30,000,000 estimate was challenged first by Rep. Philip K. Kimball (R-Springfield), a commission member who said that earlier study had indicated that a medical school could be built as part of a municipal hospital at a cost of $3,500,000.

Dr. Alfred L. Frechette, Commr. of Public Health, said that one could obtain estimates ranging from $2,000,000 to $90,000,000 and implied that the Federation's figures may include the cost of building a hospital as part of the medical school center.

The support of labor unions for the project was voiced by James A. Broyer, spokesman for the State AFL-CIO, was suggested that bond issues could be floated to finance the proposed school.

John L. Quigley, commandant of the Chelsea Soldiers' Home, said there was a need for an additional medical school and proposed that it be located in the Springfield-Holyoke or the Worcester area.

The state's present three medical schools—Harvard, Tufts and Boston University — are all in Boston.

Universitile Peace

One can almost feel it now. In September there was an odor to this campus which we could almost smell. Within a few weeks we actually could smell it. And today, the aroma is strong enough to almost hold in the palm of our hand.

Pervading this campus, this evergreen seat of learning, is an aura of peace. As never before, the University, its faculty, administration, and Student Body are at peace with each other. The strife, dissention and frustration which have characteried our existence in previous years now have given rise to trust.

A few weeks ago, the Board of Trustees met with student leaders in an effort to become more familiar with the activity problems of their University. The concern and interest shown by these individuals further closed the gap between student and administration. Seeing that the students were greatly concerned with the lack of UMass coverage in the Boston press, several members of the Trustees went out of their way to speak to members of the Boston press to ensure that such concern by the Student Body was not in vain.

His creation of the Dean of Students position and his outspoken defense of the present tuition status served greatly to bring the students and faculty toward a closer understanding and appreciation of this man we call our President—John W. Lederle. When the truth is released finally on how hard this individual has fought for us in Massachusetts and, especially, on Beacon Hill, there will be an ever keener friendship and respect between the President and his faculty and students.

Much also can be said for this freshman administrator—Dr. William Field, Dean of Students. Perhaps one of our most accessable campus heads, Dr. Field is seen daily anywhere from conferring in his office with students and faculty, to speaking at a faculty or student luncheon, rooting for UMass at a cold UConn game, or holding an open-end discussion with passers-by in the Hatch.

Half-way across the campus, there is a gentleman who said last May, "Football will be that unifying force between students, faculty, and alumni. The gridiron is not tradition but it serves as the catalyst for the birth of tradition. "Today, six months later, figures have been released to back up Vic Fusia's aspirations. Last weekend, two-thirds of the Student Body (68.1 per cent) turned out for the UMass-Rhode Island game. The previous week against a favored Villanova, well over half of the Student Body (56.5 per cent) poured through the gates at Alumni Field. In comparison to past performances, this is an outstanding change in attendance.

While there are still private differences among members of the administration, or among faculty members, or among student leaders, there is an overall peace here. The separate peace within the administration or faculty or Student Body may never come but the Universitile peace now is here. After looking at the Universities of Connecticut and Rhode Island, we might say that we are indeed fortunate . . . very fortunate.

CONSIDER THE SMILE AMERICAN GOTHIC PART TWO

Consider the smile: odious. Symbol of insanity—the smile; symbol of hypocrisy—the smile; mask—the smile; subterfuge—the smile; deception—the smile; secret—the smile; cloak—the smile; American—the smile (but a big one here with white teeth and 'laughing eyes' and head thrown back in a paroxysm of glee).

Lawrence Durrell compares human emotions to a great organ with stops marked "Mother", "Love", "The Flag," etc. If one finds himself confronted by a certain situation all he need do is yank out the right stop and the emotion gushes forth—either a mad frenzy of philoprogenitiveness or buckets and buckets (if that is how one measures it) of Love. So it is with smiling: one person approaches another on the street and immediately the stops are pulled out; the muscles tighten, and the smiles spread across each mouth like two heavily afflicted sucking disks. Then, the persons pass, the smiles disappear, and the anxiety and guilt of disatisfaction gnaws once again in each respective bosom.

What is more false or unreal than a mask? And what is more like a mask than a woman's face? How many times a day must one endure the ordeal of a woman's smile? One could easily say it is obscene: the only erogenous zone on a woman's face is framed with red paste and highlighted by white powder, the eyes are framed with multicolored hues—each color to suggest a nuance of delight—"sparkling" or "euphorious" or merely "happy". And the whole joyful visage comes rushing at you, each line and wrinkle, accented by color and paste, turns upward so that not only the erogenous zone is smiling at you, but also the nose (the "pert, happy nose" referred to in the women's magazines—I could mention the First Lady also, but won't) and eyes and ears and hair are grinning wildly at you! (This brings to mind a Milk of Magnesia advertisement in which the patient, who has just been relieved of ". . . all 5 acid caused stomach troubles—upset stomach, heartburn, gaspains, nervous stomach, acid indigestion"—is charging blindly smiling off the page in a panicked spasm of glee.) So what do you do when this mobile grin comes at you?

You smile back. It must be done.

The male smile is reticent, almost apologetic, chiefly because most males don't want to be caught smiling. Yet, there is a confusion which arises in the male mind, for if they aren't smiling it will mean they have something on their mind and God forbid that they should convey an impression of thinking or thoughtfulness. The male smile, therefore, is either bisected by a cigarette so that the smile becomes a grimace (refer to the Chesterfield ad: the cigarette is ". . . THE SATISFIER. You won't be fully satisfied unless you do" smoke a Chesterfield. Or the Salem ad which states that smoking a Salem gives a "lift to your spirets"—so necessary in this Thermonuclear Age). The male cigarette-grimace is hardly distinguishable from leer or frown or anything else, so the male's friends will not know whether he is smiling or not, but they won't know whether he is thinking either. The inarticulate male must be SAFE above all else. The cigarette provides the needed safety. Also the male almost apologises when he smiles—he nods and bows if there is no cigarette around. The woman, on the other hand, has (of necessity) conquered all the guilt and has no qualms about turning on the fifty-watt grin of a toothpaste ad. The toothpaste manufacturers make the smile their business and are no longer enterested in gum lesions, cavities, or craters. With names like "Gleem", "Teem", "Freem" one is forced to emit an artificial smile at the drug counter. (a toothpaste ad in LIFE proclaims that the product will ". . . keep your smile brighter!").

THE SMILING CULTURE

William Dean Howells states correctly that America is a "smiling culture". We block out tragedy to the point that we lose our sense of tragedy. Smiling is fun. And it's harmless. And sometimes it's easy. We can never escape the smile in America. Most commercials and ads are based on some-one smiling, because if you're not smiling then you're not having a good time. And you have to have a good time—even if your mouth falls off from Strontium 90! The emphasis is on BIG SMIES, BIG GRINS; smiles as gargantuan as Kanchenjunga and twice as frightening. The mass media is constantly smiling at us, grinning at us, leering at us. It's no wonder we are driven to smile at each other—yet, we could rebel and stare morosely back. But no-one does.

CHARM magazine had an article on smiles not too long ago. In it was pointed out the Roosevelt smile, the Mona-Lisa smile, the Betty Grable smile, the Jolson smile, the Dietrich smile, and others. In the following quote we will be able to see why women are more professional as smilers: ". . . people in the public eye have never underestimated the power of a smile; it's odd that YOU have so often overlooked it . . . Though smiling is nicer as a spontaneous thing, you might, just in the nature of an experiment, start smiling as CONSCIOUS thing. Smile at your family . . . your husband . . . your employer . . . your young man. Smile deliberately at some point in an argument." Can you picture yourself in the middle of a heated argument, losing, then after a pause grinning at your opponent? Can you think of a faster way of getting a broken jaw (a non-smiling one)? The article further suggests that it is often helpful, when alone in the privacy of your room, to ". . . smile a while in front of your mirror." I imagine if you are intruded upon by your husband or some-one the thing to do would be to turn away from smiling at yourself in the mirror and then titter and leer at the intruder, for in America the smile conquers all . . . "never underestimate the power of a smile," the article goes on to say.

It is tragic that in this age of confusion we should confuse ourselves (and others) by wearing masks . . . smiles, especially when there is no need for such deception. If you're guilt-ridden, say so; if you're frustrated, shriek; if you're sick-of-it-all, then scream and get it over with, but for crying out loud, don't feel obliged to smile! It is an obligation that could transform you into a twitching nerve, involute you to a strand of protoplasm.

To climb back upon the ads again: "SEE . . . WHAT HAPPENS? See how that wide, wonderful smile goes from here . . . all the way over to here? How eyes light up?" The ad goes on to say that "this is the look of a Doctor Pepper drinker". It is more than that . . . it is the look of a sick, sick, sick American.

Consider the smile once again.

Dr. Steinberg to Talk on Crucial Issues of the Nuclear Arms Race

Speaking on "Nuclear Weapons and Civil Defense" next Tuesday, Dr. Melvin Steinberg, professor of physics, will be addressing the four college community on one of the most immediate subjects of our time. The talk, sponsored by Synthesis, will start at 8 p.m. Oct. 31, in the S.U. Ballroom.

Dr. Steinberg will discuss the political and moral issues involved in the nuclear race, as well as its scientific aspects. He plans to suggest possible ways out of the dilemma. Two discussion periods during the program will provide the audience with an opportunity to raise questions and exchange views with the speaker.

Beginning with a discussion of the various kinds of nuclear weapons and the stages of their development—from the atomic and hydrogen bombs to the neutron and satellite bombs which are on the drawing board, Dr. Steinberg will also examine the origin and nature of fallout. He said he will pay special attention to the physical principles upon which the weapons operate.

The University physics professor is protesting the present series of nuclear testing conducted by the Soviet Union. Fallout has been intentionally generated by the designers of the bomb because of its genicidal potentialities, he said.

After a brief question and answer period on the technical aspects of nuclear weapons, the speaker will take up the possibilities of civil defense as proposed by our government. Incluuded will be a critique of the information policy of the United States and Russia and a consideration of the political and moral alternatives raised by the arms race.

The speaker has studied nuclear weapons and development, fallout research, and the political efforts to bring nuclear armaments under control for the past 7 years. In 1955 the speaker presented a paper, sponsored by Albert Einstein, at the American Physical Society; the paper made the first public estimate of the world-wide radiation exposure due to the 1954 series of tests. Before coming to UMass in 1959, Dr. Steinberg was on the faculty of Stevens Institute of Technology and a speaker for Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy. He received his Ph.D. in theoertical physics from Yale in 1955.

The members of Synthesis, motivated by a deep concern with current world developments, urge students and faculty to attend the talk and participate activeiy in the discussions.

Lester Neil Receives Award For Writing

Lester Neil, a 20-year-old UMass junior from Sutton has won an award from Atlantic Monthly magazine for his story, "Sometimes at Night."

The prize, consisting of $160 in reference books, novels, and a bookcase, is the second writing award Neil has won.

His first story was written in competition with students from Smith, Mount Holyoke, Amherst, and UMass. The story, "Little Annie Laurie," is about a misunderstood mentally ill woman in an institution. It won him H. L. Mencken's "New Dictionary of Quotations on Historical Principles."

Neil worked as an attendant at Northampton State Hospital last summer. There he got the ideas and material for his stories.

He says that books and good music have been great determining factors in his life. He enjoys philosophy and reads it extensively.

Neil says he would like to contribute further to the world of fiction, but realizes that competition in this field is strict.

As for his future plans, Neil has not definitely made up his mind on which he should take. He would like to work for his master's degree in English at Columbia, and from there, would either like to do missionary work or go on to Andover Newton Theological Seminary for his doctorate.

ASSOCIATE ALUMNI MESSAGE

The Associate Alumni wishes to express its sincere gratitude to all of the students and organizations who contributed so much of their time in making this year's Homecoming the success that it was.

Smith Heads Group Going To Ohio Conf.

Reports on recent research conducted by UMass geologists will be presented at the forthcoming conference of the Geological Society of America, to be held in Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 2-4.

Some 3,000 scientists from colleges and universities in this and other countries are expected at the conference where about 150 reports on recent in geology will be presented. Leading UMass delegation will be Dr. H. T. U. Smith, head of the department of geology.

Three members of the University faculty will be among the scientists invited to present papers at the conference: Dr. Oswald C. Farquhar, professor of geology, who will speak on "Tectonic and nontectonic structures in the Triassic Chicopee shale, Massachusetts"; Dr. Ward S. Motts, associate professor of geology, whose topic will be "Correlation of Upper Permain shelf rocks in parts of New Mexico, Texas, and Oklahoma"; and Dr. Gregory Webb, assistant professor of geology, who will discuss "Strike-slip faults in southern New Brunswick, Canada."

THE DATING SEASON

I have recently returned from a tour of 950,000 American colleges where I made a survey of undergraduate dating customs and sold mechanical dogs, and I have tabulated my findings and I am now prepared to tell you the simple secret of successful dating.

The simple secret is simply this: a date is successful when the man knows how to treat the girl.

And how does a girl like to be treated? If you want to know, read and remember these four cardinal rules of dating:

1. A girl likes to be treated with respect.

When you call for your girl, do not drive up in front of the sorority house and yell, "Hey, fat lady!" Get out of your car. Walk respectfully to the door. Knock respectfully. When your girl comes out, tug your forelock and say respectfully, "Good evening, your honor." Then offer her a Marlboro, for what greater respect can you show your girl than to offer Marlboro with its fine flavor and exclusive selectrate filter? It will indicate immediately that you respect her taste, respect her discernment, respect her intelligence. So, good buddies, before going out on a date, always remember to buy some Marlboros, available in soft pack or flip-top box in all 50 of the United States and also Cleveland.

A girl likes to be taken to nice places

2. A girl likes a good listener.

Do not monopolize the conversation. Let her talk while you listen attentively. Make sure, however, that she is not herself a good listener. I recollect a date I had once with a coed named Greensleeves Sigafoos, a lovely girl, but unfortunately a listener, not a talker. I too was a listener so we just sat all night long, each with his hand cupped over his ear, straining to catch a word, not talking hour after hour until finally a policeman came by and arrested us both for vagrancy. I did a year and a day. She got by with a suspended sentence because she was the sole support of her aged housemother.

3. A girl likes to be taken to nice places.

By "nice" places I do not mean expensive places. A girl does not demand luxury. All she asks is a place that is pleasant and gracious. The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, for example. Or Mount Rushmore. Or the Taj Mahal. Or the Bureau of Weights and Measures. Find places like these to take your girl. In no circumstances must you take her to an oil-cracking plant.

4. A girl likes a man to be well-informed.

Come prepared with a few interesting facts that you can drop casually into the conversation. Like this: "Did you know, Snookiepuss, that when cattle, sheep, camels, goats, antelopes, and other members of the cud-chewing family get up, they always get up hind legs first?" Or this: "Are you aware, Hotlips, that corn grows faster at night?" Or this: "By the way, Loverhead, Oslo did not become the capital of Norway till July 11, 1924."

If you can slip enough of these nuggets into the conversation before dinner, your date will grow too torpid to eat. Some men save up to a half million dollars a year this way.

Chadbournites Acquire Mom Plus Fan In Mrs. Cowles

by STEVE LEVINE '65

This year, Mrs. Luella K. Cowles started her first career by taking the position of housemother of Chadbourne Dormitory.

However, campus life is nothing new to Mrs. Cowles who has spent much of her life near colleges. Living near colleges, Mrs. Cowles has developed a familiarity and liking for college students and campus activities. She is especially fond of college sports and is an ardent follower of Chadbourne's intramural football team.

Mrs. Cowles attended Carleton College in Northfield, Minnesota, and the University of Minnesota.

Born in Iowa, she has spent most of her life in Minnesota and New Hampshire.

Last winter Mrs. Cowles took a five month trip to Europe and the Mediterranean. Mrs. Cowles visited Paris, Rome, and the most exotic places of the Mediterranean world. The high point of her trip was a visit to Jerusalem where she attended the Christmas services and celebration. After returning from her trip abroad, she was informed by a daughter who lives in Amherst of the possibility of obtaining her position at UMass.

Mrs. Cowles' enthusiasm for travel and athletics reflects her ability to enjoy life. Such a person can well be expected to make a dorm as much of a home as possible.

3 Judges Chosen To Review Annual Horticulture Show

Judges for the annual horticultural show at the U of M Oct. 27, 28 and 29 will be Edmund V. Mezitt, Hopkinton, vice-president of the Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association; Per Nylen, landscape architect of Northampton; and Miss Jane Cameron, a landscape architect of South Deerfield.

University students will compete for cash prizes totalling over $400, according to Prof. Raymond H. Otto, head of the department of landscape architecture and chairman of student exhibits. Prize money comes from the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture and includes a $50 sweepstakes award from the Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association.

Smart Bridge Notes

Thursday, October 26, there was a meeting of the bridge club at 6:30 followed by the regular game at approximately 7:00. Election of officers was held and determination of policies considered. Anyone interested in campus bridge was invited to submit ideas, but voting was restricted to those who had attended and played at three duplicate games during the current or the next preceding semester.

There were five tables Thursday, October 19, 1961, and a Howell Game (only one top) was played. The results were (excluding visitors)

Masow and Lidman	49½
Shea and Brooks	44
O'Sullivan and Cantin	37
Burnham and Tibbetts	36
Dubis and Fitzgerald	33

Here is one of the hands:

Neither vulnerable and West is the dealer. It was played for 4 spades and 5 spades but only once for 6 spades and seven spades was made three times.

How would you bid it? Many a makeable slam is not biddable. Is this one of them?

			Pass (a)
Pass	1S (b)	2D (c)	2H (d)
Pass	4C (e)	Dbl (f)	4H (g)
Pass	6S (h)	Pass	Pass

(a) West is opener with a minimum opening count but he has no good rebid and if he has faith in his partner he should pass and see what happens. Some would bid 1C because he has an escape should partner say 1D.

(b) A preemptive bid would be most wrong, the hand is too strong (11 high card points).

(c) South could double (or bid the unusual no trump), but 2D runs interference, calls for a lead and gives partner a truer picture of the hand.

(d) Here is the key bid. Remember he has passed originally. If he says 2S he is showing weakness; 3S is strong but urges game only and warns partner. 2H will force partner and show a very strong pass, heart strength and protects partner's 4th hand possibly weak opening. He knows he can show his spades the next time. It is also a free bid.

(e) Now it is urged to examine slam possibilities and I would ask for aces with the 4C convention.

(f) This is an opportunity many casual players miss, this does not give opponent valuable information and does give partner another good lead.

(g) Not a heart preference but shows one ace.

(h) Of course! True 7S is a fifty-fifty but I have heard it said that it is better to be slow and awfully sure before you bid grand slams and there is an ace missing.

E-W vulnerable, North the dealer, how would you bid this hand? As it was played 4 hearts and 4 clubs went down 3 and 2 N.T. and 3 Diamonds went down 2.

2C (c)	Pass (d	Pass (e)	Pass

Your commentator has played bridge twice as many years as most of his readers are old but yet he does not know the answers. There are as many varients as there are acceptable systems of communications (and of course there are many unorthodox and unethical private methods,)

(a) South has a count for 1 NT BUT note the worthless doubleton, I'd bid a club and see what happens.

(b) W has an opening "must-bid" count but no good suit of rebid so he doubles to see what partner has.

(c) N hasn't enough to redouble, he has count to bid a new suit but doesn't have a suit. He does have club support so he bids 2C and throws an interference. He has a choice to show count and deceive partner on his suit holding or underbid and be conservative. Agressive bidding wins but look at his hand offside a double?? All systems are to help and take care of the meek and mild but there is no rule against using your head.

(d) Yes East has 6 hearts but to put in a "free-bid" requires some high card strength. He should pass.

South had just an opening and has been twice warned so he passes. Now if South had opened with his 16 point count with 1NT I'd certainly overcall the double with 2NT and it goes down as it should. If he plays it correctly he loses 1C, 1S, 1H and 2D and makes the bid.

S.U. Exhibition Will Feature Checker And Chess Champ

A simultaneous checker and chess exhibition will be given by Tom Wiswell, free-style checker champion, Tuesday, Nov. 7, from 7 to 8 p.m. in the S.U. Ballroom. All interested persons are invited to play or watch. Wiswell will play up to 50 opponents at one time.

In 1951 Wiswell won the free-style checker championship for the first time. Since then he has kept his title by beating a number of veteran players in the game. In 1953 he defeated crown challenger Millard Hopper of Brooklyn.

His most recent victory over Prof. W. R. Fraser of Montreal was the most difficult to win. The contest began at Glasgow, Ky. Dec. 21, 1959, and continued until the early hours of Jan. 1, 1961. There were 17 draw games during this period, but Wiswell emerged the winner with the score 7-0.

Wiswell, or "Mr. Checkers" as he is often known, is also the author of several books on chess which have become a success on the market.

Queen Jan Has 'Busy But Great' Weekend

Friday night was the beginning of the Homecoming Queen's big weekend. To Jan Wehman, this year's queen, the Float Parade was a lot of fun and an experience well worth remembering. This is the first time in several years that the queen candidates dressed as they did, in cocktail dresses, for the event. The crowd certainly had no trouble in distinguishing them!

Jan made the dress which she wore for her crowning at the Rally. Her lovely dress consisted of a green and white print silk top with spaghetti straps. It also had a scoop neck. The skirt was made of white silk organza. Her shoes were dyed to match the green in the bodice.

After the really exciting Rally, Jan went to an SAE gathering.

On Saturday morning Jan presented a trophy to the winner of the Intramural Track Meet. Thus she began her reign.

Meanwhile Jan's parents and her brother arrived on campus to surprise her. During the process of looking for them, Jan went over to the Cage where she received tickets for her parents to sit on the 50 yard line next to President Lederle. Unfortunately she could not find them before the game and they watched it from one of the end zones.

At the half time proceedings, President Lederle presented Jan with a silver goblet which in her words is "very beautiful."

After the game Jan finally found her parents and went out to dinner with them.

On Saturday night Jan went to the Homecoming Dance with her date. Here they were presented and started the dancing after intermission. After the dance Jan went to a party to "complete a really wonderful day."

"I was surprised to see the event so widely publicized" was Jan's reaction to having her picture in so many newspapers, even as far as Boston.

One more thrilling aspect of the weekend to Jan was the messages which she received. Among them was a letter from the Alumni Association, a note from the new fraternity Zeta Nu, and a telegram from Chi Omega.

All in all, Jan was really kept in a whirl.

Scrolls Have Many Duties

During the past seven weeks the Scrolls have accomplished many projects of their own and assisted other organizations. The girls arrived on campus September 10, and spent the first week helping the freshmen orient themselves.

The Scrolls cooperate with the other honor societies to plan the football rallies. They make and distribute posters, help the parades run smoothly, and create spirit.

Every Saturday morning in October is High School Day. The Scrolls are on hand at the lobby counter of the S.U. to give directions and answers to high schoolers and their parents.

The girls officiated at the dorm and sophomore Executive Council elections in the dorms.

Future plans include a Commuter's Tea for all freshmen women commuters and a Big-Little Sister Day.

Although the Scrolls activities may be numerous, they are not considered chores, they're fun!

UMass Student Relates First Impressions Of Florida State

An article was recently published reporting the impressions that the Florida State exchange students have formed of this campus. A recent letter from Robin O'Brien, one of the girls from U. Mass. who is studying at Florida State, turns the tables as she tells of the impressions she has formed of Florida State.

The exchange students are all living in a graduate student's house with about twenty other students. Except for the fact that they would have liked to live in dorms where they could meet more people, the girls are very happy where they are. It's like living at home.

The women's rules are few. They have few restrictions except for closing hours which are 11 P.M. on Sunday through Thursday and 12:30 on both Friday and Saturday nights.

The girls are all taking primarily education courses but have been allowed to take courses towards their minors in other fields—Sociology, English, Spanish, and French.

"The people down here are really tremendous," is the way Robin expresses her opinion of those she has met. Everyone has been very helpful in orienting the girls to their new environment.

Robin comments that the education department is really terrific. She feels, however, less pressure in her studies than she did at UMass.

She also comments that the school spirit among the students is more obvious at Florida State.

Thus we have a few comments on the comparison and contrasts between UMass. and Florida State University.

Mademoiselle Miss To Discuss Contest

Miss Priscilla Bowden representative of the College and Careers Department of Mademoiselle will be in the Governor's Lounge of the SU on Tuesday, Oct. 31, from 9:30 to 11:30. This will be a coffee hour for all women interested in Mademoiselle, especially the College Board, Art, and Fiction Contest.

Girls interested in Publishing, Writing, Advertising, Fashion should take advantage of this opportunity to talk with Miss Bowden.

Sororities Represented In Various Campus Activities

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Pam Salvati and Leah Shepherdson were selected for Naiads, Deena Ferrigno was elected to the Soph Executive Council, and Donna Lee Bonner was elected Sorority Senator.

Donna Lee was also awarded the carnation of the month from the Alpha Chi's.

Alpha Chi Omega celebrates its Founder's Day on Sunday, October 15th. A banquet was held at the house Monday evening in honor of this occasion.

The Alpha Chi's had a very enjoyable exchange supper with Lambda Chi last Wednesday evening.

CHI OMEGA

Needless to say the sisters of Chi O had a busy but happy weekend. Besides capturing second place in the Homecoming Float Parade with our "Show Boat," the house is beaming with pride over Janet Wehmann's new title as Homecoming Queen of 1961. As if this coveted title is not enough, Jan will also preside over the Military Ball festivities as Honorary Colonel.

The Chi O's extend a belated but sincere thank you to the Phi Sig's for giving them such a great exchange supper—presents and all!!

Chi O is also proud of Bev DeMarco for her role in the new Roister Doister production of Volpone as Kanina.

Among the many alumnae and parents that visited 315 Lincoln Avenue this past weekend were a group of Chi O's from U.R.I. Guess they all came to see their "Rhode go to Ruin!"

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Planning ahead paid off again for the Theta house as they captured first place in the float parade with "Paintin' a Fusia Victory." The sisters thank Connie Creamer for her competent direction.

All the sisters thank the pledges for the fine planning of open house held after the game Saturday. It was fun seeing all the alumnae back for Homecoming and enjoying the weekend festivities with them.

The Thetas thank the Lambda Chi's for a great exchange supper with them.

Margie Olson is the House's nominee for Mili Ball Queen.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

Hats are off in Kappa this week to President Carol Veno who was chosen from the senior class to be a Phi Beta Kappa Scholar. Also to Betsy Robicheau who has been elected treasurer of the Student Senate.

The KKG's thank the brothers of Phi Sigma Kappa for a wonderful time at Wednesday night's exchange supper.

SIGMA KAPPA

The sisters are proud of three girls who have been selected as members of their class executive committees. Ellen Kfoury is a member of the Sophomore Executive Council and Elaine Ricker and Connie Gardini are members of the Junior Executive Council.

Kathy Rafferty, Paula Wickins, Joan Lapazowski, and Carolyn Oliver are representing their respective dorms in the Student Senate.

Jeanee Mullaney representing the House and Joan Werner representing Wheeler Dorm are candidates for Mili Ball Queen. Connie Gardini is the House's nomination for Winter Carnival Queen.

The Sigma Kappas were happy to see the familiar faces of the alums back for the Homecoming weekend. All were, of course, sorry that the facilities in the House were not suitable to entertain as well as they would have liked to.

The sisters are all very pleased to have Mrs. Mellon, the new housemother, with them. As soon as the House is finished next semester, she will be introduced to the campus at large.

Now that meals are being served at the House it is fitting to mention our houseboys who are so much a part of the Sigma family. They are Bob Foster, Harry Annable, Barry Crane, and Tom Stoddard.

Tour Organizing Begins Thursday

Any girls interested in organizing a Spring Bermuda or Nassau student tour on the campus may obtain information concerning this on Thursday. The student representative for the tour will have all tour expenses paid by the travel agency.

Mrs. Helen Laymayer, Director of Student Tours will be on campus in the afternoon.

Appointments to speak with her must be made at the Women's Placement Office before Thursday.

PACK OR BOX

Grand Prix CONTEST

FOR NEW ENGLAND COLLEGE STUDENTS

REGULAR OR KING

Here's the story, man. Eight, count 'em, eight of these swinging Sprites will go to eight guys or gals in New England colleges. The other 44 states strictly don't count. Get the picture, get the odds? This is one deal you've got to get in on.

First thing to do, get your hand on a Registration Envelope, which gives you the easy Contest Rules. You'll find Registration Envelopes everywhere—all around campus and in your local smoke shops. Our Liggett & Myers Campus Rep has stacks of them, too—so track him down.

Next, you take a little quiz. It's printed right on the envelope, see, it's about sports cars and you can do it in like 47 seconds. Then smoke 5 wonderful packs of Chesterfields or L&M's (or, if you're a menthol man, Oasis), tear the bottom panels off all 5 packs, tuck them in the envelope, sign your name and mail it.

8 PRIZES
8 NEW ENGLAND WINNERS
'62 SPRITES

Now comes the brain work. If you pass the quiz you'll receive a limerick in the mail with the last line missing. So finish it! Send in the best rhyme you can think of. If the judges (an independent, impartial lot) think your line is the cleverest, you're like behind the wheel of your Sprite already.

Enter incessantly! Because there are 8 Sprites up for grabs, dad! The 4 winners of the Fall Contest will be announced at the end of the Fall Semester. Then the whole jazz goes into high gear again—and toward the end of the Spring Semester the other 4 Sprites go on the block. So stay with it all year — keep smoking those wonderful Chesterfield, L&M or Oasis cigarettes—keep trying! Win, man!

Buy 5 packs and get started. There will be 8 new '62 Sprites on the campuses of little old New England by next May, and you might as well jingle the keys to one of them in your jeans... right?

GET WITH THE GRAND PRIX...ENTER TODAY, ENTER INCESSANTLY!

UM Gridmen Will Travel To Boston for Northeastern Tilt

The University of Massachusetts will be seeking its fourth victory of the season when it engages the Northeastern Huskies in a 1:30 P.M. contest tomorrow at Kent Stadium in Brookline.

The Huskies are currently riding the crest of a 4-1 record with wins over Rhode Island (26-13), Norwich (24-2), AIC (33-15), and Springfield (27-21). The only loss was administered by Bridgeport in a night game (12-0).

The NU squad boasts a strong and mobile line with good depth. Head coach Joe Zabilski rates four of his linemen among the best in New England. The prizes of the Huskies mentor are as follows: tackles Jack Pignato (Sr. 23 yrs., 6-3, 230 lbs); captain Phil McCabe (Sr. 24 yrs, 6-1, 210 lbs); center Dick McPherson (Soph. 19 yrs., 6-2, 205 lbs); and guard Lou Carmisciano (Sr. 21 yrs. 5-10, 185 lbs).

The backfield is small, but fast with quarterback Jerry Varnum (Jr. 19 yrs., 6-0, 175 lbs). Varnum has been the sparkplug in the Huskies offense leading, NU to its first two wins. He injured his shoulder in the Norwich game, and had to sit out most of the Bridgeport contest while untested sophomore Jack Kennedy did the signal calling. Varnum returned to action in the AIC game, and threw one touchdown pass, set up another, and scored one himself.

The team has been greatly bolstered by 32 sophomores from last year's undefeated freshman team. Outstanding among them are McPherson, mentioned above, who was an all-America at Weymouth High School, and was chosen sophomore of the East after the AIC game; fullback Paul Luciano, son of the NU line coach, who is the leading ground gainer with a 6.7 average per carry; tackle Joe Davis and guard Fred Tripp, both of whom have started; linebacker Don Darracq, who is regarded as one of the best defensive secondary men at NU in some time; and QB Jack Kennedy, who has good potential, but lacks experience.

Coach Vic Fusia has indicated that he will go with the same starting unit as he used against Rhode Island last week. It is also probable that RHB Ken Kezer, who saw only limited duty in the last contest, will be called upon more frequently against NU.

OOMPH!

This gang-tackle scene was typical of the defensive battle witnessed last year as the Redmen downed the N.U. squad 7-0. Things look about the same for tomorrow.

Baker 'A' Trounces Van Meter; Baker 'B' Defeated

Baker A remained undefeated in Dorm League B as they wallopped Van Meter 2, 34-2. It was the fourth straight for the spirited Baker boys.

Baker started rapidly, as Captain George Poirier recieved the kick and raced forty-five yards for the score. John Murphy led the blocking one the play. Quarterback Bobby Sullivan uncorked a perfect forty-yard pass to Poirier for the second score. Richie Baird and Poirier added two more TD's as Sullivan kept finding holes in the Van Meter defense.

Baird garnered his second score just as the game ended. Doug Pearsall and Ron Schlitz played excellent ball on offense and defense. Much credit must be given to the defense, led by Bill Walsh, Frank Veneri, and Bob Fiore, as they allowed but one first down in the last two games. Baker has now outscored its opponents 85 to 10 in four games.

Baker B, who opened the season with two impressive wins, were upset by Hills North, 6 to nothing. Hills started strong, as they capitalized on their first series of downs via a fifteen-yard pass play. The Hills defense managed to contain the previously unstoppable Baker passing attack. Quarterback Dick Callahan couldn't find his receivers, as Hills had co-captain Mike Pressler and end Steve Johnson well-covered.

Early in the second half, Baker seemed to come to life. Two Callahan passes netted a pair of first downs, and on the next play, Pressler threw a bone-crushing block to spring Johnson free. After he was downed at the five, the Hills defense tightened, and intercepted on the next day to end Baker's scoring threat.

With the exception of the first TD, the Baker defense played a good game, led by backs Steve Graham, Les Ward, and Dave French. But the first TD jaunt was all that Hills needed to assure victory. Baker, howeevr, remains a threat in Dorm League action.

Butterfield 8 Team Downs Chadbourne

The Butterfield "8"'s notched their third victory of the season Tuesday night when they defeated the previously unscored upon Chadbourne six by a score of 6-0.

The hard fought game, marked by several lengthy penalties, was iced away early in the second half when fleet end Dick Annino outfought two defenders in the end zone and gathered in a 37 yard Dave Bader pass for what proved to be the winning margin.

Chadbourne's only threat came late in the game when they penetrated to the Butterfield seven-yard line only to be stopped by the highly touted forward wall of the "B"'s.

The squad, sparked by signal caller Dave Bader, and bolstered by the services of Dick Annino, Skip Freeland, Ron Rainka, George Giddings and Dick Murphy, is the chief threat in the dormitory competition thus far.

Sportsense

by BEN GORDON '62, Sports Editor

What many sportswriters consider to be the finest small college football game of the week will take place at Kent Stadium in Boston, Saturday. The University of Massachusetts squad will meet the Huskies from Northeastern there at 1:30 to battle for what N.U. Coach Joe Zabilski thinks will be New England Small College superiority. The game promises to be typical of former UMass-N.U. contests, rugged and close, as the Huskies have averaged 23 points per game to the Redmen's 22. It was a 7-0 UMass win last year, the game ending with N.U. on the UMass one yard line. The teams slid and slipped to a 0-0 tie in the 1959 mud battle.

Despite the recent classification of UMass, along with UConn and Buffalo, as ECAC major college teams, the squads remain small college teams. According to NCAA requirements, a team must play half of its games against NCAA-listed major college teams in order to reach that bracket. The Redmen listed Villanova, Boston University and Holy Cross on their slates, won't make major college status for some years, as Yankee Conference play excludes the possibility of challenging five majors in one season (NCAA rules will require a majority of games against Majors, starting in '63). It looks as if, within a few years, UMass and UConn will leave the Yankee conference, being too powerful, and become members of a new New England conference which will include such teams as B.U., B.C., Holy Cross and Dartmouth.

UMass scheduling will remain rigid, though, as teams like Villanova, Harvard, Bucknell and Dartmouth loom in the near future. Also in the future in the new UMass stadium, to be completed by September of 1963. Groundbreaking for the Phys. Ed. Building will take place this November.

Backfield Coach Jack Delaney came up with an interesting observation a while ago. One of the greatest ends in College football, he stated, could have been in Oscar Robertson, the Cincinnati All American hoop star, and last year's all-pro pick from the Cincinnati Royals. Delaney, who coached at Cinci, remembers track and players tossing passes Robertson jogging around the to him en-route. Oscar would infallibly snag them with one enormous hand and run for the "T.D." I don't think Oscar has many regrets about going into basketball though.

Army Cadets Defeat UM X-Country Squad, 20-43

Bob Brouillet upset one of the East's best distance runners, but the Cadets of West Point defeated the UMass cross country team, 20-43. The practice meet was held Wednesday at the U.S. Military Academy.

Brouillet covered the 4½ mile course in 22:09 while defeating Army's Jones, a runner with a 4:12 mile and a 9:10 two mile to his credit. However, the powerful Cadets, rated by "Track and Field News" as one of the nation's top ten cross country teams this year, took the next seven places.

Dave Balch was ninth at 22:59 and Dick Blomstrom tenth at 23:09. The meet provided a good warmup for the Redmen's next competition which is the Yankee Conference championships at Orono, Maine, next Saturday. UMass should successfully defend their conference title.

Frosh Meet Springfield

The University of Massachusetts freshman football team will go after its second win of the fall Friday, against the Springfield College frosh at Springfield.

The Little Redmen edged the Boston University Pups, 13-12, in the season's opener. Touchdowns by quarterback Jerry Whelchel (Cochituate) and fullback Ray Vitale (Waltham), plus a successful extra point convension by end Terry Swamson (Belmont) gave the UMass frosh the victory.

Frosh Coach Don Johnson has worked his team for two weeks in preparation for the Springfield tilt and is hopeful the squad will play in a more cohesive manner than the initial game.

Coach Johnson has indicated the probable Little Redmen starting lineup will consist of:

Dick Bourdelais	E
Roy Benjamin	E
Clyde Meyerhoefer	T
Dick Kehoe	T
Harold Ryder	G
Pete Pietz	G
Ralph Worth	C
Dick Lewis	HB
Phil DeRose	HB
Jerry Whelchel	QB
Phil Vandersea	FB

The Papooses will play their next home game against Brewster Academy on November 3, at 2:00 p.m. at Alumni Field.

R.D.'s Plan to Present Jonson's Farce 'Volpone'

The Roister Doisters, dramatic organization of the UMass, will present Volpone, Elizabethan farce by Ben Jonson, on November 16, 17, and 18 in Bowker Auditorium. The production, which will be treated in a highly theatrical style, ranging from ornate costumes and spectacular scenery to an extremely unusual dance number, is under the direction of Miss Doris E. Abramson of the University's Speech Department.

Broadhurst Stars

Volpone is set in Venice. The central figure is Volpone, a cynical, miserly Venetian trader, who will be played by veteran actor Francis Broadhurst '62 of Chester, who has had many previous Roister Doister roles, including the Stage Manager in Our Town and the doctor in Look Homeward Angel.

Volpone, aided by his servant, Mosca (Hal Hinds '63 of Saxonville), pretends to be on his deathbed in order to tempt a miserable crew of self-seekers, Corbaccio (Peter Avratin '63 of Winthrop), Corvino (Norman Seigal '62 of New Bedford), and Voltore (Richard Gardner '64 of Chicopee) to make him presents of gold and jewels in the expectation of being named his heir. However, Volpone's active mind and sensuality will not let him rest. He becomes enamored of Corvino's virtuous young wife, Columba (Judith Noren '63 of Melrose) and in trying to establish a relationship with her oversteps himself.

Volpone's Life Ends in Disgrace

Ordered before the Venetian courts, he has himself brought in on a litter. Mosca claims that Volpone is so enfeebled he cannot even open his mouth to speak. This trick has its effect; his detractors are silenced, while Mosca, intoxicated by success, is induced to attempt a more darin device still. He gives out the secret that Volpone is dead and that Mosca is his heir. In his savage joy at the discomfiture of his dupes, Volpone does not see the danger into which he has blundered: Mosca, invested with his riches, calmly refuses to part with his booty. Volpone's only course is to reveal the trick. This leads to his punishment and disgrace.

Other cast members in the comedy are Beverly DeMarco '63, of Somerset, as Canina; David Manley '63, of Newton Center, as Leone; Lawrence Wilker '65, of Newton, as the Police Captain; Robert J. Thornley '65, of Taunton, as the Groom; and Elizabeth Foskett '64, of Danvers, and Frances Castine '64, of Athol, as Maids.

Zoology Dept. Is Awarded $63,595 Grant

A grant of $63,595 has been awarded to the department of zoology at UMass by the Public Health Service of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, it is announced today by University President John W. Lederle.

Dr. Harold Rauch, professor of zoology, will use the grant to research "Dilute-Lethal and Other Neuromuscular Mutants in Mice" over a three-year period. According to Professor Rauch, the dilute-lethel gene in mice is similar to one found in human beings afflicted with phenylketonuria (PKU). Human beings with PKU are characterized by a very low I.Q. About one per cent of the young people in mental institutions are suffering from this condition. About one birth in 25,000 will result in PKU.

Dr. Rauch joined the staff at the University in 1950. A graduate of Queens College, he received his master of science degree from the University of Illinois and his Ph.D. from Brown University. He has written a number of articles about hair development and dietary deficiencies in the mouse and hamster. The zoologist is listed in "American Men of Science," is a member of Sigma Xi, and belongs to a number of scientific organizations.

Kaye Wants Critic Level Increased

Danny Kaye thinks that television criticism should be taught on every college and university campus in the country.

"Nearly everybody takes his turn at belting TV," he says. "At least we might raise the level of criticism by offering degrees in the subject."

Danny has no beef with specific, constructive criticism of television to which both the critics and public are entitled.

"No doubt much of TV is a wasteland," Kaye agrees. "Yet for the selective viewer, it can be not only entertaining but enlightening."

During the one week of TV programming he picked at random, Kaye also pointed up such worthwhile viewing as an Adlai Stevenson report, a World Concert show with Arthur Rubenstein, a chronicle on the life of Ernest Hemingway, a documentary on Radioactive Medicine, a "Brandenburg Gate" drama.

"Sure, there are also hours of violence, old movies, giveaway shows, reruns, and reruns," he says. "But it's easy to escape viewing a worthless or 'undesirable' program. Every TV set is equipped with a simple on-off knob."

What changed his mind? Obviously, he thinks much more of the medium today. Also, he has a sponsor (General Motors) for whom he does only one 60-minute show per year, with complete creative freedom and with as much time for preparation and rehearsal as Danny deems necessary. The second annual "Danny Kaye Show" airs Monday, November 6, from 9 to 10 P.M. (EST).

A comedian by trade, Danny Kaye is also known to be a serious-minded citizen who is not at all facetious in the suggestion that TV criticism be taught at high academic levels.

Home Ec Dean Being Officially Welcomed

Dr. Marion A. Niederpruem, new dean of the School of Home Economics at UMass, will be guest of honor at a welcoming dinner to be held today on campus.

Dean Niederpruem will be greeted by members of the faculty and Board of Trustees, graduates of the University, representatives of various women's groups, and delegates from other New England colleges and universities.

Dinner Follows Reception

A reception will be held in the Colonial Lounge of the S.U. from 6 to 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner in the Ballroom.

Dean Niederpruem, who received her doctorate from the University of Michigan, was professor of home economics at Michigan State University prior to assuming her new duties in September. She succeeds Dr. Helen S. Mitchell who retired after many years of distinguished service at the UMass.

At Michigan State, Dr. Niederpruem was in charge of the retailing curriculum in the College of Home Economics and as Retailing Coordinator supervised field courses in the major department stores in Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, and other cities.

Directed Research

In a project jointly sponsored by Michigan State and the National Retail Merchants Association, she directed research in determining the most effective type of college education for executive careers in retailing and means by which stores can improve their training program for executives. A publication, "Developing Store Executives," in which Dr. Niederpruem reported the findings of this study, was published in March, 1960.

Chairman of the honors board in the M.S.U. College of Home Economics, she taught graduate courses in the sociology and psychology of consumer clothing purchases and undertook research in marketing trends, buying habits and retail distribution.

A member of several professional societies, she has published numerous articles on research activities, honors programs in home economics, retailing and executive development, and fashion and clothing selection.

Dr. Dana E. Harlow To Talk on 'Leisure'

Dr. Dana E. Harlow, assistant professor in the Department of Recreation Leadership, will give the first of the "My Best Lecture" series of the current year. He will speak November 1 at 4:00 in the Student Union. His topic will be "Leisure and Its Impact On International Affairs."

Dr. Harlow holds degrees from West Virginia University, the University of Illinois, and completed a Ph.D. in International Relations at the University of Geneva as a Ford Scholar in 1957. He arrived on the UMass faculty in 1959 after an assignment with the United Nations. While with the UN, he was UNESCO Observer to the Brussel's World's Fair in 1958. He has traveled extensively, completing a round-the-world tour in 1957, but his traveling has been concentrated in the Middle Eastern countries. Additionally, his writings have appeared in various national publications and on the "Voice of America". In 1955, on the basis of a survey conducted for the Department of the U.S. Air Force, dependent recreation programs have been inaugurated on Air Force bases throughout the world.

On campus, Dr. Harlow is adviser to the Maroon Key, Recreation Club, the student chapter of the American Recreation Society, and the class of '63. Last spring during the honors convocation, he was given an honorary membership to Adelphia, Senior Men's Honor Society.

As Dr. Harlow says, ". . . Leisure interests represent one of the largest factors in international and national economies today. Here in New England alone, leisure interests of people and

'Wild Duck' In Final Stage At Kirby Theater, Amherst

The Wild Duck, by Henrik Ibsen, is now going into its final rehearsal stages at Kirby Theater Amherst College. The play will be offered by the Masquers on November 3, 4, 10 and 11. Public ticket sale began October 27.

The Kirby version of the play is being produced from a modern translation by Otto Reinhart. Prof. Walter L. Boughton, who is directing the production, calls this translation one to which "the American ear is receptive."

According to Professor Boughton, characters are required to achieve a counterpoint of tragedy and farce. The two moods are maintained in delicate balance. This style, which caused Ibsen to label his play "tragi-comic", caught the original audiences by surprise. However, it is not new to modern audiences.

The Wild Duck will be staged on only two sets, both designed by Charles Rogers and constructed under the supervision of Chales Ganzer, technical director at Kirby and in his first year at Amherst. One set represents the comfortable Werle home, the other the down-at-the-heels flat of the Ekdal family. The Werle home is built entirely on a movable wagon which is moved on and off the stage during scene shifts.

The play, like much of Ibsen's work, deals with the merits of truth and illusion in the lives of its central characters. But unlike Ibsen's other social dramas, The Wild Duck is a case for a particular truth in the face of outmoded conventions. Ibsen is investigating the ability of man to base his life on truth. And he suggests finally, that for certain people illusion is a greater requisite for happiness than truth. Consequently, the play represents for Prof. Boughton a more subtle presentation of character than that usually found in an Ibsen story.

'Carnival of Flowers' Theme Highlights Annual Hort Show

by JOE BRADLEY '64, News Assignment Editor

The Forty-Ninth Annual Horticultural Show transformed the Curry Hicks physical education building into a midway of riotous color this past weekend as a "Carnival of Flowers" was presented complete with flower bearing amusements.

A carnival setting was attained by a midway featuring a caged "Tiger Lily—a head of a tiger surrounded by orange petals striped with black. The display fascinated wide-eyed tots who looked on as their cotton candy melted.

EXHIBIT AT HORTICULTURE SHOW.

Carnival flavor was further enhanced by wheels of fortune (inoperative), a strength testing Hi-Striker, and a rocket ride carrying loads of flowers in place of passengers.

A hand-carved "flying horse" formerly of the Webster Lakes Trolley Car Park and donated for display at the show drew admiration from both young and old.

Among the displays were a pushcart, heavy with fresh fruit and vegetables set against a big city backdrop and a "From Forest to Consumer" display showing the many uses of our forest products.

Highlighting the show were cash awards given to students for displays in various classes.

First Prize Winners:
Formal—"In Arcady" John Crowe and Terry Robinson. Also winner of the State Award for the best student display.

Informal — "But From Sheer Morning Gladness" Alfred Lima, Manuel Mello, Robert Waterman.

Naturalistic—"Posiedon's Garden" Kathy Ryan, Mardell Pease, Paul Steinkamp.

Architectural — "Urban Garden" Malcolm Bishop, Charles Rowe, Edward J. Ward.

Redmen Humble Huskies; Team Effort Leads Way

by W. JOHN LENNON '62

An awesome University of Massachusetts gridiron machine swept to its fourth convincing victory in five season outings when it riddled once-defeated Northeastern, 26-7, before 7100 fans at Kent Stadium Saturday.

The flaming Redmen locked most of the overflowing crowd in the torture chamber wtih their heroes as Chief Fusia's tribe wheeled off 448 yards, three touch-downs, and a couple of field goals while limiting the home forces to a paltry 99 yard total.

The UM halfback combination of Lussier and Lewis, masters of moves and feints, faked defenders right out of their shoes and left them in barefooted embarrassment while recording 206 rushing yards between them. Lewis, the extraordinary swivel-hipped left half, finally beginning to blossom, tallied two TD's, snarred passes for 58 yards, and romped for 128 more in his best varsity performance. Fred's hipper-dipper running mate, Lussier, averaged 6.5 yards a carry, and chalked up his team's second six pointer.

Although UM's general, John McCormick, spent the perfect football afternoon directing his charges, he also completed 9 of his 16 passes for 167 yards and a touchdown. The six foot senior, who habitually hits the bull's eye with his bullets, saw some of his "too hot to handle" aerials muffed. One of these bobbles cost a TD when Jim Hickman dropped one in the endzone.

The Redmen attack was in full swing with the opening whistle. Hickman gobbled up the kickoff, and scampered 52 yards to the opposition's 43. Eight plays carried to the 11 where the attack stalled. John Bamberry's educated toe then projected his

The State of ROTC

Our nation's colleges and universities have been questioning for quite some time now the value and militarism of the ROTC programs now in effect at Land Grant Colleges. The increase in the number of college pacifists can definitely be linked to these outbursts against the ROTC programs. The worth and place of ROTC must be decided soon but it will not be decided by anti-war demonstrations nor by peace marches on officers' homes. The level-headed approach of the University of Rhode Island Beacon provides us with a definition of the problem with both sides represented:

The issue of whether or not URI should initiate a program of voluntary ROTC has once again come to the fore with the proponents of each side expressing the advantages of their position. And very shortly this university, with plans for an expanded student body, an increased scholastic standard and an enlarged course offering, will have to decide whether to continue compelling freshmen and sophomores to take ROTC courses.

Historically, in 1862 when Abraham Lincoln signed into law a program setting aside public lands for resale and ultimately the establishing of state owned and government supported colleges, one provision was included which required that these new colleges would offer a military course to its student body. Since 1862 the number of land-grant colleges, as they were called, increased so that by 1960 there were 68 land-grant colleges.

To fulfill the requirements of the Morrill Act, regarding the implementation of military courses as part of the college program, most of the colleges established compulsory ROTC programs. The stipulation was that all freshman and sophomore male students would be required to take at least two years of a general ROTC program and have the opportunity to choose two additional years of study, during the junior and senior years, to qualify them for a reserve commission in the armed forces.

Now, many of these colleges have found themselves faced with increased enrollment and as a result, the burden of making class space available for their ever-expanding freshman and sophomore ROTC classes. Consequently, rather than face the burden of this additional expense, they have sought and introduced a voluntary ROTC program.

Under this sytem, which apparently complies with the ramifications of the Morrill Act, since it has not been challenged, the entering freshmen receive pre-entrance orietation to interest them in the military program. The result, according to a colonel at the University of Wisconsin, has been satisfying. Higher morale and more effective training programs without the loss of a sufficient number of ROTC graduates have been some of the immediate results, the colonel reported.

On the other hand, the compulsory ROTC programs at other land-grant colleges have not proved to be a financial handicap for such reasons because their student bodies have not grown to such proportions as to create the financial burden or they have not found sufficient reason to revamp their programs.

One reason behind the continuance of a compulsory ROTC program is the military and disciplinary experience which is gained both by the freshmen and sophomores and by the advanced ROTC students. According to the president of the University of Vermont, the individual receives training in leadership, organization and responsibility in the military courses that cannot be acquired in any other college course.

Some feeling is that regardless of whether or not the freshmen or sophomore will enter the advanced course in their junior year, the compulsory program is another means for diversifying the experience of the college student. Still another feeling is that the advanced ROTC cadet will be dealing with a group that is close in size and spirit to the group he will command once he receives his commission.

While the opponents of compulsory ROTC say that it is a waste of valuable study or class time, the supporters of the compulsory say it has proven to be an invaluable experience because it familiarizes the student with the military needs of the United States; especially since every able-bodied male citizen is, according to law, required to serve some time with the armed forces.

Presently, the decision is in the hands of a Faculty Senate committee and ultimately lies with the university administration.

'Society Will Not Let Us Sleep'

A little more than two centuries ago, a hipster by the name of Lord Chesterfield wrote a letter to his son advising the brat to be active, diligent, and indefatigable.

Today, as more and more people are following Chesterfield's advice, its faults are becoming increasingly apparent. Our tense and methodical society is forgetting how to relax; we are not untiring beasts as Chesterfield would advise his son to be. No man, no matter how determined, is indefatigable. Even a well oiled modern day vending machine seems to need an occasional rest, as any dorm resident can testify.

Imagine a society in which all the memebrs perform their tasks in an endless and mechanical manner. Already, nearly every phase of life in our country, from potato farming to childbirth, has been reduced to the assembly line level. Students graduate from universities as finished products of huge plants scattered across the country; efficiency is the key word. Parents teach their children that desire for self-expression is a sign of immaturity, that the world is hard and cold.

Young men and women are forced into college for the purpose of developing their abilities to make money.

How has the nation's youth been affected by being forced to conform to the pressures of society? The answer is provided by Douglas Bush in his noted address on the humanities. "No branch of a university staff has grown more rapidly of late years than the psychiatric squad." Students have inherited a sense of values dominated by the dollar and inebriated by drugs that come from the mind as well as from the bottle.

If a writer cannot feasibly preach a new sense of values, he can at least attempt to prevent his audience from working itself into a frenzy. Along with the key word "efficiency" should go another, "RELAXATION." Unless we learn how to relax, the old soup line will see a revival in the form of great crowds waiting for low cost, government provided psychiatric consultation. In short, we shall all go nuts.

It seems that the best way to relax is to do nothing. The familiar cliché, sleep is the best medicine, has its points. "But society will not let us sleep" is the cry of the prestige-infected businessmen. Who is that animal, society? To hell with society. For eight hours a day society can wait for a man to recuperate from sixteen hours of conformity.

We must not allow ourselves to become additional parts of the great machine, a walking pressure cooker which will not take time out to let off a little steam.

It is unfortunate that fun is now a dirty word. People who take their minds off their work for a few moments are frowned upon by the toiling masses. Let the people frown. Sooner or later the pressure cooker will burst unless a little heat is removed.

Each of us should have some means of enjoyment, whether it be complete rest or a night out on the town. Exercise and work are two distinct undertakings; the former releases tension while the latter creates it.

To inaugurate the new generation, I throw the typewriter out the window and go to bed. Pleasant dreams . . . . .

--LETTERS--

To the Editor:

I have heard much discussion concerning the poor attendance given the Fred Waring concert last Tuesday night. It has been stated that the student body here at UMass does not appreciate such music as it is on a higher cultural level than rock-and-roll. Maybe so, but those people who are responsible for arranging such entertainment for the entire student body should not evaluate what the student body needs so much as what it wants! Judging by the attendance it does not want Fred Waring.

All the students in the University paid for last Tuesday's concert, yet, only three thousand (3,000) chairs were set up. This is approximately one half of the student body. I suppose it can be argued that this was enough in view of assorted factors, such as: the need of some people to study that particular night; the fact that there were other activities for some students to attend, etc. However, this argument can not be used to justify holding a chamber music concert in Bowker (seats less than a thousand (1,000) or in Bartlett Auditorium (seats four-hundred (400). Obviously, the musical tastes of the entire student body were not considered properly when plans were made for these various concerts. Even if the majority of students wanted to hear Fred Waring or the Julliard String Quartet there would not be enough room to accomodate them. Remember, the student body has paid for all this themselves!

It is fine to say that a certain concert is "cultural", but, so what? Why should the student body pay for something it does not want? Why should Fred Waring be giving a concert to the students when what they really would like to hear is the Limelighters or Tony Bennett or Johnny Mathis (scheduled to appear in Springfield this month) or various other popular musical groups and singers?

The wishes and money of the students have been used as tools to realize the desires of a few individuals who place their idea of student want above the actual student want. And as I have mentioned previously, judging by the attendance the majority of the student body does not want to hear those groups that have been selected.

I have not said that I do not like Fred Waring. I have not said that I do not like the Julliard String Quartet. I have not said that I do not like the members of the Concert Association or their ideals. I have said that, in my estimation, the wishes of the student body have not been given proper emphasis when consideration was given to selecting performers for these concerts.

Muscle Gap Believed More Harmful Than Missile Gap

There may or may not be a missile gap between Russia and the United States. But there is certainly a "muscle gap" which could prove equally disastrous. Ironically, Americans are behind in this muscle gap because we are so far ahead in industrial progress.

Not only Russia, but most other nations, as well, are in better physical shape than the U.S., reports a November Reader's Digest article. First statistical evidence of this came in 1956 physical fitness tests given to American and European children.

58% of Americans Fail

While less than nine percent of the Europeans failed one or more of these tests, 58 percent of the Americans failed. Similar testing showed British young people 24 percent more fit than American youths. In some instances their girls even proved physically superior to our boys.

Author Max Eastman indicates that the flabby American is more a victim of national progress than of national laziness. Our decreasing physical activity can be blamed partly on advances in production and distribution of labor saving devices —in which we lead all other nations.

But we have failed to take measures against the gadget—induced idleness. We have few organized physical-activity programs. Our high-school and grade-school students average less than one hour a month in physical education classes—and even much of this time is spent in such non-vigorous pursuits as "social games" or "folk dancing."

Should Make Phys. Ed Regular Subject

Warns Eastman: "One thing we must do now, before it is too late, is to make physical education a part of the regular curriculum of our schools, on the same terms as mental education. Testing and grading of pupils according to their gifts and their progress should become standard procedure."

Another recommendation for improved fitness: everyone should spend at least 15 minutes a day in vigorous physical activity such as running or calisthenics.

HUSBANDS, ANYONE?

It has been alleged that coeds go to college for the sole purpose of finding husbands. This is, of course, an infamous canard, and I give fair warning that, small and spongy as I am, anybody who says such a dastardly thing when I am around had better be prepared for a sound thrashing!

Girls go to college for precisely the same reasons as men do: to broaden their horizons, to lengthen their vistas, to drink at the fount of wisdom. But, if, by pure chance, while a girl is engaged in these meritorious pursuits, a likely looking husband should pop into view, why, what's wrong with that? Eh? What's wrong with that?

The question now arises, what should a girl look for in a husband. A great deal has been written on this subject. Some say character is most important, some say background, some say appearance, some say education. All are wrong.

The most important thing—bar none—in a husband is health. Though he be handsome as Apollo and rich as Midas, what good is he if he just lays around all day accumulating bedsores?

The very first thing to do upon meeting a man is to make sure he is sound of wind and limb. Before he has a chance to sweet-talk you, slap a thermometer in his mouth, roll back his eyelids, yank out his tongue, rap his patella, palpate his thorax, ask him to straighten out a horseshoe with his teeth. If he fails these simple tests, phone for an ambulance and go on to the next prospect.

If, however, he turns out to be physically fit, proceed to the second most important requirement in a husband. I refer to a sense of humor.

A man who can't take a joke is a man to be avoided. There are several simple tests to find out whether your prospect can take a joke or not. You can, for example, slash his tires. Or burn his "Mad" comics. Or steal his switchblade. Or turn loose his pet raccoon. Or shave his head.

After each of these good-natured pranks, laugh gaily and shout "April Fool! If he replies, "But this is February nineteenth," or something equally churlish, cross him off your list and give thanks you found out in time.

But if he laughs silverly and calls you "Little Minx!" put him to the next test. Find out whether he is kindly.

What should a girl look for in a husband?

The quickest way to ascertain his kindliness is, of course, to look at the cigarette he smokes. Is it mild? Is it clement? Is it humane? Does it minister tenderly to the psyche? Does it coddle the synapses? Is it a good companion? Is it genial? Is it bright and friendly and filtered and full of dulcet pleasure from cockcrow till the heart of darkness?

Is it, in short, Marlboro?

If Marlboro it be, then clasp the man to your bosom with hoops of steel, for you may be sure that he is kindly as a summer breeze, kindly as a mother's kiss, kindly to his very marrow.

And now, having found a man who is kindly and healthy and blessed with a sense of humor, the only thing that remains is to make sure he will always earn a handsome living. That, fortunately, is easy. Just enroll him in engineering.

how they spend this leisure, is high on the list in assisting with the operational expenses of small towns, cities, and villages. Last year alone, surveys report that some 43 billion dollars were spent in the area of leisure interests—this is over half of the national debt. Anthropologists, sociologists, psychologists and even industrial planners and leaders are deeply concerned with the leisure habits of people. While organized leisure or planned recreation programs might not be the panacea for our cultural ills, it might help far more than we shall ever suspect. On an individual or group basis, leisure has an astronomical effect on people—and in the final analysis, on the world . . ."

FRESHMEN!!

Do you want your class to rank among the best of those who have graduated from the University?

If you do, vote for me, DAVE KOSTKA, for President, because if elected I will do my best to make ours a unique and respected class.

I'm not running on a platform of posters but on one of enthusiasm and sensible leadership. This is not a popularity contest, or one to see who can pass out the most pencils or make the nicest posters, but a campaign. I sincerely hope that you, as conscientious voters, will realize this and will vote on the basis of the quality and determination of the candidates. Remember that an intense campaign of posters and other things may lead to a stagnant administration.

I would appreciate your vote and hope that you will place the future of our class in my hands.

MASS. TURNPIKE

Sam Lussier had little trouble with Northeastern traffic after getting the green light from John McCormick during Saturday's game. Sam went for good yardage.

Redmen Sweep Way to Victory Over Huskies, 26-7

mates into a 3-0 advantage with a 28 yard field goal.

Dick Eger set up the Redmen's initial touchdown when he pounced on Jerry Varnum's fumble on the NU 46. Lewis slanted off right tackle to the 36 before McCormick connected with him on the left side for the touchdown with only seven minutes gone. John Bamberry's conversion attempt failed by inches, but the visitors had a comfortable 9-0 lead.

Minutes later Bamberry was back in search of his seventh point of the quarter, but his attempt from the 25 was short. Undaunted by this failure, John returned early in the second quarter, and bisected the uprights from 27 yards out to push the score to 12-0.

Northeastern was shortly back in the contest when Tom Kelly went off left tackle for his team's only score. The seven play drive featured a 36 yard sprint off right tackle by Paul Luciano. Joel Pitcoff added the one-pointer to close the UM margin to 12-7.

The gridders from the Pelham hills struck twice midway through the third stanza before calling it an afternoon. Slippery Sam Lussier capped an 80 yard drive by plunging off left tackle from eight yards out. The sustained drive, which ate up 11 plays, featured a 19 yard McCormick to Lewis aerial on a third and 11 situation. Less than a minute later Lussier put the final UM TD drive in motion when he plucked off a Varnum pass on the NU 32. Five plays later Lewis vaulted over the line from two yards out for the final six-pointer. Following both of these scores, Bamberry converted to lift the final count to 26-7.

HUSKY HOWLS . . .

The 7100 shirt-sleeved fans not only saw the Huskies humbled, but also they witnessed the end of a rivalry which began in 1934. Although the Huskies only managed seven points in the final three contests, the series ended in a deadlock: 6-6-1 . . . Paul Luciano, son of NU's line coach and leading ground gainer for the pups last fall, rolled up 81 yards in 13 attempts . . . the injuries suffered by John Kozaka and George Pleau clouded the otherwise bright afternoon for the Redmen. The former, the starting left guard, suffered a dislocated shoulder on the game's opening kickoff. Pleau injured his ankle after booting a second quarter kickoff into the endzone . . . Northeastern's offense was completely stymied in the final half. The Huskies failed to gain via the airways and were held to minus one yard on the ground.

Tufts Hands UMass Booters 2-1 Defeat in Well-Fought Battle

by STEVE HEWEY '63

The Tufts University soccer squad departed from Amherst last Friday after a strong work-out in the afternoon's brisk Fall weather against the Redmen booters and with a 2-1 win in its record books. The UM loss to the Jumboes puts the Redmen slate at 2-4-1 for the current season.

The Redmen wasted little time in opening the scoring door Friday when Abdul Samma put them in front at 1:03 of the opening frame. But before the first period had ended, Jumbo forward Jerry Coltman knocked one past the UM goalie to freeze the count at one all.

The second period was scoreless and both squads played an even brand of ball. The third quarter continued along in the same pattern as the second until the mid-way mark when Jerry Coltman scored the second of his pair of markers of the day to put the game out of the reach of the Redmen. In the final stanza a UM drive could not produce the tying goal as the Jumbo defense shut the scoring door tight.

This Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 the Redmen line up vs. Clark University of Worcester in a home contest. Two games remain on the 1961 slate after the Clark encounter: Amherst on Nov. 4, and Fairleigh-Dickinson on Nov. 11. Both are home contests.

The lineups:

UM		Tufts
Haavisto	G	Tidey
Packard	R	Wallace
Repeta	C	Yeuta

Frosh Cross Country Team Downed by Army Runners

by R. W. BUSSOWITZ '63

The frosh cross country squad suffered its second defeat Friday, as Army handed the team the loss to the tune of 31-33. An NYU team was also officially in the race, amassing a total of 69 points.

UMass has yet to lose the first place individual honors, however, as Young, followed by Panke were the first men over the finish line. These Redmen set the pace throughout the race. The other UMass entrants all finished within a minute of the winning 16:51 time.

A dozen days rest will hardly be needed before the squad faces Amherst in its only home meet, Thursday, November 9, but it should help set the team in gear for the big New England championships, November 18 in Boston.

Friday's Results:

1. Young, UMass 16:51
2. Panke, UMass 16:53
3. Bryant, NYU 17:07
4. Mallpuse, Army 17:17
5. Hallenbeck, Army 17:22
6. Becker, Army 17:26
7. Ganghert, Army 17:29
8. John Lavoie, UMass 17:29
9. Williams, Army 17:35
10. Ramsay, UMass 17:41

Transforming of the organization and operation of Hawaii from a territory to a state, the streamlining of its bureaucratic government to a copmact eighteen departments; the expansion of major league baseball; civil defense evacuation in New York City; organization of the U. S. Air Force hospitals; personnel operations of the U. S. Information Agency; and the organization and operation of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads are just a few examples of the diversified areas in which Gordon P. Smith, '47 has provided advice and counsel during the past eleven years that he has been a partner of Booz, Allen and Hamilton, the largest and best known management consulting firm in the world. To top off the list, Smith served as consultant to the Republic of Egypt in its initial and difficult days following the 1952 revolution.

Instrumental in Changing Name

While at the University, Smith epitomized the proverbial big man on campus. Aside from his many activities on campus, as president of the senior class he was spokesman for the University throughout the state and at the General Court regarding the drive to change the name of the institution from Massachusetts State College to the University of Massachusetts. Largely as a result of the efforts of his class, the class of 1947 was the first to be graduated from the University.

Assists Hoover Commission

In 1954 Smith was on leave of absence from his firm for the purpose of serving as a consultant to the Hoover Commission in its study of the Federal Government. He received a high commendation from former President Hoover for his assistance to the commission in its significant efforts towards improving the structure of the Federal Government.

He makes his home in Palo Alto, California, where he is married to Daphne Miller '43, a former Winter Carnival Queen. Smith is presently vice president of the Board of Governors of the Palo Alto Stanford University Medical Center, the State of California Chamber of Commerce on Industrial Development and is also a member of the boards of other organizations.

Recently On Campus

Smith was recently on campus in regard to his connection with the coming centennial year. He stated that he was particularly impressed with the Centennial's theme of "Higher learning more widely disseminated." Consequently he volunteered to be the executive secretary for the Alumni Committee for Centennial Development, to organize and coordinate this group's activities.

This is the fifth of a series of Alumni Profiles prepared from the files of the Associate Alumni.

Jones Fires Atomic Gun To Study Smashed Atoms

A home-made "atomic-gun"—built with materials from various sources, including government surplus stores—is being used as an important research weapon at UMass.

Financed by National Science Foundation grants totaling $60,000, the mechanism is used by Dr. Phillips Jones, assistant professor of physics, to study what happens when atoms at rest are smashed by "bullet" atoms.

Uses Metering Devices

Jones aims and shoots one atom cluster at another and then by means of metering devices finds out what takes place after collision.

Unlike experiments in nuclear fission, involving the very center of an atom cluster, the Jones experiment affects only the outer shells or rings of atoms whirling around a center.

Research Has Double Purpose

Aim of the research, according to the 31-year-old physicist, is to learn about the behavior of atoms in close collision. "As such this is really pure science and not a development experiment," the young scientist says. "But it might, of course, be useful to someone trying to work out better ways to control fission."

Helping the physicist in his studies are a number of graduate students as well as another member of the physics faculty.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, who as a college professor married a student in his class, defines a diplomat as "an instructor who can persuade one of his students to marry him without threatening to flunk her if she refuses."

Viet-Namese Want Best of U. S.—Allen

Dr. Allen describes Viet Nam situation with use of map at International Club Oriental Dinner.

"The Viet-Namese want very much to get the best from American traditions and American culture," commented Dr. Luther Allen of the UMass Government Department, who spoke Monday night at the International Club's UN Oriental dinner in the S.U. Ballroom.

A sell-out crowd stood for a moment of silence for the late Dag Hammarskjold after the meal of Oriental dishes.

Dr. Allen, who taught in Saigon from August of 1960 to February of 1961, said that we have done practically nothing in education. He said there are four professors and no high school teachers in South Viet-Nam.

He noted that the French have three hundred to five hundred school teachers who staff the "best secondary schools". The French maintain cultural predominance, he noted.

On the subject of American foreign policy, he said: "Emphasis of American foreign policy from the start has been military, but not well thought out." He said that there are military advisors presently in Saigon. He said, "These people are to some extent American foreign policy."

Neale Awarded $3200 Grant; Will Study, Teach in France

by ANN MILLER '64

Lester Neale, a UMass junior and recent winner of an award from Atlantic Monthly magazine for his short story, "Sometimes at Night," has received a grant of $3200 for study at the Sorbonne, as a result of the same fictional work.

The grant was awarded by the Homer Gage Foundation in conjunction with the Guggenheim Foundation. Guggenheim awards are given generally; Homer Gage grants are specifically for study in France. This award was offered by Homer Gage to twenty-five junior or senior college students in the United States, as the result of a fiction contest, to study in France.

French Manuscript Submitted

Contest participants had to submit a manuscript, written in French, to the Homer Gage Foundation. The foundation, in turn, selected a certain number to be forwarded to the Sorbonne at the University of Paris. Officials there chose the twenty five students who would receive the awards. Neale submitted, in French, "Sometimes at Night," which appeared in the Atlantic.

Neale found out that he had won last Saturday night when his family called to tell him. Asked his first reaction he said, "This is the first time I've submitted anything of this sort, and to have it received is wonderful."

Will Study This Summer

He plans to study at the Sorbonne this summer, sailing May 22, and probably the summer of 1962. He would like to study there during his senior year, but does not feel this would be possible.

As a condition of the program this summer, Neale will teach two courses in English at a French high school. He will take three courses at the Sorbonne, probably two taught in French and one in English. If he were to stay on through next year, he would take courses all taught in French. While in France, he will live with a Parisian family.

Musically Active

At UMass, Neale is active in the Wesley Fellowship, and is in his third year as a member of the choral group, the Wesleyaires. He gave a music concert last year and has another one coming up within a few weeks.

Although realizing that competition in the publishing world is strict, Neale would like to continue writing. He is presently compiling a novel which he plans to submit for publication.

50% of Class Votes In Freshman Election

Approximately nine hundred Frosh—or about 50 per cent of the class—turned out yesterday to nominate candidates for class offices for the Class of '65. The turnout was termed "fairly good" by Elections Committee Chairman Pete Haebler.

Thus Steven Graham and Al Brann will fight it out for the presidency next Tuesday in the finals while Steven Riemer and Dave Stockman will vie for the vice-presidency.

Ritchie Weinberg and Penny Bird were nominated for secretary and Marilyn Gates and Sue "Sioux" Glickman were nominated for treasurer.

The voting went as follows:

President

Hal Callaghan—205
Billy Martin—63
Steven Graham—305
Ken Jacobson—86
David Kostka—25
Peter Rawson—33
Mel Shultz—64
William McGauley—106
Al Brann—245
Chuck Wettergreen—80
David Kasoff—85
Alfred Holland—231

Vice President

Ralph Hawkins—176
Karl Polson—15
Dick Callahan—190
Steven Reimer—230
Ronald Wiberg—82
Ronald Spinnel—102
Bill Young—92
Judy Elliott—107
Dave Stockman—218

Lederle Invites General Court To University Legislator's Day

Senate President John E. Powers and Speaker of the House John Thompson will join many other Massachusetts lawmakers for a special Legislators' Day program to be held Thursday, Nov. 2, on the UMass campus.

President John W. Lederle has extended an invitation to all members of the General Court to visit the campus for the informal program which will include tours, inspection of facilities, and discussions with student leaders and faculty members.

The lawmakers will have luncheon in the Student Union where greetings will be given by Dr. Frank L. Boyden, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Dr. Lederle, and Student Senate President Arthur W. Tacelli. Following lunch brief talks will be given by Dean of Students William F. Field and Placement Director Robert J. Morrissey.

Most of the afternoon will be devoted to campus tours and informal discussions. The program will close with a short social period in the Student Union at 3:30 p.m.

In his invitation to the legislators, President Lederle said: "The University today is, in every sense of the term, the University of all Massachusetts. Your constituency, as well as that of every other legislator, is represented in the large student body that we now serve . . . . Your participation in the program will mean a great deal to us and will give you a better understanding of the University's continuing role in higher education in the Commonwealth."

The forthcoming Legislators' Day is the first time all members of the General Court have been invited to visit the state university campus at the same time.

Woody Herman and Band To Present Jazz Concert

Woody Herman and his "America's Greatest Entertaining Unit" band will perform at UMass tomorrow. Sponsored by the Arts and Music Committee, the jazz concert will be held in the Ballroom at 7 p.m.

Woody Herman is well known for helping to revive the "big band sound." His current band features 17 instrumentalists and a vocalist. Woody himself sings and plays the clarinet and alto saxophone.

Herman, often called "The Ol' Woodchopper," has recently done much entertaining abroad. He and his band made a goodwill tour of South America at the request of the U.S. State Department. During the trip they visited 23 countries in a 21-week period. The group has also appeared in Europe and in Saudi Arabia.

Herman has been in show business for over 30 years. He entered the vaudeville world when he was only nine. He joined the Tom Gerun band in the early thirties. In the same group were two vocalists, Al Morris who is more commonly known as Tony Martin, and Ginny Simms. Woody took over his first big band in 1936. He has been in the business ever since and is currently touring the country.

Dr. Clarke To Receive Decoration

The Cultural Counselor of the French Embassy will award the decoration, Palmes-Academiques, of the Legion of Honor, to Dr. Katherine Allen Clarke of the Department of Romance Languages, Thursday evening in Bartlett Auditorium, at 8 p.m.

Following the award, the Cultural Counselor, Edouard Morot-Sir, will give a lecture on "France and the World Crisis," in English.

The Award, established by Napoleon to recognize distinction by individual merit rather than by title or birth, was voted by the French government and signed by President Charles de Gaulle, recognizing Dr. Clarke's contributions to the study of French literature.

Morot-Sir is Cultural Counselor, French Embassy in America, representative of the French Universities in the United States, Executive President of the Society for French American Services and Educational Aid, and President of the Association for the Promotion of Humanities.

THIS IS UMASS

It is the thousands of minds being immersed daily in the body of truth and knowledge and wisdom.

It is the 42 members of the Student Senate convening on Wednesday night in order to discuss the new WMUA converter policy.

It is the thousands of young ears and tongues being aided by the University's Speech and Hearing Center which serves our state's children who are afflicted with speech and hearing difficulties.

It is a dozen students in Van Meter dormitory taking time out late one night in order to write to a Boston newspaper in request of greater coverage for their University.

It is the handmaid of the United States Public Health Service in the universal search for a greater knowledge of the living cell. The electron microscope which is housed in the Morrill Science Center aids UMass in the never ending battle against complacency and for excellence.

It is a crowded Student Union Ballroom audience listening intently to one of its professors lecture on nuclear weapons.

It is the subscritical nuclear reactor and allied equipment recently paid for through an Atomic Energy Commission award. Thus we see, in this and the latter paragraph, the consciousness of the student and faculty member reaching out beyond the known and into the beauty or danger lurking in the unknown of an adolescent atom.

It is the hundreds of married students at UMass who sacrifice comfort and quality in their living for the high quality of our University's education.

It is the millions of calories and hundreds of health improvements emanating from the Food Technology Department whose new building, scheduled for 1963 completion, will be the finest in the entire East.

It is the two-thirds of the student body who turned out for the Homecoming football game and the fierce pride which has sprung up for Coach Vic Fusia, his staff, and his Redmen charges who are currently ranked by the ECAC as third in the East.

It is our hundreds of pre-med students working through a program which boasts only a two per cent failure rate in our undergraduates when they enter medical schools in the fall. This rate is far below the national average.

It is the campus radio station, WMUA, setting up the broadcasting equipment for Robert Frost's lecture; a lecture which originiated in our studios and culminated in a world-wide network performance.

THIS IS YOUR UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS. UMass is all this and so much more. A community is growing at the bottom of the Berkshire mountains . . . a community and institution which will someday tower above these mountains in stature, fame, and beauty.

The Last of the Converters?

They are back again! They come back every year like the swallows to Capistrano. But this may be their last homecoming . . . at least if WMUA has any say in the matter. Of course the "they" in question are the sometimes but not oft times working converters which change WMUA F.M. to A.M. in your dormitory. Since the condition of these antagonists is once again before the Senate, it is about time a novel approach were taken. The following is WMUA's answer to the problem:

The following policy statement is the result of several months of deliberation, during which the policy board of WMUA carefully considered its present technical policies concerning radio service to the University of Massachusetts. It is the unanimous decision of the policy board that it is our duty to place all of our efforts in being an exemplary broadcasting station. It has been decided that WMUA should not be in the business of being both a broadcast station and a simultaneous receiving and rebroadcasting station, which is exactly the situation that the present converter commitmen has created.

WMUA hereby announces that we will terminate our present policy of building and supplying converter service to the dormitories as of the end of the current school year. FM radio service has come of age within the past ten years and is now accepted as the best means of transmitting high quality program material. With the present market of low-price FM-AM table radios, it is no longer impractical to own such a set because of cost or because of lack of a variety of program material available on FM. Here within the Amherst area, FM reception offers a greater variety of high quality programming than can be found on the standard broadcast band. It is also important to realize that the new four-college radio station is FM and can be heard only on FM. WMUA will arange to have the University bookstore handle the sale of good quality AM-FM radios at cost. WMUA has already explored the sources for such receivers and has located a Springfield firm which will supply the radio station with receivers meeting our specifications for the extremely low wholesale price of 18 dollars. In order to facilitate the purchase of the radios, it will be necessary to arrange with the Student Senate to underwrite the purchase of the radios. After initial arrangements have been made with the bookstore, WMUA will not be involved in the sale of receivers other than arranging for advertisement of the radios.

WMUA is fully aware that there are bound to be repercussions if the dormitories were suddenly to be left without converter service. Any dormitory desiring to continue converter service will be given the existing converter. WMUA will commit itself to offering a source of high quality audio signal at the studio suitable for feeding the converters over the telephone loops. The dorm councils desiring to maintain converter service will be given all the technical data the station has available on the individual converters. The expenses incurred for the operation of the converters, including the telephone loop, will be borne by the dorm treasury.

The Big Question: God and College

by JACQUELINE BLISS

A condensation of "God in the Colleges" by Michael Novak Harper's Oct., 1961

What is the place of God in the colleges? This thought-provoking question should be countered with "Does God exist?" Can God be in the colleges without belief of His existence? Should the life of personal conviction be separated from the life of academics?

With respect to science and technology, our way of life doesn't make religion central but optional. This brings about the fact that the colleges make clear to the students that the Big Questions of life don't count—either in academic standing, or in later life, or in research grants. The standing assumption is that the ultimate questions are in principle unanswerable, therefore are not worth asking seriously. They are considered nonintellectual and personal, whereas the university concentrates on cold facts, stifling religion and deep thinking. The university is quiet, courteous, and studious.

Being blandly tolerant seems to be everybody's ideal. Say nothing that will offend, nothing that involves personal commitment. Stay close to the public facts; learn to be objective. This tolerance of the colleges neither destroys-nor transforms-the religion of the incoming freshmen. It merely establishes, officially and in principle, that personal conviction be separated from teaching and learning. In other words, no one in official college life seems to care about the student's convictions.

Religion must enter the colleges in experience, in awareness, in slow and gradual exploration. "What, then, is the place of God in our colleges? The basic human experiences that remind man that he is not a machine, and not merely a temporary cog in a technological civilization, are not fostered within the university. God is as irrelevant in the universities as in business organizations; but so are love, death, personal destiny. Religion can thrive only in a personal universe; religious faith, hope, and love are personal responses to a personal God. But how can the immense question of a personal God even be posed and made relevant when fundamental questions about the meaning and limits of personal experience are evaded? God, if there is a God, is not dead. He will come back to the colleges, when man comes back."

--LETTERS--

To the Editor:

It's been a long time since I've been prompted to write to anyone about anything, but when the Collegian is in such sad straits that it finds it necessary to print pap such as you've written ("Society Will Not Let Us Sleep"), I find it incumbent upon this soul to at least be counted. Your little essay reads well and would no doubt bring you an "A" in your English course, but it is so juvenile that I cannot imagine how it got published. I know it is easy to tear another's works apart, and perhaps I err in the attempt, but perhaps speaking out is the answer.

"Society Will Not Let Us Sleep." That is a dandy statement and I wonder who said it. Probably some cab driver who worked nights and hated Con Edison. Maybe it was Lord Chesterfield, whoever he was. I don't really care. Who is we? Surely it can't mean me for I have never relaxed more in my life than I have since I've been in college. I go out of my way to find things to keep me busy. Surely it's not the rest of this country, for I doubt if there is one man in a thousand who can say that he doesn't get enough sleep. Who is we? Do cab drivers work that much? Maybe you got the idea from Playboy or some other Madison Avenue drummer. I've never met a man in my life who could say that he worked too much because he had to. A lot of people work many hours, but do they have to? I'm so sick of reading all this meaningless, idealistic garbage about pressure and work and society. Show me a man who can't sleep because of social pressures and I'll show you a man with insomnia.

We live in what is undoubtably the most relaxed country in the world. The average American family watches something like five hours of television a day, and if that isn't relaxation, I don't know what is. I have used many words to describe this country but none seems to fit better than "apathetic." I love this country, and yet when I speak of its people I speak with a venom that makes my hands gnarl even now as I type. Why not give us all a big, fat tranquilizer and put us off into some sensual, hypnotic reverie?

You say that "parents teach their children that desire for self-expression is a sign of immaturity, that the world is hard and cold." In itself that is a contradiction but realizing the intended meaning, I can only ask "What?" Have you ever held a job? Was it that rough? I spent four years in the service, and I felt like I was robbing Uncle Sam. I've seen Arabs slaving for a living fifteen hours a day. I've seen the French men getting killed over issues about which they knew little. There is a hard, cold world out there. No one could deny that. But it's way out there. "To Hell with society" has gotten to be a cliche for anyone who wants to express his individuality. Someone ought to print it on sweatshirts and make a little fortune. You'd better thank God for the society you've got, because only in this society could you sign off an essay "Pleasant dreams . . ." and then yawn your way to bed.

If for some reason you still believe that we can't relax, that the pace of New York, Chicago, UMass and all those states is too much, then I suggest warm milk and a soft bed for your problem. I'm still groping for the means to inject a little adrenalin into this fat cow we call our land. I don't pretend to know the answers. I hesitate to decry that which I do not know. But I do know this country from California to Florida to Maine, and I know many of its people. Sure they need "psychiatric consultation," but so do you my friend, so do you. Perhaps the 50 megaton tetanus shot might jack up a tail or two, but I doubt it. The only comment I've heard on it thus far is "Well, I guess maybe that's so . . . and who cares, I'm gonna relax."

B. U.'s Sinko Says Mass. Major Team

(Reprinted from Boston Globe)

An improved defense and the maturing of eight sophomores have played vital roles in restoring Boston University football back to respectability.

That is the feeling of Coach Steve Sinko. He took some time out yesterday at B.U. Field to discuss the Terrier football situation. It was before he met with his coaches to go over plans for Saturday's clash with UMass.

"And I want to say," Sinko declared, "that we don't regard the University of Massachusetts as a minor opposition. We started our series with that team about six years ago. It was about the same time we did likewise with the Univ. of Connecticut.

"Buff Donelli was here then and I was an assistant. The feeling was that in 10 or 12 years these rivalries would develop in to top games on our schedule. Vic Stout, our athletic director, was in favor of this.

"Well, we are halfway off the ground floor from our beginning and everything points to the UMass. and UConn. games becoming traditional as well as top events on our schedule."

Getting back to the B.U. comeback this Fall, it was noted that the Terriers have yielded only six points to each of its last two foes. These were West Virginia, conquerors of Pitt and Army, and George Washington. Both had high scoring records and B.U. had been granting about four TD's per game during its four-game losing streak.

"Yes, our defense has improved," Sinko said, "and I want to give Hal Kopp credit for this. He has been in charge of our defense. He now has the kids clicking and we hope to see them continue."

Then Steve outlined his sophomore situation.

"We had eight players who were vital to our setup," said Steve. "These are our eight sophomores. There is no better way of saying it than they have matured.

"They had to in order for us to beat a team like West Virginia. And they'll have to keep maturing if we are to win in the future against Mass., Connecticut, and Boston College."

Would Sinko care to identify the eight maturing sophomores?

"Be glad to," he replied. "We have four halfbacks who have been coming fast. They are George Byrd, Joe DiPietro, Larry Bernstein and Bob Hunt. Up front we have Bill Budness, Bill Lesinski, Jackie Edwards and Ron Timperio.

"When the season started they were all green. They made mistakes. Now, they're not making them and we're winning. We felt we had some good boys on our club. It was just a question of how long it would take them to mature."

MAKE WAY FOR KENNY

With the great line play and fine blocking produced by the Redmen against Northeastern, last Saturday, and evidenced here as KENNY PALM picks up good yardage, B.U.'s Head Coach Steve Sinko has good reason to have his doubts about the outcome of the scheduled UMass-Boston University game, this weekend.

Butterfield Gridders Win; Achieve Dorm Supremacy

Butterfield's BU-8's took over undisputed first place in the Dorm league Monday night when they crushed Berkshire House 25-6.

The game opened with a spectacular 55 yard kick-off return by Berkshire's quarterback that put the blue shirted men ahead 6-0 with only 25 seconds elapsed in the game.

However, Butterfield's stellar offensive combination of quarterback Dave Bader to Ron Rainka proved too much for Berkshire's determined smorgasborg defense as the elusive end from Warren, Mass., raced for 3 touchdowns and the eventual victory.

Butterfield's 230 pound defensive line of Dick Murphy and George Giddings played hard-nosed ball as they shut out Berkshire's potent offense from scrimmage and protected the win.

Later in the game right end Skip Freeland one-handed a floating 17 yard Bader pass in the end zone for the final touchdown. Dick Annino made good with the extra point to round out the scoring.

Butterfield, undefeated in league play, has rolled up 89 points in 4 games to their opponents' 19 and appear to be headed for a play-off berth.

Women Lose To Maroons

by PEG BAGDON '63

The UMass Women's Field Hockey Team lost a close game to Springfield College, on Wed. Oct. 25. The score of 3-2 shows how close the game really was. The two UMass goals were scored by Jess Piecewicz and Barb Viera. Other members of the offensive include Jean Condon, Jean Craig, Marty Graves, and Judy Martino. Defensive players include Peg Bagdon, Marilyn Cairns, Judy Duggan, Marilyn Fitch, Diane Fuller, Joy Gustafson, Ellie Harrington, Nancy MacDuffee, Jane Morgan, and Marilyn Wood.

Other WAA events include bowling for which schedules should be checked as to time and day of competition. Competitive swimming practice is also being held on Mon. and Wed. at 5:00 p.m.

The gymnastics club is meeting on Tuesday from 7-8 and Thursday from 5-6. All levels of skills are welcome.

Rifle Squad Loses Match

Weakness in the kneeling and standing positions meant defeat for the Stockbridge School Rifle team in its opening postal match with Trinidad State Junior College of Colorado. Headed by a 283 fired by Williams, the Trinidad team total of 1371 easily bested the Stockbridge effort of 1330.

The results are:

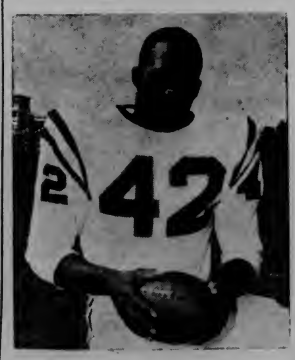
Haynes	95	90	77	262
				1330

Although defeated in its first match, the Stockbridge team total was higher than last year's opening score and gives promise of a better season.



FREDDY LEWIS

Freddy Lewis took the ECAC halfback honors for his performance in the UMass-Northeastern game. A 5'11", 201 lb. sophomore from East Longmeadow, Freddy really broke loose against the Huskies, playing his finest game of the season. A powerful runner, many sportswriters predict great things for Fred in future New England gridiron performances. Theres no question about this if he plays the way he did Saturday.

First Ballot Names 76 All-American Choices

A total of 76 players have been nominated by more than 2,000 college football coaches throughout the United States in first ballot-ing to select the 1961 edition of the original All-America team.

Voting by members of the American Football Coaches Association was based on individual player performances during the season's first three games.

Jack Curtice, Stanford University head coach and AFCA president, announces that a second vote will be taken after the next three games are played, and the final selections for the All-America first team will be made after the games of November 25.

Eastman Kodak Company will sponsor the 1961 All-America team, picked by the AFCA, and present Kodak Awards honoring the Coach-of-the-Year from a major and a small college of the second consecutive year.

The final ballot will be reviewed by the All-America Board of Coaches, representing the eight football districts in the country.

In early polling for the All-America team, coaches cast ballots only for players on their own squads and opposing players whose performances have been judged by game movies or personal observation.

Final All-America selections will be based on careful evaluation of each player's complete performance, including the analysis of game movies.

All-America nominees after the first ballot are:

STOCKBRIDGE BASKETBALL

There will be a meeting of all those interested in trying out for the Stockbridge hoop team on Thursday, Nov. 2, at 6:30 in Room 10 of the Cage.

SAE, Theta Chi Slated for Playoffs; QTV Is Victorious

SAE remained undefeated in fraternity grid action by rolling over AEPi, 33-0 Monday night. In doing so, SAE racked up their fifth shutout in 6 games. Thus far in the season the team has accumulated 139 points while giving up one lonely touchdown to second place Kappa Sig.

Quarterback Ed Connelly alternated throwing to Kevin Judge and Parker Fallon and the sure handed receivers didn't drop a pass.

Don Tomasetti hasn't scored a point for the Sunset Ave. men in the last three games and this is a clue to their lack of success this season. Opposing teams have had to key their defense on Tomasetti, who is probably the fastest pass receiver in both leagues.

A rundown of the scoring in the game would look like this: A 30 yard pass to Judge, a short rush up the middle by John Spirello, followed by a 25 yard pass to Fallon in the end zone accounted for the first three scores.

Another 30 yard pass to Judge, who made a sensational reception, and a long bomb to Monk Foley in the closing seconds of the game completed the SAE scoring.

Theta Chi fought its way to a playoff berth with first place SAE as they edged a strong TKE squad 6-0 last Wednesday night.

The lone Theta Chi touchdown came in the second half when quarterback Gordie Lewis launched a pass to Neal Harris who drew it in the endzone.

Any possible TKE retaliation was quenched when defensive halfback Mike Kelly of Theta Chi intercepted a pass. TKE did not obtain possession of the ball after that.

The Theta Chi-SAE playoff will be scheduled for some time next week.

In other intramural fraternity action, QTV dumped Alpha Sig 20-6 in a fast moving contest. The ground offense of both squads was kept to a standstill, all touchdowns coming through aerial plays.

NEXT WEEK, SAE

A jubilant Theta Chi team lives it up after defeating TKE Wednesday night to latch on to a playoff berth with first-place SAE. It promises to be a well fought contest.

The Frozen Rope

By DICK MACKLEM '62

Last Saturday evening, after watching the Redmen romp over Northeastern in the beautiful, modern Kent Field, I had the enjoyment of sitting in a box seat in the Boston Garden, where the greatest team in professional sports, the Boston Celtics, walloped the still hapless New York Knickerbockers by the score of 132-102.

To me the biggest thrill in watching the Celtics is to watch the individuals; their facial expressions, their fierce pride, and occasionally, their disappointment. I don't believe that there exists another team in sports today whose performers can cope with the individual Celtics.

The leading performer, Mr. Basketball, Bob Cousy is known by all; what more can be written. Many times, however, the show is stolen by a 6'9" mass of humanity; his dark skin, his goatee, and his flashing teeth outwardly showing the clown. Upon close observation, however, one sees the real Bill Russell, a polished and dedicated performer whose joys and sorrows have been among the closest watched in sports since he joined the Green to make them a championship team.

I could write an entire column from personal knowledge about each member of the team, (Tom Heinsohn, Jungle Jim Loscotoff, Tom Sanders, Sam Jones, etc.), and as the winter progresses I would like to. But of more importance now is to acquaint you with the two newest members of the cast, Gary Phillips and Al Butler.

Most teams are lucky if they have two or three established guards, and for the last few years the Celtics have been in excellent shape because they have had four. Now, however, all four, Bob Cousy, Carl Braun, Sam Jones, and K. C. Jones, can sit on the bench and relax while numbers 5 and 6, Mr. Phillips and Mr. Butler, take over.

Gary Phillips is a carbon copy of Frank Ramsey: charging up court, controlling a fast break dribbling with one hand and the other elbow out in front. He has all the moves of a four or five year NBA veteran, driving or stopping for a jump shot. Al Butler is another Sam Jones, harassing the defense and contributing a fine shot to the attack when needed.

As for the Knicks during the game, many times their patterns were so disorganized that they failed to even get off a shot within the 24-second time limit. Their three rookie guards, Sam Smith, Whity Martin, and George Blaney, really learned a lesson as they tried to drive in against Russell and Sanders. Many times the ball would come slamming down against their head or body from a blocked shot. The Knicks were no match for the incomparable Celtics.

J. D.'s CORNER

Potpourri column this time. For a start, you can add a new word to your vocabulary by looking up the meaning of "potpourri," if you don't know.

Book review time. In Mexico City this summer, a young writer of my acquaintance suggested that I read The Ginger Man by J. P. Donleavy. So I went into a bookstore down the block, where I was informed that the only copy they had was a paperback volume printed in France and cost 60 pesos . . . $4.80 in U.S. currency. When the salesman explained that I couldn't get the book when I returned to the States (it seemed that it was banned) I immediately bought it despite the high price. It's a fairly lengthy novel, but I finished it in a few days, with no regrets about the purchase. The style is the new "stream of consciousness" and vividly realistic, if somewhat earthy.

Since my return to the States, I've learned that the ban has been lifted and the book is now published in a very inexpensive paperback version. Pick up a copy if you can.

So that's #1 on J.D.'s recommended reading list; you'll enjoy it as much as I did.

If your local bookstore won't stock this book . . . knock something off the shelf on your way out.

Ever been to Montague? Just drive up to North Amherst and follow route 63 for about 10 miles; it's a beautiful drive, especially with the fall colors out this week. But why go to Montague? Well, if you're a bargain-hunter and want an enjoyable ride this Saturday, the senior Girl Scouts are offering "a good old-fashioned bucket-and-pail car wash" at only 85¢ per car. (White walls: 15¢ extra.) The hours are from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 to 6 p.m., and the rag-wringers will be working right in the center of town; it's such a small one that if you find the town it would be impossible to miss the Scouts. A sign on route 63 points to Montague center. (For details: FO 7-2476)

Well, I wish the girls luck. Every time my troop held a car wash, it rained.

Incidentally, there's no reason why this can't be a contributor's column, so if you have any item of particular interest, just write to me about it. Just one stipulation, though: NO PLUGS!

FRESHMAN CLASS NOTICE

Freshman candidates for class offices will address the freshman class at 11 a.m., Thursday, in the S.U. Ballroom.

Each candidate will be allowed four minutes to speak. Following the speeches there will be a question period in which questions from the floor will be answered.

This opportunity for members of the freshman class to meet their prospective officers is a presentation of Alpha Phi Omega.

Mt. Holyoke Features Language Houses Sat.

Among the major attractions being offered by Mount Holyoke College at its Open House on Nov. 4, as part of its 125th anniversary celebration, are the Russian and French language houses, which will be open to the public.

The Russian house is a new venture at Mount Holyoke, open for the first time this fall. Eighteen undergraduates are living in the house and speaking only Russian at all meals and in all public rooms, reverting to English only in their own rooms or with non-Russian speaking guests.

Housemother Is A Countess

Countess Maria Tatistscheff, a native of Russia, is acting as head of residence for the Russian house, as well as instructing in the college's rapidly expanding Russian department. Mrs. Tatistscheff fluently speaks five languages, and has taught in Italy and in this country for some years.

The Russian dormitory is housed in Everett House the oldest building on the Mount Holyoke campus. It was originally the home of the Dwight family, whose son John met and fell in love with Nancy Shaw Everett, one of Mount Holyoke's first pupils, on opening day. In 1900 Dwight and his wife Nancy donated the money for the Dwight Memorial Art Building, which is located on the site of the original homestead, and the old home was moved to its present position behind the art building.

French House Started In 1937

Mount Holyoke's Russian House, probably the first in the country, is by no means the college's first venture in foreign language houses. Le Foyer, the French house, has been operating since 1937 and is each year filled by eager applicants. The same rules apply for the French students as for the Russians—no English except with guests or in student rooms. Mme. Marthe J. Catry of Tourcoing, France, is serving as head of Le Foyer this year.

In addition to French and Russian, Mount Holyoke has in the past experimented with German and Spanish corridors and houses. Language students who have lived in any of the foreign language houses at Mount Holyoke attest to their value, and increased proficiency in an language is often attributed to the houses.

Both Le Foyer and the Russian House will be open to the public between 1:30 and 5 p.m. on Sat., Nov. 4. Other dormitories, both new and old, will also be open, as will many academic departments and non-academic buildings.

Tau Beta Pi Pledges Will Wear 'Bent'

The Massachusetts Zeta Chapter of the Tau Beta Pi Association has announced the public wearing of the "Bent" in connection with its fall initiation program.

The "Bent" is the official emblem of the national engineering honor society. In the form worn by the pledges it will be easily recognized as a large brass key suspended from the neck by a white and a seal brown ribbon.

Members, in token of fellowship with those soon to be initiated, will wear the "Bent" in the form of a watch-key or tie clasp.

This individual display will take place during class hours on November 2 and 3. Initiation ceremonies will be held Saturday afternoon November 4. The initiation banquet will follow that evening at Williams House in Northampton.

The names of the pledges will be released after formal initiation has taken place.

Christiansen To Lecture On Worth of Shelters

"Can Shelters Protect Us?" is the subject of a talk by Dr. Gordon S. Christiansen, Professor of Bio-chemistry and Chairman of the Department of Chemistry at Connecticut College, to be given Wednesday evening, November 1, at 8 o'clock, at the Jones Library Auditorium, under the auspices of the Hampshire County Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy. The public is invited.

Dr. Christiansen will apply to the Amherst area the results of a study he has made of the effects in his home town, New London, Connecticut (1) should a Hiroshima-type bomb strike the city, (2) should a 20 megaton bomb strike, and (3) should a general nuclear attack on New England take place in which New London is not directly hit.

His findings are based on studies by the Atomic Energy Commission, the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, the 1960 White House Conference on Fallout Protection, and the reports and estimates of unaffiliated scientists.

Specifically of concern to Amherst residents, would be the effects of a bomb detonated in the Westover-Springfield area.

Dr. Christiansen has attempted to allow for such variables as the location of the bomb, its height above ground, the direction of the wind, the time of day and day of the week, etc. Without making categorical statements, he will attempt to estimate the area of total destruction, areas where deep blast shelters will be effective, areas where fallout shelters will be of some help, areas which will be swept by the fire which inevitably sweeps out from the blast area.

He will estimate the effectiveness of fallout shelters under various conditions, and will consider such questions as: Could we survive a nuclear attack? Can shelters save us? In there any defense? Is there anything we can do now to prevent this tragedy?

Operetta Guild Plans Expansion of Program

Activity for the Operetta Guild did not end with their four day campus run of "Oklahoma!". Under the direction of Professor Doric Alviani, advisor, and student Paul Cwiklik, business manager, the Guild pursues further fund raising and educational justification with appearances in Keene, New Hampshire and Palmer, Mass.

On Thursday evening "Oklahoma!" will be presented as a benefit for the Keene Rotary Club. Proceeds from the show will be used for the Club's Crippled Children's Fund and for its Educational Scholarship Fund. Friday, Nov. 3, the show moves to Palmer under the sponsorship of the Palmer Rotary Club for the benefit of their Educational Service Fund.

Three Awards Given

In its expansion already the Guild has recognized students with Oklahoma Statesmen Awards. Ten talented Frosh participating in acts ranging from an impersonation of blues singer Ray Charles to a song and dance routine straight from Broadway appeared in the Guild sponsored Freshmen Talent Show on Sunday, October 22. The winners were Marilyn Jones, an accordionist, and Linda Willis and William Wilkinson, vocalists.

The Oklahoma Statesmen Awards were made possible by donations from administrators, merchants, and organizations listed in the Playstate Program of the Guild's recent production. By sponsoring such a show the Guild hoped to introduce to the campus community the variety of existing talent among University students and at the same time to recognize in a beneficial way the student with a specific musical ability. The idea of a show with persons in competition will continue, but not necessarily limited to freshmen participation.

Legislators To See "Oklahoma"

The Guild also plans to bring campus activity to the attention of the Massachusetts State Legislators who will be visiting our campus on Thursday. Through a brief presentation of excerpts from "Oklahoma!", it will attempt to introduce its type of multi-curricular education to the legislators who have only a short time in which to form an impression of our campus and our student life.

Trip to Sturbridge To Be Sponsored By History Club

President James O'Leary of the University of Massachusetts history club has announced its sponsoring of an excursion to Old Sturbridge Village on November 8.

According to Professor William Wickwire, history club faculty advisor, the trip is open to anyone on campus and all that is necessary is to sign up on the bulletin board outside of the history office in Bartlett Hall by Friday noon November 3.

This is the first of this year's ventures undertaken by this newly revitalized organization. A program of noted speakers and panel discussions by noted people in the four-college area will take place. It has been promised that only topics of a wide and general interest will be reviewed.

Mahler To Lead Symphony On Visit Here Next Week

Fritz Mahler, distinguished conductor of the Hartford Symphony, fresh from successful European and South American engagements, will appear with the Hartford Little Symphony on Wednesday, Nov. 8, at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium at UMass.

The Hartford Little Symphony consists of the principal players of the Hartford Symphony and includes five violins, one viola, one cello, one string bass, harpsichord and oboe.

Compositions by Purcell, Corelli, Marcello, Mozart, Tchaikowsky, Bartok and Vivaldi will be played at the University event. Series tickets are still available at the R.S.O. Office. Single admissions will be sold at the door. Students need only I.D.s for admittance.

The program to be played by the Hartford Little Symphony is a mixture of familiar as well as lesser known compositions for chamber orchestra. Most of the compositions emphasize the use of strings. For authenticity a harpsichord will also be used. The Concerto in C Minor by Marcello, written for oboe soloist, will provide tonal contrast.

Mahler has appeared several times with the Hartford Symphony on television. The orchestra received many favorable comments for its public service performances in the Connecticut area. The orchestra and its conductor have become famous for their recordings of the Requiem by Berlioz and Orff's Carmina Burana.

The University series, conducted under auspices of the Concert Association, will present three additional concerts during the academic year. These include a program by Flamenco guitarist Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, Feb. 20, and the American Ballet Carlos Montoya ,Jan. 9, 1962, the Theatre, April 12.

Author Archibald MacLeish To Give Reading Thursday

Poet Archibald MacLeish will give a reading at UMass on Thursday, Nov. 9 at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

The appearance of MacLeish is under the sponsorship of the Rand Commemoration Fund, a lecture program instituted and financed by nearly 700 former students of Professor Frank Prentice Rand. Rand retired in 1959 after 44 years on the University faculty.

MacLeish has been Librarian of Congress, Director of the U.S. Office of Facts and Figures, a UNESCO associate, and a practicing lawyer in Boston. He won the Bollingen Prize for poetry in 1953, the Pulitzer Prize in poetry in 1932 and 1953, a National Book Award in 1953, and was the 1956 Boston Arts Festival Poetry winner.

The poet, playwright, and author is probably best known for his Pulitzer Prize winning drama J.B. This play was developed from his bestselling book of the same title, and received numerous awards during its run on Broadway. MacLeish is currently Boylston Professor of Rhetoric at Harvard University.

The public is cordially invited to attend the lecture; there will be no admission charge.

71 Spend Day Here; Lawmakers Hear Report on Students' Financial Problems

by JOE BRADLEY '64, News Assignment Editor

Seventy-one members of the Great and General Court visited the campus yesterday for guided tours, informal talks with student constituents, and a first hand look at the University of the Commonwealth.

The lawmakers heard Director of Placement Robert J. Morrissey describe the financial situation of the students here, saying, "probably 75 percent of our students have some degree of financial need . . . to meet the total $1350 which is the bare minimum for a full academic year at the university."

The information was based in part on a financial information questionnaire which was sent to all freshman families of which 90 per cent responded to questions concerning family income, number of dependents, savings and investments, and income tax paid.

Questionnaire Explains Needs

Dean of Students William F. Field explained, "The responses of these parents will enable the Univerisity to understand, and to present to the Legislature, a clear and accurate picture of the financial .demands being met by parents sending their sons and daughters to the University."

Field pointed out that the median family reported a 1960 income of $7575, including contributions by both parents, with the largest number of families reporting family incomes between $6000 and $8000.

Morrissey said, "These facts make it clear that many more scholarships are needed at the University than the $744 per student already supplied by the Commonwealth . . ."

Morrissey had previously told the legislators that 1477 students last year earned $279,298 working on campus, $174,011 of which was furnished by the Commonwealth.

Speaker of House John Thompson, President John W. Lederle and Senate President John E. Powers met during Legislators' Day at UMass.

Senate President John E. Powers praised the Legislator's Day idea and spoke glowingly of President Lederle saying, "I know of no person who better understands the legislative position than yourself."

Says Senate Shares Responsibility

Powers went on: "We share equal responsibility with you. We want you to have the best. We want you to be the best."

Powers' counterpart in the lower house, Speaker John W. Thompson, emphasized, "With a little reasonableness we can develop this University to be one the greatest in the country." Thompson declared that a "sympathetic Legislature," and what he called "understanding" on the part of the University, would bring about greatness.

The legislators were entertained during the luncheon with excerpts of "Oklahoma!" presented by a skeleton Operetta Guild group who performed several selections amid the tables. The lawmakers appeared to enjoy the O.G.'s brief show as some sang alone and others applauded.

Singing Idol To Appear In Springfield

On the evening of November 17th, music lovers in the western Mass. area will be presented with the highlight of the fall concert season, when Johnny Mathis, popular ballad singer, will appear in concert for a one night engagement at the Springfield Municipal Auditorium.

Formerly a track star while attending San Francisco State College, Mathis has leaped into stardom during his singing career. Included in his long string of musical hits are several single recordings and albums that have either reached or surpassed the million mark in sales.

The November concert is being presented by Park Enterprises, Inc., a group of college students in the Springfield area.

This production will be the fourth in a series for the young promoters, who have previously had sold out performances in both Worcester and Springfield with the world famous Kingston Trio. Also included in past presentations in Springfield have been Ray Charles and the Brothers Four.

The sponsors of the shows, Ron Lalli, Bob Magnacca, and Larry Derose, have met with success. Their past experiences and the boys are planning to continue promoting concerts on a part time basis after college.

FOREIGN FILMS and UNDERSTANDING

Over the last three years, few industries have grown with the strength and support that the foreign film industry has. Crushing the walls of prejudice which were religiously erected against the "art" films some years ago, the foreign films are now drawing United States crowds comparable in size to our own Hollywood million dollar extravaganzas.

Americans have too long shied away from the foreign, frowned at the accented word, and simply tolerated the alien expression of genius. The time has arrived, as our world shrinks and an individual's radius of thought encroaches upon the area of his neighbor, for us to do more than just tolerate or frown or shy away. It is time for us to appreciate and enjoy and seek out the genius of man's ideas and tongue whether he be white or black or yellow, whether he be with or without accent.

This marked popularity in foreign films in American theatres is a major step in destroying ethno-centrism among Americans. The brilliance of Russian, British, German, Swedish, and Italian writers and actors prove a ready stimulant in encouraging greater international understanding.

Sunday night at 7 p.m., the University of Massachusetts will present the first in a series of foreign films (see listing on this page). This is an opportunity that should not be ignored. Student support of such a service is essential to its continuous performance.

The Latest In Paperback

An excerpt from the former bestseller now out in a paperback version:

"Statistics show that the percentage of suicides among the German Jews was practically nil during the years before the end. So it was in the prisons, in the ghettos, in all the caves of darkness where the beast's muzzle sniffed up from the abyss, and even at the entrance of the crematorium—'anus of the world' in the words of a learned Nazi eyewitness. But back in 1934, hundreds and hundreds of little German-Jewish schoolboys came up for their examinations in suicide, and hundreds of them passed.

So the first death of Ernie Levy takes its place among the statistics beside hundreds of similar (though more irrevocable) deaths. It is admirable that during a period when they were teaching murder to their Aryan scholars, the instructors taught the Jewish children suicide. This point illuminates German technique—its extreme rigor and simplicity, from which no departures are tolerated even in pedagogy.

When Mordecai discovered the lifeless body of the child at the foot of the wall in the courtyard—a bird blasted in flight, in a spattering of feathers and blood—he felt himself going mad. His heavy gray eyes remained dry; they hung like stones in their sockets. As he approached the body his teeth dug deeper into his lower lip—one red thread, then two, then three fell along his squarish beard. He saw that Ernie was lying cheek to the ground like a hunting dog, his long curls covering his face discreetly. Death had overtaken him in a position of sleep. 'O Lord, did you not pour him forth like milk? Did you not make him firm like cheese? Hear me, you covered him with flesh and skin, you wove him of bone and nerves, and now you have destroyed him . . .' Falling to his knees, Mordecai was shocked at the buzzing of flies circling about the thin cirpse. One of them, enormous and greenish, landed greedily on the point of a bone that had ripped through the skin of the elbow. Mordecai slipped his arm under the broken body and raised it from its bed of stone and blood. 'Here,' he said to the child in a calm voice, 'I cry out at the violence and nothing answers.' At that moment the schoolboy's smock lifted, fell, lefted again with the miraculous regularity of living organisms."

Changing Times

by DAVID ROSENBERG

In this period of crisis over Berlin and the entire "German question," it is important that we, as a people and as a government, should know who our West German "allies" really are. Although we have been told time and again that West Germany is free and democratic, a closer look at the government which may lead us into a nuclear holocaust is not out of order. Here are a few pertinent facts on the West German government:

Chancellor Adenauer—former Director of the Deutsche Bank, one of three principal banking houses which financed the Hitler regime.

Secretary of State Globke—author of legal commentary on infamous Nuremberg racial laws giving legal basis of expropriation of Jewish property and deportations.

Interior Minister Schroeder—member of Storm Troops.

Defense Minister Strauss—political indoctrination officer in Nazi Wehrmacht.

Finance Minister Etzel—officer in Nazi Wehrmacht.

Justice Minister Schaeffer—leader in Nazi Party.

Housing Minister Luecke—industrialist and officer in Nazi Wehrmacht.

Diplomatic envoy to the United States Whilhelm Grewe—education officer in Hitler Youth Corp.

The facts go on. Professor Koppel Pinson, in his book, "Modern Germany: Its History and Civilization", says that of 383 senior officials in the Foreign Office of West Germany in 1951, 134 had been Nazi Party members, and further: They are not only nominal party members. They include among others the author of the official legal commentary to the (racist) Nurenberg laws, the organizer of the Grand Mufti in the Near East, THE director of the East European Division of the Nazi Foreign Office, the active leader in the deportation of the Jews of Amsterdam, and the man who ordered the extermination of Jews deported from Rumania.

More facts. Of 70 Bonn embassies and legations, more than 50 are headed by ex-Nazi diplomats. The majority of judges in germany today served during the facist regime. Old nazi schoolteachers have not been re-educated. The history textbooks generally used in German schools tell almost nothing of the facist crimes against the Jews, Gypsies, and other nationals of the Soviet Union, France, Poland, etc.

The German trusts and cartels, such as I. G. Farben, Thyssen, and Krupp are back in business and apparently exert the same force on the German government as they did under Hitler. These are the same people who use slave labor in their factories to make poison gas and human ovens!

In control of the NATO ground forces in Europe is General Hans Speidal, ex-Nazi member of Hitler's general staff. Working out of the Pentagon at Washington in connection with NATO is General Adolf Heusinger, another Hitlerite general. These, along with other Nazi generals and the West German Government are now demanding nuclear weapons so that they can once more "defend" themselves against "the Bolshevik threat," as they did in 1939-1945.

Clearly then, the present West German Government, being ruled by the same people as before, must have essentially the same nature. Those forces in control of West Germany are trying with all their perverted ability to fully re-militarize and get revenge for the defeat they suffered in the last war. If the public in this country does not become aware of the actual situation in Germany and Berlin, the revenge-seeking militaristic, anti-semetic clique ruling West Germany will push the entire world over the final brink.

There are no basic antagonisms between the United States and the Soviet Union over the West Berlin situation. In the main only the blind forces of revenge and aggression in the immoral West German Government are hindering a peaceful solution.

The Forty-First—color, 100 min. (Russian dialog with English subtitles.)

Among the reacherous sands of the KaraKum desert during the Civil War period, a small Ref Guard detachment, battle-weary, wounded and tortured by thirst, has lost its way. Their best sniper is the young girl Maryutka. Spotting an enemy caravan, they attack and Maryutka scores her 40th point, but misses on her 41st attempt to kill a White Guard officer. He is taken prisoner and it is not long before the two begin to feel a strong attraction toward each other. Reaching the Aral sea, they become shipwrecked in a storm and find themselves on an uninhabited island. Here, amidst the sea, wind and sun, Maryutka experiences her first love. All alone, far from the world and the war, the two forget their enmity. But when he finally runs to rejoin his detachment, she must face her ultimate test.

Fifty-One Years of Roister Doister

On January 10, 1910, the Massachusetts Agricultural College Dramatic Society was formed. Before this all dramatic endeavors on the campus were simply class activities. The first advisor was a Mr. McKay, who was an instructor in the Department of English. It is interesting to note tha the students wanted credit for dramatic activities. The group presented two farces, THE PRIVATE SECRETARY and WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES.

On October 15, 1912, the old constitution was dropped and the Roister Doisters created. The organization was named after the first English comedy, RALPH ROISTER DOISTER, by Nicholas Udall.

In 1920 a new English instructor arrived on the campus; his name was Frank Prentice Rand. He was to be director and advisor for the Roister Doisters for 27 years. With the advent of the first actress in the organization in the early 1920's, the R.D.'s were able to do something other than farces. They did four plays by George Bernard Shaw, five by William Shakespeare: TWELFTH NIGHT, MACBETH, OTHELLO, AS YOU LIKE IT, and LOVE'S LABOR'S LOST; two plays by Thornton Wilder, and others by such playwrights as Eugene O'Neill, A. A. Milne, and John Galsworthy. Under Mr. Rand's directorship the group made some rather interesting advances in drama. They did ON CORPUS CHRISTI DAY, a collection of four fourteenth-century miracle plays, CREATION, THE FLOOD, NATIVITY, and HARROWING IN HELL. They were presented in Grinnell Area, which was made to look like a street. They also did William Shakespeare's AS YOU LIKE IT out-of-doors in the Ravine and SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER, performed in modern dress. The latter won critical acclaim in the Dallas Morning News and over Radio WLS of Chicago.

When Mr. Arthur Niedeck arrived in 1947, the plays began to be more contemporary than when Mr. Rand directed. Mr. Niedeck did such plays as JOAN OF LORRAINE, I REMEMBER MAMA, A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM, and ANGEL STREET. Mr. Niedeck's faculty of Miss Doris Abramson and Mr. Henry B. Pierce carried on the trend of contemporary drama with such works as ELIZABETH THE QUEEN, THE MADWOMAN OF CHAILLOT, TIGER AT THE GATES, TEAHOUSE OF THE AUGUST MOON, INHERIT THE WIND, and AUNTIE MAME.

Over the course of 51 years, R.D.'s have produced over 90 different plays. They have been classics, contemporary, or original, but they are all productions which have aimed for high artistic standards.

These standards are being kept with the fall production of VOLPONE, which will be presented November 16, 17, and 18 in Bowker Auditorium. The adaptation of Ben Jonson's bawdy Elizabethan comedy, under the direction of Miss Doris E. Abramson of the Speech Department, will be presented in a highly theatrical style, which ranges from ornate costumes and gorgeous sets to a highly unusual dance number. The Roister Doisters will certainly surpass works previously done with this excellent production.

Mortar Board Initiates Campus Development Of Cultural Activities

The Mortar Board is a group of senior women chosen to serve as an honor and service organization. After three years of active participation in all phases of college life at UMass, they attempt to develop an area of interest on campus that has previously been neglected and make it an active part of campus life.

A few years ago the project of the Fine Arts Festival was instituted by the Mortar Board. Again this year, the Fine Arts Council will be the main area of interest for the Mortar Boards. According to the president, Linda Achenbach, the Council will soon be turned over to a group of students on campus who have a particular interest in the Fine Arts Program. The Mortar Boards of future years will be able to decide upon a new project of particular interest to their group.

Other projects which the Mortar Boards have undertaken for the year include the Tea for Honoraries, who are members of the faculty which the Mortar Boards have tapped to act as unofficial advisors, and the I.Q. Tea for all girls with a 3.0 average or better.

With the Adelphia men the Mortar Boards have given talks to all the freshman women in the dormitories. The main topic of these talks was the social and dating aspects of campus life.

Co-Ediquet was edited and sent to all the freshman women during the summer.

The Mortar Boards also ushered at the Opening Convocation, helped with the foreign student reception and served as hostesses at Legislators day.

The UMass Chapter of Mortar Boards has only been a national chapter since 1955. Before that it was known as Isogon. The national chapter had few regulations by which the local chapters must abide. The local can decide how many girls to tap as long as the number is between 5 and 25. Since it is an honor society the average for eligibility must be high. For the girls who will be tapped in the spring the average will be 2.7.

National Convention

Linda Achenbach represented the UMass chapter at the tri-annual National Mortar Board convention held at Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, Oklahoma this summer. The theme of the convention was "The Changing Challenge". The keynote speaker, Dean Craig from Stanford posed challenges to the delegates. He stated that women represent the unused potential of the country which will soon have to be developed.

Linda feels that she had acquired many ideas which she hopes will be put to use here. One of these is a well developed graduate school program for women who wish to go on to higher education.

Seeing the scope of Mortar Board was impressive for Linda. She found it gratifying to discuss problems of national scope with girls from so many different area of the country.

The convention was terminated with a candle light banquet. Each girl had a candle at her place and each one lit the candle as the chapter roll call was called. This proved to be an impressive end to an extremely worthwhile convention.

Fashions of UMass Campus Are Casual

Since most college girls and fellows attend their 8 o'clock classes in a come-as-you-are state, we would like to suggest a few ready-to-go outfits.

If you don't have sufficient time to find those socks that were lost under the bed last week, just slide into your loafers or your air conditioned sneakers (beat tennies). Knee-socks are still prevalent and are well put to use on those chilly mornings.

Sweaters, brighter and bulkier!! Tweedy, striped, and ski sweaters are seen everywhere this fall. Mohair has become the popular type—, and almost no girl is lacking a ribbon-bound shetland or a back-in-style V-neck.

A burst of color has come into fashion. Combinations of colors are quite varied and unconservative—certain reds with mute pinks—ivy blues with loden greens. Other popular fall colors include smoky brown, oatmeal beige, and brick and paprika red, and the ever-popular tartan plaids.

Loden coats and more loden coats!! A few individuals (coeds) have been seen sporting plaid capes! The fellows seem to be ahead of the girls, because there seem to be a multitude of ponchos worn. Pig-skin gloves are in, and touches of fur can be seen almost everywhere.

Hats are being worn on campus—not a solemn hat, but a mostly-for-fun one—usually an oval shaped Russian fur cap.

For that extra touch, girls have added bows and bands to their hairdos. The bows may be worn anywhere from front to back and from side to side.

And "when the study hour draws nigh—'tis then" we get into our dungarees which have been cut and rolled up to the knee. And 'tis always then that we get that unexpected caller!!

United Nations Coffee Hour Held At Hamlin

Thursday night, October 26, from 7:30 to 9, Hamlin House held its annual U.N. Coffee Hour, honoring the sixteenth birthday of the United Nations.

The coffee hour, held annually in Hamlin Lounge, was attended by the dormitory's residents and invited guests. Included were many of the foreign students on campus.

Among the guests were Mrs. Woodside; Miss Helen Curtis, Dean of Women; Mrs. Elizabeth Gonan, Assistant Dean of Women; Dr. and Mrs. Mack Drake; Dr. Luther Allen; Dr. and Mrs. Feng; Miss Ruth Totman, head of the Women's Physical Education Department, and Dr. and Mrs. Ferenc Vali.

The foreign students acting as hostesses included Miss Seva Sud of India, Rosalita de la Mar of the Philippines, Miss Kusum Joshi of India, and Miss Suh-jen Chang of China.

At the conclusion of Dr. Vali's U.N. speech, everyone stood for a moment of silence for the late Dag Hammarskjold.

Over-all chairman of the coffee hour was Betty Erker. Committee chairmen were Pat Valiton, Dotty Berry, Jane Buckley, Karen Jacobsen, and Roberta LaBatte. The evening was very successful and enjoyed by all who attended.

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

The Lambda Phi's would like to congratulate Dolores Mathews on her election to the Senate, and to Nancy Andrade, a pledge, on her election to the Sophomore Executive Council.

Merilee Atkins, house president, was a delegate to the Conference on Educational Philosophies held at Goddard College in Vermont during October 26-28.

The sisters were recently pleased to show their house to Mrs. Gonon and three representatives from a Japanese University. The representatives are interested in copying college living for the girls on their campus.

Also visiting the house and campus recently were two sisters from Beta Chapter at Rhode Island.

The Lambda Phi's spent a very enjoyable evening with Dr. Van Steenberg, as a dinner guest last week.

The sisters are keeping busy in their "spare time" kintting mittens and making doll clothes and toys for underprivileged children in Leominster as their Christmas philanthropy.

Smart Bridge Notes

On Thursday, October 26, it was a small game. The game is yours. Come on out and try it. Help keep it alive. The top places were:—

1. Dubis and Emonds	41 pts
2. Hunter and Shea	34½ pts
3. Pemple and Crawford	32½ pts
4. Ratay and Simon	28½ pts

The following deal is reported because it conceals some interesting questions. Everyone bid four spades except one stopped at 3. Also it was set once, interesting. But defensive 5 hearts cannot be stopped. How would you have bid the hand? E-W Vulnerable and South is dealer.

NORTH
H J, 4
D J, 9, 4
C K, J, 10, 8, 5, 3, 2

WEST	EAST
A, 6	7
A, 9, 7, 5, 3	K 10, 8, 6, 2
Q, 7, 3	K, 6, 5, 2
9, 7, 4	A, Q, 6

SOUTH
Q, J, 10, 9, 8, 5, 4, 3, 2
Q
A, 10, 8

What would you do if you were South and the dealer? At the worst there are only 5 losers and the high card count is less than 11 so a preempt 4 spades is reasonable. But not if he preempts 3 spades. His partner should pass since he cannot guarantee 3 tricks. If he is conservative and bids only 1 spade the hearts will get going.

West certainly can't defend against a preempt.

Your commentator as East made a very questionable double since he believed the weakness of South's preempt, had an opening bid and wanted to make his partner bid and he was not playing any strange bids like the Texas Shift.

But his partner let the double ride!

He did set it one and got a top on the board, but he had to have some help from the opposition. We will call this the "preempt hand."

Hillel Movie Centers On Life of Zola

A movie, The Life of Emile Zola, sponsored by the Hillel Foundation, will be shown Sunday, November 5, at 7 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room.

Paul Muni, who stars as Zola, received the Academy Award for best actor for this role. The film concerns the famous Dreyfus Case and Zola's defense, J'accuse, for which he was brought to trial for libel. It is the story of a courageous man fighting intolerance and antisemitism.

Admission is 25¢. Cider and doughnuts will be served.

Yale Center of Alcoholic Studies Gives Facts On The Problem of The Hangover

Some 75 million Americans have known the misery of a hangover, and an expert at the Yale Center of Alcoholic Studies claims that the hangover causes the greatest loss to industry. Yet public knowledge about the hangover—cause and cure—is riddled with superstitions and inaccuracies. Here are some facts. There is a sure-fire cure for hangover. Eating dinner before drinking liquor may lead to a worse hangover than drinking on an empty stomach. Glass for glass, beer will give you as much of a hangover as whiskey—probably more. Of the common drinks, bonded bourbon will give you the worst hangover and vodka the least—because one culprit in hangovers is the fusel in your drink. And drinking more alcohol to delay a hangover is sometimes a good idea.

The hangover is deadly serious.

An expert at the Yale Center of Alcohol Studies says: "It is the hangover that represents the biggest loss to industry." The hangover costs America a billion dollars a year.

The facts may surprise you. There is a sure-fire cure for a hangover. Eating food before drinking may lead to a worse hangover. Glass for glass, beer will give you as much of a hangover as whiskey—probably more.

What It Is

The basic cause of a hangover, according to scientists, is lack of oxygen in the brain. Alcohol acts like an anesthetic: if it isn't burned up quickly enough, it prevents oxygen from reaching the brain cells.

Alcohol itself the body can pretty well take care of. But not these impurities, called fusel oil, that keep the body from burning up the alcohol quickly enough. In the fermentation and distillation of liquor, some 100 to 200 impurities are formed — besides the ethyl alcohol.

Vodka, on the other hand, won't cause hangover unless consumed in massive loses. This is because vodka is made by removing impurities from the raw liquor—rather than adding them. Some liquors have more fusel oil than others. Bonded bourbon has the most.

Gin, though it is low in fusel oil, may give some persons a whopping hangover because the usual flavoring in gin is oil of juniper and certain persons are sensitive to it.

Prevention

The Egyptions ate boiled cabbage, the Roman Emperor Tiberius chewed bitter almonds, and Pliny the Elder (27-79 A.D.) recommended the eggs of an owlet. In modern times, we use olive oil, yeast cake, Fuller's Earth, milk and vitamins.

There is some justification. Food, especially fatty foods, will absorb alcohol and delay its entering the bloodstream. The key word is delay: the alcohol will get there eventually.

In fact, if you have dinner before drinking, you will have to imbibe twice as much to get high . . . and you will get a hangover that's twice as bad.

No one develops a tolerance to alcohol: the same amount will make you lit every time. And no one is immune to hangovers: a person who boasts he is immune doesn't know what it feels like to be at his best.

Cure

Among the concoctions used to cure hangovers are: Prairie oysters; yogurt; a combination of bugleweed, fever root, and wild lettuce leaves; and the Chinese Got Far Flower.

Another useless measure is exercise.

True Remedies

Turning to true remedies, food is one. Your body needs nourishment. You need salt and sugar to readjust your body's baalnce. Fresh air, with its oxygen, and rest will prove helpful.

More alcohol will only postpone the agony and intensify it.

According to William DeWitt, "Stale beer, if you happen to like it, was a tough old San Francisco waterfront standby". He also recommends a Bloody Mary, which he says, "'is full of both vitamins and dog-hair revitalizing."

"The panacea for hangover will be at hand when people learn to drink sensibly."

Did Boston Ban Volpone?

"Was 'Volpone' really banned in Boston?" Hal Hinds (left) who plays Mosca in the Roister Doisters' fall production, asks Director Doris E. Abramson. Rich Gardner, as Voltore, and Mick Broadhurst, as Volpone, seem ready to answer in the affirmative, while Peter Avratin, as Corbaccio, seems a little doubtful.

The adaptation of Ben Jonson's bawdy Elizabethan comedy will be presented in Bowker Aud. on November 16, 17, and 18. Tickets will be on sale in the S.U. Box Office beginning Nov. 8.

Dr. Janowitz Talks On Our Mental Health

"Student Resources For Mental Health" will be Dr. Julian Janowitz's topic when he speaks to The Wesley Foundation this Sunday, November 5, at 7:00 p.m. A supper will be served at 6:00 p.m. for a 40¢ charge.

Dr. Janowitz will be speaking on the problem of mental health for the college student as he faces the stress and strain of campus living.

What are his resources?

How may he best utilize the powers that are within him to do his best in this educational process at college?

These are some of the questions that will be forthcoming as Dr. Janowitz speaks and answers questions at Wesley Foundation. All are welcome to come.

Dr. Janowitz will also be speaking to married students at The Thompson House this Saturday evening at 8:00 p.m. on the topic, "Mental Health for Married Students." All married students are invited to attend. Call AL 3-2280 for baby sitting service.

Volunteers To Travel

The Northampton Association of Student Volunteers will hold a meeting Wed., Nov. 1 for all students interested in Occupational or Musical Therapy at Northampton State Hospital. The meeting will be at 7 p.m. in the Hospital Auditorium, Main Building.

University students will leave from Arnold Dorm at 6:30 p.m. and travel by private cars to the Hospital. Previous experience is unnecessary and all interested students are invited to attend. Study rooms are provided at the Hospital and anyone able to help this group by driving the students over please contact Steve Daly, Rm. 210 Wheeler.

Every Thursday evening a group of students interested in the Remotivation and Case Aid Programs leave campus, again from Arnold Dorm, and serve directly on the Chronic Wards unde the supervision of Miss Eaton, Superintendent of Nurses. Drivers and interested students are invited to join this section of the Volunteer's Program as well.

Application blanks may be filled out at the S.U. Lobby Counter.

Jones Libe Features Reading By UMass Eng. Instructors

UMass students are cordially invited to attend a poetry reading at the Jones (town) Library on Tuesday evening, Nov. 7, at 7:30 p.m. Reading selections from their own poetry will be Robert G. Tucker and Anthony S. LaBranche, both instructors in English at the University.

The program is sponsored by the Amherst Art Center, and Mr. Stephen L. Hamilton, president of the Center, will introduce the poets. Refreshments will be served at the close of the reading.

Mr. Tucker, who teaches creative writing, has been on the University staff since 1951. Works by him have been published in The Minister's Quarterly, Amherst Poets 1959, Monument, The CEA Cretic, and The Massachusetts Review.

Mr. LaBranche joined the faculty in 1960 after teaching at the U. of Michigan. He has published poetry in the University of Kansas City Review and has read his poems at Michigan.

Similar poetry readings by local poets will be given at the Jones Library on the first Tuesday of each month.

UMass-B. U. Game Among East's Best

One of New England's top college football games of the week is slated for this Saturday at 1:30 p.m. on Alumni Field when the University of Massachusetts hosts the Boston University eleven.

Coach Vic Fusia's Redmen squad has made a very fine start in Fusia's first season as head coach, winning four out of five games to date with the setback being a very respectable showing against once-beaten Villanova. Coach Steve Sinko's Terriers, on the other hand, tackled the roughest part of its schedule during the beginning of the campaign, and now that the Beantowners have hit their stride with consecutive wins over West Virginia and George Washington University it appears as though they are out to push their overall record back to the .500 mark.

The Terrier line, which averages fifteen pounds a man more than the Redmen forward wall, is apt to give the UMass Double L halfback combination of Sam Lussier and Fred Lewis a rugged time which could mean that quarterback John McCormick might take to the air more often than he has in games to date. Lussier and Lewis, who have been averaging 6 and 4.7 yards per carry respectively, have accounted for almost seventy percent of the Massachusetts rushing yardage in the five games. McCormick and B.U. quarterback, Jackie Farland have identical passing and completion records as both seniors have completed twenty-seven out of fifty-nine attempts.

Sophomores have played key roles in the past performance of both squads this fall and in all probability both teams will have four second year men in their starting lineups for Saturday's encounter. For the Terriers, Coach Steve Sinko will have guard Bill Budness, and Jack Edwards, and halfbacks Larry Bernstein and Joe DiPietro in the lineup while Fusia has indicated that tackle Don Hagberg, guard Sam Slick, halfback Fred Lewis, and fullback Ken Palm will get starting assignments for the home eleven.

The lineups:

	Massachusetts
190	Paul Majeski	LE
214	Bob Foote	LT
190	Sam Slick	LG
196	Tom Kirby	C
190	Dick Eger	RG
215	Don Hagberg	RT
201	Dave Harrington	RE
203	John McCormick	QB
205	Fred Lewis	LH
186	Sam Lussier	RH
190	Ken Palm	FB
	Boston U.
220	Karl Kaimer	LE
225	Ned Handy	LT
205	Steve Turkalo	LG
215	Don LaTona	C
200	Bill Budness	RG
235	Pete Perreault	RT
210	Jack Edwards	RE
185	Jackie Farland	QB
185	Joe DiPietro	LH
190	Larry Bernstein	RH
205	Charlie Meadows	FB

A GREAT DAY FOR FOOTBALL

The University of Massachusetts hasn't had the greatest of luck, both in the victory sense and in the weather, whenever the Terriers have visited Alumni Field. For the past two home games, it's been rainy and winless. The Redmen hopes are a lot higher for Saturday's game.

Redmen Power, Depth At Ends A Key to Success, Says Fusia

Baseball and football coaches wear out an old cliche, that it's "Strength Down the Middle" that counts and whether they talk about their center, fullback and quarterback positions on the gridiron or their catching, pitching, centerfield and keystone combination on the diamond, most successful mentors figure you just don't win if you haven't got it down the middle.

Vic Fusia, new head coach of the University of Massachusetts whose squad has won four of its first five games, has taken a little different perspective lately when he says: "One of the main reasons for our overall success this season thus far has been the excellent play of our four ends, Paul Majeski of Westfield, Dave Harrington of Holyoke, Ed Forbush of East Longmeadow, and Roger DeMinico of Winchester."

"I certainly don't want to take credit away from some of our other players for their showings to date," Fusia was quick to add "but all season long our ends have made the big plays when they have been called upon and defensively they have bailed us out of critical situations on more than one occasion."

ROGER DeMINICO

ED FORBUSH

Harrington and Forbush have lettered at end during their sophomore and junior years but seem to be doing more things better during their senior seasons. Majeski was the team's leading pass receiver as a sophomore and is also tops in this department thus far this fall and if there is a better all around end in New England, the UMass coaching staff is still looking for him. "Paul seems to be able to latch on to just about everything that is thrown his way," end coach Fred Glatz comments, "and in addition to being able to make any defensive play you expect and end to make in college football these days, Paul makes those downfield blocks that have sprung our backs on more than one occasion.

DeMinico, a standout at end on last year's fine frosh team has matured in a hurry this fall to add the depth that had been lacking during pre-season drills. "We have had some great play by our flankmen all season," Fusia concluded, "but I hope they have saved their premier performance for Boston U. this weekend because we are going to need a superb effort by everyone if we are to make our home finale a successful one."

Baker 'A' Downs Plymouth House in Defensive Battle

A fired-up Plymouth House almost upset a highly favored Baker "A" team, but lost 13-6 in an almost strictly defensive battle.

The game threatened to be a rout as Baker "A" Q.B. Bob Sullivan pitched a perfect strike to end George Poirier for a 35 yard T.D. John Murphy then grabbed a hook pass in the end zone for the conversion.

Plymouth received the kick-off and was stopped cold by Bob Fiore, a right end, who crashed through to break up the roll out pass. The next two plays resulted in losses caused by the hard charging of Doug Pearsall and Bill Walsh. When Baker took over, a couple of bad centers plus a hard rush from Plymouth's center kept Baker's highly touted offense from moving.

Ron Schlitz and Frank Veneri kept the Plymouth receivers well covered in the beginning of the second half and Baker took over on downs. A quick pass from "Sully" to Rich Baird over the middle and some nifty running by Rich scored a T.D. on the first play from scrimmage and Baker now led 13-0.

Plymouth received the kick-off on their 25 yard line and on the first two plays lost 15 yards on quick charges by Poirier. On the next play, however, Plymouth scored on a pass play to the right end. After receiving the kick-off, Baker had the chance to put the game on ice. "Sully" heaved a beautiful pass to Poirier who was 40 yards away in the end zone, but the end dropped the ball. Plymouth took over on downs, but failed to score before time ran out.

Phone Total Rises

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United States had 70,821,000 telephones in service in 1960, or 6.3 per cent more than in 1959, according to the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. The Soviet Union last year had 4,022,633 phones in service for a gain of 5.6 per cent over 1959.

Redmen Cross Country Squad Heads For Championship Meet

The University of Massachusetts Varsity cross-country team and head coach Bill Footrick are looking forward to Saturday's Yankee Conference championship meet at Orono, Maine with reserved optimism.

The Redmen, defending league champion, have a 3-1 record this fall and a veteran team that has to be rated a slight favorite to retain its title. However, Coach Footrick feels that the Conference teams have all improved and the race for the championship should be a hectic affair.

The 14th annual league meet will be staged at the Penopscot Valley Country Club Course in Orono at 10:30 a.m. The Course covers four miles, and the Redmen have been working out all week in preparation for the event.

Co-Captain Dave Balch (Holbrook) was last fall's individual winner, but has been running second this year to sophomore Bob Brouillet (Phillipston). Brouillet, who could be one of the top UMass cross-country men in recent years, has placed first twice, second once, and third once this season. Balch was slow rounding into shape, but appears to be ready to go at full speed Saturday.

Other UMass entrants will be co-captain Dick Blomstrom (Worcester), Jim Wrynn (Lynn), Gene Colburn (Needham), Ken O'Brien (Foxboro and Bob Avery (Dedham). Charles Proctor from Great Barrington will be team alternate.

Maine's Cloutier Is Named Top YanCon Ground Gainer

Dave Cloutier of the University of Maine is the leading ground gainer in the Yankee Conference, according to statistics released today by the Conference publicity officer. Cloutier has carried the ball 30 times for 178 yards and an average of 5.9 yards per carry.

Dick Mezquita of New Hampshire has the second best average, accounting for 5.5 yards per carry on a total of 26 carries for 144 yards. Other leaders are Ralph Renaldi of Connecticut, 18 carries, 98 yards and an average of 5.4; Sam Lussier of Massachusetts, 28 carries, 143 yards and an average of 5.1 yards; Walt Beaulieu and Dale Curry, both of Maine, who have average 4.3 yards per carry, and Hank Kapusinsky of Rhode Island, who has a 4.1 average.

Manch Wheeler of Maine leads in pass completions with 25 caught in 62 attempts for 418 yards and six touchdowns while John McCormick of Massachusetts, who has played in only two Yan Con games, has completed nine of 18 for 117 yards and two touchdowns. Bo Dickson of New Hampshire has hit on 43 per cent of his tosses, completing 16 of 37 for 148 yards and two touchdowns. In fourth spot is Charlie Vento, who has been lost to Rhode Island for the remainder of the season with a fractured collar bone. He hit on 13 of 24 tosses for 74 yards and on touchdown.

Mike Pariseau, another Rhode Island player through for the season because of a broken collar bone, leads the punters with an average of 37.8 yards per kick. McCormick is second with an average of 36.6 yards per kick and Mickey Hennessey of New Hampshire, third, with an average of 33.5.

Paul Faulkner of Rhode Island and Ed Facey of New Hampshire each has caught seven passes but Cloutier has done the most damage, catching six, three of them for touchdowns, and a total of 157 yards.

"Even back in Grampa's time there was something to make you sleep... they called it work."

Baker Beats Van Meter 1

The spirited boys from Baker, who dropped an upset victory to Hills North last week, got back on the victory trail, as they defeated Van Meter I in a hard-fought contest.

The only Baker "B" touchdown came early in the first half, when quarterback Dick Callahan hit co-captain Mike Pressler with a twenty-yard pass. Pressler tucked the ball under his arm, and zig-zagged thirty yards to paydirt. Soon after, Van Meter retaliated with a quick TD via a twenty-yard pass.

The Baker boys dominated play for the rest of the game, continually throwing the V.M. offense for losses. The fine play of defensive end "Les" Ward should be noted. Hard-charging Ward accounted for the victory margin when he spilled the Van Meter quarterback in his own end zone for a touchback.

Halfback Tom Kelliher turned in his usual fine game, as did Tom Raftery, Dick Hatfield, Steve Johnson, and all the members of the defensive squad.

Baker "B" now stands 3-1, with two more games on its schedule.

OH HAPPY DAY

UMass fans will throng to the Mass-BU game this Saturday, all with hopes that the smiles which have dominated their expressions during the past games will not disappear.

Frosh Booters Score Once To Top Deerfield Academy

The freshman soccer team, under Coach Jack Lieman, showed plenty of spark on both offense and defense, as they defeated Deerfield Academy by the score of one to nothing.

In the first half, the rivals battled to a scoreless tie, the ball shuttling beween the goals. Speedy Dick Palatino led the front line, while Al Gordon must be commended for his fine defensive play.

Midway in the third frame, Palatino rippled the nets for the Redmen's only tally and his first of the year. Fine passing by the Maroon wings, Bill Irving and co-captain Pete Conlin, kept the UMass threat alive in the remaining minutes, but they were unable to score.

Goalie Mike Pressler earned his first shutout of the season, making some fine saves in the process. The defensive work of Pressler and Fullback Buzz Whitman has been a great aid to the frosh team all season.

This was a great moral victory for the Redmen, as they were without the services of Halfback Bob Lupien, and Mike Lollar, who sustained a leg injury in a scrimmage last week.

Rockets Edge Theta Chi, Baker Teams at Lacrosse

A top Intramural game saw the independent Rockets take Baker in the former's opener. The first half ended with the score tied one all, but experience proved to be too much for Baker as the Rockets' Al Morris threw in two goals during the second half. Baker could manage only one goal by Don Rosati and the Rockets emerged a 3-2 victor.

The Rockets figured in another contest as they battled Theta Chi. Jim Ellingwood, a high scoring varsity player, stole the show during the first half as he tossed in four goals for Theta Chi. The Rockets' only goal was by Al Morris and the score was 4-1 going into the second half. The rockets bombed back in the second half, however, Steve Harrington, Tom Furry and Al Morris notching scores to deadlock the contest.

Morris came through for the Rockets in a sudden death overtime, slamming the ball into the nets for the game-winning tally.

Final score: Rockets 5, Theta Chi 4.

Strong Girls' Squad Wins

The UMass Women's Field Hockey Team proved to be one of the strongest from a field of sixteen at the Wellesley College Playday, on Sat. Oct. 28.

The team defeated Sargent College (1-0), Univ. Rhode Island (4-0), and Wheaton College (2-1). Outstanding on offensive were Jean Condon and Jess Piecewicz with two goals, Marty Graves and Andrea Carr with one goal each, and Joy Gustafson. The strong defensive unit which only allowed one goal in three games included Ellie Harrington, Peg Bagdon, Jane Morgan, Karen Jokisarri, Marilyn Cairns, and Nancy MacDuffee.

Three members of the team were selected for the All-College Team. Selected for the first team were Jean Condon and Peg Bag don, while Jess Piecewicz was chosen for the reserve team.

The Meeting of Naiads has been changed to 7:30 on Wed.

The WAA has been invited to participate in an Indoor Intercollegiate Archery Competition. Shooting will be from Nov. 1-Dec. 15 at the WPE, with high scorers from each week being placed on a first-third team. The total score will be entered in the competition. The rounds are 60 arrows at 20 yards (women) and 60 arrows at 30 yards (co-ed). Anyone interested come to the first meeting Wed. 6:30-8, Nov. 8, or contact Miss Hubbard or Nan Nichols at the WPE.

UMass Ed. Majors Attend Florida State

Two state universities have begun a North-South student exchange program as "an initial attack on the problem of provincialism in elementary education."

UMass and Florida State University at Tallahassee are the first participants in what the founders hope will be a national effort to promote understanding of sectional problems among teacher trainees.

Two Florida students are now studying in the School of Education at the University, and five of the latter's undergraduates are at the southern university. Both institutions have waived out-of-state tuition requirements for the exchange students.

Undergrads Must Broaden Experiences

According to the co-directors of the program, Prof. Vincent Rogers of UMass and Prof. Gifford Hale of Florida State, the program arose out of a conviction that the great majority of undergraduates majoring in elementary education are sorely in need of a personal and professional broadening experience prior to taking on classroom assignments.

Dr. Rogers, in a recent interview, pointed out that the exchange is intended to give "considerably more than merely a sense of geographic contrast. Students in the program expect to be confronted with actual educational problems of a kind which, because of sectional differences, they might not find in their home areas."

UMass Students Encounter Segregation

Dr. Rogers noted that the UMass students, for instance, are encountering the segregation problem for the first time and "are seeing with their own eyes the complexities involved in a major social change."

The Floridians in turn are asked more than anything else to express their ideas on segregation. This moved one of the exchange students at the Mass. institution to declare that "apparently many Northern college students are shocked to discover that Southern liberals exist."

Hope To Build Broader Outlook

The program directors see this kind of frank expression of views as a good start toward building a broader outlook on teaching problems in America. Expectations are that the number of exchange students will soon begin to grow and that more universities will join the program.

UMass students participating in the present exchange include Sharon L. Farbman, Newark, N.J.; Laura Goldman, Malden; Robin M. O'Brien, W. Medway; Judith A. Rajecki, Holyoke; and Marjorie Bliss, Swansea.

The Floridians are Joan Monte of Fort Lauderdale and Ann Smith of Jacksonville.

Wiswell Will Stage Game Contest Nov. 7

A one-man contest against 50 opponents will be staged by Tom Wiswell, world checkers champion, in a simultaneous checkers and chess exhibition at UMass Tuesday, Nov. 7.

Wiswell will take on all comers up to a maximum of 50 in a free-wheeling demonstration of the kind of talent that won a world title for the Brooklyn man.

Sponsored by the Games and Tournament Committee, the event will take place in the Student Union from 7 to 11 p.m. on Tuesday. Whether experts or not, all interested persons are invited to attend, either as participants or silent kibitzers. There is no entry fee.

Wiswell, who won the world title in 1951 and has successfully defended it ever since, has written 12 books on checkers, the latest in collaboration with Prof. W. R. Fraser of Montreal, Wiswell's tough opponent in his last defense of the title.

At the University event, Wiswell will go from board to board making his moves in rapid fashion. While no prizes have been announced, those who are good enough to beat the checkers-and-chess master will be given the title "Champ for a Day."

'Music Theater' Recent Addition To WMUA Log

WMUA spotlights another recent addition to their program log—"Music Theater" which can be heard every afternoon from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m. "Music Theater" features a wide variety of music, part vocal and part instrumental, but excludes rock and roll. This exclusion is very deliberate and is the consequence of a student opinion poll taken last spring.

The poll showed that the students were not listening to "Campus Capers," the old program at this time which featured rock and roll. Instead the students preferred to listen to music by which they could study or just relax. Since there were enough commercial programs which can be heard in this area, the students who wanted to keep up with the lastest rock records would still be satisfied.

"Music Theater" is unique, because no other station within campus listening has a similar format of fifteen minute periods of uninterrupted music of higher quality. At the fifteen minute breaks, weather, the station's identification and organizational plugs are aired.

These plugs are given just for the asking and such things as car registration reminders, polio shot notices, special events and trips are a few of the things that have been requested. Any organization may take advantage of this publicity because the service rendered benefits the whole student body.

Holyoke Possible Jr. College Site

Mayor Samuel Resnic of Holyoke said Monday he had encouraging news from Kermit Morrisey of the state Regional College Board that indicated Holyoke's bid for a location of a state-sponsored junior college was being given serious consideration.

The chief executive said state officials indicated although Elmwood School would serve initially for a location, it would be necessary to have assurance a larger facility would be available by 1964. Resnic said this request was a happy coincidence since plans are now to build a new high school by then, which would free the present high school.

'Accents of Alviani' Plans Debut in Dec.

A new musical organization has been formed on the University campus: in essence a revival of the Opera Workship, offspring of the Operetta Guild. In honor of the dedication of Professor Doric Alviani, head of the music department, the Opera Workshop has been renamed "Accents of Alviani."

"Accents of Alviani" makes its debut with a Christmas program on Sunday, Dec. 10, consisting of Hansel and Gretel and Amahl and the Night Visitors. As a cooperative effort, the company consists of Operetta Guild members, other University students, graduate students, and community talent of all ages. Cast in Hansel and Gretel are: Natalie Chase — Hansel; Janet Fortin—Gretel; Jean Roanowicz — Mother; Ernest Bilodeau — Father; Carolyn Sheriff—Cookie Witch; Lucille Ashley-Dewman; youngsters of the community—Cookie children; Paul McAvoy — Sandman.

Openings are available for interested students for the Angel pantomine, to be partially enacted by high school and junior high school people of Amherst. Interested dancers should contact Professor Alviani at the music office on Tuesday, Nov. 7, 2-5 p.m.

The ninety-member Pan-Hel Chorus will be heard in the choral roles of Hansel and Gretel.

Cast in Amahl and the Night Visitors are: Beverly Anderson, a graduate of U. of Nebraska, presently a soloist at Trinity Church in Springfield, as Amahl; Jean Alden as Mother; Frank Mancuso, as King Kasper; Allan Gilds, minister at the Wesley Methodist Church in Amherst, as King Melchoir; Steven Allen, graduate student at UMass as King Balthazar; Dave McQuesten as Page. Amahl will be danced by Eric Pruyme.

Again the door is thrown open to UMass student participation, in the way of the chorus parts, for which auditions will be held Tuesday, Nov. 7, 2-5 p.m. in the Music Office.

Synthesis To Present Peace Walkers Tues.

On Tuesday night, Nov. 7, Synthesis will present the San Francisco to Moscow Peace Walkers.

Many months ago the team of marchers began a 4,000-mile across the United States. Then, on June 1, thirteen Americans and two photographers flew to London. After a rally in London's Trafalgar Square they were joined by two other Americans, four British volunteers, two Swedish volunteers and one volunteer each from Norway, Finland, and West Germany.

Although they were not permitted to enter France, they went to Belgium. From Belgium they walked to West Germany, the German Democratic Republic, and on through eastern Europe to the Soviet Union.

The Committee for Nonviolent Action, sponsors of the walk, asks the governments of the world to "renounce military deterrence, to resolve and declare that they will under no circumstances threaten or undertake massive retaliation or prepare for limited or preventative war, either with nuclear or conventional weapons."

22 Initiated by Tau Beta Pi, Engineering Honor Society

The fall initiation of the Massachusetts Zeta Chapter of Tau Beta Pi was held Saturday afternoon in secret ceremonies in the Senate Chambers of the Student Union.

Twenty-two juniors and seniors were welcomed into the national engineering honor society. The new members are:

Honor Juniors

Paul C. Badavas
Charles W. Camp
Leo S. Harootyan
George L. Scott
Horace H. Waters

Seniors Elected

Richard A. Babineau
Paul X. Bellini
Valerico Giupponi
Charles J. Guilfoyle
Charles D. Heath
Douglas W. Holbrook
Raymond Kalita
Fred E. Karshick
Fred W. Martsen
Thomas E. Monahan
Robert Moreau
Richard A. Orenstein
Chester D. Ozimina
Russell A. Racette
Alan C. Rogers
Fred T. Stetson
Peter Swartz

The candidates, chosen by secret ballot, were selected from the top one-eighth of the junior and the top one-fifth of the senior classes in engineering. Although excellence in scholarship was required, such qualities as exemplary character, breadth of interest—both inside and outside of engineering, adaptability, and unselfish activity were emphasized.

Held Stag Banquet

Climaxing the initiation program, a stag banquet was attended by the entire active student membership, now totaling 44. Many faculty members were also present at the affair, held at Williams House, in Williamsburgh.

Highlighting the evening was the presentation of an award for the winning pledge essay.

Close Frosh Vote Expected Tomorrow In Final Election

by JOSEPH BRADLEY, News Assignment Editor

The final elections for the Class of '65 will be held tomorrow in the S.U. lobby from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Steve Graham and Al Brann will contest for the office of president, and Steve Reimer and Dave Stockman will oppose each other for the vice presidency. In the race for secretary, Ritchie Weinberg will face Penny Bird, while Marilyn Gates will oppose Sue Glickman for treasurer.

All eight candidates will be available this evening at a centrally located table at the Dining Commons from 5:15 until closing for questioning and acquainting themselves with their constituents.

The winners will report Wednesday at 7 p.m. to the Senate Council Chambers to be sworn in.

According to a poll conducted by a Collegian reporter in which two hundred freshmen were queried, or approximately ten per cent of the class, the winning candidate for the office of president will receive about 57 per cent of the total vote cast if all remain constant as at the time of this poll.

The poll was conducted Thursday and Friday amongst freshmen picked at random by Collegian reporter Fred Golder in the Hatch and the Dining Commons. Freshmen were asked their preference of candidates running for the four offices of the Class of '65.

Names Not Disclosed

Although those interviewed were asked to give the name of the candidates preferred, these names will not be disclosed by the Collegian until after the elections since the paper does not wish to influence the voters.

The other offices break down as follows:

Vice president—The winning candidate will receive approximately 54 per cent according to the poll.

Secretary — The winning candidate will receive approximately 63 per cent according to the poll.

Treasurer — The winning candidate will receive approximately 61 per cent according to the poll.

Approximately ten per cent of the two hundred polled had no opinion or preference at the time of the poll. The poll included a hundred women and a hundred men.

Soph Exec Council Plans Soph - Frosh Meet In Dec.

The forty members of the Sophomore Executive Council held their first meeting last Thursday evening to elect officers and discuss policy for the council and the Sophomore Class.

The council, made up of elected representatives from the dormitories, sororities, fraternities, commuters and the sophomore honor societies, is presided over by the class officers and a secretary, Miss Priscilla Bradway, who was elected at the first meeting.

The Soph-Frosh Track Meet which has been postponed several times because of bad weather, was the first topic discussed. A committee was elected to recruit sophomores to handle the event which will be held indoors Sunday, December 3, in the Cage.

Sophomores wishing to volunteer their services for the meet are urged to contact the members of the committee who are Dee Ferrigno, Margie Fisk, Sue Klein, Paul Kennett, Mike Moynihan, Jim Madeiros, and Ray Kodzis.

The council, in order to be informed on Winter Carnival progress, elected Ken Robbins, Paul Klisiewicz and alternates Bill Theroux and Barbara Borys to attend Winter Carnival Committee meetings.

The next meeting of the Sophomore Executive Council was set for Thursday, Nov. 16 at 7:30 p.m. in the S.U.

FAIR HOUSING

"WE believe that equality of opportunity is a basic principle of a democratic society. This principle is denied when people are not able equally and freely to choose a place to live. We will strive to ensure that all people who want to live in Amherst are welcome on an equal basis, and are not subject to discrimination because of race, religion, or national origin." With these words, the Amherst Fair Housing Committee was launched recently.

We wish them well. At last Amherst citizenry will not sit by passively while discrimination is practiced within their midst. Too often, the Northerner looks toward Alabama or Mississippi while his own back yard needs a good cleaning! How is your back yard? —M.P.

The Peace Walkers

One need not agree with the San Francisco to Moscow Peace Walkers to be thoroughly impressed with their courage and sincerity. How often is it said that "everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it?" Certainly one can not say that the walkers have sat idly by while the world prepares to blow itself up.

To say that their action has proven ineffectual is false. To say that their action has stimulated thought and aroused people of five continents would be more correct.

Especially significant was their reception at Moscow University. There, over two hundred students shouted down their professors who had tried to shorten the meeting.

If we manage to blow ourselves to Kingdom Come, these courageous citizens will share the least of the blame.

CHANGING TIMES

by MICHAEL PALTER '63

"Adoula, although a moderate, remains a nationalist. He certainly resents imperialism more than he dislikes Lumumbrian Nationalism. He will not remain aloof. He will move against Katanga upon the slightest provocation. If he does this, he will take Katanga."

On Oct. 25, when this appeared in "Changing Times," I had no doubt of eventual military action by the Central Government of the Congo. Yet, because of United Nations troop deployment at that time, one could not accurately predict just when this offensive would take place.

The question has finally been answered. On Nov. 1 or 2, the Congo Army moved against Katanga. As of Nov. 2, Major General Joseph Mobutu, Commander in Chief of the Congo Army, stated that his troops had penetrated "as far as thirty five miles into Katanga." He went on to say that his troops "are receiving a joyous reception from the people" and that they "are rushing out to greet us and they are giving us food and candy bars."

Mobutu's statements should be accepted. Many Katangese (one can not say "all") have bitterly resented Tshombe's ties to Belgium and his employment of foreign mercenaries within the Katangese Army. Apparently, there has been an increasing realization that the Adoula Government constitutes the only truly African government.

At this writing (Nov. 3) one can not yet determine the success of the Congolese offensive. However well-equipped Tshombe's army, it is an army controlled by mercenary officers. A mercenary, who fights for money is unlike an African, who fights for African Independence. On top of this, mercenaries are difficult to obtain whereas Adoula can call upon literally thousands of Africans throughout the whole of Africa.

Yet, the Army of Katanga might achieve initial victories in the current military action. But in the long run, it is inconceivable that Tshombe could repress the tide; as inconceivable as a French Algeria or a White Supremacist South Africa.

Man and Maturity

by GEORGE MASSELAM

Distrust, hostility, fear, hate, sterility of reasoning and thinking, aggression, and threats mark the scope of our speck of matter in the universe. What is Man? Where is Man? A mass of ordered atoms, with an equilibrium of electrical charges. Why has Man developed so minute a part of the university, floundering with no definite direction. Yet there has been a progression of life; Man being the highest form, constantly becoming more and more aware of his needs. Accompaning this awareness, Man also has developed methods of appeasing or fulfilling these needs. Thus, Man is constantly trying to deal with and ultimately transcend the animal in himself —the animal in him which really isn't a bad part of him. But Man, you haven't crawled out of the womb yet! You're still young and immature. It was only twelve thousand years ago that you thought yourself important enough to write about yourself. How long has the earth existed? Millions and millions of years? You are not very old at all. Man is only a baby in relation to the other conglomerations of matter around him. Unfortunately, he plays his part well!!!

Technologically Man has advanced himself to magnanimous proportions; yet his ability in judging the value of this technology for his betterment, instead of his detriment, has been agonizingly poor. He's going to blow himself up!!! Foolish? Look at the world. For the first time in history Man is able to take care of himself and his brothers. What's the situation? One half of the world is starving! Man has evolved his reasoning and intellectual powers, but when he is threatened by force and becomes afraid, his insidious emotions pull him back into the jungle of hate and despair. His reaction to threats is "I'll beat you up because my bomb has more megatons than yours." The reply is "Oh yeah? I'll make one just as big as yours, so we can both kill ourselves. I got my pride. I'll show you!" Man, GROW UP! Will you ever learn from your past? Will you ever see past your nose into the future? Will you ever do anything for the sake of the progression of man? Will you ever live by your ideals and scruples? Will you ever attain character? Man, you must have a higher destiny than self-destruction!

Man, you have at times rationality, sense, character, reason, and feelings. Can't you use these for your own benefit? Can't you understand yourself so that you can draw perspective on your end? Will you ever accept the animal in you and utilize it for your own enhancement? Man, YOU COULD BE GREAT, YOU COULD HAVE MEANING, YOU COULD HAVE THE MEANS, YOU COULD HAVE AN END, YOU COULD HAVE MATURITY!!!!

'ONE OF TH' FINEST FRESHMAN LITERATURE TEACHERS WE'VE EVER HAD."

A Review: Woody Herman

by MARCIA ANN VOIKOS '63

Woody Herman and his band performed to an estimated audience of five-hundred last Thursday night in the Student Union Ballroom as part of a program sponsored by the Arts and Music Committee.

Highlights of the jazz concert included Herman's biggest hit, "The Ol' Woodchoppers' Ball," featuring Dizzy Reese on trumpet—this number sold a million records in '39. A subtle contrast was "Early Autumn" featuring the smooth styling of Gordon Brisk on tenor sax. Here the accompanying sax unit picked up the melody and almost achieved the near-perfect sound of a single instrument.

The band then swung into a number called "Molasses" written by Joe Doolan. This was a pleasant throw-back to the swing era with a touch of the modern jazz element contrasted by an even tempo within a coordinated framework. Melodic action was intermittently taken up by the famed Herman clarinet leading the band to a surprise staccato ending.

Pianist Nat Pierce subsequently rode into a moody version of "Misty" showing individual styling and control without sounding too Garner-like. Pierce's versatility was shown in Herman's clever arrangement of the old New Orleans jazz tune, "Muskrat Ramble."

The big band sound next came into full play as it wailed out the ever-popular tune, "I Can't Get Started With You," associated with the late Bunny Barrigan. With Bill Chase blowing a cool trumpet solo, the over-all feeling was a sensitive and singing quality in the music doing justice to a classic in the field of swing.

Dedicated Number To Steve Riemer

Herman opened the second half of the concert with a little hand-clapping number, "The Preacher," reflecting some solid early American jazz and dedicated it to class vice-presidential candidate, Steve Riemer, '65.

Main feature of the concert was tap-dancer, Jack Ackerman, who switched from the bongos to the dance floor in the fantastic "Buck Dance." Also featured was vocalist Maureen Dunn.

The band's flexibility proved itself as it moved into a take-off on "be-bop" rock 'n' roll a la Herman in the ludicrous role of a popular teen-age idol. And by-passing the cool jazz of the 60's in favor of the red hot jazz of the 30's and 40's, the band sailed into "Caledonia" with a drum solo by Gus Johnson. Here the trumpets' dischorded parodies were offset by the lyrical sustained chords of the saxes.

Herman's band was known as "the band that plays the blues" in the 30's but gradually moved from semi-dixieland and blues identification as it modernized itself according to Ellington patterns. Herman took a small group to Cuba in '49 and the band made its first European tour in '54. Woody Herman's significance in jazz history lies in retaining a consistent band element while adjusting to each new musical trend—and this was certainly evident here.

"Changing Times" adequately depicts the state of affairs produced by the Collegian's publication of Mr. Rosenberg's monstrosity. The Collegian's place in respect to levels of human advancement has sunk to a new low by virtue of its association with such a sad commentary by way of our so sorely abused freedom of speech.

This article perhaps reflects only a small segment of public opinion, and in any case should not be dignified by giving it a rebuttal.

The Collegian cannot hope to keep pace with the times or justify our age of enlightenment until it shows some discrimination in regard to the printing of articles which are an insult to our progress in areas of history, psychology, logic and higher learning.

Four-College Library Celebrates Tenth Year

by MONETTA WRONSKI '63

The Hampshire Interlibrary Center is celebrating its tenth anniversary this year.

The Center ten years ago was a collection of 2,462 volumes housed in a chicken-wire cage in the basement of the Mount Holyoke College library; it had no staff, 119 subscriptions to professional journals, and a yearly expenditure of $1,446. Since then it has grown to a collection of 18,397 volumes plus microcards, microfilms, and microprints and six special collections. Its quarters are in the new addition to Goodell Library, and has a staff of five: a full-time Director, two half-time assistants, a student assistant, and a messenger. HILC subscribes to 503 journals and has a budget totaling $24,295.

Purchased Varied Publications

Operating under a Ford Foundation grant totaling $10,000 over a four-year period, the library has purchased publications from Far-Eastern and African countries in conjunction with the four-college Non-Western Studies Program.

The purpose of HILC is to enable the four colleges together to purchase a greater number and a wider variety of volumes and subscriptions than any of the Colleges singly could afford.

Four-College Events This Week

Nov. 8—Mount Holyoke
- 4:15 p.m. Chapin Hall—Lecture: William Golding, British Novelist
- 8 p.m. Chapin—Lecture: Dr. Rafael Pico, President, Government Development Bank for Puerto Rico, "Puerto Rico and the Alliance for Progress in Latin America."

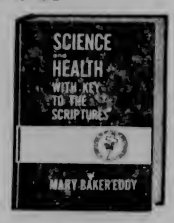
EVERY COLLEGE STUDENT needs this book



to increase his ability to learn

An understanding of the truth contained in Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy can remove the pressure which concerns today's college student upon whom increasing demands are being made for academic excellence.

Christian Science calms fear and gives to the student the full assurance he needs in order to learn easily and to evaluate what he has learned. It teaches that God is man's Mind—his only Mind—from which emanates all the intelligence he needs, when and as he needs it.

Science and Health, the textbook of Christian Science, may be read or examined, together with the Bible, in an atmosphere of quiet and peace, at any Christian Science Reading Room. Information about Science and Health may also be obtained on campus through the

Christian Unity To Be Wylie's Critique Topic

"Protestant-Catholic Dialogue" will be Reverend Sam Wylie's topic for the Christian Association's third critique of the year.

Reverend Wylie, the rector of the Church of the Advent in Boston, is an authority in this field and has written the book "New Patterns in Christian Education" describing recent movements in Europe in the revival of the Church and in advancing Christian unity.

The critique will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 7, in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union at 8 p.m.

Since the sixteenth century, there has been no Christian understanding and concord, and now, in the twentieth century, the issue of reunion has become central. Many questions must be considered for both sides: Are Protestants ready to say that a man is justified by faith and works, or that Scripture and the traditions belong to the corpus of Christian authority? What is the basic difference in the Assumption of Mary?

The movement toward unity began about 1910, among the Anglicans, Roman Catholics and the World Council of Churches. Since then letters have been exchanged between these groups and hundreds of books and articles have been written on the ecumenical level. Several new monastic orders have been established, devoted solely to the work of unity.

Dr. Hauser to Begin Public Lecture Series

On Nov. 7, Dr. Ronald Hauser of the German Department will initiate the Philosophy Club's fall series of public lectures on the subject "Is Religion the Source of Morality?" His topic will be "Nietzsche's Moral Theories", as expressed in Beyond Good and Evil and The Geneology of Morals.

Born in Germany, and educated in California, Dr. Hauser received his Ph.D. in Germanics at the University of California at Berkeley. He taught at Northwestern and Smith before coming to the University. Dr. Hauser's most recent article is "The Concept of Social Necessity in Hebbel's Moloch," which appeared in The German Review. Another article, "George Buchner's Leonce and Lena," is scheduled for publication in December.

This series of the Philosophy Club will include four lectures and a panel discussion. On Nov. 28, Dr. Milton Gordon of the Sociology Dept. will speak, followed by Dr. Shaffer Williams of the History Dept. on Dec. 5, and Dr. Seymour Epstein of the Psychology Dept. on Dec. 12. The date of the panel discussion, to be moderated by Rabbi Ruchames, will be announced later.

These lectures will be held on Tuesdays, at 8 p.m., in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union. All are invited to attend.

UMass Wins Second Straight Yan Con Cross Country Title

by ABE SHEINKER '62

The University of Massachusetts cross country team won the Yankee Conference cross country championship for the second consecutive year at Orono, Maine, on Saturday. The Redmen scored 42 points to edge host Maine by four. Rhode Island was third with 79, UConn fourth with 90, Vermont fifth with 108, and New Hampshire last with 110.

It was the first four Redmen who won the meet for UMass, as their 1-4-7-9-21 finish compared with the Bears' 2-6-10-13-15 finish. UMass had previously edged Maine in a tri-meet earlier this season.

Bob Brouillet gave the Redmen individual honors for the second year also, as he won the meet in the course record time of 21-38.6. The sophomore forestry major took to the woods early and opened up a 100 yard lead over Maine's Mike Kimball midway through the race. Kimball picked up his pace with a mile to go and began cutting down Brouillet's lead, but the strong UMass star fought off his challenger and squeezed out the victory by 15 yards.

Charles Lunt of Rhode Island finished third and UMass' Dave Balch, fourth. Balch, last year's winner in a record time at Kingston, R. I., ran a fine race over the roller coaster four mile course.

The top 20:

1. Brouillet, Mass. 21:38.6
2. Kimabll, Maine 21:40.05
3. Lund, R. I. 22:06

UM Booters Lose To Jeffs in Fine Game

by STEVE HEWEY '63

In what was the best played and hardest fought match of the current soccer season, the Redmen booters succumbed to the purple and white Lord Jeffs of Amherst College 2-0, Saturday, in a home contest. Amherst goalie Dick Scolnick was peppered throughout the entire game with a variety of stinging UM shots but he too was playing his best match of the season in the Amherst nets and neutralized the Redmen attack.

The first period saw no scoring by either side, but at the closing of the second quarter, Amherst organized a good breakaway and it climaxed with a score to put them ahead 1-0. The Redmen also organized several scoring threats in the second stanza and put Scolnick under his greatest pressure, but the Amherst net keeper held tight and fast.

The Lord Jeffs had their offense slowed down in the third period by the alertness of the Redmen defense but this was not enough to hold them in the finale when they found paydirt again for their second pointer of the afternoon.

Coach Larry Briggs said that Saturday's encounter was the best all-around team effort of the season for his crew, but that the Amherst goalie just could not be beaten. Briggs singled out Capt. Dave Amundsen and Mike Rapeta as playing "superb" games. After their fine showing against the Lord Jeffs this weekend, the Redmen should give visiting Fairleigh-Dickenson a hard time this coming Saturday afternoon. Game time: 2:00 p.m.

In nine games played thus far, the Redmen record stands at 3-5-1, a considerable improvement over last year's slate which was 0-10-0. The Fairleigh-Dickinson contest will close out the current soccer season for UMass.

Maine and UConn Win

Both Maine and Connecticut rolled to victory Saturday, Connecticut defeating Yankee Conference rival New Hampshire 30-23 in their first victory of the season, and the Bears pinning a 14-0 loss on Colby. Maine hasn't lost a game thus far.

Maine's Dale Curry accounted for both of his team's scores as he went over on a one yard plunge and a 71 yard pass play. Maine's victory was the first whitewash of a Colby football team since Williams blanked them in '56, 42-0.

UConn's lone victory of the year was almost foiled by a last ditch New Hampshire effort which died on the Huskies' 3 yard line when the final gun went off.

A major factor for UConn was their new halfback, Sean Sgruletta, who tallied 16 points during the contest.

In other Conference action, Vermont edged the Huskies from Northeastern, 6-0 in a defensive battle, while the Rams from Rhode Island played to a 6-6 deadlock with the Maroons of Springfield.

The Maine-UMass clash on November 22 looks as if it will be the deciding factor in the Yankee Conference.

ON YOUR WAY, FRED

UMass quarterback John McCormick hands off to star halfback Freddy Lewis during the Boston University game. Sam Lussier and Kenny Palm lead the way to provide good blocking for what proved to be a seven yard pickup for the sophomore flash. Freddy, through his performances in both the B.U. and Northeastern skirmishes, has taken over the ground-gaining superiority on the Redmen squad.

B. U. Manpower Overcomes Strong Mass. Bid, 21-7

Lack of Depth Tells Story in Last Stanza

by W. JOHN LENNON '62

Massachusetts' patched-up Redmen managed to cling to a rocky victory trail for 52 minutes Saturday afternoon before falling by the wayside, 21-7, as Boston University surged from the brink of defeat to upend their outmanned opponents.

Over 6000 rain-spattered fans cheered the Redmen, led by twinkle-toed Fred Lewis, as they clung to a precarious 7-6 advantage through three hard-fought quarters. The sophomore halfback's peformance shown through like the beam from a lighthouse on a foggy afternoon.

The Redmen's leading ground gainer averaged better than five yards a carry as he continually bulled his way throuh the Terrier line. His most important rushing thrust, however, a fourth and one situation early in the final quarter, was thwarted. Following this attempt, the turning point of the contest, the rejuvenated Terriers romped through the weary Redmen for a couple of touchdowns.

BU's Larry Bernstein received the opening kickoff on the five and carried it back to this own 32. The Terriers' sophomore sensation accounted for 28 yards during the next eleven plays, then scampered off the left side from 24 yards out for the ice-breaking tally. Jack Farland's attempted extra point missed by inches as it bounced off the uprights.

The Redmen struck back in equally impressive fashion. Sam Lussier returned Steve Turkalo's kickoff 38 yards to the UM 48. From there Sam and his running mate, Lewis, toted the pigskin for nine of the ten plays before Lussier dove over left tackle for the equalizing score. John Bamberry's toe was true, and the Redmen were ahead by a nose, 7-6.

Late in the third quarter the local forces started a drive from their own 20 and drove to the Terriers' 41. With a fourth and one situation confronting him, Fusia elected to have Lewis vault over the right side. It proved to be a fateful decision.

Following this failure, BU dominated the contest. The Terriers marched 58 yards in 11 plays, the clincher being a quarterback sneak by Tom Daubney from a yard out. Jack Farland returned to hit Kielty for the extra point. After another UM drive was stymied, Farland swept to the right, and broke into the open for a 49 yard scoring play. The classy quarterback then ended the afternoon's scoring with a one point conversion.

TERRIER TIDBITS

Fred Lewis is now the leading ground gainer for Coach Fusia's forces. The Springfield sprinter boasts a 5.0 average in 93 thrusts into enemy territory . . . Though the fire had been removed from the UM attack late in the final stanza, a flickering flame of hope remained. John McCormick took advantage of the opportunity, and nearly connected with Lussier on a 70 yard heave. In this final minute the Belmont bomber showed the fans that his pin point accuracy to any spot on the field was still with him. It must be, since Jim Lee Howell was looking over the UM co-captain during the week . . . BU is now sporting a three game victory streak. Coach Sinko's boys dumped West Virginia and George Washington before sneaking past the Redmen . . . The results of last week's UPI New England football ratings showed Holy Cross on top followed by UMass, and BC, Dartmouth, and BU rounding out the top five. Undoubtedly these ratings will be revised . . . The Massmen outrushed the Terriers 76-68 in the initial half; Lewis ground out all but 13 of these . . . Sam Tombarelli from Salem, N. H., is the only out-of-stater on the local squad. BU players represent eight states and Columbia, South America . . . John Bamberry only tacked a point on his 22 point total for the season; he now ranks third in scoring behind the double "L" 's . . . Ed Forbush and Sam Slick very capably filed the shoes of starters Majeski and Kozaka. Tireless Ed, who has been playing in Paul's shadow all season, was forced to go the full 60 minutes, but gave a tremendous account of himself. Slick, meanwhile was Lewis's counterpart on the line . . . Ken Palm ground out 54 yards in eight attempts through the middle . . . Next week—New England's top clash at Fitton Field in Worcester. See you there.

FLASH! TO ALL STUDENTS OF the UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

CAN YOU USE A HUNDRED BUCKS?

THAT'S WHAT YOU CAN WIN IN EVERY ONE OF

VICEROY'S Big College Football Contests

IT'S EASY! Just pick the ten winning teams, predict the scores—and you're in the money!

FLASH! ONLY STUDENTS ON THIS CAMPUS ARE ELIGIBLE!

FOURTH CONTEST NOVEMBER 18TH

All you have to do is clip the coupon, pick the winners and predict the scores—then figure out how you're going to spend that hundred bucks! It's easy . . . just clip the coupon below or get an entry blank where you buy cigarettes and fill in your predictions of the ten game scores. Then mail it with an empty Viceroy package or a reasonable rendition of the Viceroy name as it appears on the package front to Viceroy at the Box Number on the entry blank or drop it in the ballot box conveniently located on the campus.

Open only to students and faculty members. Enter as many times as you want. Simply send an empty Viceroy package or reasonable rendition of the Viceroy name with each entry.

Entries must be postmarked or dropped in the ballot box no later than the Wednesday midnight before the games and received by noon Friday of the same week.

DON'T SMOKE ANOTHER CIGARETTE UNTIL YOU LEARN WHAT VICEROY'S *Deep Weave Filter CAN DO FOR YOUR TASTE!

It can do plenty. Here's why: the Viceroy filter starts with pure, safe vegetable material, made into the same straight filter strands as most good filters.

But here's the twist: Viceroy weaves those tiny strands into the special Deep-Weave Filter . . . and that's the filter you can trust to give you the good taste of Viceroy's rich tobacco blend. The fact is . . .

Viceroy's Something Special End to End . . . Special Filter! Special Blend!

HERE ARE THE CONTEST RULES—READ 'EM AND WIN!

1. Any student or faculty member on this campus may enter except employees of Brown & Williamson, its advertising agencies, or members of their immediate families. All entries become the property of Brown & Williamson—none will be returned. Winners will be notified within three weeks after each contest. Winners' names may be published in this newspaper. You may enter as often as you wish, provided each entry is sent individually. Contest subject to all governmental regulations. Entries must be postmarked or dropped in ballot box on campus no later than the Wednesday midnight before the games are played and received by noon Friday of the same week. The right to discontinue future contests is reserved.

2. Entries must be in contestant's own name. On the coupon in this ad or on an Official Entry Blank or piece of paper of the same size and format, write your predictions of the scores of the games and check the winners. Enclose an empty Viceroy package or a reasonable rendition of the Viceroy name as it appears on the package front. Mail entry to Viceroy at the Box Number on the entry blank or drop in Viceroy Football Contest Ballot Box on campus.

3. Entries will be judged by The Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. on the basis of number of winners correctly predicted. Ties will be broken on the basis of scores predicted. Duplicate prizes awarded in case of final ties.

4. Winners are eligible for any prize in subsequent contests.

Finalists Are Chosen For Mili Ball Queen

The five finalists for this year's Military Ball Honorary Lt. Colonel have been announced by the Military Ball Publicity Committee. The finalists were chosen from a field of 31 hopefuls by election in which over one thousand AFROTC-AROTC cadets voted.

The five selected are: Miss Jeanne P. Mullaney '63, Miss Joan M. Werner '63, Miss Sheila D. Ryan '63, Miss Marilyn Anderson '65, and Miss Sue E. Lydon '65. A panel of judges will select this year's Honorary Lt. Colonel who will be announced the night of the Ball.

Miss Mullaney, an English major from Worcester, is a Sigma Kappa, a member of the Pan Hellenic Council, the Precisionettes, and the Student Service Committee. She was also last year's Best Dressed Girl on Campus.

Miss Werner, an English major from Barre, is also a Sigma Kappa as well as a member of the Junior Executive Council and a counselor at Dwight. She was a finalist for last year's Greek Ball.

Miss Ryan is a math major from Swampscott, a member of Chi Omega sorority, and a cheerleader.

Miss Anderson is a psych major from Auburn, a member of the Newman Club, and winner of a National Association of High School English Teachers' Award.

Miss Lydon is a botany major from Waltham, a member of the Newman Club, and was a finalist for this year's Homecoming Queen.

The finalists will tour Fort Devens and Westover Air Force Base and later be honored at a tea at the Lord Jeff Monday, December 4.

Ground-Breaking Begins For Hasbrouck Addition

On Monday, Nov. 6, a major excavation got under way for the construction of a new addition to Hasbrouck Laboratory.

The addition will be built directly to the south of the present physics building, and will include a two part brick structure.

Auditorium and Classrooms Planned

The first part will be a two story complex, consisting of a 300 seat auditorium on the ground floor, and two lecture halls, with a capacity of 100 seats each, on the top floor. Five stories high, the second part of the addition will contain classrooms, research shops, introductory and advanced laboratories, and departmental offices.

An appropriation of $2.2 million has been set for the construction of the building. With the acquisition of new physics equipment, the entire cost will be approximately $2.5 million. The addition is scheduled to be completed in two years. It will have over twice as much floor space as the existing physics building.

Addition Badly Needed

There is no question about the need of the addition. Current facilities at Hasbrouck are inadequate for research and experimentation. There is an acute lack of storage area. Sound laboratories have been converted into storerooms for experimental equipment. The addition will provide the needed storage space, allowing the sound laboratories to be used for their intended purpose.

The UMass Physics Department has made great strides to meet the ever increasing student enrollment. Before 1938, a student at UMass could not major in physics because there were not enough courses offered in this subject.

Department Moved In 1950

What is now the Conservation Building was the location of the physics department up to 1950. The old building had one lecture room with a seating capacity of 42.

Combined, the present physics building and future addition will have seven general laboratories and four lecture rooms, capable of accomodating well over 600 students. If sufficient funds are available, the physics department also hopes to acquire an atom accelerator.

Director Of Political Studies To Speak In Lecture Series

Dr. John C. Campbell, Director of Political Studies for the Council on Foreign Relations, will give a major lecture at UMass on Thursday, Nov. 9 at 4 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room. The event is open to the public.

Dr. Campbell is the second speaker in a series of lectures by prominent national and international figures. The series is conducted under a Sperry and Hutchinson Company Lectureship grant made to the University's government department. Dr. Campbell will also speak at Mount Holyoke to students in international relations courses.

Campbell Authority

An authority on the Middle East, Dr. Campbell had extensive and varied service with the U.S. State Department from 1942 to 1955. His talk at the University is entitled, "United States Foreign Policy and the Middle East."

In addition to his position as Director of Political Studies, which he assumed in 1955, Dr. Campbell has also served as director of the Council's Study Group on the Middle East from 1955 to 1957 and as director of a similar group on Eastern Europe from 1958 to the present time.

Experts To Speak

Dr. Campbell is a frequent contributor to "Foreign Affairs" and other scholarly journals specializing in foreign policy. He is the author of a recent book, Defense of the Middle East: Problems of American Policy, which was well received by experts in this field.

Under the Sperry and Hutchinson Lectureship grant, experts are coming to the University to speak on American foreign policy during the first year of the Kennedy Administration. Recently, Prof. Max Beloff spoke on American foreign policy toward Europe.

Future lectures will be concerned with American foreign policy toward Africa, south and southeast Asia. Emphasis is placed on some of the most important problems facing the U.S. during the 1960's.

New Head Of Alumni Is Elected

Attorney ROBERT D. GORDON

The Associate Alumni of UMass has elected as its new president, Attorney Robert D. Gordon of Lincoln, Mass. Gordon has previously held the positions of secretary and executive vice president of the association.

A partner in the firm of Gordon and Gordon of Boston, Mass., he graduated from UMass in 1948 and received his law degree from Boston University.

He is married to the former Nancy Miller of the class of 1949. They have three children.

Gordon succeeds Richard J. Davis '28, General Manager of The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company in Maine, as the new president. The other incoming officers are: Executive Vice President, Page L. Hiland '35 of Meriden, Connecticut; and Treasurer, Dr. William D. Tunis '49, an entomologist at UMass. Continuing as secretary for another year is George F. Benoit '43 of Cochituate, Mass.

Tax Director Explains Ideal Of Autonomy

"As an ideal, we believe that the managements of our state institutions should be granted the fullest possible freedom from administrative controls," Frank J. Zeo, executive director of the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations, told the special commission studying greater fiscal freedom for UMass.

Calls for Reform

"We believe that the state's institutions of higher learning and particularly the University of Massachusetts are of sufficient importance to the present and future citizens of the Commonwealth to justify immediate action to remove every demonstrable handicap to their most efficient operation," said Zero.

At the same time, Zeo called for reform at the State level of the Commission on Administration and Finance for reform of its "outmoded, cumbersome-slow-moving ways of doing business."

The handicaps to the university are evident in the matter of faculty employment, Zeo said, and observed that in the higher faculty pay grades there should be greater flexibility to allow competition on the national level for the best teachers.

Other Solutions

"No time should be lost in broadening the latitude within which the institution may act," Zeo said. "But where the problems of the university and colleges are shared with other agencies of our state government,

Major Upset Is Shown In Elections

Al Brann scored a major upset yesterday by defeating Steve Graham for the presidency of the Class of '65 as slightly over 50 percent of the Freshman class turned out to vote. The frosh also elected Steve Riemer vice president, Ritchie Weinberg Secretary, and Sue Glickman Treasurer.

This is how the voting went:

Brann .... 585—Graham .. 469
Reimer ... 557—Stockman .516
Weinberg . 543—Bird 509
Glickman . 537—Gates 519

The race was much closer than expected with winning percentages shaved much closer than the Collegian poll of last Thursday and Friday had anticipated.

Brann won by the largest percentage of votes of any of the winning candidates as he pulled in 56 per cent of the total vote cast.

This was nearly as predicted by the poll which gave the winning candidate 57 per cent.

However, the Collegian poll had predicted Graham to win rather than Brann. The poll accurately predicted only one other race which was the race for vice president won by Reimer with 52 per cent. The poll had predicted 54 per cent.

The poll was off significantly in the remaining two contests; those for secretary and treasurer. Miss Weinberg received 52 per cent of the total while Miss Glickman received 51 per cent for the narrowest winning margin. The poll had predicted 63 per cent and 61 per cent respectively.

ARCHIBALD MacLEISH

Pulitzer prize winning poet, Archibald MacLeish, will give a reading of his poems on Thursday, Nov. 9, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

MacLeish will appear under sponsorship of the Rand Commemoration Fund, a lectureship program set up by former students of Professor Emeritus Frank Prentice Rand. Professor Rand taught at the University for 44 years before retiring in 1959.

Prestige: The Major Goal?

What is the great American pastime? Fishing? Golf? Baseball?. Today our society is engaged in a sport which has more participants than any of these, a game in which the winner becomes lonely and the loser maintains a feeling of inadequacy. It is the game of status-seeking.

It is difficult to determine just who invented the game, but it has been traced back to the first few centuries that a society of men existed on this planet. Five nude Neanderthals were sunning themselves on the front porch of their modern split-level cave when along came a stranger sporting a flashy up-to-date tribal scar. Soon, everybody had to have one; it was the rage of the prehistoric era.

The motivation to play the game has not changed much since then. It is felt the first day little sister gets a new pair of shoes. Knowingly or unknowingly, we all crave affection, and so we cry when little sister seems to be receiving all the attention of our parents. As rational as we claim to be, adults still associate prestige or attention-getting with affection.

Vance Packard has stated that it is the advertising men who are causing feelings of inadequacy among us. But people would feel inadequate even if Madison Avenue did not constantly fill the air with jargon. The tatooed Neanderthal did not have to place an ad in the paper in order to make his peers go to the cave of his uncle Og who, incidentally, was the only tattoo artist in town.

Although admen do not create anxieties, they do much to aggravate them. Motivational research is designed to discover anxieties in the consumer. Advertisements try to persuade us that our worries can be alleviated by a dual filter or curved windshield.

Why do such illogical utterances get results? Our sense of values seems to have been corrupted in an increasingly tense society—we have so many anxieties that we interpret them all as desire for status. If one becomes unhappy when increased possession does not seem to solve his problems, he tries a little harder to accumulate additional wealth.

What has desire for wealth done to family life? A standard saying is that any man who is worth his salt should end up better than his father. The word "better" implies what has happened to values in family relations; being better means being wealthier. A father often judges his son in terms of his money making potential.

Potential is supposed to be brought out through education. How many people are in college to earn the key to success, a scrap of paper that is a one way ticket to first base, suburbia? How many engineering students are fascinated by mathematics? If engineering were suddenly to become a fifty-dollar-a-week business, hordes of students would change their majors. After all, no player wants to be on the losing side, and he may be looking forward to the World Series of life, complacency. But most people are not willing to admit that complacency is a myth, they are dreamers. If a father never seems to be getting anywhere in the world, he tends to see a revitalized image of himself in his son. Little Timmy must be an engineer, doctor, or lawyer, no matter where his aptitudes lie.

There exists a twilight zone between those who have considerable status and those who have little or none. It is known as conformity. As long as a man is wearing the same style of clothing as his neighbors, he is likely not to worry about his clothes and can spend more time worrying about the condition of his automobile. Chances are, if the same man had a much higher income, he would not be wearing what everybody else is wearing and would not give a damn what people might think about his car.

What a lonely life it would be, not having possession to worry about. The game would be over. All other worries would then come to the surface, and one might yearn for real affection. If one is to place any positive value on the anxieties caused by status-seeking, it would be the prevention from learning that there are many more things that we want besides status.

LETTERS ON GERMANY

-Pro-

To the Editor:

The reason for any antagonism, any conflict, any battle, any war, on all levels, from the individual, to the nation, can ultimately be narrowed down to a lack of communications. That is, the inability of one segment of society in the world to communicate with another segment. Man unfortunately hasn't learned this lesson, yet how to keep communications open. Therefore a great sadness enshrouded me when I read R. W. Bussewitz's letter to the editor. In his refutal of David Rosenberg's article in the Collegian concerning West Germany, he endorses and he uses this very problem which has plagued mankind since the beginning of History, non-communication. Bussewitz's feelings are "This article perhaps reflects only a small segment of public opinion, and in any case should not be dignified by giving it a rebuttal." First of all, Bussewitz is right. This article is representative of a small segment of our society, It is there! Should it be ignored? Should we fail to communicate with it? Should we fail to offer our opinion concerning it?

Secondly, should we fall into this very trap of non-communication which Bussewitz suggests by refusing to offer a rebuttal? Should he be sucked in with the resevoir of ignorance which already exists in humanity? Should we forget about progression? I think that R. W. Bussewitz in his refusing to give a rebuttal is asking that we, the Student Body, forget about reason and logic and become name-callers —a terrible thing to ask of a person with a brain.

It is true that David Rosenberg's article does represent the left side of the picture, yet I'm sure that if a Barry Goldwaterist wrote an article repreesnting the right side of the picture, it would be given due consideration. Once we become restrictive as a society, we have degenerated. And this is what we should do according to R. W. Bussewitz—ignore the issue. The function of any society should be to draw all of its segments in and cohesively produce an entity. Should we violate this maxim?

Don't be afraid of ideas, R. W. Bussewitz. And if you have contrary ideas don't be afraid to express them. If you think your ideas are worthy, then let the rest of the student body know about them. But please don't degenerate to a level of non-communication.

George M. Masselam '64

-Con-

To the Editor:

It was with utter disgust that I read the article on "Changing Times" in which the Berlin issue was under discussion. It is unfortunate that the staff of the Collegian lowers itself to the point of printing such a biased, irrational, communist-inspired essay.

The facts which Mr. Rosenberg, the author of he essay, stated, are completely irrational. Consider, for instance, Interior Mininister Schroeder, a mere member of the Storm Troops, Finance Minister Etzel, officer in the Nazi Wehrmacht, etc. They were all small-time men in the big Nazi machine, and cannot be held responsible for crimes occured by the big-time men. This issue had already come up during the Nuremburg Trials and due to lack of proof had to be dismissed.

It is furthermore an erroneous conclusion to say that just because members of the West German government were at one time members of the Nazi Party, therefore, the West German government "must have essentially the same nature" as it did under Hitler. Mr. Rosenberg goes on to say that West Germany is seeking revenge and therefore wants to re-militarize with nuclear weapons. His whole article sounded like an echo of Khrushchev's recent speeches. Maybe it would be advisable to inform President Kennedy that we have finally found someone who can solve all his problems of the Berlin situation. Why does the United States send so many soldiers to Berlin, since "there are no basic antagonisms between the United States and the Soviet Union over the Berlin situation?" as Mr. Rosenberg further points out. Really now, Mr. Rosenberg!! If anyone wants to preach the innocence of the Soviet regime and the brotherly relationship between the Russians and the Americans, I don't see why other countries would have to be called "immoral". Maybe the western allies better reconsider the present attempts for bringing about peace, since Mr. Rosenberg proved to us that "in the main only the blind forces of revenge and aggression in the immoral West German Government are hindering a peaceful solution."

Leaders of the free nations—AWAKE, you are blind to the realities of your allies.

Dismayed And Indignant

To the Editor:

We are exceedingly indignant in regard to the editorial "Changing Times" which appeared in last Friday's Collegian. It was an irresponsible, illogical, irritating piece of nothingness by an obviously biased and prejudiced individual.

By presenting most carefully selected and shaded facts, he has attempted to picture West Germany as a Nazi paradise ruled by incompetents who are obviously Nazis and genicidal maniacs. We submit that West Germany and her leaders have been effectively purged by World War II and that our own leaders are competent in deciding that West Germany does indeed represent and important stronghold of Western Democracy which must be protected.

Just as Chancellor Conrad Adenaur is a Hitlerist, George Washington is a Tory. Just as all Germans are now Nazis, all Americans after the Revolution could be called Loyalists. Numerous other equally ridiculous conclusions result by applying Rosenburg's reasoning.

We are dismayed that your editorial policy would allow such tripe to appear in our newspaper.

Tom MacLachlan
Charles Gibson
Richard Goldberg

Out Of Order

To the Editor-in-Chief:

I write in reference to an article entitled, Changing Times printed on the editorial page of the Nov. 3 Collegian.

I think it highly out of order for an Editor-in-Chief to allow such articles to appear in a newspaper supposedly representative of a university. The article, Semitic inspired as I believe it is, is a gross and blanketing invective, failing to take into account any other aspects aside from the participation of certain individuals in the highly complicated and impersonal military machine of the Third Reich.

Mr. Rosenberg in this condemnation of the present day West German officials is exhibiting his condemnation of the German race itself. He might just as well reach the same conclusion by sighting the number of German soldiers from Hitler's regime still living and working in Germany for they, as the officials, were merely implements controlled by the top hands of the military machine.

Mr. Rosenberg states that "there are no basic antagonisms between the United States and the Soviet Union over the West German situation." On the contrary, one whole basis of life and culture is in conflict with the Russian or communist ideal. The West Germans are as much opposed to the promised complete communism as we are and are continually pleading with the United States not to "sell them down the Rhine" to the Russians. If we "as a people and as a government" made such a gross condemnation of West Germany, almost immediately for fear of being trampled by force, without any support, would West Germany begin to ally with Russia for her own welfare, though agianst her ideals. Thus would the western world lose to Russia some of the most brilliant minds in the world and also a possibly formidable ally against the ever-present communist threat.

In short, Mr. Berman, I believe that in the future you should take your job more seriously and consider the implications of any editorial that you allow to be presented in the Collegian, a newspaper for American college students and not for biased and prejudiced factions.

Rich Gardner '64

Editor's Note:

We appreciate the feelings of Mr. Gardner (and others) concerning the article (It is not an editorial!) in question, but we do not swerve from our belief that it should have been printed. The mere fact that the article had a byline would indicate, even to a neophyte newspaper reader, that it was the opinion of the writer only and not necessarily of the Collegian or of anyone else on the staff.

We do not question the right of any individual to write and protest what appears on our editorial pages, in fact we encourage people to do so. But we do take issue with anyone who believes that we should not print controversial articles. We would like to ask Mr. Gardner, and anyone else who holds his belief: Is not the editorial page of a newspaper the place for controversy?

We believe that it is, and that it has an obligation to a free society to be so. Anyone who is so parochial to believe that an editorial page should contain only stale truisms and rehashings of the same, overworked, ultra-middle-of-the-road attitudes that please everyone and provoke no one, might be happier reading the Journal of the Parent-Teacher's Association. Anyone who is so despotic to believe that a newspaper has no right to call attention to ideas that are contrary to what we are "supposed" to believe, might find his subservient mind more mollified by Pravda.

Grad Student Heads UMass Sales Project

Homeowners in Springfield and Danvers may soon discover that they've unknowingly taken part in a study by UMass "to measure techniques which may be helpful in the sale of nursery products."

This study being made by Alvin Macomber, graduate student and research instructor in the College of Agriculture's department of agricultural and food economics, is one in a series of studies carried on by the agricultural experiment stations of Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

The Massachusetts assignment is to test the effectiveness of an advertising brochure delivered to a selected sample of homeowners in the Danvers and Springfield areas this past spring. The attractive and persuasive brochure was designed to be distributed door to door by cooperating local nursery outlets. These outlets then noted the number of responses they received to the brochure's offer of a free landscape sketch.

Macomber currently is contacting some of the persons in the original sample to discover their reactions to the brochure and their landscaping plans and needs. Results of Macomber's study will not be known until mid-winter.

Students And Faculty Participate In Opera

Within the Amherst Community Opera this year are the following UMass students:

Margaret Loomis, an Amherst resident, has a featured role in "Sister Angelica." A soprano, Miss Loomis was soloist with the UMass chorale last spring.

Sighild Borcherding is a graduate of Bremen (Germany) University and is a UMass grad student. She is in the cast of "Sister Angelica."

Allen Blustine from Agawam plays second clarinet in the AMCOP orchestra. This is his first season for AMCOP.

William Carruth plays second bassoon for AMCOP orchestra. This is his first season with the group.

The following UMass faculty members are also active in AMCOP:

Paul Norton is second flutist for AMCOP, a flute teacher, and a notable soloist.

Albert Madeira of the English department was stage manager for "Carmen" last year and for "Figaro" in 1959. He is also a member of the production committee.

Robert Feldman, who is a psychology professor, is in charge of recording this year. He is also helping with special color photography or rehearsals, singers, and musicians this year.

Norman Rothstein is in charge of lighting for this year's production. Te has had considerable experience with this medium in the legitimate theater.

Tickets for "Sister Angelica" may still be purchased on Wednesday and Friday at the Jones Library for the Nov. 10 and 11 performances.

Cornell Dean To Discuss Grad School

Juniors, seniors, and any other students interested in the graduate program in Business and Public Administration at Cornell University have the opportunity to speak with Edward S. Flash, Jr.

Dean Flash is the Director of Admissions of the Graduate School of Business and Public Administration at Cornell.

He will be in the Colonial Lounge of the S.U. on Thursday, Nov. 9, from 3-4 p.m., and in the Nantucket Room from 4-5 p.m.

Talent Show Will Feature 'Electras'

The Arts and Music Comm. will sponsor The Annual Talent Show, which will be held in the S.U. Ballroom this Friday at 8 p.m. There will be no admission charged.

Taj and the Electras will perform on a non-competitive basis. Howard Temkin will be the M.C., and he promises to have some new jokes this year.

The judges will include several of the musically inclined faculty.

PACK OR BOX

Grand Prix CONTEST

FOR NEW ENGLAND COLLEGE STUDENTS

REGULAR OR KING

Here's the story, man. Eight, count 'em, eight of these swinging Sprites will go to eight guys or gals in New England colleges. The other 44 states strictly don't count. Get the picture, get the odds? This is one deal you've got to get in on.

First thing to do, get your hand on a Registration Envelope, which gives you the easy Contest Rules. You'll find Registration Envelopes everywhere—all around campus and in your local smoke shops. Our Liggett & Myers Campus Rep has stacks of them, too—so track him down.

Next, you take a little quiz. It's printed right on the envelope, see, it's about sports cars and you can do it in like 47 seconds. Then smoke 5 wonderful packs of Chesterfields or L&M's(or,if you're a menthol man,Oasis), tear the bottom panels off all 5 packs, tuck them in the envelope, sign your name and mail it.

8 PRIZES
8 NEW ENGLAND WINNERS
'62 SPRITES

Now comes the brain work. If you pass the quiz you'll receive a limerick in the mail with the last line missing. So finish it! Send in the best rhyme you can think of. If the judges (an independent, impartial lot) think your line is the cleverest, you're like behind the wheel of your Sprite already.

Enter incessantly! Because there are 8 Sprites up for grabs, dad! The 4 winners of the Fall Contest will be announced at the end of the Fall Semester. Then the whole jazz goes into high gear again—and toward the end of the Spring Semester the other 4 Sprites go on the block. So stay with it all year – keep smoking those wonderful Chesterfield, L&M or Oasis cigarettes–keep trying! Win, man!

Buy 5 packs and get started. There will be 8 new '62 Sprites on the campuses of little old New England by next May, and you might as well jingle the keys to one of them in your jeans . . . right?

SAE Defends Its Intramural Title Against TC Wednesday

by JAY BAKER '63

Defending campus champion SAE is going to be putting its title on the line when they take on a rough Theta Chi squad 7:30 Wednesday night.

SAE, undefeated champions of IFC league B, is sporting a 6-0-0 record. This squad has an excellent quarterback in Ed Connelly and plenty of talent at every position.

Theta Chi with its 6-0-1 record also has a fine quarterback in sophomore Gordie Lewis. A well balanced backfield plus a sharp defense should prove troublesome for the champions.

The winner of this contest will probably go all the way to win the campus intramural title.

The big gun of the Dorm and Independent teams is Butterfield Dorm who is unbeaten in six outings at present.

In the consolation IFC game Wednesday at 6:30, Kappa Sig goes against TKE.

In other Dorm and Independent action, Baker B and Baker A play Tuesday night in the game which could decide the League title, although Hills North must still be considered.

The Flicks and Pick Six game Tuesday night should decide the Independent League.

Frosh Squad Elects Captains

by AL COHEN '63

Coach Don Johnson's frosh football eleven is now 2-1 on the season as a result of two lopsided games played recently.

On Friday, Oct. 27, the Little Redmen met the Springfield Frosh in an away game. In that game UMass quarterback Jerry Whelchel of Cochituate accounted for two touchdowns in a 42-7 win over the Maroons. John Schroeder, East Meadow, N.Y., Phil DeRose, Norwood, and Phil VanDerSea, Northbridge also tallied.

Last Friday, the tables were turned as Brewster Academy of Wolfboro, N.H., outplayed the Braves, 28-7. Brewster with an exceptional quarterback and lots of depth dominated the game. However, the Braves scored first and in doing so became the first frosh club to score against Brewster. Brewster holds wide margin victories over Bowdoin and Dartmouth. They next meet Harvard.

UMass, with two remaining games, they play at Connecticut on October 10—are now 2-1 on the season. Coach Johnson's main objective now is to equal last season's 4-1 mark.

Co-captains have been elected by team members. They are quarterback Jerry Whelchel from Cochituate and guard Peter Paetz from Belmont.

Whelchel was outstanding in his performances against Boston University and Springfield. He has proven especially good under pressure.

Paetz has played well in his guard slot and exemplifies the spirited line play of the Braves.

Both freshmen should be welcome additions to next year's varsity, which will be playing a tougher schedule than ever.

The Frozen Rope

by DICK MACKLEM '62

Because of the indication that a large number of UMass students will be following the Redmen to Worcester this weekend, this column is an attempt to let you enjoy the game more by describing the Holy Cross Crusaders; their pride, their coach, and of course, their team.

The following story is from Roy Mumpton, the Worcester Telegram's Sports Editor, as he wrote a column this past week concerning the tremendous difference between Yankee Conference teams, past and present. This humorous remembrance points out what the people of Worcester will be expecting Saturday. It will be up to us to prove differently.

"Back in the days when it was the custom for football's bigger fellows to warm up against weaker brethren, a brave little University of Maine team was battling for its life on Filton Field.

"Holy Cross had 32 points on the scoreboard and its regulars on the sidelines. Still the visitors were being pushed around. Capt. John J. McEwan, the H.C. coach, seemed embarrassed. The former West Point All-American center and coach had the late Amelia Earhart, the noted aviatrix, the Rudy Vallee, the crooner who popularized Maine's Stein Song, as his guests that afternoon. He became ashamed that his Crusaders were proving so rude to company.

So Mac gathered the starters around him and suggested that they relax a bit and permit Maine to gain a little ground and perhaps even make a first down or two. Tony Rovinski, an exciting back who scored alot of TDs for the Purple, took his coach too literally.

"When a Maine carrier subsequently found unbelievable room in the H.C. frontier and rushed through, Rovinski hurried towards him, made a "Follow me" gesture and then raced down and knocked off his own safety man. The surprise visitor found an unimpeded path to a touchdown. That bazaar play provided a talking point for what had been a drab and one-sided affair."

Doc Anderson, the Crusaders' ageless coach, is the Dean of active football coaches. Through his football teams and the exceptional basketball teams of the Bob Cousy, Togo Palazzi, Tommy Heinsohn era, the pride of the Purple and White is amazing. Backed by the entire city of Worcester; the campus, called Mt. St. James, is the focal point of all Central Mass sports activity.

This year Doc had an aggregation of individuals to try to mold into a team, five of which should be commented on. The Crusaders' line is about average with Ken "Jocko" Desmarais being the man to watch. "Jocko" was elected captain of the Crusaders for 1960, but dropped out of school for a year. He returned this fall to anchor the center of the line, playing guard and his old familiar center slot when needed.

At quarterback, Pat McCarthy, an eccentric and devastating little ball of fire, will be trying his rollout options and passes all afternoon. When given protection, he is one of the area's best. The most interesting personality on the Crusaders is McCarthy's caddy, senior Bill Joern, who hitchhiked to Worcester from Iowa without a cent in his pocket, and has become a polished quarterback. Bill also handles the punting for the Crusaders.

At halfback, Doc has two good ones. Tom Hennessy is probably the finest runner in New England, doing the bulk of ball carrying so far this year. If and when the Crusaders stay on the ground. However, last week Tom carried the ball only twice as the Purple humbled Dayton, so it appears that we can look for a wellbalanced attack come Saturday. At the other halfback is Al Snyder, who before last Saturday's game ranked as the fifth top-pass-receiver in the country. Watch Snyder run on his pass-patterns. It should be interesting.

Somehow I feel that the boys in Worcester will be looking forward to next week's game with Penn. State and not worrying about their little encounter with Mass. Aggie. Here on campus we strongly feel the fierce pride that has been generated in our Redmen. Our boys should be really "up" for this game, mad at themselves for losing last week, knowing that the Redmen are a good team which will continue to shine.

To the men on the team; realize yourselves and who you represent, and realize us, the student body of UMass, who will be there, with you and behind you all the way.

Ever get annoyed with all the junk mail you keep receiving? Once your name happens to get on a mailing list, you're sunk. Well, here's how I deal with such mail. Usually the senders enclose business reply envelopes; simply write on the original outer envelope: "All junk mail received by this party will be returned to the sender at his own expense." Then stuff that and all the rest of the propaganda into the reply envelope and drop it in the nearest mailbox. You can expect never to receive any more junk mail from that firm!

The manager of a hotel in upstate New York has placed a small card on the dresser of each room, and I still haven't decided whether to take it seriously or not. It reads:

"There is only one satisfactory way to test a shower, and that is to be under it.

"It is obviously impractical for hotel employees to make this test . . .

"Will you therefore be kind enough to comment in the space below about the shower in this room and leave the card in the Front Office.

"Thank you very much."

Here's a gimmick which will leave your friends somewhat sheepish . . . that is, if they've never heard of it before. Ask someone to read 3 file cards, prepards exactly as follows:

Each time he's wrong, say so and offer to let him try again. Very few people read these cards correctly the first time; see how long it takes your friends. (Or are you still trying to figure out what's so unusual about these cards?)

Ocean Spray Grants $15,000 For Research

A three-phase research project on cranberry products made possible by a $15,000 grant to the department of food technology at UMass was announced today.

The agreement with Ocean Spray Cranberries, Inc., Chicago, Ill., will allow the department to continue research in support of the Agricultural Experiment Station for three years under the direction of Dr. F. J. Francis.

One phase of the research will involve biochemical studies on the isolation and identification of the red and yellow pigments and the pigment indicators in the raw fruit. Another phase of the work will involve the development of objective methods to follow the loss in quality caused by the degradation of the red pigments in processed cranberry products.

A third portion of the research will involve a study of the relationship between surface color measurement of the raw berries and the pigment content in the hope that a practical method of grading the raw berries for color and pigment content can be developed.

This research is a continuation of a series of studies on pigment content and color measurement in cranberries and cranberry products that have been conducted by the department in recent years.

UM Teacher Exhibits Art Until Nov. 21

Paintings and drawings of contemporary American artist Walters Kamys are on display in the Commonwealth Room.

Kamys is a native Chicagoan who received his formal training at the Art Institute in that city. Recipient of a resident fellowship and a fellowship for study abroad, he later won the Prix de Rome.

Kamys studied in Mexico with the English painter Gordon Onslow-Ford. He came to New England 17 years ago and during much of that time has lived in Montague, Mass. He is presently teaching art courses at UMass.

His paintings and drawings have been shown in many one-man exhibitions as well as in important group shows throughout the United States and Europe. His work is represented in the museums of Smith College, Mount Holyoke College, the Societe Anonyme Collection at Yale University, Albion College and in other public and private collections.

Kamys is represented by the Bertha Schaefer Gallery in New York. This exhibition is presented through the courtesy of that gallery.

Arrangements for the show were made by the Department of Art at the University.

ZEO . . .

we urged your commission not to shut its eyes to more general solutions."

Zeo observed that the university trustees are having a fiscal autonomy bill of their own drawn up and that it cannot be commented upon until it is presented. He said there still seems to be evidence in the matter from the university which is to be presented, including a report from a faculty committee. Zeo called for an independent examination by the commission.

Zeo said his group "would certainly have no objection" to a commission recommendation that the three-year pre-tenure period for instructors, veteran or non-veteran, be extended at the university and at other state colleges. He noted that the taxpayers group earlier had objected to faculty pay ceilings which place UM professors several thousand dollars below their counterparts in leading state schools and private colleges. There should be a "major upgrading" of professors' pay and to a 'lesser extent' of pay for associate professors.

"Basic Distinction"

Zeo said the taxpayers group recognizes the basic distinction" between the university and the other state colleges. He said, "The former, with the wide sweep of its subject fields and its hopefully growing emphasis on graduate studies and research, must necessarily turn to the national market for faculty recruitment. The latter, still quite largely oriented to teacher training, can more readily recruit in the lower priced or regional market; the public schools provide no small part of their faculty supply."

Zeo stated his opinion and that of his organization that "complete freedom of personnel action" at the University is not immediately achievable, because it cannot obtain legislative approval.

Former Student To Talk on Corps

A former UMass student who left here in his freshman year to join the Peace Corps will appear on the first program of this year's "College News Conference" to be presented on the National Educational Television network.

Majored In Russian

Bradford H. Whipple of Dorchester is a Peace Corps worker in Colombia, South America who was formerly a student here majoring in Russian before leaving for his new duties.

Whipple joined the Air Force in 1956. During the next four years he became fluent in German, Russian, and French. He has since added Spanish to his linguistic repertoire. While he learned most of his languages during service in Germany, he improved his Russian at Syracuse University before coming to UMass.

Ruth Hagy Is Producer

Ruth Hagy, ten-year veteran of television, is the producer-moderator of "College News Conference." For this first show of the season she flew to Colombia, South America with members of a 64-man Peace Corps unit. She brought with her three outstanding American students to observe the Peace Corps members as they worked along with Colombians in the villages of Zipacon and Manzanilla.

During the course of "The Peace Corps in Colombia" Bradford Whipple and several other Corps members are questioned as to why they joined, what they hope to accomplish, and how their training could be improved. The young men also give advice to persons considering Peace Corps work.

Back Mid-East Nationalism, Says State Department Official

by ANN MILLER '64

"We have no alternative but to build strong nationalist states where we can," emphasized Dr. John C. Campbell in his lecture yesterday in the Commonwealth Room on United States foreign policy and the Middle East.

Dr. Campbell was the second in a series of four lecturers coming to the University this year, to speak on American foreign policy during the first year of the Kennedy administration.

Says Nothing Certain

"Nothing can be taken as certain in the Middle East," began Campbell. He further introduced his topic with several examples to back this up.

"Certainly those policies which we've had in the past have failed or partially failed . . . partly because they were built on our experience in policy towards other parts of the world, and partly because they were built on the shifting sands of then existing situations in the Middle East."

We must determine, he said, what our biggest threat in the Middle East is—economic backwardness, Soviet threat, Arab Israeli disputing—and what decisions must be made regarding this threat.

Gave History Of Efforts

Campbell then gave the history of American efforts to build foreign policy in the Middle East, and explained the failure of these policies. "There's no question but that our failure to see rising movements in a government and our association with failing regimes has meant our policy failures."

Again, he asked, "What is our biggest threat in the Middle East?" It is, he explained, the threat of Soviet aggression. "The problem is that we want to deny this area to Communism . . . Khrushchev is still following the line of supporting nationalist regimes in order to expel Western power from the Middle East . . . While we can count on a cautious policy from Moscow for some time, the turn may come at any time."

"For our own policy—it is and should be directed at methods of frustation toward Soviet advance."

Speaks Of Two Areas

Speaking of the area as two areas — North and South — he went on, "In the North we have no alternative but to build strong nationalist states where we can. In the Arab area . . . we have to support Arab nationalism more than in the past. We cannot be supporters of Nassar's individualist attempt at nationalism or Arab policy on Israel . . . but should adopt attitudes to show Arabs that we are not opposed to their real and legitimate aims."

Campbell, Director of Political Studies for the Council on Foreign Relations, is an authority on the Middle East and has had extensive service with the U.S. State Department.

Debate Team Scores 4 for 5 In Tourney

Last weekend at the Amherst College tournament our novice debate team fared remarkably well against several fine universities by winning six out of ten rounds of debating.

UMass was represented by Dave Mathieson and Steve Jenkins for the negative and Joan Shusta and Paul Hunter debating on the affirmative side of the question. Dave and Steve won four out of five of their debates, defeating such able opponents as Cornell and Boston College. They were the only negative team able to conquer the B.C. duet. Joan and Paul, debating the affirmative proposition (Resolved: that labor unions should be placed under the jurisdiction of federal anti-trust legislation) won two out of five of their debates.

In two weeks, debaters from the University of Massachusetts will travel to Vermont for another tournament, hoping to do as well as in the Amherst competition. Mr. Savereid and Mr. Angell, the debate society coaches, have expressed hopes to enter a varsity foursome in addition.

Response To Blood Drive Heartening

This year's blood drive will more than double the number of contributions received last year according to figures released by the Campus Intereligious Council yesterday

Over 850 pledges have been received to date and these do not include expected faculty donations. Last year 429 pints of blood were donated by both students and faculty of UMass.

The response has been so overwhelming that the council has arranged for an extra day for the bloodmobile to be on campus to receive donations from walk-in donors over 21-years of age, Tuesday, November 14.

King Lear Production To Have Arctic Setting

The Smith College department of theatre and speech announced today that its import this year will be the Canadian Players, Canada's national touring theatre company.

To Present King Lear

Under the direction of David Gardner, they will present "King Lear" in John M. Greene Hall Tuesday, Dec. 5, at 8 p.m. Audiences saw their previous productions of Saint Joan in 1955 and Peer Gynt in 1956, also in John M. Greene.

As Shakespearean scholar G. Wilson Knight declares, "King Lear" is a "winter play," and the tragedy will, for the first time in the history of the theatre, be played with an Arctic setting to underline the primitive struggle with human nature and the natural elements which Gardner believes to be its very core.

Hutt To Play Lear

The part of Lear will be played by William Hutt, assistant manager and leading man with the Canadian Repertory Theatre in Ottawa. Hutt has been well known to theatre, film and television audiences both in this country and in the United Kingdom since 1950, and for the past seven seasons has received top billing in Ontario's Stratford Festival.

Director David Gardner, one of the original actors to tour with the Canadian Players, was a winner in 1956 of the Tyrone Guthrie Award.

Tickets for this performance will be on sale at $1, $2, and $3 at the Students' Building box office beginning Dec. 1.

'65 Officers Sworn In By Senate

by MAUREEN ROBIDEAU '65

At Wednesday evening's meeting of the Student Senate, the newly elected officers of the Freshman class were sworn in by William Donovan. Other matters discussed at the meeting were:

Senator Don Cournoyer, Chairman of the Services Committee, reported that the roads in the area of North Plesant St., the Abbey, and the north parking lot would be improved.

Cournoyer also recommended that suggestion boxes be placed in the dorms and in fraternity and sorority houses. Senator Haebler told the Services Committee about the unhealthy living conditions in the girls' dorms, due to insects.

President Tex Tacelli made the following committee appointments: Campus Chest, Ann Griffin; Calendar Coordinating Board, Bob Broggi; Open House Weekend, Leslie Schain.

Tom Wiswell, champion checker player of the world successfully played 23 chess games simutaneously last Wednesday night in the Cape Cod room of the S.U.

Four players reached considerable success when they succeeded in tying Wiswell. Actually nobody wins in checker—the best a player can do is "draw" or tie. None of those who tied Wiswell were students.

The Checker Champ then turned to chess to be defeated by three students and a player from Eastampton. The Winners were Dave Morrisson and Ronald Thomas from UMass, Jeff Rohlfs of Amherst College and John Ducharme of Easthampton.

Ad Hoc Committee Set Up To Check Election Methods

An ad hoc committee will be set up to investigate elections procedures in campus elections it was disclosed yesterday by the Senate Public Relations Committee.

The committee will investigate present procedure in an effort to determine among other things how to insure a representation of veteran senators from year to year. Only seven veteran senators returned to the Student Senate this year while 35 inexperienced senators were elected to office.

The committee will also attempt to determine what action could be taken when senators resign from an incompleted term as happened earlier this year when several senators resigned near the end of their terms.

The present procedure used in campus elections will also come under scrutiny as the committee will try to find a more efficient way to conduct campus elections. Aside from the senators assigned to the committee by he Student Senate, any non-senators may join.

Non-senators who wish to join the ad hoc committee on elections are urged to contact Elections Committee chairman Peter Haebler at Chadbourne or Senate President Tex Tacellii at Van Meter.

Explaining the Opposition

In recent issues, the Collegian has been called to account for the printing of opinions which are not necessarily in suport of those expressed by our President or our U.N. delegate or tradition. Perhaps the best explanation of the need for the expression of both sides to an arguement comes from one of America's foremost journalists—Walter Lippmann.

"We do not see what our eyes are not accustomed to take into account. Sometimes, consciously, more often without knowing it, we are impressed by those facts which fit our (own) philosophy.

". . . At the core of every moral code there is a picture of human nature, a map of the universe, and a version of history . . . Under the term moral codes I include all kinds: personal, family, economic, professional, legal, patriotic, international. At the center of each there is a pattern of stereotypes about psychology, sociology, and history.

". . . The theory I am suggesting is that, in the present state of education, a public opinion is primarily a moralized and codified version of the facts. I am arguing that the pattern of stereotypes at the center of our codes largely determines what group of facts we shall see, and in what light we shall see them. That is why a capitalist sees one set of facts, and certain aspects of human nature, his socialist opponent another set and other aspects, and why each regards the other as unreasonable or perverse, when the real difference between them is a difference of perception. That difference is imposed by the difference between the capitalist and socialist patterns of stereotypes.

". . . The opposition has always to be explained, and the last explanation that we ever look for is that he sees a different set of facts. Such an explanation we avoid, because it saps the very foundation of our own assurance that we have seen life steadily and seen it whole."
Walter Lippmann, PUBLIC OPINION, 1922, Macmillan Co.

- - LETTERS - -

To the Editor:

Recent letters to the editor have certainly revealed an utter lack of understanding concerning the role of a student operated newspaper functioning at the University level.

An editorial page cannot constantly be bombarded with features extolling the fine football team we have at UMass or the wonderful fall landscape. The duty of the editorial page is far more. It must help to arouse the spirit of the school. Many recent editorials have clearly done this job., i.e. the question of Germany as an ally, and the signed article requesting the further acceptance of the status of Red China as a sovereign, although belligerent, world power.

Most of the letters concerning Germany, both pro and con, have been grossly distorted. Mr. Rosenberg on one hand would have us believe that all Germans were busy loading people on the cattle cars which had concentration camps as their destinations. I am sure Willy Brandt who fought with the Norwegian underground during World War II would not agree with his assumption. Mr. Ulrich, on the other hand would perhaps have us believe that all Germans realizing the Communist threat were on the Eastern front shooting at the Russian hordes, while nobody was even worrying about their future allies (Americans and British) pushing from the west. Somewhere between these two points lies the truth. As long as the editorials of the Collegian continue to arouse indignation the search for the truth on this and other topics of interest will be debated by an aroused student body. If only some measure of complacency may be averted by the editorial page of the Collegian then the Collegian is performing its function to the utmost degree.

Mainzer Differs With N.Y. Times

The following letter was printed in the New York Times of Wednesday, November 8, 1961. Dr. Mainzer is an Assistant Professor of Government at the University of Massachusetts.

"To the Editor of the New York Times:

"Are we to renounce all hope of exercising influence over our fate? Two items in your issue of Oct. 25 require us to ask whether we see ourselves only as moved by others, as objects beyond the control of our own intelligence and will.

"Lord Russell, rightly, I think, scoffed at the Soviet contention that they had been forced into their nuclear weapons tests by the United States and were themselves innocent. Your editorial, wrongly, I think, stated that if we renew testing above ground 'the prime responsibility and guilt' will rest upon the Soviet Union for forcing us to do so, and further resonsibility will rest with certain U.N. members.

"You would do us more honor to grant us the blame or the praise for our own actions. If prudence dictates to the President the awful decision of above-ground testing, then he and we are to blame for any lethal consequences. This does not mean that the decision is necessarily wrong—another issue entirely—but that when we do something with really bad consequences, such as probably deforming future humans, we ought to admit what we do.

"It would be absurd, if, having taken such action, we could feel guiltless. To deny our responsibility for what we do is simply to degrade us and to make intelligence still less a force in our public life."

'The Most Dangerous Sin'

S.U., 7 p.m., 50 cents

"The Most Dangerous Sin" is an 108 minute French screenplay based on Dostoevsky's novel, Crime and Punishment. The dialog is French with English subtitles.

Jean Gabin is superb as the inspector who waits patiently and probes the psychological depths of the murder; Robert Hossein is the young student murderer; Ulla Jacobson is his sister; Bernard Blier is her strange fiance; and Marina Vlady is the prostitute who falls in love with the murderer and helps him find redemption.

'Truth Over Fabrication'

To the Editor:

Mr. Bussewitz states in his letter that Mr. Rosenberg's article should not be dignified by a rebuttal. I disagree. No power on earth could possibly dignify such an outrageous collection of half truths and slanderous implications and allegations. More important, to let the article stand, unanswered, is to deny the power of truth over fabrication.

I commend the Collegian for its wisdom and courage in allowing such obviously communist-inspired propaganda to be printed. The dark forces of untruth cannot be fought with censorship. We, as students, should be anxious to examine every idea thoroughly and unemotionally. In this way is the communist philosophy shown to be completely fraudulent.

Within the limits of space, let us examine a few of Mr. Rosenberg's "pertinent facts" and discover if they present a true picture of the West German government.

Adenauer is a former director of a bank that did business with Hitler. Mr. Rosenberg fails to mention that the Nazis deposed Adenauer from his office (Lord Mayor of Cologne) and later arrested him.

Schaeffer is described as a former Nazi leader. How important a position did he hold? A rather diligent search through German and international publications failed to discover any description of Schaeffer as a Nazi "leader". It is fairly obvious, even to a casual student of history, that many Germans were forced by circumstance, not conviction, to join the party. These people must be considered prisoners of the movement, not the directors of it.

Certain West German leaders served in the armed forces of their country during W.W. II. I find it difficult to condemn any of them for their action; or to imply that their service indicated Nazi sympathies; or to conclude that their service was entirely voluntary. Here, again, I think most students of history will share my reservations.

It is particularly interesting that Speidal should be labeled a "Hitlerite general". Speidal spent three months in a Nazi prison after the bomb plot on Hitler's life. Several historians have concluded that Speidal only narrowly escaped the Nazi gallows.

From these few examples, we may derive the pattern of Mr. Rosenberg's article. Certain facts are presented. They are generally accurate. One might question the use of 1951 statistics to portray Germany today. But this may be of no great importance. From these facts, implications are drawn and mixed liberally with opinions to form rather questionable conclusions. I maintain that a few isolated facts cannot be used to form the basis of an argument which concludes with the condemnation of an entire government. Many more facts must be presented and evaluated in order to arrive at the truth. Otherwise, the implications are misleading and the conclusions in error.

This is not to say that Mr. Rosenberg errs completely. He does not. Indeed, this is barely credible to the uninformed. There is some Nazi influence in West Germany. Globke has been the object of some controversy, for example. But Mr. Rosenberg takes a picture that is light gray and describes it as black. This should present a welcome intellectual challenge to every student. This challenge is to study carefully the entire situation and arrive at conclusions that are free from bias. This is the proper way to rebut Mr. Rosenberg's article. The solution is not found in blind rejection or censorship. The article does not warrant censorship. Indeed, it demands only sympathy for the twisted intellect of its creator.

At First Glance

. In an effort to answer the question of whether or not controversial articles should be printed in the Collegian as well as to explain the reason for any kind of opposition, today's main editorial, Explaining the Opposition, picks up learned copy of the New York Herald Tribune's Walter Lippmann . . . Speaking of New York newspapers, UMass' Dr. Mainzer of the government department had a Letter to the Editor printed in the Times recently. For non-Times readers, we reprint the letter . . . Our two Letters to the Editor deal with the Editorial page and the Changing Times' Germany problem. Mr. Satterfield's letter on David Rosenberg's controversial article is one of the best sent to the Collegian. . . . in the WMUA Spotlight we look at the traditional "Crazy Rhythms" show . . . And, finally, there is a short review of the upcoming Sunday Foreign Film—The Most Dangerous Sin.

WMUA Spotlight

This week WMUA spotlights an original member of the campus station—"Crazy Rhythms". This show went on the air when the station started broadcasting from South College, and was heard every afternoon from 3:30 to 6 p.m. The format of the show was representative of the times and featured the lively hit tunes and numerous rock and roll hits.

For the past few years, the popularity of rock and roll has died down with the college crowd; and now the program is only broadcast on Friday nights from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. A unique feature of "Crazy Rhythms" is that it is broadcast "live" from the Hatch between the hours of 8-10 p.m. "Crazy Rhythms" is a dedication show and people may request their favorite records by dropping in at the Hatch and asking the announcer or by phoning the station.

An interesting mystery is related to "Crazy Rhythms". Every Friday night before the show sign off, a woman would call in and request "Some Enchanted Evening" by Marino Lanza. The woman never revealed her name, but never failed to call. Several years later when she died, her name was revealed to the station. Still the tradition goes on and every Friday night, "Some Enchanted Evening" is played on "Crazy Rhythms".

Pan Hel Sponsors Frosh Tea and Round Robins

On Sunday, November 12, from 3-5 p.m. the Panhellenic Council will be host to all freshman women at a tea to be held in the S.U. Ballroom. The purpose of the tea is to acquaint Freshmen with the sorority system, its goals and ideals.

The following weekend, November 18 and 19, from 1:30-4:50 p.m. Round Robins will be held. Freshman women will be given a tour of the Sorority houses. They will tour on two days—A-M on Saturday and M-Z on Sunday.

Girls in Johnson, Lewis, Thatcher, Dwight, and Mary Lyons will meet in Dwight Rec-room, while those in Leach, Crabtree, Hamlin, Arnold, Knowlton, and Adams will meet in Arnold Rec-room before proceeding on the tour.

POVERTY CAN BE FUN

It is no disgrace to be poor. It is an error, but it is no disgrace.

So if your purse is empty, do not skulk and brood and hide your head in shame. Stand tall. Admit your poverty. Admit it freely and frankly and all kinds of good things will happen to you. Take, for instance, the case of Blossom Sigafoos.

Blossom, an impecunious freshman at an Eastern girls' college, was smart as a whip and round as a dumpling, and scarcely a day went by when she didn't get invited to a party weekend at one of the nearby men's schools. But Blossom never accepted. She did not have the rail fare; she did not have the clothes. Weekend after weekend, while her classmates went frolicking, Blossom sat alone, saved from utter despair only by her pack of Marlboros, for even an exchequer as slim as Blossom's can afford the joys of Marlboro—joys far beyond their paltry price: rich, mellow tobaccos, lovingly cured and carefully packed, and an exclusive selectrate filter. Croesus himself could not buy a better cigarette!

However, Marlboro's most passionate admirers—among whose number I am paid to count myself—would not claim that Marlboro can entirely replace love and romance, and Blossom grew steadily moroser.

"Accept these Gifts from Tom."

Then one day came a phone call from an intelligent sophomore named Tom O'Shanter at a nearby men's college. "Blossom," said Tom, "I want you to come down next week for the barley festival, and I won't take no for an answer."

"No," said Blossom.

"Foolish girl," said Tom gently. "I know why you refuse me. It is because you are poor, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Blossom.

"I will send you a railroad ticket," said Tom. "Also a hard-boiled egg in case you get hungry on the train."

"But I have nothing to wear," said Blossom.

Tom replied, "I will send you one suit of cashmere, two gowns of lace, three slacks of velvet, four shoes of calf, five socks of nylon, and a partridge in a pear tree."

"That is most kind," said Blossom, "but I fear I cannot dance and enjoy myself while back home my poor lame brother Tiny Tim lies abed."

"Send him to Mayo Brothers and put it on my tab," said Tom.

"You are terribly decent," said Blossom, "but I cannot come to your party because all the other girls at the party will be from rich, distinguished families, and my father is but a humble woodcutter."

"I will buy him Yosemite," said Tom.

"You have a great heart," said Blossom. "Hold the phone while I ask our wise and kindly old Dean of Women whether it is proper for me to accept all these gifts."

She went forthwith and asked the Dean of Women, and the Dean of Women laid her wise and kindly old hand on Blossom's cheek and said, "Child, let not false pride rob you of happiness. Accept these gifts from Tom."

"Oh, bless you, Wise and Kindly," breathed Blossom, dropping grateful tears into the Dean's reticule. "I must run and tell Tom."

"Yes, run, child," said the Dean, a smile wrinkling her wise and kindly old eyes. "And ask him has he got an older brother."

Larson Heads UMass' New Theatre Dept.

by BARB LILLY '65

A new member of the Speech Department who will head the theatrical section is Dr. Orville K. Larson from Ohio.

A successful and well-known scene designer for many years, Dr. Larson is responsible for the set of the Roister Doister presentation of "Volpone." The set, consisting entirely of fabric, should provide a unique and colorful background to the production.

Another show of Dr. Larson's talents is currently on display in the lobby at Bartlett Hall. A specialist in theatre history, he has assembled "The Baroque Illusion," an exhibition of 17th century stage designs, including original drawings by the Galli-Bibrena family.

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin as an art education major, Dr. Larson received his M.A. at Western Reserve University and his Ph.D. at the University of Illinois. At these schools and others he has both designed sets and taught scene design.

Dr. Larson's accomplishments are many and varied. He is chairman of the American Educational Theatre Translation and Publication of Rare Books of the Theatre Project, and his latest book, "Scene Design for Stage and Screen", has just been published. He has been a frequent contributor to theatrical magazines, writing mainly on scene design.

UM Graduate Writes Novel of Modern Life

This is the sixth in a series of Alumni Profiles.

WILLIAM MANCHESTER '46
B.A. English, Univ. of Mass.;
M.A. Univ. of Missouri

A Managing Editor of the Wesleyan University Press, William Manchester, Class of 1946, is the author of his fourth novel, The Long Gainer. "This is a bold novel filled to overflowing with life; the calculated confusion of a political campaign; the urgent hustle of a metropolitan newspaper; the pageantry of big time football with its leaping coeds; the contrasts between a sprawling, mushrooming state university and a gray flannel college where the sons of the privileged learned their manners for 'gentle', ivied generations."

WILLIAM MANCHESTER '46

Search For Status, Education and Morality

Manchester knows all the worlds of his novel well: politics, journalism, academy, social hierarchy and even football, and he articulates these and lesser threads superbly . . . as the narrative moves faster and faster the structure becomes an impressively successful metaphor of his meaning. The novel's thematic issues are defined as "the search for status in a classless society, for quality in mass education, for morality in an affluent generation. By and large, Mr. Manchester is long viewed and intelligent on all of these." New York Times Book Review.

Author's Biography On Mencken

In 1951, Manchester received considerable literary attention for his biography of H. L. Mencken, Disturber of the Peace. When, as an undergraduate here at UMass, Manchester had a professor suddenly launch into vituperation about "a man named Mencken," he decided that someone capable of inspiring such wrath must be worth reading. He sought out and read Mencken whenever he could. At the University of Missouri Graduate School he did his thesis on him. Mencken read the thesis and gave official permission for the biography and suggested as well a berth on the Baltimore Evening Sun.

Appointed Guggenheim Fellow

Manchester wrote for the Sun for seven years, spending much of that time as a foreign correspondent, and then became H. L. Mencken's private secretary.

William Manchester has been Managing Editor of the Wesleyan University Press since 1955. He was appointed a Guggenheim Fellow for creative writing in fiction in 1959, and in the same year a fellow at the Wesleyan Center for advanced studies. Two other novelists holding this latter chair have been Walter Van Tilburg Clark, 1960-61 and C. P. Snow 1961-62.

Manchester also wrote a Rockefeller Family Portrait and has written articles for almost every leading magazine in the country. Currently, he is working on a three part magazine profile of President Kennedy with the cooperation of the President. It is scheduled for publication in Holiday next spring.

Sororities Elect Officers, Enjoy Exchange Suppers

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

The Alpha Chi's recently elected several new officers for the remaining weeks of the semester. Sheila Keblin was elected Social Chairman; Joanne Hyland, Senior Pan Hellenic Representative; Barb McDonough, Assistant Pledge Trainer; and Eileen Reilley, Courtesy Chairman.

Dianne Tyrell is Alpha Chi Omega's nomination for Winter Carnival Queen. Dianne is a member of the class of '63 and an Alpha Chi pledge.

The sisters of Alpha Chi Omega would like to thank Kappa Sig for a very successful exchange supper Tuesday evening. All had a really great time.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

The sisters and pledges of Kappa Alpha Theta thank all the Alpha Chi's for a real "spooky" Halloween party last week.

Anne Griffin was recently elected chairman of Women's Affairs.

Mrs. Clough, the new housemother at Leach, was KAT's guest at Sunday dinner. She had many interesting tales to tell us about her new life at UMass.

The seniors treated the housemother, Mrs. Hamilton, to a luscious spread at the Log Cabin, October 30. This was only one of the ways the sisters could show their appreciation for all the concern she has shown this year.

The Thetas thank the Sig Eps for a great exchange supper held last Wednesday.

The newly elected officers of our Pledge Class are: Pres., Margie Olson, Sec., Diana Dunn, Song Leader, Penny Burns, and Scholarship Chairman, Sandy Grueber.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

Kappa's congratulations and best wishes are out to Joyce Larson, who is to be married on November 25. Elected Monday night to replace her as Athletics Chairman was Maggie Wensel, '64.

The sisters thank the brothers of Phi Sigma Kappa and Tau Kappa Epsilon with whom they had real swell times at the exchange suppers these last two weeks.

SIGMA DELTA TAU

SDT was honored to hostess this year's Panhellenic Scholarship Tea, which was held on Sunday.

The Sisters are also proud to announce, that they had the second highest scholastic average for sororities last year. SDT's President Cindy Segal was the recipient of the Panhellenic Scholarship award. SDT would also like to thank the brothers of AEPi and AGR for two very enjoyable exchange suppers.

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

Lost: One aquamarine and gold flag. Missing since Halloween. Any clues???

The Lambda Phi's would like to thank their advisors, Mrs. Fenton, Mrs. Davenport, Mrs. Mawson, Mrs. Drake and Mrs. Knight for the desert hour last Monday.

The sisters would also like to thank Mrs. Marshall, their housemother, for the surprise formal dinner last week.

The Lambda Phi's were thrilled to receive the scholarship tray, and thank the sisters of Sigma Delta Tau for the tea Sunday.

Formal initiation to LDP's new national will be held at Beta chapter at Rhode Island on December 2. It was good news to learn that the pledge chapter at B.U. will be able to initiate then too.

DWIGHT

Dwight House is proud of its two finalists for Mili Ball; Joan Werner and Sheila Ryan.

A very successful Hallowe'en Party was given the upperclassmen by the freshmen last week.

Fall Fashions To Be Modeled

Fashion Flair will be held in the Student Union Ballroom November 14, 1961, at 8:00 p.m. This fall fashion show presented by the Special Events Committee of the Student Union will include clothes from the House of Walsh of Amherst and Williamstown, Margaret Nelson, Blue Brown Shop and Laura Gerrard's, Northampton, Massachusetts. The theme of the show will be "A flair with fashions while still balancing the budget."

Twenty-five models and eight male escorts have been selected for the Show. Miss Susan Goldsmith, Mademoiselle Magazine representative on campus will commentate the show and will also prepare an article on the University Fashion Flair for Mademoiselle Magazine.

A few surprises will be presented during the evening . . . a view of some costuming from Volpone, the forthcoming Roister Doister production, and a demonstration by the Breck Shampoo Company.

The new singing group on campus, Musigals, will be performing during the evening too.

Twenty-five cents will be charged at the door.

Costume Parties Held In Dorms

Knowltonites celebrated Hallowe'en last Tuesday evening with a costume party in the Recreation Room.

The program was planned by members of the fourth floor, with Karen Peterson, '63, leading a "Bell, Book, and Candle Hour."

Prizes for the best costumes went to Pat Trail, '65 and Diane McElroy '65 (as Mr. and Mrs. Khrushchev); Marcia Trimble '64, and Sue Herron '64 (as Siamese twins); Joan Chiminello '64, and Sheila Maden '64 (as Milly Bawl and Escort); and our housemother, Mrs. Judge.

Lambda Delta Phi Is Tray Recipient

Statistics received by all sororities at the annual Panhellenic Scholarship Tea held at Sigma Delta Tau on Sunday, November 5th, showed that once again sorority women achieved a higher average than that of the university and all women's average. The yearly scholastic average of the eight sororities was 2.537 as oppposed to 2.364 for all women and 2.205 for all university men and women.

As scholarship is an active part of the sorority program, the highlight of the afternoon was the presentation of the Scholarship Tray to Lambda Delta Phi for an average of 2.656. Sigma Delta Tau was second with 2.592, and Sigma Kappa was third with 2.562. This is the second Scholarship Tray presented to Lambda

Smart Bridge Notes

The game on Thursday, November 2, was back to six tables. Moreover, it was mostly students, the "visitors" were noticeably absent—they don't take hour exams though some of them give them. This is an open game at all times for all students; and in addition members of the faculty and friends from the town are invited to play.

Food, Water Must Last Two Weeks

"Emergency food stockpiling is a 'must' in considering nuclear attack," Kirby M. Hayes of the department of food technology at the UMass reminds Massachusetts residents.

Many survivors of a nuclear attack would have to rely on their own reserve supplies of food and water for up to two weeks. Families are urged either (1) to store and maintain a special emergency food stockpile in their homes or fallout shelters or (2) to build up their regular food stocks so there is a two-week supply on hand at all times.

A new publication "Family Food Stockpile for Survival", tells how much and what kinds of emergency food to store so as to provide each family member a reasonably balanced diet for two weeks. Single copies of the publication, No. HG-77, are free from the Office of Information, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C.

'Volpone' Scheduled To Be Comedy Hit Of Season

by KAREN BURGESS '64

"A brilliant director and talented students will combine to insure the success of Stephen Flagg's adaptation of Ben Jonson's Volpone," says Dr. Jules Chametsky, of the UMass English department.

Volpone reveals Jonson at his best. A mixture of wit and satiric characterization helps make this one of Jonson's liveliest plays. He luxuriates in the decadence of Venetian life of the time. The world that he describes is thoroughly decadent with no saving grace and with nobody escaping the lash of satire.

At the center of the play is Volpone, a magnificent villain and scoundrel. He knows that he is corrupt, and uses the corruptness of the other characters for his own base motives.

According to Dr. Chametsky, Stephen Flagg's version of this play is better for a modern stage than the original. Without removing any of the satire and wit Flagg condenses the play and makes it more economical.

Volpone is very funny and anyone who sees it should enjoy it immensely. The play emphasizes farce over satire, and is broad burlesque. The costumes and settings are spectacular, the cast and director enthusiastic—all adding up to a big success.

Dr. Chametsky hopes that this play is the beginning of an exploration into the classics and wishes to compliment the R.D.'s and speech department for this undertaking.

Volpone will be presented in Bowker Auditorium, November 16, 17, and 18. Tickets may be purchased at the S.U. Box Office for $1.00 and $1.25.

UMass Host AIEE - IRE Reps. To Sat. Conference

Representatives of colleges and universities in New England, New York and Pennsylvania will attend a joint student meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the Institute of Radio Engineers to be held at UMass on Saturday, Nov. 11.

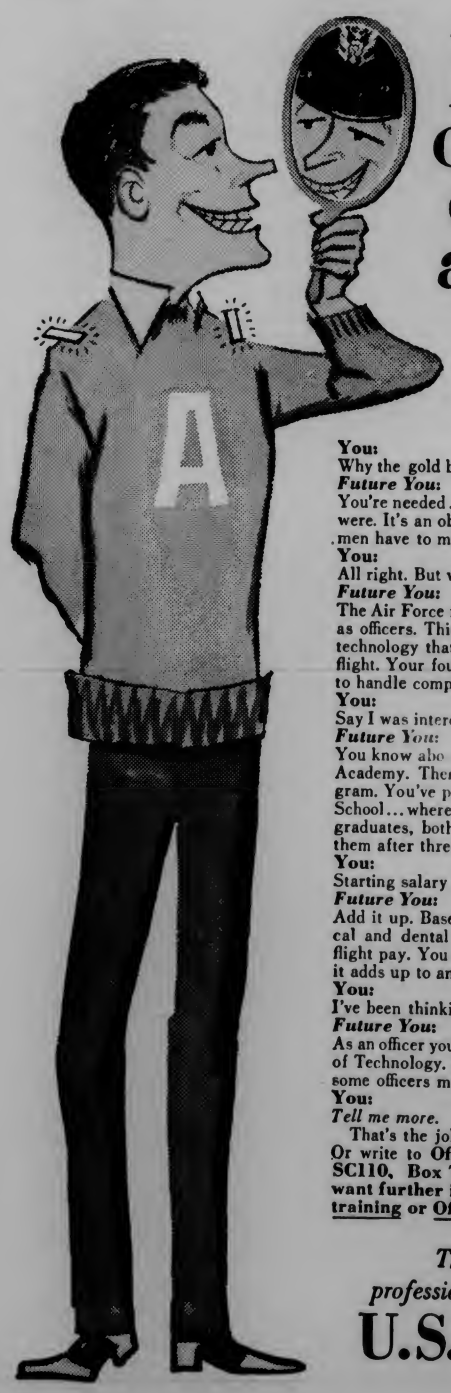
The first of its kind in the country, the conference will feature a speaking program, panel discussions, business sessions, and a tour of electrical engineering laboratories here.

Major speakers will be Philip L. Alger, AIEE Fellow and Lamme Medalist, and Ronald E. Scott, Dean of Engineering at Northeastern University. Welcoming remarks will be given by G. Dale Sheckels, head of the electrical engineering department at UMass.

Distinguished guests will include the national president of AIEE, Warren H. Chase; the organization's national secretary, Nelson S. Hibshman; and the national student affairs secretary for IRE, Reed Crane, who will give an address on the proposed merger of the two organizations.

A panel discussion on student branch operations will be undertaken by chairmen of joint AIEE-IRE branches from the University of Buffalo, Gannon (Pa.) College, Tufts University, and the Worcester Polytechnic Institute. Moderator will be Alfred Mochau, Jr., senior from Lanesboro, Mass., who is joint branch chairman at UMass.

The all-day conference will be held in the SU and will begin at 9:30 a.m.



had a one-man conference about your future lately?

You:
Why the gold bars?
Future You:
You're needed... just as your father and grandfather were. It's an obligation that a lot of qualified college men have to meet. If we don't...
You:
All right. But what can I do for the Air Force?
Future You:
The Air Force needs college trained men and women as officers. This is caused by the rapidly advancing technology that goes with hypersonic air and space flight. Your four years of college have equipped you to handle complex jobs.
You:
Say I was interested...how can I get to be an officer?
Future You:
You know about Air Force ROTC and the Air Force Academy. Then there's the navigator training program. You've probably heard about Officer Training School...where the Air Force takes certain college graduates, both men and women, and commissions them after three months of training.
You:
Starting salary is important. What about that?
Future You:
Add it up. Base pay, tax-free allowances, free medical and dental care, retirement provision, perhaps flight pay. You don't have to be an eco major to see it adds up to an attractive package.
You:
I've been thinking about getting my Master's.
Future You:
As an officer you can apply for the Air Force Institute of Technology. At no cost, and while on active duty some officers may even win their Ph.D. degrees.
You:
Tell me more.

That's the job of your local Air Force Recruiter. Or write to Officer Career Information, Dept. SCI10, Box 7608, Washington 4, D.C., if you want further information about the navigator training or Officer Training School programs.

Hard Running Redmen Harriers Edged by Strong Maroon Crew

In their closest competition of the season, the UMass cross country team dropped a 26-29 decision to Springfield College at Springfield Wednesday.

The Redmen now have a record of 7-2 while the surprising Maroons have added a ninth victory to their undefeated record.

Paul MacDonald of Greenfield, who practiced with the Redmen as a high school boy and who has been out to beat them ever since, realized his wish as he was the individual winner. He broke the course record by 18 seconds with a 23:37 time.

Bob Brouillet of UMass turned in another fine race as he also broke the record and finished second only 5 seconds behind MacDonald. Tom Randall of the Maroons was third and also under the record.

Co-captains Dick Blomstrom and Dave Balch were 5th and 6th, respectively, and Jim Wrynn gained a lot of ground in the last mile to finish 7th, one second behind Balch. Ken O'Brien also showed great improvement in 9th place.

The next meet for the Redmen harriers is the New England Championships at Franklin Park, Boston, on Monday.

UMass was runner up in this meet last year when Brown won by 6 points. This year's title is a toss-up among UMass, Brown, Springfield, and Maine.

The Summary:

1.	MacDonald, SC	23:37
2.	Brouillet, UM	23:42
3.	Randall, SC	23:44
4.	Merritt, SC	24:13
5.	Blomstrom, UM	24:33
6.	Balch, UM	24:35
7.	Wrynn, UM	24:36
8.	Petty, SC	24:52
9.	O'Brien, UM	24:58
10.	Flanagan, SC	25:19
11.	Chaffee, SC	25:20
12.	Avery, UM	25:29
13.	Colburn, UM	25:35
14.	Proctor, UM	25:53
15.	Servis, SC	25:59

Lewis, Slick Named For ECAC Honors

Halfback Freddy Lewis and guard Sam Slick of the University of Massachusetts football squad received honorable mentions from the ECAC for their performances in the Boston University clash last weekend.

Slick, who filled in for injured John Kozaka during the Northeastern and B.U. games, played exceptionally well during both games.

Lewis, again, racked up the greatest amount of yardage for the Redmen.

Frosh Cross Country Team Trounces Amherst Runners

The Frosh Cross Country men resumed their winning ways yesterday by leaving the Lord Jeffs on the big end of a 15 to 50 score. This is the second time this year UMass has compiled a perfect score, as the ninth and tenth slots, filled by Amherst, were the only interruptions in the Redmen string of eleven men.

Bill Young took first place honors by a deceive thirty-three second margin, running the 3 miles plus course in 16:13. The team is now anticipating its big opportunity which will arise next Monday when the New England's are held in Boston.

Thursdays Results:

1.	Young, Mass.	16:13
2.	Parke, Mass.	16:55
3.	R. Lavoie, Mass.	16:56
4.	J. Lavoie, Mass.	16:56.6
5.	Millette, Mass.	17:10
6.	MacPhail, Mass.	17:16.5
7.	Sisson, Mass.	17:26.5
8.	Doe, Mass.	17:28
9.	McCushing, Amherst	17:47
10.	Menard, Amherst	17:54
11.	Ramsey, Mass.	17:55
12.	Loige, Mass.	18:05

HOLY CROSS TICKETS

Due to the rush on tickets for the Holy Cross-University of Massachusetts game, an additional amount of student tickets has been acquired and will be on sale today until 5:00 p.m. in Room 10A of the Men's Physical Education Building.

As student tickets will cost $2.00 at Fitton Field, students are advised to pick up their tickets at the Cage. Price: $1.50.

Chadbourne Romps, 27-6

Chadbourne moved into a second place tie by defeating second place Berkshire in Dorm League "A" competition. A combination of tight defense and strong running were the victor's main weapons. The defensive unit accounted for twelve quick points on interception-runbacks by Gannon and Monteiro.

Harvey Shultz, quarterbacking his first game, scored the next TD on an end run as good downfield blocking led the way. A fine pass play from the Berkshire quarterback to his left end brought the score to 18-6 at the half.

A Chuck Gibson rush on the quarterback accounted for a two point touchdown as Chadbourne's defense held during the second half.

The offensive unit added seven points on a Shultz to Gannon pass play and a Goldberg run for the extra point.

Girl Watcher's Guide

Presented by Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes

The nudge is permitted when a beautiful girl is sighted in an unusual place or at an unusual time.

LESSON 3 - Concerning self-control

Although we believe that girl watching has it all over bird watching, we feel that these two hobbies do share one important characteristic. They are both genteel. They both respect the rights of the watched. A girl watcher who asks a beautiful stranger for her name and phone number is like a bird watcher who steals eggs. (If the stranger happens to have a pack of Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes, and you're dying for a good, natural smoke, you may break this rule.) Normally, the girl watcher's pleasure is warm, quiet and internal. However, there are cases when a discovery is so dazzling it must be shared. Such a case is illustrated above.

Strong Crusader Air Attack Awaits Redmen Squad Sat.

Fitton Field, home of the Holy Cross Crusaders, may end up resembling a basketball arena when the University of Massachusetts invades Worcester Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p.m.

The Crusaders, third-ranked passing team in the nation, average 25 passes per game with 11 completions and an average of 174 yards. Quarterbacks, Pat McCarthy and Bill Joren, who like to fill the air with aerial bombs, have also proved to be very adept runners when their receivers are covered. After adding to these ingredients such able receivers as halfbacks Tom Hennessey and Al Synder, and ends Barry Tyne and Jack Fellin, it becomes obvious that the football will be in the air more than on the ground when the Crusaders are on the attack.

The Redmen, needless to say, have their own highly capable bomb-thower in John McCormick, who has passed for 390 yards and five touchdowns. McCormick likes to throw, but the Redmen have concentrated their attack on the running game, utilizing the speed and power of halfbacks Sam Lussier and Fred Lewis and fullback Ken Palm. Lewis, a rugged sophomore, has started to reach "football maturity" in the last two games. He's the top Redmen runner with 448 yards and a 4.8 average. Lussier has a total of 416 yards for a 5.3 average, while Palm has 178 yards and a 7.4 average.

Both teams have identical 4-2 records. Against common opponents both were defeated by Villanova, the Crusaders losing 20-6, and the Redmen bowing 33-13; however Holy Cross triumphed over Boston University while the Redmen were edged by the Terriers.

Physical condition could play an important part in the outcome, since both teams have injured ends. Three Holy Cross left ends, Marty Schars, Tom Butler, and Bob Hargraves are out of action, and Coach Dr. Eddie Anderson has remarked: 'We're really hurting at the ends."

Meanwhile the top UMass left end, Paul Majeski, who was injured in the Northeastern contest, is a doubtful participant. Sophomore second string right end, Roger DeMinico, is still hobbling with a knee injury suffered against BU. However, he should see some action tomorrow.

Vic Fusia had some pleasant news when guard John Kozaka, halfback Loren Flagg, and tackle George Pleau all reported for practice after being sidelined for more than a week.

This game will be the 18th contest of the series; the Crusaders hold an 8-5-4 edge.

All-America Grid Roster Cuts Many, Adds 18 Men

Eighteen new players, including five guards, were named today to the roster of candidates for the 1961 All-America team, to be selected by the American Football Coaches Association.

Stanford University head coach Jack Curtice, AFCA president, announced this six-game poll was the last before the final All-America selections at the end of the season.

Balloting by more than 500 head coaches reduced the player nominations from 76 to 51 in the vote to pick the 72nd consecutive squad of the original and oldest All-America football team.

Eastman Kodak Company will sponsor the 1961 All-America and present Kodak Awards honoring the Coach-of-the-Year from a major and a small college for the second straight year.

An All-America Board of Coaches, representing the eight U.S. football districts, will evaluate final balloting for the mythical team.

Players nominated for the first time this season were:

Guards: Elvin Basham, Kansas; Willie Redmond, Utah State; John Nelson, Xavier (O.); Bookie Bolin, Mississippi; and Sherwyn Thorson, Iowa.

Centers: Jay Huffman, Penn State; Wayne Frazier, Auburn; Larry Onesti, Northwestern; and Ed Pine, Utah.

End: Jerry Hillebrand, Colorado.

Quarterbacks: Doug Elmore, Mississippi; Chuck Lamson, Wyoming; Pat Trammell, Alabama.

Halfbacks: Angelo Daberio, Notre Dame; George Saimes, Michigan State; Jerry Stovall, Louisiana State.

Fullbacks: Mike Lind, Notre Dame; Joe Williams, Iowa.

A complete roster of leading candidates in the mid-season AFCA poll is as follows:

SPORTSENSE

by BEN GORDON '62, Sports Editor

The University of Massachusetts football team will rejuvenate a rivalry which ended in 1915 when it travels to Worcester to meet the Crusaders, tomorrow. Forty six years ago, the Redmen played to a 7-7 tie with the Cross squad, but the two teams have changed since, and the current clash promises to be a high scoring one.

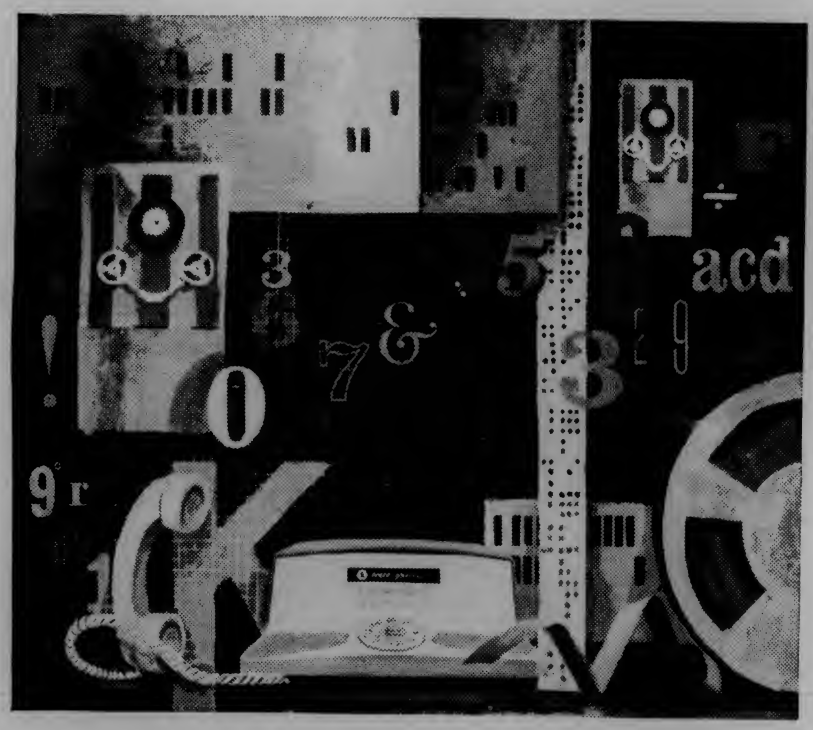
Although the Cross team hasn't got the depth that B.U. had, their highly-ranked pass offense will provide a lot of trouble for Coach Vic Fusia's cohorts. But the Mass squad has been sharpening up on its aerial defense, and should be better prepared for Holy Cross that it has been thus far.

After the Terrier game, the Boston papers gave the Redmen a good play, rating it as a "comer," and stating that the Redmen outplayed the B.U. team throughout most of the game. This is a reflection of Boston's increasing interest in the UM team, an interest which shows signs of increasing as the Redmen rise higher and higher in football ranks.

Coach Matt Zunic's basketball squad saw its first season action last week when they scrimmaged the Army team. Although the team lost by 10 points, they had only about two weeks of practice under their belts and needed a good deal of polishing. The scrimmage brought up a few mistakes which shouldn't appear again as the season gets into full swing.

A big guy named Gus will be a key man in Coach Bill Footrick's Track and Field hopes in coming years. Costes "Gus" Anagrastopoulis, a freshman from Greece is a new member of Coach Footrick's squad, and holds the junior (under 21) national hammer record in Greece with a heave of 52.21 meters, or 171'4". This is better than the present varsity record, held by Roger Kindred, by seven feet.

Judging by the sellout of student tickets for the Holy Cross game, the UMass fans should be in Worcester en masse for a game which should be one of the season's best. See you there.



Bright futures in data transmission at W. E.

New engineers with initiative who can meet Western Electric's high standards are offered many exciting career opportunities with our company in data processing development work as it relates to communications.

For example, Western's engineers—working closely with Bell Telephone Laboratories—have solved development and manufacturing problems connected with the Bell System's new DATA-PHONE Data set (made by Western Electric). DATA-PHONE service lets business machines, such as computers, "speak" to each other in a language of numbers and symbols over existing telephone communication networks. This represents a tremendous boon to business; and consequently, it is estimated that some day there may be more machine talk than people talk using telephone lines.

Of course, data communications is only one of many rewarding career areas that await you at Western Electric. Here are just a few of the others: electronic switching . . . solid state electronic devices . . . microwave radio relay...computer-programmed production lines . . . solar cells . . . optical masers . . . futuristic telephones.

We need high-caliber, forward-thinking engineers now to help us transform these plans into realities or to work with us in scores of other key communications areas. Your future, the future of Western Electric, and the future of America's communications—could well depend on your first career connection.

Challenging opportunities exist now at Western Electric for electrical, mechanical, industrial, and chemical engineers, as well as physical science, liberal arts, and business majors. All qualified applicants will receive careful consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. For more information about Western Electric, write College Relations, Western Electric Company, Room 6106, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. And be sure to arrange for a Western Electric interview when our college representatives visit your campus.

Tobacco Co. Holding $1000 Prize Contest

The second annual "House of Edgeworth Scholarship Awards Contest" offering cash awards totalling $1,000 for college students in marketing and advertising has just been announced by Larus & Brother Company.

The scholarship awards consist of three cash prizes of $500, $300 and $200 each for first, second and third places, respectively, given to the students who submit the best marketing and advertising plans for selling House of Edgeworth pipe tobaccos to the young men's market.

Information concerning budget, market area, product descriptions, duration of promotion, and other facts are set forth in the rules of the contest as a guide to the contestant.

Winners of the two $500 cash awards for the 1960-61 contest were Wallace Whiteaker, a graduate student at the University of Mississippi, for submitting the best marketing plan to sell pipe tobaccos to a college market, and Robert Livitz, an undergraduate student at the University of Houston, for an advertising slogan with a supporting brief. After talking to marketing and advertising professors, Larus & Brother Company has made improvements in the current contest which should provide an interesting and practical challenge to the student.

Entries will be judged by a panel of three college professors on the basis of originality and practical merchandising value. Further contest information can be obtained from Larus & Brother Company, Inc., Richmond, Virginia.

perts will agree that the definitely longer suit should be preferred. The point however, is that this hand has only 10 high card points and some would preempt. Its distribution I believe is too strong for a preempt which although it makes major suit bidding difficult for the opposition, it also shuts out partner.

(b) This hand must bid strong but not a jump shift. I have heard people mutter something about "one for the fifth and 2 for the sixth" but why go so fast before you know anything. 1 Spade guarantees another chance unless your partner hasn't heard that a new suit bid is forcing one round.

(c) Now let's show partner the true picture of the hand, 2D is a weak sign-off and the hand is too good for that, but not strong enough for a jump bid and it is a two-suiter isn't it?

(d) I have no quarrel with those who would like to show their hearts now but here is an opportunity to show a terrific hand and good suit by jumping in Spades. It also, and this is important, denies both minors and shows a two suiter also.

(e) He should pass.

I was south and West bid 6D, I kept a smug silence. Another got to 7D and there were some 5D but they all went down. Three Spades made three spades. So the much overlooked principal—"When the partnership is an obvious misfit, two suits facing two suits, buy the contract as cheaply as you can".

Folk Singer Takes 2nd Place in Talent Show

Gail Brunnelle, a UMass folk singer from the Abbey, took second place in the annual Arts and Music talent show held last Friday night in the Student Union ballroom. First place winners were Mike Buckman and Barry Briss, both of TEP, who sang and played the guitar. Placing third was the vocalist, Margaret Loomis from Amherst. The judges included Dr. Vincent Rogers, Education Department; Mr. Ebersol, Spanish Department; and Mrs. Cook, Head of Residence at Brooks.

Meeting to Consider Tax On Graduating Seniors

There will be an open meeting of the Class of 1962 Advisory Board and Class Officers on Thursday, Nov. 16, at 7 p.m. in the Franklin Room of the Student Union. The purpose of the meeting is to consider the levying of a $10 tax on all graduating seniors.

Tax Has Three Purposes

The tax is earmarked for three different areas; five dollars go to the Associate Alumni for expenses, four dollars are for rental of cap and gown for Commencement, and the one dollar will be invested in a Mutual Fund along with last year's Winter Carnival profits for a 25th Class Reunion Gift. The administration of this Mutual Fund is under the guardianship of the University.

The five dollar assessment will go to the Associate Alumni to defray the natural expenses incurred by each class as it becomes alumni. A good part of the money goes simply to the making up of address plates and keeping them up to date. Through these address plates, the graduate is kept in contact with the University by way of newsletters, notices, and the quarterly magazine of the Alumni which is mailed out free of charge to all graduates.

Money Not To Be Requested For Two Years

Other expenses involved are maintenance of class records and bank accounts, arranging class reunions and homecomings. With the payment of these funds to the Association, the graduating senior will receive no fund solicitation for the first two years that he is out of school.

The handling of cap and gown rental for commencement involves obvious expenses such as cleaning charges, replacement costs, salary of fitting and checkout personnel, and insurance fees. This expense must be met in one of two ways; as part of the semester bill in February, or paid individually in May. It is felt that because of the scarcity of funds at the end of a semester, compounded by the expenses of Senior Week in May, it is more convenient to pay now.

Fees Part of Tax Except In 1961

The two above-mentioned fees have been part of the tax of every senior in past years, except during the year 1961. The need has been felt to reinstate it.

All of these fees will be refunded to any senior who learns that he will not be graduating with his class.

Overseas Phillipine Project Offered To UMass Students

by KAREN BURGESS '64

Fifteen U. S. and Canadian students will travel to the Philippines July 1, 1962 and return Septemebr 1, 1962. They will be joined by 15 Philippine students in a program having three major parts: interviews with Philippine leaders, a work project in community development, and travel.

Donald Moore, formerly an electronics engineer, and now a history major at UMass, is founder and director of the progam.

Moore became interested in the Philippines while doing research in electronics there for two years duing 1958-59. He had several personal projects in international relations and has many friends in the Philippines.

Multifold Purpose of Program Explained

The purpose of the program is not to rebuild the Philippines but to promote friendship, to study, and to promote mutual understanding.

The first part of the program consists of arranging interviews for the students with the president of the Philippines and with various political, educational, and religious leaders of the country. Efforts will be made to sample as many points of view as possible.

Another part of the program will be a work project in community development arranged with the Philippine government. The group will be living in a barria, the smallest of Philippine community units, in which they will be able to meet many people in an informal setting.

Actual travel to see the country, the third part of the program, will be a major part of the summer. Few Filipinos see much of their own country, so travel will be valuable to the Philippine students as well as to the Americans.

The program has President Lederle's support, as well as the enthusiastic support of the two advisors, Dr. Caldwell and Dr. Cody, both of the UMass history department. Rev. Seeley and Rev. Springer have also helped Moore with the project.

Filipino assistants are Marcia Garcia, a grad student at Mt. Holyoke and James Ongpin, a grad student at Harvard's business school.

Romulo Offers Support

Carlos P. Romulo, the ambassador from the Philippines to both the United States and the United Nations, has offered his support in coordinating the project. In the Philippines, the project is under the direction of Dr. Arturo Tanco, Jr.

Applications Available to Interested Students

All students of American, Canadian, and Philippine colleges may apply. The total cost is estimated to be about $2000 per student. The student will be asked to pay about $900 of this amount. The actual cost to the student may be less if fund raising efforts for the program are very successful.

All students who are interested may send a letter of application and a personal data sheet to:

Enthusiastic Greeting For Poet's Lecture

by STEVE LEVINE '65

Last Thursday at 8 p.m. the large and enthusiastic audience which filled Bowker Auditorium heard a lecture and poetry reading by Pulitzer prize winning poet Archibald MacLeish. The lecture was the second in a series being presented by the Rand Commemoration Fund in honor of Professor Frank Prentice Rand.

Rand, who attended the lecture, taught English for 44 years at UMass, during which time he directed the Roister Doisters in addition to participating in other theatrical and cultural activities.

Tells of Poet's Task

MacLeish, whose achievements include the recipience of 15 honorary degrees in addition to many prizes for poetry, spoke first on the similarity of the task performed by the English teacher and the poet: to relate the subject to life. He referred to English as a vastly comprehensive field which in its broadest sense includes all works done in the English language. MacLeish is himself a professor of rhetoric at Harvard University.

Gives Reading From Play

During the remainder of the program, MacLeish gave a reading from his own works, including a selection from his Pulitzer Prize winning drama, "J.B." The play is a modernization of the Biblical story of Job and deals with man's attempt to comprehend the seemingly unjustified suffering in his daily life. It draws the ultimate conclusion that love is the powerful force which enables man to continue in the face of adversity. The scene depicted three comforters: a Communist, a Christian, and a psychiatrist; each failing to reconcile J.B. to his misfortunes.

At the conclusion the audience broke its respectful silence to give MacLeish a prolonged and enthusiastic ovation which lasted even after the poet had left the stage.

Student Christian Movement To Sponsor Dec. Conference

Nearly one thousand students from the New England colleges and universities will meet at Harvard Square on the weekend of December 1-3 to explore the topic "Obedience to Jesus Christ: Discussions on Christian Unity," at the fourth quadrennial Conference on the Life of the Church, sponsored by the Student Christian Movement in New England.

The Conference has been planned to stress the importance of conversation between Protestants and the Roman Catholic and Orthodox traditions.

Three Professors To Speak

Participants in this conference will hear three outstanding speakers on this subject: Georges Florovsky, Professor of Eastern Church History at Harvard Divinity School; Jaroslav Pelican, Professor of Historical Theology at the Divinity School, University of Chicago; and Gregory Baum, O.S.A., Professor of Theology at St. Michael's College, University of Toronto. Discussion sections led by well-prepared resource leaders will provide opportunities for individual response to the formal presentations.

Special Performance for Sat.

A special performance of the Boston University production of For The Time Being, a "Christmas Oratorio" by W. H. Auden, has been arranged for Saturday evening, Dec. 2, in Harvard's Sands Theatre.

The cost of the conference comes to eleven dollars, which includes registration, housing and meals. The Amherst Council of Churches is helping to provide transportation.

Study Groups To Be Held

Study groups on the theme of the conference will be held Tuesday, Nov. 14, and Tuesday, Nov.

BLOOD DRIVE

Students are asked to remember their appointments at the Campus Bloodmobile in Arnold House.

Reminders have been sent out. If you have not received one, either (1) your application was too late or (2) your parents did not give the necessary permission.

The Precisionettes

Despite the fact that the Redmen were not on the top side of a 44-7 score at Fitton Field last Saturday, there was one UMass aggregation at Worcester which was on top. The University of Massachusetts' Precisionettes turned in for the Crusaders what appeared to be their finest performance of the year.

This group of University women, dressed in their smart charcoal gray and white uniforms have long been the most consistent winner in the Redman lineup. Their marching formations are always sharp, well disciplined, original, and colorful. After so many months of practice (five nights per week) these young ladies have earned a well deserved rest.

Saturday's exceptionally brilliant performance, which was saluted by a standing ovation from the Holy Cross side of the stadium, highlighted the final season for Precisionette Team Captain Lynn Foley. Her squad leaders, Ann Layden, Arlene Anderson, Sally Dion Peavy, Jane Grant, and Pat Conway are also deserving of congratulations in their final gridiron stint. And with Don Witkowski, the appreciation of all UMass attends him in this his senior and final season as drill master for the charcoal and white.

Farewell, 'Hook'

They are dying . . . like the American buffalo. Now nearly extinct, they are looked upon by students as rare and valuable pieces of an ancient civilization. More valuable than a Rembrandt, more time saving than a "push-button kitchen," and more restful than a dirty, worn sneaker . . . the American college "gut" course is dying under the accelerated pace of our campuses.

A Harvard professor several years ago said that a student should have at least one "gut" a semester. Every college used to have its share of easily "hooked" (C grade) courses. The University of Michigan had a fishing elective, Miami had basket weaving, and UMass had geology and speech 3.

Today, one must put as much time into a one credit course as into a three credit requirement. The move toward excellence has infected the minor as well as major selections in university catalogues across the nation.

Each succeeding year destroys another "gut" and creates another headache for the weary American scholar. Here's to academic excellence—long may it reign. And here's to the "gut"—farewell to the "hook."

Shelter Reliability

by GEORGE M. MASSELAM

We, the American public, are now confronted by a new involvement in American Society—the brick bomb shelter on top of the ground or under the ground, which represents a sure cure for an atomic war. America is beginning to regard this concept of civil defense as a tangible expression of security. This concept is trying to extract the American Society from the grasping fear that enshrouds our country. Just how reliable are these structures on which our hope lies?

No matter who strikes first scientists and military agree that 50 or 60 million Americans will die in the first 60 days of atomic war and that 30 to 40 million will suffer physical and genetical damage. (Bulletin of Atomic Scientist, Jan. '58). A National Symposium of Atomic Scientists came to the conclusion that the only practical civil defense against atomic war is to prevent war. Is hiding ourselves in brick shelters providing a solution for the prevention of atomic war, or encouraging it?

In an atomic blast there forms what is called a fire storm, which is a draught of wind that swoops up from the blast and causes a hurricane of fire. Such a situation consumes all the oxygen in the air and causes unbelievable heat. Two involvements arise here. First, because there will be no oxygen in the area, thousands in bomb shelters will suffocate. Thus the filters which are in the shelters to purify contaminated air will be useless, simply because there is no air to purify. Secondly the terrible heat may turn the shelters into ovens in which thousands would be boiled. Top scientists warn no life above ground or underground, sheltered or unsheltered could be expected to survive such a situation.

Herman Muller, A. H. Sturtevant and James F. Crow, some of the world's leading geneticists, say that radiation following atomic war would be an experience beyond anything the human mind can now cope with. (Radiation and Man, Bulletin of Atomic Scientist, Jan. '58). Scientists also warn that underground water may be contaminated—even that which is in the shelter's well.

Philip Wylie, who served as a consultant to the Federal Civil Defense during the Truman and Eisenhower administrations, changed his attitude towards the possible effectiveness of Civil Defense with the creation of the Hydrogen bomb. Mr. Wylie became convinced that "H" bombs would create conditions in cities, towns and countrysides for which no plan —for evacuation, shelters, early warning radar, lives or anything else—would be of value" (Between the Lines, Nov. '60). He also points out that within a twenty mile area of the blast that all people would instinctively look at it, thus having their retinas burned out, causing permanent blindness.

Medical facilities would be severely limited. Only a small fraction of the injured will have medical care. Estimates of wounded run up to 20 to 40 million, and all the medical centers in the cities would probably be destroyed along with everything else.

STUDENT FORUM

In the second STUDENT FORUM, we examine the objectivity in American history books. Seldom is the grammar school and high school student told all of the facts about some rather revered institutions on the American scene. Should U.S. students be told of the ruthlessness of its country in the Mexican War? Can they cope with the fact that America set up semi-concentration camps for the Japanese in America during World War II? Will the fact that Washington was a very poor military leader tarnish the image that has been created of this First President? Will a thorough disection of the segregation problem, and the ruthlessness of the Southern governors in dealing with such problems, create a greater chasm between North and South? How much can our youth be told? We invite faculty and student comment on this theme in 300 to 350 words.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

--LETTERS--

To the Editor:

By this time most of you have heard about the Belchertown project which has been carried on for several years now by the Belchertown Volunteer Committee of the UMass Christian Association. There have been announcements on radio station WMUA for more than a month, notices and information sheets in all the dorms (and one fraternity) since the beginning of the semester, and articles in the Collegian asking for help. There is a very moving poster on the bulletin board in the Student Union lobby with the face of a little boy on it saying "My hope is you." There is a sign-up sheet in the Student Union lobby opposite the telephones and with it all the information you need to know to work at Belchertown.

And yet, in spite of all this moving publicity, we have had so far this semester an average of only 10 students going to Belchertown. Where are the religious people who would love their neighbor? Where are the humanitarians who would have compassion on the unfortunate? Where are the students who are seeking truth and the well rounded education? Where are those who are bored with nothing to do on Saturday afternoons? Where are those students with cars unused on Saturday afternoon? Where are the religious, the humanitarian, and the student?

If you want to help, this is all you need to know: Student volunteers work at Belchertown State School for the Mentally Retarded every Saturday afternoon throughout the school year. We leave Skinner parking lot at 1:15, arrive back on campus by 4:50. Anyone can go. No experience is necessary. You will work with the more responsive of all age groups. Work consists of anything from holding a child's hand to answering his natural questions of "why"; from talking to a teenager or older person on a walk to helping them cope with their personal problems. People at Belchertown are retarded and not mentally ill or insane. They all respond to affection and understanding even if all they can do to show it is smile. To go with us to Belchertown just sign the list in the Suden Unicn lobby. Volunteering to work or drive doesn't commit you to going every week. And if you drive you don't have to do volunteer work; there is a large lounge available for studying.

Please remember: A student volunteer can give hope to the retarded children at Belchertown. They don't tell us this themselves but we know, because they always ask us when we are going to come back: They might as well be saying, "Our hope is you."

Student volunteers and drivers are needed at Belchertown State School. We have had an average of only 10 volunteers every Saturday, we could have 100. Do you care enough to help?

Petition Asks JFK To End Nuclear Tests

Hundreds of signatures have already been added to a petition to President Kennedy, report members of Synthesis. The petition, which has been circulating on campus, condemns the recent series of Soviet nuclear testing and asks the President to stop plans for the resumption of nuclear testing in the atmosphere.

The petition was incited by the Soviet Union's climactic 50 megaton explosion and the pressures within our nation to resume nuclear testing in the atmosphere. The signers of the petition believe that there is no moral or human justification for such action.

The signatures of students and faculty are also being sought on the Amherst, Mt. Holyoke and Smith campuses by members of Synthesis. The petition was presented at the lecture on "Nuclear Weapons and Civil Defense," given by UMass physics professor, Dr. Melvin Steinberg, and at the public meeting of the San Francisco to Moscow Peace Walkers. In its final week, the petition may be signed from 1 to 5 p.m. in the S.U. lobby, Wednesday, Nov. 15.

Small Number Taking Interchange Courses

Interchange courses are those established by one of the four area institutions primarily for its own students, but open to students from the other three colleges.

This semester 50 different interchange courses in 20 subject fields were elected under the program. Of these 50 courses, only seven had more than one student from outside the college in which it was given. Only one course had more than four such students. Africa South of the Sahara, given at UMass was elected by eight students from Amherst.

Only five students took more than one off-campus course. Of these, four were Amherst students taking two courses each at Smith, and one was a Mount Holyoke student taking two courses at Amherst. Nine UMass graduate students are included in the above figures, two each taking courses at Smith and Amherst, five at Mount Holyoke. A total of 11 UMass students are taking interchange courses.

147 Enrolled In Co-op Program

A total of 147 students are enrolled in the co-operative studies program. Cooperative courses are those arranged for by the cooperation of the four institutions. 54 UMass students are registered in this program, 13 of them in the Non-Western Studies Program.

To date 281 UMass students have participated in the cooperative program since it began in 1956.

Two buses providing transportation between the colleges have helped increase enrollment, thus it is no longer necessary for students to provide their own transportation.

Four-College events this week:

Smith Girls In Mishap; One Killed

A Smith College freshman was killed and a second Smith student critically injured Saturday night when the bicycles they were riding on Route 9 in Hadley were struck, apparently by two cars, state police reported.

Instantly Killed

Instantly killed was Isobel P. Brooks, 18, of Sewickley, Pa., a Smith freshman who lived in Washburn House. Critically injured was Priscilla Eaves, 18, of New Orleans, La., also a freshman, who resides in Lamont House.

State police said the girls and a male companion, as yet unidentified, were riding bicycles west on Rte. 9 opposite the Rendezvous Restaurant when, according to state police, the two girls were hit by westbound cars operated by Edward J. Rondeau, 65, who was reported to be a UMass employee, and Frederic B. Rogers, 21, of Slingerland, N.Y., an Amherst College student.

Dr. Eugene M. Holden of Amherst was called to the scene, and later Medical Examiner Maurice Kennedy of Hadley pronounced Miss Brooks dead and ordered the body removed to an Amherst funeral home.

Miss Eaves was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton where she was treated by Drs. Thomas F. Corriden and Donald Chrisman and her name was placed on the danger list.

Maine Wins State Crown

The University of Maine Bears notched a touchdown in the second quarter and followed up with another tally in the third stanza to defeat Bowdoin 13-8 in a game which gave the Bears the Maine State football crown.

Bowdoin, last year's champion, drew in eight points in the final quarter but couldn't come up with the winning score.

In other Yankee Conference action, the Wildcats of New Hampshire ruined the Springfield College Homecoming festivities by romping over the Maroons 36-13.

The Huskies from UConn gave Boston University a lot of trouble, but the Terriers managed to outdistance their opponents 14-6. B.U. tallied their scores in the first two quarters, and had to halt a UConn drive at the eight yard line at the game's finish.

UMass Soccer Squad Loses

The UMass varsity soccer team finished off its season with a loss to Fairleigh-Dickenson, 10-3, in Saturday's clash on the UMass field. The squad, finishing with a 3-1-6 record, showed a definite improvement over last year's winless season.

Redmen Tom Astoldi, Dick Leete and Bob Chenery notched the three goals for the UMass squad, but the team was no match for the Fairleigh crew as the winner's offense kept up a continuous drive at the Mass nets. The first three shots at the Redmen nets wen in, and goalie Dick Hagvisto never had a chance at any of them.

The Fairleigh-Dickenson squad is one of the best teams Coach Larry Briggs has ever seen in College play, the UMass mentor commented, and it's a good bet that they'll play in the NCAA championships, which means they are among the top eight teams in the nation.

"WHERE EVERYONE MEETS UNDER THE CLOCK"

Powerful Crusader Eleven Tramples Redmen, 44-7

H. C.'s McCarthy and Cohorts Now No. 1

by W. JOHN LENNON '62

The cheers reverberated about Mount St. James Saturday for a Holy Cross team which routed Massachusetts while rolling up its largest score of the season, and stamping itself New England's number one gridiron power. An effervescent extrovert, Pat McCarthy; feather-footed Tom Hennessey; and a steam-rolling blocker, Gerry Wheeler, formed the nucleus of a Crusader tornado which strewed the injury riddled Redmen about Fitton Field to the tune of 44-7.

McCarthy, who tallied three touchdowns, passed for another, romped for 188 yards, and connected for 128 more via the airways, was nothing less than sensational during the 18 minutes in which he saw action. The Haverhill hurricane effectively used his blockers as he continually rolled out to the weak side after the UMass defenders had overshifted to the flanker side to guard against the possible pass.

Aside from an opening 41 yard drive to the Holy Cross 32, and a 45 yard sprint off left tackle by Ken Kezer, the Redmen spent most of the first half attempting to contain the Crusaders' relentless goal line raids. The vaunted Purple offense compiled a 30-0 half time advantage with three McCarthy touchdowns, and a McCarthy to Snyder completion.

The Holy Cross gridders crossed the goal line twice more in the third quarter before the Redmen put together their only scoring drive. The UMass club marched 64 yards in 14 plays before Ken Palm plunged over from one yard out. The sustained drive was highlighted by a couple of strikes from McCormick, who also raced 12 yards on a fourth down play, and the fine work of Lussier and Lewis.

IN THE BEGINNING

Fred Lewis totals eight yards during the initial Redmen drive in the first quarter.

IN THE END

Sam Lussier picked up four yards as he was taken down by tackler Dempsey during the final touchdown march.

FITTON FIELD FLASHES

The fact that the Redmen were soundly thrashed cannot be disputed; their pride and courage, however, has not diminished. Post-game tributes for their fallen foe echoed throughout the Purple's dressing room. Cautioned the Cross mentor, Dr. Eddie Anderson, "Don't be fooled by that score; it wasn't as big a picnic as it looked from up in the stands."

End Jack Fellins' complimentary comments included, "Don't forget they came up with a couple of injuries to key men early. That hurt them badly."

End Jack Whalen chimmed in, "They really hit; if they had a little depth up front, they would be rough for anyone."

Like champagne, the bubbly, effervescent praise from the modest Crusaders continued to flow. None of these good words, however, could change the score; Holy Cross was just far superior . . . The young army of UMass students who trooped to Worcester formed a fraction of the largest crowd ever to witness a Redmen athletic event. Richard Page, UM athletic publicity director, and his staff disposed of more than 1200 tickets by Friday . . . Though the contest was played on a frostily clear, sunny afternoon, UMass backs spent most of the time rumbling around in the dark. Fred Lewis seldom found any running room, and showed only ten yards for his afternoon's work. Before the game the heralded sophomore boasted a 4.8 average . . . During the half a HC student, attired in the dress of the days of chivalry, paraded around the field on his steed . . .UM's pert and pretty Precisionettes and tuneful band stole the half-time proceedings. The co-eds' precision drills were even more polished than the Cross' roll-out options . . . Also let's not overlook the cheerleaders, especially the girls, for their fine hip-hip hoorays . . . Holy Cross is now on the front end of a 9-4-4 record for this gridiron rivalry. The squads won't tangle next year, but contests have been booked for the following four autumns. Fortunately Hennessey and McCarthy will have gone their separate ways . . . Before the contest Fusia commented, "Building a defense for McCarthy's rollouts is a real problem." He never found the solution . . . Saturday was Senior-Sophomore parents day at Mount St. James.

The Purples sub qb, Bill Joren, served as the batboy for the HC 1952 NCAA champs. Joren lived only a home run away from Omaha where the Crusaders' nine won the collegiate title . . .Though it was veterans day, the proceedings resembled flag day as the officials continually decorated the field with their bright markers. A total of 120 yards in penalties wee dished out during the first 30 minutes . . . The men in purple hail from twelve defferent states and the District of Columbia . . . Hennessey, the Brookline Blur, constantly utilized his superb blocking talents when he wasn't called upon to carry the ball . . . Loren Flagg, who was put out of commission in the Northeastern skirmish, returned to action in the second quater. On the first play he injured his leg when he ran an opponent out of bounds. Though he was a stretcher case, he should recover shortly.

Social Action Committee Forms To Protect Against Discrimination

The Social Action Committee is a new organization on campus. Its primary concern is racial and religious discrimination.

It was decided that action was necessary in the key area of housing. Discrimination not only affects regular University students, but also the many foreign students.

Social Action drew up a recommendation to be presented to the University Housing Committee. It asks that the Housing Office establish an approved list of available off-campus housing. Housing would be approved if the renters pledged not to reject a student sent by the University on the basis of race, color, religion, or nationality. Despite many efforts this recommendation has not been presented to the Housing Committee yet.

Social Action Aids In Canvas

Amherst recently organized a fair housing group to work on the same type of problem within the town. This group had asked Social Action to help them by sending students to canvas Amherst to determine housing available on a non-discriminatory basis.

A third project is a fund drive sponsored by three national student organizations to aid the Southern Student Freedom Fund. The four college area, as well as Yale and eight other schools across the country, is involved in this program designed to establish an emergency fund for an oganization of Negro leadership in Mississippi communities.

The three projects Social Action is currently working on allow for a diversity of talents and interests in students wishing to help. There will be a meeting of the Committee Wednesday

to increase his ability to learn

An understanding of the truth contained in Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy can remove the pressure which concerns today's college student upon whom increasing demands are being made for academic excellence.

Christian Science calms fear and gives to the student the full assurance he needs in order to learn easily and to evaluate what he has learned. It teaches that God is man's Mind—his only Mind—from which emanates all the intelligence he needs, when and as he needs it.

Science and Health, the textbook of Christian Science, may be read or examined, together with the Bible, in an atmosphere of quiet and peace, at any Christian Science Reading Room. Information about Science and Health may also be obtained on campus through the

WMUA To Join Sports Network

Jim Trelease of WMUA; Kirk Leslie, UMass basketball captain; Coach Matt Zunic; and Barry Brooks of WMUA.

WMUA, the student voice of UMass, has announced it will form a sports network with WMAS (AM and FM), a commercial radio station in Springfield, Massachusetts. Word of the network's inception came with the decision of WMUA and the University's athletic department to grant exclusive commercial broadcasting rights for the 1961-62 and 1962-63 basketball seasons to Robert Donahue, station manager at WMAS.

Network Orginates With WMUA

"The network, currently functioning only for University basketball games, will originate with the WMUA broadcast," explained Barry Brooks of WMUA's sports department who negotiated with the Springfield station. "It is one of the few situations in broadcasting today where a commercial station will receive its program from a noncommercial college station."

"Jim Trelease, sports director at WMUA, will handle simultaneous play-by-play over the college's FM and Springfield's AM-FM outlets. WMAS broadcasts with a 1000 watt AM and FM signal.

At the present time, two Eastern Massachusetts stations are also interested in joining the infant "Redman Sports Network."

Athletic Dept. Enthusiastic

News of the network's birth was greeted with enthusiasm and high hopes by the Athletic Department. Director of Athletics Warren McGuirk said that this move should help to create a greater UMass consciousness within the state.

UMass' head basketball mentor Matt Zunic declared, "This will be a shot in the arm for all University sports, especially basketball." The network news served as an added compliment to the word which greeted Zunic earlier in the day—that his Redmen had been promoted to the status of "major college power" by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

B.U. Game First

Boston University's hardcourt team will inaugurate the network, Dec. 6, when they play the University at Curry Hicks Cage on the UMass campus. The network will carry 18 of the scheduled 23 games. Noted among the 18 games are contests at Rutgers University and Madison Square Garden, as well as the Providence and Syracuse clashes at Curry Hicks.

Precisionettes, Cheerleaders Band Hold Awards Banquet

The annual Precisionettes, Band, and Cheerleaders Awards banquet was held Sunday at he Lord Jeffrey Inn.

Norman Siegel, personnel secretary of the Redmen Marching Band and manager of Dance Band, was awarded a gold cup, the highest award for service.

Sandy Black, the senior majorette this year, was awarded a guard for her hand pin, in recognition of three years' service as a majorette.

Band Members Receive Pins

Band members who received two year service pins were Patricia Ankatell, Louise Brainerd, Edward Broderick, Wesley Ewell, Sue Fitzgerald, Paul Kennett, Stephen Klyce, Donna Knowlton, John Moran, Shelia Mullane, Susan O'Neill, Bruce Philbrick, Alice Pierce, Michael Rosen, Linda Schechterle, David Siek, Harrison Smiley, Mary Lou Willard, Norma Wolfson, and Joyce Traquair.

Treble cleff guard pins were awarded to Bob Small, Bernie Pitkin, and Bob Skiba, for three years of service to the Marching Band.

Awards were given for three years of membership to Precisionettes Arlaine Anderson, Marilyn Billings, Joan Boskiewicz, Patricia Conway, June Crasco, Lynne Foley, Anne Leydon, Deborah Read, and Gail Richey.

Dr. Field Main Speaker

Dr. Field discussed the role of the land grant university. Other guests included Professor and Mrs. Warren P. McGuirk, Professor and Mrs. Doric Alviani, Professor and Mrs. Joseph Contino.

Joseph Contino, Norman Siegal, Jim Levine, and Bob Small were presented gifts from the band members.

$4.3 Million Budget Boost Provides For Med. Center

A total budget of $15,639,985 has been asked by the trustees of UMass, according to House Ways and Means Chairman John J. Toomey, D-Cambridge, who visited the school a week ago last Wednesday with the committee. The budget for the current year, ending June 30, is $11,254,879.

Volpe To Give His Version

The budget sought by the university is now in the hands of State Budget Commissioner Raymond I. Rigney and Gov. Volpe. The governor will recommend his version of the budget late in January.

A year ago, university trustees sought $13,608,915, which was trimmed to about $10,500,000 by the governor and his advisers. The Legislature made additions to bring the total to $11,254,879 for the present fiscal year.

In action which startled some observers at the State House, the trustees marked $200,000 for planning and programming a university medical center. This is subject of a special legislative commission study on which no report is yet made. The trustees made no mention of location. Some feel it should be in Boston. Others prefer Western Massachusetts.

Call For 178 New Positions

The trustees call for a total of 178 permanent positions at the university, of which 21 would be administrative, 75 maintenance, and 82 teaching. A capital outlay program for building construction of $7,709,400 was also presented Ways and Means. It includes $2,920,000 for an administration building and $1,999,000 for an engineering building and replacement of the farm service building.

Along with new positions, the university calls for a general faculty pay raise and upgradings. The number of commonwealth professors would be raised from 16 to 62 at a cost of $77,376. The pay of the academic deans would be boosted, as would those of key administrators and staff members.

The trustees reported, "Faculty and top-level administrative salaries are in an explosive situation in colleges and universities throughout the country. Volumes can and have been written giving statistical comparisons and salary facts.

UMass In Unfavorable Position

"The teacher shortage, the competition for the best talent between institutions and with business and government and the emerging recognition of the place of the scholar and scientist in the race for survival, have all worked to place the University of Massachusetts in a very unfavorable position.

"This is in spite of recent salary increases granted by the Legislature, since others are not standing still but are increasing

91% of Mass. Towns Represented at UM

A special calling of the roll last week came up with a conclusive answer to the question often asked UMass officials: Where do your students come from?

Nearly All From Mass.

The University's new Office of Institutional Research, working on record cards of the four-year undergraduate body of more than 5,700 students, showed that the institution is very much the University of all Massachusetts.

The undergraduate enrollment is the major part of an overall enrollment of 7,000 which includes 850 graduate students and 400 students in the two-year Stockbridge School of Agriculture.

91% of Cities Represented

Of a total of 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth, 320 or 91% are represented in the four-year undergraduate population on campus. Only 31 towns are not currently represented. Average population of these is 817.

Undergraduate enrollment is generally proportionate to distribution of population in the Commonwealth. Thus, for every five students enrolled, about three come from the eastern part of the state and two from the western part. (East-west division was determined by drawing a line north and south through approximate center of Worcester County.)

Out-of-state undergraduate students number 78; foreign undergraduates, 9; and special students (almost all of whom come from Massachusetts), 100.

Greater Boston Leads

The Greater Boston area leads all others in numbers of students from standard metropolitan areas (as defined in the 1957 Massachusetts Census). Thirty-six percent of the undergraduates come from the Boston area.

County representation is led by Middlesex County with more than than a thousand undergraduates.

Honorary Colonel Janet Wehmann was presented to Lt. Colonel Robert Aykroyd, Professor of Military Science, at a reception held last Friday evening at the Wiggins Tavern in Northampton. The reception was sponsored by the Senior Class and was attended by the AROTC corps and seniors.

Some Offices Being Moved To Machmer

The student personnel offices are in the process of moving from South College to Machmer Hall.

The offices will be located on the first and second floors of East Machmer.

Already situated there are the offices of the Dean of Students, the Dean of Women, and the Dean of Men, Guidance, Testing, Placement, Financial, and the Foreign Students offices will be moved in the next few weeks.

This move allows more room for the offices and interviews, and should be more convenient to the students.

SENIOR CLASS NOTICE

On Thursday, Nov. 16, at 7 p.m. in the Franklin Room of the Student Union, there will be an open meeting of the Class of 1962 Advisory Board and Class Officers. As previously announced, the purpose of the meeting is to consider the levying of a $10 tax on all graduating seniors.

The tax has three purposes: five dollars to go to the Associate Alumni for expenses, four dollars are for rental of cap and gown for Commencement, and one dollar will be invested in a Mutual Fund along with part of last year's Winter Carnival profits for a 25th Class Reunion Gift to the University. This Mutual Fund is under the guardianship of the University.

EARNING PRESTIGE

The initiative shown on the part of WMUA in its construction of a sports network is another example of the fevered pitch with which UMass students have been working in order to create a greater sense of consciousness about their University in this state.

For many years, UMass has lost out in garnering the top scholars and top athletes of Massachusetts. We offered them scholarship but so did Harvard. We offered them a fine faculty but so did Holy Cross. We offered a wide field of courses to choose from but so did Boston University. All this we offered and yet we were defeated when it came to the truly gifted students or athlete. And we lost out because the UConns, Harvards, and Holy Crosses offered them the "prestige" of the name and tradition. It cannot be denied; when two schools are considered, often the deciding factor is the "prestige" carried by one more than the other.

But those days are passing. The "prestige" which will be attracted to UMass with a state-wide sports network is unmistakable and inevitable. It will not lend itself merely to athletics. The words of coaches, students, and deans, as well as the spirit of the campus, will be aired to thousands of young students across the state.

Dozen of speeches by members of the Administration and weeks of news dispatches from the publicity offices can be surpassed in positive value by the foresight of one University student like Barry Brooks, the UMass senior who negotiated the network idea with WMAS on his own initiative. Naturally, outsiders expect enthusiasm about UMass from the Administration and news offices; but when her own students show the same degree of spirit, then here must be an institution with something of value for all the state.

J. T.

STUDLEY'S DILEMMA

There is little doubt in anyone's mind that during his brief tenure at UMass, Charles B. Studley brightened the near dying embers of spirit on this campus. When he packed his bags and staff off for the University of Cincinnati last winter after only one short year with us, he left a spirited and enthusiastic Student Body behind him. Looking at this editorial from the University of Cincinnati News Record we see that all is not well in his home. The responsiveness which we showed is lacking in the Bearcats.

"Spirit—that indefinable buoyancy and joy that makes winning teams out of losing teams, that unites a student body with common bonds, that reflects pride in a university—this is the quality that has been lacking at so many university functions.

Football games, convocations, parades—all have been significantly lacking in enthusiasm and responsiveness. It seems as if no one can spare the "grill time" to attend a convocation; no one can schedule Friday night parties or allow time to turn out for a pre-game rally. Not since the NCAA victory last year has there been a rally worthy of the name.

It seems that students will only support a team when it's on top; that it makes a good showing even in defeat seemingly isn't worthy of cheering or hope in the eyes of the campus.

"There are lots of losers but only one winner, so why support a loser" seems to be the typical student attitude. No thought is given to that old-fashioned ideal of loyalty. No mention is made of responsibility resting with the student as well as the team for winning a game. No one seems to realize that the cheerleaders, Bearkittens, and band are not enough to give a team the drive to win.

Perhaps these are the very things that we should be thinking about in this last month of the football season when the Bearcats need our undivided support more than ever."

The Omphalos

by PAUL THEROUX '63

Probably the object which is most distinctively American is the American bathroom. The bathroom is taking its place as the prime symbol of our civilization, the essence of Real Americana. What room has more color schemes, more variations on the same triumvirate of objects, more trappings, styles, shapes, or finally more status symbolism than the American bathroom? Where but in America could the success of a party be summed up in the ringing, gleeful, nasal shout of the elated guest; ". . . to tell you the truth, Mabel, their decor is rather shoddy, they had liverwurst hors d'oevres—of all things—but their bathroom . . . I said, their bathroom is simply enchanting!"?

Immediately upon entering the Modern Water Closet one is confronted with shag, fuzz, tiles, pulls, plastic, and highly polished chrome—like an operating room for lobotomies designed by House of Dior. Strictly non-functional.

If the bathroom is worth steering a guest into it will not display either toothbrush, soap, or water or anything vaguely resembling them. The object is to conceal the real function of the room and emphasize the shine of the chrome, the Norman Rockwell print (framed in the dominating colors of the bathroom), or the stylized fish gurgitating serenely on the shower curtain.

There is always a gleam in the homeowners eye as he points out the attributes of his hybrid privy—the delicate pastels selected from the Sears Roebuck Catalogue, the commodius tub, the tastefully angled toilet—all in matching shades.

But this is the Master Bathroom; there is also one upstairs near the kid's room and one downstairs next to the workshop and playroom and a half of one in the garage. Why so many? I don't know, really, except most psychologists seem to agree that Americans are generally analy oriented—this bathroom madness more than bears out the speculation on the part of the psychologists.

Yet, this is not all bad. Probably more constructive reading is done in the bathroom than any place else; more soul-searching; more fruitful pondering; for here man is almost always alone. And it is only when man is alone that he will be forced to ponder his fate—there is no crutch in the bathroom; man is free to decide. As a note I might add that Henry Miller says that "certain books MUST be read in the bathroom" and states that Joyce's ULYSSES is one of them. This almost 800 page book might prove fatal to anyone who takes Miller seriously. For pure omphalosklepsis the bathroom serves a function but, of course, its usefulness extends even into the mundane necessities. It is this duality which recommends it, I feel.

But, alas, just as America has turned the once-shaded, academic libraries into veritable supermarkets (the posterior of Goodell being a prime example), and the supermarkets into acres of shelves in which one can navigate only with a map compass, so it has raised the bathroom to the eighth power so that the trappings, the chrome, the shine, the gleam make it impossible to ponder one's fate let alone contemplate one's navel.

Is there hope? Perhaps. A recent article in AMERICAN HOME showed the ". . . Five Best Designed Homes in the East" and if you look carefully at the blueprints you can see that the lavatory and bathroom take up as much space as the largest bedroom in the house. Maybe this is the answer—placing all the necessaries in one corner of a large room, locking the door, then pondering deeply without interruption. In any case, it remains the last outpost of man, the Authentic American Gothic.

To the Editor:

I am writing to say how proud I was of the University students who were in Archiald MacLeish's audience Thursday evening. Their behavior showed real appreciation for the man and his poems. Too often we comment on those times when students are rude and forget to mention when they are attentive and respectful. This particular audience was rewarded, not only by a beautiful program, but also by the poet's "Thank you for being quiet." I am only underlining his thanks and adding my praise.

To the Editor:

After many hours of discussion with elements of the faculty and student body, I find that it is incumbent on me to speak out against a policy of this University. I must ask whether or not it is a function of the faculty of the University to assume the role of foster parents to the students residing on campus. If this is the case, then should there not be a point at which this "parental" control is ceased and the maturing elements of the students allowed to take over? I will confine myself, at present, to one element of this control.

On page 115 in the Handbook for the University is the statement "Every woman student shall conduct herself at all times, in all places, so as to uphold her own good name and that of the University." This is set off in large type so that no one will miss it. It is a worthy statement which covers almost any infraction of the rules which follow on the succeeding pages. Is there any reason whatsoever why this rule and this rule alone cannot and should not apply to the senior women on this campus? This means apply in lieu of all rules governing hours, decorum, class attendance, callers, etc.

Is there a time when girls become women and students become citizens in a society? I believe there is. Is half an hour, five days a week, the difference between senior women and sophomores? This is the extent of the "Social preparation" afforded seniors on this campus. Must twenty and twenty-one year old women be coddled and watched over? I think not. There must be a time when people can be handed the staff of individuality with the words "Here, govern your life and make it good."

Do the senior women of this campus have to be told at what hour they are to be in? If so, why? Do the senior women on this campus have to sign out to go home or for a visit? If so, why? Are the senior women on this campus so weak that their attendance in class has to be mandatory? One hears a great deal about the emancipation of woman, yet does this have to come after leaving college? There is only one reason which I can find for the fantastic difference in the regulations for men and women on this campus—and it seems to me that this would be covered in the aforementioned rule or creed.

Other state universities have had restrictions on women removed as the result of pressure from the student body. The University of Wisconsin has had a great deal of litigation over this same question. I would like to see Massachusetts take a huge step forward in the simple matter of respect for an individual's maturity and common sense. Perhaps there are good, valid reasons why the Senate Committee on Women's Affairs, Women's Judiciary Board and the Dean of Women have decided on the restrictive policy for senior women. If these reasons go beyond the statement as to "every woman student . . ." then I am sure that the student body will be satisfied. The honor system is a University's way of saying "We respect you as mature individuals who are ready to step into the world." I think that I should like to hear that. How about you?

UMass vs. Maine

There is reason to believe that WMUA may tape and rebroadcast the UMass-Maine Yankee Conference Championship game to be aired the Monday evening following vacation.

However, sufficient interest must be shown by the students. If you desire WMUA to undertake the project, clip out the adjoining coupon and deposit it in a box for such at the S.U. lobby counter.

I desire that WMUA tape and rebroadcast the UMass-Maine game.

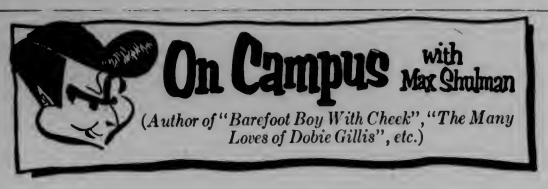
Showing of Weapons To Be Held Thursday

Senior ROTC students at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst area reserve officers and other interested persons will have an opportunity to see and hear about the newest military small arms Thursday night, Nov. 17 at 7 p.m.

A member of the Springfield Armory demonstration team will discuss and demonstrate the weapons in the Council Chambers as a feature of the fall meeting of the Amherst Reserve Officers' Association.

Following the discussion and demonstration of small arms, a refreshment period and smoker will be held. Lt. Col. Carl W. Sprague, Maj. Harold Gatslick and Capt. William M. Murray comprise the committee.



IT'S LATER THAN YOU THINK!

All year long you've been promising yourself to go there. Now the semester is nearly over and you still haven't set foot in the place. Shame on you!

But it's not too late. Right now, this very minute, before you weaken, lift up your head and forward march to the place you have been avoiding ever since school began. I refer, of course, to the library.

Now here you are at the library. That wasn't so bad, was it? Of course not! Go inside. What do you see? A sign that says "NO SMOKING." Go outside. Light a Marlboro. Smoke. Go back inside.

Because now you are ready. Now your trembling resolution is rigid. Now your pulsing psyche is serene. You have been calmed by mild Marlboro. You have been soothed by that fine selectrate filter, by that fine full flavor that dotes and pampers and caresses, that lifts the fallen, repairs the shattered, straightens the bent, unravels the knotted, rights the askew, and fastens the unbuttoned.

In the center of the library you see the main circulation desk. Look in the card catalogue for the number of the book you want, write the number on a slip, and hand it to the efficient and obliging young lady at the desk. The efficient and obliging young lady then gives the slip to an efficient and obliging page boy who trots briskly back into the stacks, curls up on a limp leather encyclopedia, and sleeps for an hour or two. Then, puffy but refreshed, he returns your slip to the efficient and obliging young lady at the desk, who tells you one of three things: a) "Your book is out." b) "Your book is at the bindery." c) "Your book is on reserve."

Having learned that the circulation desk hasn't the least intention of ever parting with a book, let us now go into the periodical room. Here we spend hours sifting through an imposing array of magazines—magazines from all the far corners of the earth, magazines of every nature and description—but though we search diligently and well, we cannot find Mad or Playboy.

Next let us venture into the reference room. Here in this hushed, vaulted chamber, we find the true scholars of the university—earnest, dedicated young men and women who care for only one thing in the world: the pursuit of knowledge.

Let us eavesdrop for a moment on this erudite couple poring over heavy tomes at the corner table. Hush! She speaks:

SHE: Whatcha readin', hey?
HE: The Origin of Species. You ever read it?
SHE: No, but I seen the movie.
HE: Oh.
SHE: You like readin'?
HE: Naah.
SHE: What do you like?
HE: Hockey, licorice, girls, stuff like that.
SHE: Me too, hey.
HE: You pinned or anything?
SHE: Well, sort of. I'm wearin a fellow's motorcycle emblem . . . But it's only platonic.
HE: Wanna go out for a smoke?
SHE: Marlboro?
HE: What else?

And as our learned friends take their leave, let us too wend our way homeward—a trifle weary, perhaps, but enlightened and renewed and better citizens for having spent these happy hours in the library, Aloha, library, aloha!

Housemother Is Welcomed To Fraternity

The brothers of Phi Sigma Delta are proud to welcome their new housemother, Miss Dorothy Pyle.

She is a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College, where she majored in history. While in college, Miss Pyle was an exchange scholar at King's College of London University. Shortly thereafter she was the recipient of a scholarship awarded by the University of Pennsylvania to do graduate work in American History.

From 1927-1942, Miss Pyle taught history and English in Pennsylvania and New Jersey high schools. In 1942 she joined the Women's Army Corps and served until 1947. As a staff officer in the Air Force, Miss Pyle received a commendation for writing a history of Langley Field Air Force Base.

An avid interest in showing and judging dogs caused her to operate her own kennel, Cloudmere, and, as a licensed American Kennel Club judge, to work in some of the nation's most important dog shows. She has written for many prominent nationwide kennel magazines, and, for eight years, had a column in "Popular Dogs".

The new housemother brings with her a distinctive mascot, "Snake", a female short-haired collie, who has won 9 out of 10 shows. Last year "Snake" was judged best-of-breed at the Westminister Dog Show at Madison Square Garden.

Theta Chi Is Frat. Champion; Butterfield and Baker Tied

Intramural football action is coming to a rapid close with Theta Chi on top in the fraternity league, and Butterfield Dormitory and Baker A dorm being on top in their respective divisions.

The men from Theta Chi wrested the crown away from defending champ SAE in a hard fought, down-to-the-finish contest last week, winning 25-24 in the final seconds of play.

Quarterback Gordie Lewis' arm figured in all three of the Theta Chi tallies as passes to Neal Harriss and Brian Saltis kept the Chi's neck and neck with SAE's pass offensive.

With 35 seconds left in the game, SAE kicked off to Theta Chi. After three downs the trailing Chi's had made no gain, and a fourth down and desperation attempt materialized when Gordie Lewis pitched out to Brian Saltis who heaved a long bomb to Neal Harris on the SAE six-yard line. With time running out, Lewis hit Saltis in the endzone for the tally, and then found Lou Bush with a rollout pass for the conversion to edge the defending champs.

The independent Flicks attempted to remove the new crown from the Thetas' head in a contest Monday night, and almost succeeded in doing so, as Theta Chi won 6-2.

The lone Chi tally came early in the game when Lewis threw a long pass to Bush which was good for the T.D. Later, a Flick defender tagged Lewis in the end zone for the safety and the score rested at 6-2. After a series of short pass plays, the Flicks found themselves on the Theta Chi 10 yard line with about 10 seconds left to play. A 15 yard penalty on the following play removed the threat, however, and Theta Chi breathed a little easier as it retained its superiority.

A contest between Butterfield and Baker A tonight at 6:30 will decide the winner of the dorm league, and that victor will play Theta Chi for the University championship later in the week.

The Butterfield squad, after having been upset by Greenough, needed a win over Mills dorm to retain their league lead and got it Monday night 33-13.

The arm of Dave Bader heaved five touchdown passes during the conflict, finding Dick Annino and Ron Rainka on four of them, and Skip Freeland on the remaining tally. Both of Mills' scores also came on passes.

The BU 8's will have to play a good brand of ball if they hope to overcome a powerful Baker A squad. The winner of that game will meet Theta Chi, and that winner will travel to New Hampshire on Saturday for the interschool crown.

MAINE TRIP

Busses bound for Orono and the UMass-Maine football game on Wednesday, November 22 will leave between 6:30 and 7:00 a.m. on Wednesday morning, Nov. 22 from the Greybound bus terminal in Park Square, Boston.

The athletic department has offered to help defray the cost of the trip, which will now cost the student $3.75 for the round trip, and $1.00 for the game with an I.D.

Students should contact Hugh Calkin at the Alumni office in Memorial Hall for information and reservations.

Let's have as many UMass students at that game as we possibly can.

Frosh Place 5th in N.E.'s

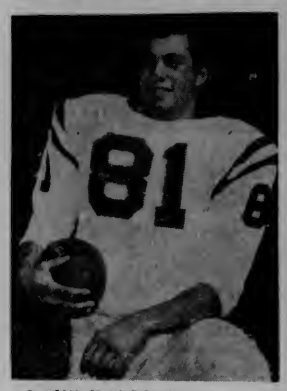
Coach Budd Cobb's frosh distancemen finished fifth in the New England's Monday, in a meet in which the first fifteen finished ahead of last year's winning time.

A strong Brown squad captured the meet, sweeping the first three places.

Bill Young, finishing twentieth, was UMass' first runner to cross the line.

By losing this meet, the team will not compete in the IC4A's to be held in New York. The season will close out Saturday when the squad faces the University of New Hampshire team at Durham.

Harrington Is ECAC Pick



DAVE HARRINGTON, 6', 190 lb. senior from Holyoke won an ECAC honorable mention for his outstanding play during the Holy Cross game. Dave, who has been a defensive standout for the Redmen all season, figured in many adept plays durign the game.

Rifle Squad Looks Strong

After a poor season last year the varsity rifle team seems ready to roll in better form this season. With many returning lettermen and three outstanding sophomores, the team should be rated with the best in New England. Captain Ed Moses, who finished third in the Yankee Conference match last year, should have good support from Phil Lagrow, Don Starr, Bob Lucas, Hal Butterworth, Mark Natausky, Doug Wells, and Frank Fluet.

The first match will be on Nov. 18, against B.U. and UConn at B.U. According to the coach, Captain Jack Lesley, the team should have one of its best seasons in the past few years.

UMass Harriers Win New England Championship

THE UMASS HARRIERS—NEW ENGLAND CHAMPS

The 1961 version of the UMass cross country squad, under the direction of Coach Bill Footrick has brought the second New England crown to UMass. From left to right: Front row; Ken O'Brien, Dick Blomstrom, Dave Balch, Jim Wrynn, Bob Avery. Second row: Charlie Proctor, Robert Brouillet, Eugene Colburn, Tom Leavitt. Third row: Joe LaMarre, Coach Bill Footrick, Bob Pendleton.

Brouillet, Balch Spur Great Squad Effort

by ABE SHEINKER '62

The University of Massachusetts varsity cross country team came through with its finest performance of the season at the most important time to win the annual New England Championships. The Redmen runners compiled a comfortable spread over second place Springfield, 101 points to 122, at Franklin Park, Boston, on Monday.

It was only the second New England title for UMass cross country squads. Last year the Redmen were second to Brown, 90-96, but last year's freshmen team won their division of the meet, an indication of what was to come.

The victory was a unique team effort, as the fourth and fifth UMass finishers placed ahead of all but one of the other 22 schools' fourth men.

Bob Brouillet, the great sophomore runner, again was the first UMass man to finish, placing third over the 4.1 mile course. Coach Bill Footrick was anxiously searching for ex-Yan Con champ Dave Balch, only to find to his surprise that Balch was right behind Brouillet. Balch, who has had his trouble this year, ran his best race of the season and placed sixth.

Consistent Dick Blomstrom ran his usual good race, but the reliable number 3 man found himself number 5 man—only because Jim Wryman and Gene Colburn turned in extraordinary performances. Wryman, 26th, Colburn, 32nd, and Blomstrom, 34th, clinched the victory for UMass.

Ken O'Brien and Bob Avery beat more than half of the 150 competitors to add to the UMass victory margin. The Redmen may have been a surprise winner but they certainly were a deserving one. The team had lost their last two dual meets, the last one to Springfield. They were out to win the big one, the New England crown, and they beat Springfield, Brown and Holy Cross in the process. Brown appeared overconfident, with their runners setting a fast early pace. But the Redmen were up to it with Brouillet clocking 9:35 at the 2-mile mark to keep up front. The fastest two-mile he had ever run was 10:10.

Holy Cross, known for their good distance men, placed men in the 2nd and 4th spots, but their 5th man finished 79th, costing them a chance at the title.

The team was presented a two foot by two foot plaque, emblematic of the title. The proud feeling of victory was attained by Coach Footrick when coaches from other top teams gathered round him asking how he trained his victorious team. One of his methods is to run his men on different terrain, depending on that where the next meet is to be held. He works his men hard, but they love to work for him. He also works hard for them. When they come out for a weekend workout, Coach Footrick has meals waiting for them afterwards.

The UMass squad travels to New Hampshire Saturday for their last dual meet of the season, then takes a shot at the Eastern Title in the I.C.4A. meet in New York City on Monday.

The team scores:

1. Massachusetts, 101; 2. Springfield, 122; 3. Brown, 126; 4. Holy Cross, 140; 5. Connecticut, 156; 6. Providence, 189; 7. Maine, 206; 8. Rhode Island, 213; 9. Central Conn., 217; 10. Boston College, 218; 11. Wesleyan, 225.

Speeding and Vandalism Trouble Campus Police

by THOMAS A. McMULLIN '64

Speeding and petty vandalism are the chief concerns of the campus police department says Alexander Blasko, UMass chief security officer.

An increase in the number of speed violations has occurred this fall. The college community is reminded that the speed limit for the campus is 20 m.p.h. and for the town of Amherst 25 m.p.h. Blasko states these limits will be strictly enforced.

Slugs Cause Machine Trouble

On the problem of petty vandalism, the department is concerned with the number of slugs being put into the dorm vending machines. Not only do these slugs not work, but they cause the machines to break down causing inconvenience and loss of money to other students.

The large increase in the number of students over the last few years has brought many parking and pedestrian problems. The lots, in most cases, lack guide lines for the parkers. Often they are poorly paved and lack lighting thus causing problems to night parking.

Students Cross At Wrong Places

In reference to the pedestrian problem, Chief Blasko states that many students are crossing North Pleasant Street at the improper places and that students are climbing the hill to the men's dorms in the middle of the road.

The larger number of students on campus is also causing a problem concerning lawns. Many students are not making the effort to walk on the established paths. The condition of the lawn in front of Goodell Library is an example of the effect of student carelessness.

Public Invited To Installation Of Claussen

The North Congregational Church of Amherst invites the University community to the Service of Installation of the Rev. Russell G. Claussen on Nov. 19 at 7:30 p.m. Rev. Claussen served on the Protestant Chaplain's staff of the University the academic years of 1959-1961.

Students who would like rides to the church on Sunday night are asked to leave their names in the Protestant Chaplain's Office at the Student Union, or to call AL 3-7731.

The guest preacher at the service is a layman, F. William Stringfellow, an attorney in the East Harlem section of New York City. Stringfellow has had his daily round of activities enacted on C.B.S. television and has been covered by Time magazine.

Comments By Dr. Larson On 'Volpone' Production

Dr. Orville K. Larson, head of the theatrical section of the Speech Department, recently commented on the forthcoming Roister Doister production of "Volpone".

"In the adaption of Ben Jonson's farce, the play has been stripped to the essential and highly concentrated satire of lust and avariciousness. Eliminated is the subordinate story of the folly of Sir Politick and Lady Would-be, 'my Madame of the everlasting voice.'

Play Presented In Today's Meaning

"Although Jonson was not the only humanist to scrutinize greed, perhaps no one has created such a biting epitome of its sinister and vulgar nature. And if the pedants cry out that our version is in actuality another play completely, rather than Volpone, we are sure that Jonson and his colleagues would have heartily approved our attempt to present his comedy in terms meaningful today.

Satire Becomes Very Entertaining

"Although it is incredible that so brutal an exposure of the cupidity of man should be amusing, the fact remains that it is vastly entertaining. Vice was no more consistently punished in Jonson's day than it is today. And in our age when smut and the "double entendre" are fashionable, our bawdy little satire seems quite refreshing.

"The Theatrical Art of the Commedia dell'Arte—the public theatre of the Italian Renaissance—was the art of the actor; the actor, who with his facility as a dancer, singer, fencer, jokester, and thespian, performed with his colleagues in the public squares and village greens. Traveling from town to town, from fair to fair, these performers entertained the public with a few props and less scenery, upon temporarily erected stages of a few planks and trestles, and with a blanket hung to the rear of the platform.

Production To Be In Italian Renaissance Style

"The Roister Doister production will be presented in a similar style. On a modified version of the crudely erected platform, and with the simplest of properties and a few hangings, their band of actors will present this tale of vice and greed in the spirit of the Commedia dell'Arte.

"More concerned with presenting a series of pleasing stage pictures than being historically accurate, their frankly 'theatrical' production is designed to appeal to the eye as well as the ear."

New Dorms' Yearly Rent to Rise by $100 Next Fall

The first in a series of teas to acquaint the students with the Alumni program was held yesterday morning at Mem Hall. The Student Senate was the first guest of the Alumni who will subsequently host other student guess. Picured are Hugh Calkin of the Alumni Office, Evan Johnston, Director of Associate Alumni, and Tex Tacelli, Student Senate President.

Rooms In New Buildings To Cost $300 Fee In Existing Dorms Remains At $200;

Increased construction and maintenance costs mean higher fees for many UMass students when new dormitories are opened next September, Pres. John W. Lederle announced today.

Frosh To Be Housed In New Dorms

Students residing in the new houses, two of which will be completed in the fall, will pay $300 a year as against the $200 charged for rooms in other dormitories.

Lederle said that some 450 more students will be enrolled at the University in 1962-63, and most of these will be housed in the new dormitories. An option will be extended, however, to students presently enrolled either to remain in the rooms they now occupy or to move to the new dormitories.

Fee For New Dorms Necessary

Lederle said that the University's trustees have set the $300 fee "with great reluctance. The action is being taken only after careful and quite exhaustive studies of costs and other factors. We are faced with the hard fact that current building and operating costs are such that we will not be able to provide adequate housing—or any new housing at all—unless we set a realistic fee."

The president explained that the $300 fee applies only to new dormitories. He said further that the University would do everything possible to hold the line on room fees for all other dormitories during the next academic year.

Greater Attendance Causes Rise

Lederle pointed out that, "while it is standard policy for the University to maintain the low-tuition principle, it is also a policy that students, and not the state, have the responsbility of meeting board and room expenses. While we realize that this will place a further financial burden on many families, we are forced to take such action if we are to meet the severe enrollment pressures now facing us."

Compromise Old Hat In Politics—Clements

by JOE BRADLEY '64

The Art of Compromise is nothing more than "plain old fashion hoss swappin' " asserted former U.S. Senator Earle C. Clements, Distinguished Professor of Public Affairs in a talk delivered to a crowd packed into the Barnstable Room of the S.U. Wednesday evening.

Clements demonstrated the commoness of compromise by pointing out that compromise is used to settle labor problems, international disagreements, and even marital problems.

Campaign promises, said Clements, "are not promises to do, but to try to do. The public," he explained, "recalls only the lost objective" while the politician is seeking a practical compromise to save as much of the original promise as possible.

"Nothing falls in the face of crisis as fast as a preconceived political program," Clements continued. "Compromise is as inevitable in our form of government as a navigator changing his course for a cross wind."

Proving that compromise was nothing new in American politics, Clements used the changeover from the Articles of Confederation to the Constitution as a prime example of compromise.

He added, "It was a lack of experience in the absence of a crystal ball," since the founding fathers were considering a government unprecedented in the history of man.

This was the first of four lectures by Clements; the rest of the series includes: "The Organization of Congress: A Senator's Analysis"—Nov. 30; "Congress, Pressure Groups, and the Public Interest"—Dec. 7; and "Responsible Citizenship and Modern Democracy"—Dec. 12.

UMass Students Need Financial Aid, Survey On Freshman Class Reports

About 75 per cent of the undergraduate students at UMass need some degree of financial aid to meet college costs it was announced today in a report issued by the University.

The high figure is based on a survey of all families who have members in the freshman class. Although restricted to the freshman class, the survey is seen by Dean of Students William F. Field as reflecting the financial capabilities of families with members in any of the four undergraduate classes.

Survey Receives Good Response

The questionnaire, answered anonymously by each family, covered such basic matters as total income, income tax paid, number of children and other dependents, savings and investments.

To meet basic University costs of about $1,350 per year, 10 per cent of the families need up to $200 in scholarship or other aid; 12 per cent need from $200 to $400; 22 per cent need form $400 to $600; 16 per cent need from $600 to $800; 13 per cent need from $800 to $1,000; and 2 per cent need more than $1,000.

Few Families Have High Income

The largest number of families (30 per cent) reported incomes between $6,000 and $8,000, with more than three of every four families having total family incomes below $10,000 per year.

The median, or middle, family reported a 1960 income before taxes of $7,575, a figure which includes both mother's and father's contributions.

Typical Family Income Is $121 A Week

Combined weekly earnings for mother and father of the median family amounted to about $146 per week before taxes and other deductions. After taxes, the most typical weekly family paycheck would be $121. One family paycheck out of every four would have to be set aside to pay University bills if regular family income were to be the only source of funds for a student.

Few families reported any large holdings in stocks, bonds or other investments. Typical family savings (checking or savings accounts) were reported at a $1,300 total. The median student savings account for the summer prior to the start of the freshman year was $380.

Most Families Have Several Dependents

Only 25 per cent of the families reported having only one dependent child. The typical family (one-third of all respondents) reported two children with another 20 per cent reporting three dependent children. Almost 40 per cent of all families had three or more children either below the age of 18 or in some form of continuing education. In addition to these, about one family in every

Kennedy, Eisenhower Labor Policies Similiar—Blackman

by MARCIA ANN VOIKOS '63

"President Kennedy's labor policies on the New Frontier are not radically different from those of the Eisenhower administration," declared Professor John Blackman of the UMass Economics Dept. to members of the Economic Association last Tuesday at the Student Union.

Speeded Up Recovery Measures

In comparing the two administrations, Professor Blackman maintained that Kennedy has continued Eisenhower's policies but has speeded up recovery measures; appointed a Task Force headed by Labor Secretary Arthur Goldberg to improve labor relations; and has extended federal standards to private construction work on missile bases.

Labor Supports JFK's Policies

Professor Blackman asserted the significance of organized labor in support of Kennedy's economic policies compared with the opposition Eisenhower met from that group. He stated that Kennedy stepped into office amid a deep business recession in which 600,000 had been unemployed for six months.

"Upon the recommendations of the AFL-CIO, Congress enacted a series of long term permanent reforms which had been passed as recovery measures—including the minimum hourly wage hike to $1.15," Professor Blackman continued.

Bennett Cerf Will Appear On Campus

BULLETIN — Bennett Cerf, noted American humorist and publisher, will appear at UMass sometime during the week of Nov. 27, according to information received from Linda Achenbach, Vice President of the Student Senate.

Information was scanty shortly before press time, but Miss Achenbach confirmed that Cerf would appear either Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday night with time and place to be announced. Cerf will be this year's first Distinguished Visitor and the second on campus following Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt who was here last March.

Frosh President, Al Brann; sophomore president, Kim Wallace; and Paul Klisiewicz '64 study the plaque which will be given to the winner of the Soph-Frosh Track Meet. The meet will be held in the Cage on Dec. 3.

Changing Times by Mike Palter '63

The United States and the Oppressed. It takes only a limited degree of perspicacity to realize the limitations on our foreign policy, limitatons which are inherent because of our position within the Western Alliance. These limitations can be clearly seen in the United Nations.

Let us go back to Monday (Nov. 13). On this day the General Assembly's Trusteeship Committee voted for a resolution condemning Portuguese action toward Angola and other overseas territories. According to the N.Y. Times (Nov. 14) "The United States was known to have reservations about several sections of the resolution, including the word 'condemns.' The United States would have preferred a milder word-'regrets.'

Why did the United States hedge on this issue? To understand this, perhaps it is necessary to know that:

1. France abstained from voting on this resolution.
2. Britain "expressed fear that the precedent established in hearing petitioners from Portuguese territories might be applied later to British territories."

Thus we see that our strongest allies are like straws in the wind when it comes to the colonial question. Unfortunately, they are forced to maintain their position because of their own colonialist adventures. Thus, the United States is forced to assuage British and France in order to maintain a semblance of order within the Western Alliance.

To add ensult to injury, the United States has continued to give Portugal military aid. This, of course, is a necessary consequence of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. To say (as our representative has) that our aid is not being used against the Angolese, is overwhelmingly inane. In fact, it is more than this; it is a lie. It is like saying that Battista did not use U.S. weapons in suppressing revolution in Cuba. It is like saying that Franco does not use U.S. weapons in suppressing the Spanish People and maintaining a fascist dictatorship.

Thus, United States foreign policy faces a paradox. How is the U.S. to encourage self-determination with one face and indirectly suppress democratic movements with the other? As in Cuba, how is the U.S. to intervene while raving against intervention? Obviously, in the long run, this policy can not succeed.

A further understanding of our position can be seen in the Congo and Dominican Republic situations. In the Congo, why did we support movements against nationalist Lumumba but hedge when it came to forceful suppression of the imperialist Katanga Regime? In the Dominican Republic, why is the U.S. about to suggest removal of the economic sanctions?

Thus, let us remember this: if Algeria becomes Algerian, it will not turn toward the West. If the Congo becomes a unified African State, it will not turn toward the west. The Angolese will not turn toward the West. The Ecuadorians have turned from the West. The Cubans have turned from the West.

Are the men in our State Department as stupid as they would have us believe or are they merely caught in the unfortunate web of a warped foreign policy?

OPEN CITY

7 p.m., S.U., 50 Cents

Planned before the Germans had left Rome, shot under the most exacting conditions without the usual technical luxuries of normal location production, OPEN CITY highlighted for the world the great power of the realistic film and influenced postwar production everywhere. It is the film which catapulted director Roberto Rossellini and actors Anna Magnani and Aldo Fabrizi to international fame.

THE STUDENT FORUM

by GEORGE MASSELAM

Are American Youths receiving an objective view of themselves and their ancestors? This question can best be dealt with by asking another question. Is it possible for an historian to be truly objective in his writings? According to an article by Dixon Wector in American Heritage Aug. '57 entitled "History and How To Write It." "An historian should be as scientific as possible in his approach. This is not to say that he should go about writing history as a biologist dissects a frog, but that he should be discriminate in his use of facts and make a distinction between what is false and that which is true." In other words written history should be a fair appraisal of the facts, and if generalizations are to be drawn, then accounts should be given for these generalizations." He then goes on to say that history can be abused by carelessness in handling the facts, by a desire to make them sensational and shocking or by making it the handmaid of propaganda, therefore brazenly perverting the truth. At this point let's stop and examine the historical education the youth in our country is receiving.

Since I am a product of that education, I shall try to evaluate myself. After completing my high school education I was surprised to learned that George Washington was not a good military leader. I had always been taught that the father of our country was almost impeccable. I was surprised to learn that John Paul Jones, the Founder of our U.S. Navy, did not fight for purely patriotic reasons but for the love of fighting and the love of piracy. I was astonished to learn that the U.S. had semi-concentration camps in California. Yes, America does have its limitations. But, so what? Doesn't every country and individual on the face of this earth have limitations? Why be afraid of them? Isn't it the duty of this same country and individual, having admitted its limitations to itself, to try and deal with them? The United States certainly has much to be proud of in her history. I was certainly made aware of this in my history courses. How can I therefore make judgments without a knowledge of the limitations of the subject which I am judging.

According to Dixon Wector "History is the review of failures and successes of man on this planet. Man alone learns from the experience of others. History makes this possible. The past sheds light upon eternal behavior of human beings, adding much to any reader's knowledge about himself and the world that he lives in." How can a person brought up in an educational enular on men, which milks the truth and dictates that a country is flawless and can do no wrong, effectively evaluate his problems? If one doesn't get the truth about these limitations how can one deal with these problems which may eventually cause the decline of the country? How can one learn by the experience of others if he doesn't know the true experience of others? How can one ultimately learn about the eternal behavior of himself, if he doesn't have the complete facts which would indicate the behavior of himself and his anvestors? These are very important questions to be considered in the education of our youth in history. The youth being taught in our high-school courses today will be making the descisions of our country in the near future. What will they have to use as a basis of their historical speculations? HALF-TRUTHS?

II Transition

Wector then makes the statement "History along with kindred social studies like Ethnology, Anthropology, and Sociology help to splinter those barriers of predjudices and explodes those lies which create hatreds between races, sections and national groups. Anybody setting out to recreate can hardly help becoming less of a provincial in both time and space. Also he's taught an inescapable lesson in the folly of aggressive wars, the stupidity of persecuting others and the futility of trying to destroy the freedom of the mind." Thus here is a new light with which objective history may be taught in high school. In this way the students are able to judge their place in history and thus make decisions accordingly. They will never be able to do this unless they have most of the facts and the overall picture of their historical development.

I will close with a final statement by Wector. "Ignorance about what happened in our town, state, region, country, as well as to our neighbors in this age where all nations are neighbors, is not only shameful but dangerous. American History is a history good citizens need to know to understand their world and thus be able to improve it." This is why objectivity is a necessity for complete understanding."

Thus the cry is for objectivity, for the awareness of faults and limitations, for an appraisal of ourselves, all by which we may learn and grow. Criticism is essential for self evaluation.

A Review: Volpone

by PAUL THEROUX '63

If you are looking for bitterness, spleen, or disallusionment in this column your search will be futile—you will find none. If you are looking for criticism you will detect only the faintest underlying note of discomfort.

Last night saw the successful hatching of Volpone, a play which has been incubating for the past few months in Bowker Aud. It was both an invigorating and a delightful experience and, after the insulting performances of Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians and the seige by Woody Herman, the Roister Doisters have proved that entertainment consists of nothing more than long months of preparation and hard work. If there was any fault to find, then it was in the adaptation by Lyle V. Mayer who in turn adapted it from the adaptation of Jonson's original by Stefan Zweig. Yes, changing hands paled it, although a note in the program tells us that "Jonson and his colleagues would have heartily approved . . .". The Real Hollywood Ending would be enough, I'm sure, to cause the good Doctor to heave the tankard at his elbow at the well-meaning Mayer who vulgarized the play in an abortive attempt to make it "playable." Mayer's adaptation softens the sarcasm, cleanses the japes, flattens the iambus, and reduces the play by one hour, one dwarf, one eunuch, one hermaphrodite, and a complete sub-plot. If one is not familiar with the original Jonson play then this production is, as the program states, "refreshing."

The play is a semi-zoological farce with avaricious and lascivious overtones and a wonderful menagerie of a cast. In short, Volpone (the fox) feigns death and sensing that he cannot possibly take it with him, the birds of prey, Voltore (the vulture) played by Richard Gardner; Corbaccio (the crow) played by Peter Avratin; and Corvino (the raven) played by Norm Seigel, swarm about the gilt-edged Volpone, played by Mick Broadhurst. The birdmen offer their gifts—all give money of some sort, but Corbaccio disinherits his son and Corvino forks over his wife for good measure. All this is manipulated by the Gadfly, Mosca—Volpone's jester played by Hal Hinds. Everyone takes a rather realistic view of Volpone's impending death especially Canina (Bev DeMarco) a fine young wench of dubious profession who gets "two irons in the fire" as Mosca cleverly suggests. Colomba (Judy Noren), Corvino's wife, is willingly traded off to Volpone and her success in healing the stricken Volpone becomes cause for a hilarious courtroom scene later in the play. Mosca triumphs at the end as Volpane is driven out penniless and a victim of his own lies—to forage his supper in a Venetian canal.

The major character seemed to be Mosca who, in this adaptation, gets most of the work-he shows up in every scene unlike Volpone who only appears in four and has speaking parts in three. The demanding part of Mosca is well handled by Hal Hinds whose endless subterfuge is a source of amazement.

Mick Broadhurst was excellent as Volpone and captured all the duplicity of the role. He used every nuance of expression switching from the cadaverous, dying old man to the ebullient personage romping on his bed so that one could sense the gilt ichor streaking through his veins. Richard Gardner's Voltore kept reminding me of a Seventeenth Century Hugh Downs, but his acting was adequate. Norm Seigel was corpulent and unruly enough for Corvino and his final scenes were superb. Judy Noren's Colomba was innocent, indignant—it is only the fact that she is Corvino's wife that I omit the word 'virginal', although naive she was. Rubens would have liked Bev DeMarco as Canina—just facile and lusty enough for credibility. Leone, the disinherited son (David Manly) bumbled and fumbled and was tremendously impressive in a relatively small part; as was the judge (Gordon Kiefer). The leer of Lawrence Wilker's Police Captain should be recorded on film and used in place of laughing gas.

I doubt if I have ever seen a character that amused me more than Peter Avratin as Corbaccio (unless Buddy Hackett ever played Caliban). Here (I said to myself) is the original dirty old man. Looking like his vertebrae had been fused into a twig, he hobbled around cackling past his virile nose. Each time he lurched onto the stage I laughed; each time he opened his mouth I chortled; each time he spoke I became hysterical.

But singling out one character is not fair in this production. Thanks are due to everyone connected with it. It seemed technically perfect and the skilfull direction of Doris Abramson showed in each new movement. Finally, I would add that, although the adaptation seemed not to linger enough with the characters, he whole production was done with precision—right to the theme music of the Vivaldi Concerto for Mandolin—and it will not be forgotten for this genius.

Women Students Fare Well In Agriculture -- Marriage

Women—who make their mark in marriage or in their chosen field—are among the 839 students enrolled in the College of Agriculture at UMass this year.

Fourteen women are included among the 341 four-year students in agriculture, according to Prof. Fred P. Jeffrey, associate dean of agriculture in charge of instruction. Stockbridge School, the two-year course leading to an associate degree, has 13 wommen among its total enrollment of 394. A total of 104 graduate students round out the 839 figure.

While many of the women graduates in agriculture end up marrying a male classmate, reports Dean Jeffrey, others enter their commercial field. Landscape architecture, with its job opportunities, is the popular field for women in the four-year course and they seem to do well career-wise.

Stockbridge women graduates favor the fields of animal science, floriculture, food management and food distribution.

All-told, four-year students favor the non-production type of agricultural fields with forestry and wildlife management being the most popular, followed by landscape architecture, dairy and animal science and food technology.

As a whole, Stockbridge students predominate in the fields of animal science, food management, landscape operations and turf management in that order.

The 104 graduate students favor agricultural and food economics, food technology and agricultural engineering in order of enrollment.

House Tours Are Planned By Pan Hel

The Panhellenic Council invites all freshman women to a tour of the sorority houses. All girls A-M will meet on Sat., Nov. 18, and those N-Z will meet on Sun., Nov. 19, at 12:45.

Commuters will go to Arnold basement with girls from Abbey, Knowlton, Arnold, Crabtree, and Leach. Girls in Dwight, Mary Lyons, Lewis, Thatcher, and Johnson will go to Dwight basement.

UMass Scientists To Uncap The Secret Of Soft Drinks

Everyone knows that carbon dioxide puts the "pop" in soda pop, but the important factor in any carbonated beverage—the taste—isn't a question of any one substance. Although the manufacturer's formula contains a clear listing of the ingredients going into a special flavor, there are tiny quantities of virtually undetectable chemicals, called trace compounds, which, though completely harmless, add or detract from the exact taste the public may prefer.

In an effort to track down the hidden elements that may alter a carbonated beverage's flavor, the Society of Soft Drink Technologists recently awarded an $8,000 research grant to the Food Technology Department of the College of Agriculture at UMass.

Under the direction of Irving S. Fagerson and Wassef W. Nawar of the Food Technology staff, the complicated secrets of soft drink ingredients will be probed using a gas chromatograph. This machine is basically an electronic "nose" that "sniffs" the vapors given off by a substance and records its findings on graph-like charts. This machine will also allow the researchers to study the effects of various manufacturing and storage conditions on the final product.

The end result should be better, more flavorful soft drinks—thanks to science.

Dr. Lilly Named To Serve As Entomology Consultant

Scientific know-how of UMass will be put to work in Colombia, South America during November as Dr. John H. Lilly, head of the department of entomology and plant pathology, serves as a Rockefeller Foundation consultant on its entomological program relating to food crops.

Dr. Lilly has been granted a four-weeks' leave of absence to accept the foundation's request that he review its program in Colombia and Ecuador and make recommendations for future development.

Dr. Lilly flew to Bogota, Colombia on Monday, Oct. 30, where he will make his headquarters. He will visit and consult with scientists at various agricultural experiment stations throughout Colombia and in Ecuador. He, also, plans to check local research on nematodes on behalf of similar research being done at the university by Dr. Richard A. Rohde. Nematodes are microscopic worms attacking crops.

The Rockefeller Foundation sponsors technical assistance programs in agriculture in various countries, concentrating its efforts in areas where increased food production is important.

This will be Dr. Lilly's second consultirg trip for the Rockefeller Foundation. While at Iowa State University in 1956, he reviewed entomological programs in Colombia and Mexico.

Plans Made To Expand UMass Student Housing Accommodations

Next year, there will be an increase of almost 400 students on the UMass campus. By 1970, the enrollment in the division of graduate studies is expected to be at least twice its present size.

To accommodate the tremendous growth, UMass is embarking on an ambitious program of expansion of its present housing facilities. The immediately obvious parts of this development are the two new dormitories being constructed, one above Hills, and the other below Brooks. These dorms are expected to house men students by next fall. Brooks will become a women's dorm, thus enabling the University to house 160 more women students. Next year's freshman class will have a slightly higher percentage of women than the 40% ratio of recent classes.

Also impending is an enlargement of all present housing areas. This will include new dorms on Van Meter Hill and new men's dorms in the area of the present women's dormitories. The dining facilities at Butterfield and Greenough will be replaced by a new Dining Commons when women's residences are established on the hill. There is a possibility that part of the agricultural land presently being used by the school of agriculture will eventually be used for residence halls. Approximately 4500 students will be housed in any one area, 2500 men and 1500 women.

In the most immediate future is a large complex to be completed by 1963 to the east of the president's house. This building will be higher than any of the present dorms, the object being to save space. Sections will be smaller, each one housing only twenty-five students, and each section will be provided with a study lounge. Sections will be separated from each other by elevators in the hope of minimizing noise. One half of this building will be for men, the other side for women; a recreation area on the bottom floor will be used by both.

New facilities are also being considered in the area of the married couples' dorms, and behind the Women's Phys Ed building, an area once proposed for fraternities and sororities. These are the present plans of the administration to accommodate the increasing enrollment.

Sororities Plan To Entertain Freshmen At Round Robins

CHI OMEGA

Activity never seems to cease at 315 Lincoln Avenue. Hats off this week to the swim team for capturing first place in the first meet of the season.

The sisters thank Theta Chi for the great shindig last Thursday. They hope the skit has left no permanent marks especially on the houseboys who supplied vital information.

The Chi O's are as busy as beavers polishing up their house and voices for Round Robins. Speaking of polishing voices, Joan Rubenstein is trying hard to polish a few for the approaching Sorority Sing.

The Chi O's will be anxious front row attendants at "Volpone" to see their own Bev "Katrina" Demarco make her debut.

Missing from the attendance list at Chi O is one very much missed sister—Pat Oliviera. Pat is practice teaching in Physical Education in Newton.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

The Kappas were very pleased to have President and Mrs. John D. Lederle for supper last Thursday evening. All were glad to have had the chance to become better acquainted with these two very charming persons. The evening was a wonderful success.

The sisters say Thanks so much to the brothers of Lambda Chi for the exchange supper with them last week.

LAMBDA DELTA PHI

Lambda Phi would like to congratulate Bernice Conlon on her nomination for Winter Carnival Queen.

The sisters thank Mr. and Mrs. Burke for being such entertaining guests last week. Mr. Burke, of the Geology Department, is from England. The girls much enjoyed hearing his comparisons and comments about the U.S.

The alumni decided at a recent meeting to set up local Lambda Phi chapters.

SIGMA KAPPA

The sisters are proud of Jeanne Mullaney and Joan Werner both of whom are finalists for Mili Ball Queen.

The sophomores of the house had a great time entertaining the pledges from all the other UMass sororities Wednesday evening. A buffet supper was served and all the girls sang the songs of their respective houses.

The Sigmas are pleased to announce that one of their pledges, Carol Johnson, will be out of the hospital at the end of this week. She plans to be back on campus with us next semester.

The contractors have been generous enough to permit the sisters to take the freshman girls on a tour of the unfinished House during Round Robins.

Pinnings

Nancy Pizzano, Chi Omega to Ed Rodriquez, Theta Chi.

Fellowships Offered By ALD National

The National Council of Alpha Lambda Delta, the freshman women's honor society is offering two $1500 fellowships for graduate study.

These fellowships are available to members who graduated in 1959, 1960, or 1961 who have maintained the scholastic average throughout their college career.

This average, a 3.5 cumulative after six semesters, has been maintained by seven seniors; Evelyn Aliferis, Merrilee Atkins, Patricia Conway, Martha Crane, Ruby Harrison, Jean Rodgers, and Bonny Waye.

Further information about the fellowships may be obtained from Dean Helen Curtis.

The freshman Chapter of Alpha Lambda Delta on this campus began the new school year with a new advisor, Miss Eva Schiffer of the German Department. Four more girls from the class of 1964 were also initiated this fall.

Female Huck Finn Wants To Race Opposite Males

Julia Chase, 19, attractive Smith College sophomore, is causing almost as much dither these days as Amelia Bloomer did when she introduced her unconventional ladies' garment in 1849.

Julia, from Groton, Ct., isn't trying to sell any radical style of ladies' clothing, but is waging a solo campaign in behalf of women in sports.

She wants women marathoners put in the same category as men, and at the moment she has male officials of the Amateur Athletic Union reaching for the bromides.

Last week they turned down her petition to participate in the 6½-mile marathon conducted by the Chicopee American Legion Post on Veterans' Day.

She ran unofficially anyway, finished less than a minute behind the male winner and ahead of eight of the 41 contestants.

A crowd of 500 cheered wildly as she sprinted to a finish in front of Chicopee City Hall.

Puzzled Legion officials, who sponsored the race, threw up their hands and gave her a cup anyway.

Undaunted by the rebuff by male AAU officials, Miss Chase yesterday filed another petition to run in the Manchester, Conn., road race on Thanksgiving Day.

Officials there rejected her application last year, but Julia says she will run this year "with or without permission."

Women, she insists, are as able as men to run in distance races.

"I am now trying to change the attitude of AAU officials on that," she said.

Miss Chase was bitten by the running bug when, as a ninth grade student, she watched Johnny Kelley of Boston marathon fame in training at Groton where he teaches school.

Kelley took her under his supervision, and from that time on long distance running was in her blood. She is coached by Kelnish-American Track Club of Providence.

Though only a college sophomore, she is already a veteran in her field. She has held the New England women's record for the 440 and 880.

Smart Bridge Notes

The bridge game Thursday, November 9, 1961, was back up to eight full tables and it was quite a game with four slam hands to be found or missed. The "Guest Players" had a night of it taking top both ways, but relating student players only as is our policy, the results were:—

North & South

1 Singh & Swamy	86½
2 Pemple & Crawford	86
3 Weber & Higginbotham	85
4 Emond & Fitzgerald	80

East & West

1 Dubis & Brooks	97
2 Simon & Ratay	91½
3 Martin & Rothschild	79
4 Goldsmith & Davis	75

Let's pick an opening lead problem. Only four bid the slam and only two made it. Only three altogether made the slam. Can you see why? Both sides are vulnerable and South is the dealer.

S 6, 5
H J, 2
D Q, 10, 8, 6
C 10, 9, 6, 5, 3
A, K, Q, J, 8 2 9
9, 4 A, K, 10, 7, 6, 5
A, K, 2 J, 7, 5, 4
A, J 8, 7
10, 7, 4, 3
Q, 8, 3
9, 3
K, Q, 4, 2

Suggested bidding

N	E	S	W
—	—	P	2S(a)
P	3H	P	4C(b)
Dbl(c)	4H(d)	P	4S(e)
P	5C	P	(?)

In my opinion the slam should be bid and against a club opening it should not be made and my suggested bidding practically guarantees the club opening. West count is a forcing two bid under any system and East's holding is strength showing heart response.

Now (b) I'd use the 4C asking for aces and (c) North should double, it won't stay there. This is an opportunity many players overlook. When the opposition goes into the asking bids they just sit back and listen but why not give partner some free information?

(d) The 4H is not a sign off but simply shows one ace and now the 4S (e) is not a sign off but the next higher suit bid, even though it is the agreed suit, is asking for kings. The bids show only one king missing and a sure slam unless there is a bad distribution, which there is.

I'd open the 10C telling partner it is length and not strength. The 4th best diamond gives them a free finesse which is all they need.

With the club opening you have got to lose a diamond or a heart and then the club, down one. But with any other opening lead you can make it if you spot the "safety play," win a diamond or spade, pick up the trumps and lead a heart (or if it is opened) and be generous and give them a heart trick even though it looks as though you don't have to.

Now you will win their next lead and can play hearts and discard both your losers. Remember sluffing is the best way to get rid of losers and finessing to poorest.

S Z O Holds 2nd Israeli Dance Mon.

The UMass chapter of the Student Zionist Organization will hold the second Israeli dance workshop in their "Lift Your Feet" series. The meeting will take place on Monday, Nov. 20, in the Worcester Room of the S.U. Everyone is welcome to attend.

The first workshop of this series was held on Oct. 9. Instructing the group was Micki Wenig, a senior who has recently returned from Israel, where she spent a year studying, touring, and living with the people of that state.

Other programs sponsored by the Student Zionist Organization include a series of guest speakers and discussions, as well as the showing of educational films on Israel and its people. The presenting of the film "Leonard Bernstein in Israel" was a worthwhile and enjoyable project.

In the future, S.Z.O. is planning to feature a special guest speaker to explain the problem of immigration in Israel, as well as several features such as an Education in Israel series, films such as "Israel—The Next Ten Years", and "Cafe Tel Aviv", a night of gaiety in celebration of Israel's Independence Day.

Baker 'A' Stops Butterfield, Theta Chi to Win League Championship

The men from Baker A, after having captured the dormitory grid crown by defeating the Butterfield squad 24-14 Wednesday night, went on to take control of the intramural championship by defeating Theta Chi 18-13 under the lights at Alumni Field, Thursday night.

The Baker team outplayed the Butterfield crew both offensively and defensively in the contest which decided the dorm championship. Fine pass patterns and a good pass defense gave them the edge in a well played game.

The game see-sawed well into the second half as Butterfield notched the first tally in two plays after having stopped the Baker offensive. Baker came back and led at the half, bu a quick BU. 8 T.D. in the first series of second stanza play put them ahead. The Baker offense broke loose then, both on the ground and in the air, and Butterfield couldn't keep pace.

The dorm champs took an early advantage in the Theta Chi game as quarterback Bob Sullivan hit John Murphy with a 20 yard pass in the endzone. The extra point also came on a Sullivan to Murphy pass. Frank Veneri intercepted a Gordie Lewis pass and ran 15 yards for the second Baker tally to end the half.

A 40 yard sprint by Baker's Sullivan provided the final score for the victors, but this was sandwiched between two tallies by a fighting Theta Chi squad. Gordie Lewis ran 15 yards for the first one, and hit his end with a short pass for the second.

As the final whistle blew, it was Baker A in the lead, and the dormitories had asserted their claim to intramural supremacy.

THE 1961 UMASS SOCCER TEAM

Zunic's Hoopsters Face Rough Year

by AL BERMAN '62

Two surprise events occurring earlier this week are giving added impetus to the start of the approachng basketbiall season.

As the team entered its third week of practice Monday it learned that (1) 18 of its 23 games will be carried by at least one, maybe even three commercial stations, stretching from here to the Eastern part of the state; and (2) it has been elevated, along with the rest of the YanCon, to major NCAA status.

The two events will do much to raise the prestige of UMass throughout the state, and can be considered another step in the growing awareness that the citizens of Massachusetts are now acquiring for their state University. But these aren't the only "firsts" that the Redmen will experience this season.

Debut in Madison Square Garden

Another first for the hoopsters will occur in February when they make their debut in New York's Madison Square Garden. They will play St. Peter's of New Jersey as part of a doubleheader which will feature St. Bonaventure in the other game.

In addition, the Redmen will play two of the East's top hoop squads as they tangle with both Holy Cross and Providence College this season. Other major opponents will include: Syracuse, Rutgers, Boston University, Toledo and the YanCon foes.

12 Home Games

All told, UMass will play 12 of its 23 games at home, starting with the season's opener on December 6 against B.U. Naturally Coach Matt Zunic is aiming for the Yankee Conference Crown, something a UMass basketball team has never achieved.

However defending champion Rhode Island is still the team to beat, while Connecticut is much stronger than last year. Vermont has improved considerably, and New Hampshire and Maine will provide lots of trouble for anybody.

Eight Sophomores

The Redmen may be hard-pressed to top last year's 16-10 mark, since eight of the 14 team members are sophomores. Captain Kirk Leslie tops the returning veterans. Other forwards are all sophs; Roger Twitchell, Elliot Gventer, Mike Johnson, and Don Laakso.

The pivot will be manned by two veterans, Charlie Fohlin and Don Black, and sophomore Franz Von Bradsky.

The backcourt is unsettled, especially with the loss of speedy Mike Mole due to scholastic ineligibility. Sophs Jim Painten and Dick Conlin, and juniors Charlie LaPier, Peter Larkin, Jeff Wheeler and Dick Ricciardi are fighting it out for the starting berths.

But the actual starting lineup will probably not be decided until just before the squad steps out against B.U. on the sixth.

Soccer Team Shows Great Improvement

by STEVE HEWEY '63

Redmen soccer, its 1961 version, has given its fans hope that in the next couple of years it will emerge as one of the top soccer teams in New England. Last year's soccer squad failed to register a single win. Its record was an anemic 0-10-0. But this year's crew showed considerable improvement, ending its schedule with a 3 win, 6 loss and 1 tie slate. This record in itself has little to warrent merit. But how many teams bounce back from the previous season's winless slate to register a winning year?

What this season's record does show (along with the fact that many players with experience in games this Fall will be returning next year) is a lot of ability, spirit and determination, but the year has been lacking in that extra bit of polish and seasoning that wins the close ones. Next fall this extra that has been lacking should be attained. Next fall could see a winning soccer season.

UMass scoring:

High scorer for the Redmen this Fall was Dick Leete with seven goals followed by Astaldi with two and Chenery, Aksionczyk, Amundsen, Samma, Graves, Fitzpatrick, and Berestka with one each.

UM Win Over Wildcats A Must For Yankee Conference Kingship

Injury-riddled University of Massachusetts starts the "Battle of the Beanpot" with a Yankee Conference clash against the University of New Hampshire Saturday afternoon at 1:30 at Durham, N.H.

The Redmen, 4-3 overall and 2-0 in the conference, have a lengthly casualty list that has given Coach Vic Fusia cause for concern. Center Matt Collins and halfback Loren Flagg were injured in the Holy Cross game, and are out for the season. Guard Dick Eger has an ankle sprain and is a doubteful participant this week, and sophomore Roger DeMinico aggravated his ankle injury and is still hobbling.

On the plus side, end Paul Majeski, out of action for two weeks, has returned to practice and may see some service. Guard John Kozaka, hurt at Northeastern, saw limited action at Holy Cross and should be ready to go this week.

New Hampshire, a vastly improved team since the season's start, sports a 3-4 record and a Conference mark of 1-2. However, the Wildcats have lost some close games, 7-6 to Maine, 30-23 to Connecticut and 6-0 to AIC. They have defeated Rhode Island, King's Point, and Springfield.

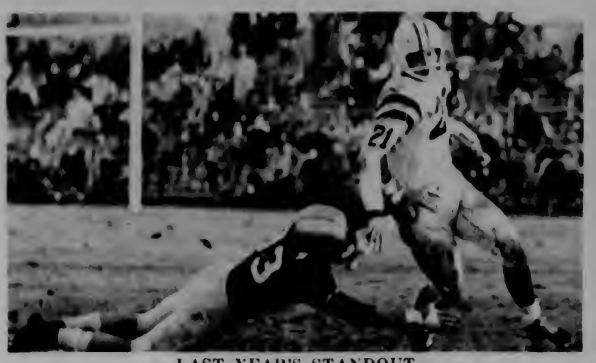
UNH boasts a top quarterback in Bo Dickson and a classy broken field runner, Dick Mezquita, the Conference's top ground gainer. Dickson is battling it out with Massachusetts' John McCormick for top quarterback honors.

Cats Are Spoilers

The Wildcats, who haven't beaten the UMass squad since 1956, have been YanCon spoilers in the past. Last year they aided the Redmen to a half share in the beanpot by upsetting the UConn huskies.

UMass, which dumped the UNH squad last year 35-15, can't take it easy tomorrow as the Cats are capable of pulling the upset. It might be remembered that in pre-season sports, Coach Vic Fusia picked New Hampshire as the Conference dark horse.

If the Redmen hope to win the conference crown outright, they will have to defeat UNH tomorrow and then top undefeated Maine on Wednesday in Orono. A split would give them a half-share of the Beanpot. Two away games in five days may be a rough road for the Redmen, especially if the casualty list increases.



LAST YEAR'S STANDOUT

KENNY KEZAR, who played his finest game in a UMass uniform last year against UNH, scoring three touchdowns and averaging over 5 yards per carry in a game which gave the Redmen a tie for the Beanpot, will be in action against the Cats tomorrow.

QUARTERBACK CLUB

The Quarterback Club will be held on Monday next week from 12:00-1:00 p.m. The Maine and UNH games will be discussed.

UConn Blanks Frosh Squad

Coach Don Johnson's freshman football team was shut out for the first time this season when it bowed to the University of Connecticut frosh 35-0 in a game played last Friday at Storrs.

The UConn pups exploded for 16 points in the first quarter against a shaky UMass defense. The score read 22-0 at the half.

UConn lineman Joe Hassett figured in two pup tallies by blocking two Joe Morris punts. The first one set up an early score. The second time Hassett recovered the ball in the UMass end zone for a fourth quarter touchdown.

In the third quarter the Brave line held the UConn offense. However, the victors broke loose for 13 more points in the final canto.

The Braves are now 2-2 on the season and have one remaining game. They meet the New Hampshire frosh at Durham in a preliminary (10:000) to the varsity ame next Saturday.

Ouija Board Grid Choices

The Collegian Sports Department is honored to employ the services of two of the University's foremost football scholars. Dr. Richard Zagranski and Asst. Al Brough, the members of the Ouija Board, have ammassed a great amount of Viceroy contest money as ample proof of their scholarly excellence, and their predictions may henceforth be seen periodically in the Collegian.

We, of the Ouija Board, with the sponsorship of H. E. Diddit, inventor of the electric football, will begin an active year of college sports forecasting. The Ouija Board's policy will be completely biased, prejudiced, and the decision of the judges will be final.

First prediction: look for the UMass Redmen to defeat New Hampshire this Saturday by at least 12 points. UConn's Huskies will harrass the Kingston eleven by a one touchdown tally. Stalingrad U. will upset Moscow S.M. (Stalin Movers) by at least one T.D. Other scores:

COMPUTERS CAN NOW TRADE DATA COAST TO COAST OVER TELEPHONE LINES

IBM has developed systems of computer-to-computer communication, which foretell the greatest advances in data processing since the introduction of the stored-program computer. These Tele-Processing* systems greatly extend the useful range of data processing—putting their power at the disposal of businessmen and scientists located miles away.

Now it is possible to transmit data between two computer installations at speeds up to 62,500 characters per second via broad-band communications channels. Any number of computing systems can be linked in this way in order to exchange information or feed it to a data processing center. As a result, although they may be separated by a continent, computers can bring their capacities to bear on a single massive problem or operation.

There can be an exciting future for the graduate at IBM. The choice of jobs is wide. Advancement potential is excellent. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. LESSON 4 - Why men watch girls

Men watch girls for various reasons. Personally, we need no better reason than the reason men climb mountains. They are there. We have heard old men say they watch girls because it makes them feel younger and young men because it makes them feel older (see above). While investigating the reasons why men watch girls we picked up a clue from, of all things, a bird watcher. He told us that he formerly had been a flower watcher. Then one day a Speckle-Breasted Jackdaw happened to land in his garden as he was watching a calla lily and he noticed that the bird moved. He switched to birds on the spot. Girl watchers have discovered that girls enjoy this same advantage (movement) over calla lilies. (Speaking of advantages, how about Pall Mall's natural mildness!)

A few students are already waiting at the entrance of the new infirmary.

Modern UM Infirmary Features Innovations

The new million-dollar infirmary is open and ready for business. Eighty-eight regular beds, distributed into 16 five-bed rooms and 4 two-bed rooms, now wait for occupancy in the just-finished, modern hospital-type building next to Brooks dormitory.

The beds, completely adjustable, are by no means the most striking equipment in the infirmary. Important features include an emergency operating room, a new X-ray machine and laboratory, a physiotherapy room, with warm bath and run lamp, and a library.

Five outpatient offices stand in direct contrast to the small "common room" so familiar to old infirmary frequenters.

The changes in staff and personnel are few. According to Dr. Gage, infirmary head, two formerly part-time nurses have been scheduled for full-time duty, one new part-time nurse was added, and nurses' aides have been introduced as an innovation. However, Dr. Gage said there is not, nor will there be any, student help. He feels that students will be much more at ease without fellow students "waiting" on them.

The University psychiatrist Dr. Janowitz also has a new office in the infirmary.

Dr. Gage stated that after the Christmas vacation there will be regular visiting hours at the infirmary.

Although all the equipment and furniture has not yet arrived, the building is completed and the old infirmary has moved in.

Dr. Gage's sole comment on the new infirmary as a whole was, "It's a lot easier to work in."

'Meet the Author' Series Continues Until Friday

The English Department of UMass is holding its fourth annual "Meet the Author" series in the Colonial Lounge, Nov. 27 through Dec. 1, at 4 p.m. each day.

The sessions are being held in conjunction with the Book Fair, a yearly event held at this time of the year under sponsorship of the University Store.

Reid Spoke

On Monday, Nov. 27, Prof. Ben Reid, Chairman, Department of English, Mount Holyoke College, spoke on "W. B. Yeats and Poetic Tragedy." Professor Reid's book W. B. Yeats: The Lyric of Tragedy, a study of the Irish poet and dramatist, was published this month by the University of Oklahoma Press. Reid is also the author of a book on Gertrude Stein, Art by Subtraction, and of various criticisms, poetry, drama, and short stories.

On Tuesday, Nov. 28, Prof. Dennis Johnston, Chairman, Department of Theatre and Speech, Smith College, read from his plays and gave comments on them. The collected plays of this noted Irish dramatist have recently appeared in The Old Lady Says No and Other Plays, published by Atlantic, Little Brown, and Co. Prof. Johnston is author of the war diary Nine Rivers to Jordan, of many individual play volumes, and of a study of Jonathan Swift.

Robert Francis, poet, winner of the Prix de Rome and the Shelley Memorial Award, author of several books of poems including The Orb Weaver, recently issued by the Wesleyan University Press, will read from this volume Wednesday, Nov. 29.

Adelphia Adopts Requirement Of 'Top Third' for New Members

Adelphia, the senior men's honor society at UMass, has added a new dimension to its standards for membership by instituting its highest minimum cumulative average requirement for members.

Must Be In Top 33%

The move, voted unanimously by the present Adelphians Monday night, states that in order to be considered for tapping in his junior year, a student must have a cumulative average that would place him in the top third of his class.

Traditionally, Adelphia has recognized students of outstanding leadership ability as shown by their activities on campus. The addition of a minimum average requirement will make scholarship as important as leadership and will, according to its president Fran Lovejoy, "make Adelphia an honor society in every sense of the word."

News of the move was received warmly by the administration. Upon hearing of the change, Dean of Students William Field stated: "Adelphia has always represented the best leadership among senior men. The top third requirement signifies that it is growing as the University grows. The action will maintain Adelphia's position as an outstanding leadership group."

According to custom, new Adelphians are tapped at Student Leaders' Night late in the spring. At that time a limited number of juniors and seniors (20 in all) are selected. The juniors picked are the active Adelphians and represent the organization on campus during their senior year. The seniors are chosen in recognition of 4 years of leadership, but do not actually serve as active members.

The new top third requirement will apply at present only to junior Adelphians. The scholastic requirements for senior Adelphia are being changed more gradually, but in time should reach the top third level.

Under the recent change, a minimum average of 2.0 is required for senior Adelphia. Beginning in 1963, this minimum requirement will be raised by 0.1 points every year until it reaches the top third bracket.

Definitions Revised

The entire change was made in order to fit in with the revised University definitions of honor societies. There are two types of honor societies, academic and general. Academic honor societies select members entirely on the basis of scholarship, and choose only from the top sixth of the classes.

General honor societies choose their members for scholarship, demonstrated leadership and service to the University. Societies fitting in to this category must choose their members from the top 35% of the classes. In addition, these members must have attained prominent leadership positions on campus in extra-curricular activities.

Mortar Board (the senior women's honor society) and Adelphia are currently the only societies that would fall under the new "general" category.

Zeta Nu Holds Banquet Honoring Its Founding

On Sunday night, Nov. 26, Zeta Nu, the "Cinderella" fraternity of the campus, was formally ushered into extistence at its founding banquet. Nothing more than an idea three months ago, Zeta Nu is now a recognized fraternity. In this short span of time, through the efforts of the Interfraternity Council and the charter members themselves, forty men have been brought together into a fraternal brotherhood complete with constitution and officers.

Dedicated "to augment the existing fellowship and friendship among members . . . regardless of race, creed, or color," Zeta Nu emerges with the approval of the University administration.

IFC Saw Need For Expansion

The IFC concluded early this year that fraternities at UMass must expand along with student enrollmentt. Raher than wait for a group of interested students to form their own fraternity, the IFC took recruiting and formation matters into its own hands.

IFC members voted to have each established fraternity contribute two top recruiters to a pool. These 28 men formed the recruiting nucleus for the new fraternity. According to Robert S. Hopkins, Dean of Men, this showed "an unselfish, farsighted approach to the project." Under sponsorship of IFC, several orientation and recruiting smokers were held.

William Starkweather, IFC faculty adviser, noted that recruiting for Zeta Nu was a change from the normal pattern. "Instead of trying to use his personality to attract a student, the recruiter had to push him toward a group of other interested candidates. In other words, he acted as a catalyst."

IFC Chose First 15 Pledges

Since the other fraternities must wait until second semester to rush, there was no competition from them. The idea of a new fraternity generated considerable enthusiasm. The IFC recruiters soon selected 15 men to become the first pledges of the fraternity. The name Zeta Nu was chosen. The pledges added new candidates to the prospective fraternity, began to run their own smokers, elected temporary leaders, and the IFC started to take a back seat.

Zeta Nu's officers who were installed at the banquet are: president, Tom Antonucci; vice president, Mike Bellanger; treasurer, George Bejian; secretary, Bob Small; and historian, Dave Burnett.

NOTICE

Tuesday, Dec. 5, has been set aside as Counseling Day. No holiday, this day is specifically designed to allow adviser and student adequate time for consultation and pre-registration for the next semester. Thought and care on this date promote an effortless and speedy registration in February.

Many schools and departments are making special arrangements. Students are advised to check departmental bulletin boards for particulars prior to that date. The schedule booklets will be available from Advisers late this week.

OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC PREDICTS BLIZZARD FOR FEB. 12

The hopeful pictured above is Skip Oakes, president of the junior class and overall chairman of this year's Winter Carnival. "With a Continental Flair" is the theme for this gala winter weekend. The weekend will officially start with the Winter Carnival Ball on Friday, Feb. 16, and will end with the Jazz Concert on Sunday afternoon.

From Harlem:

A BOOK REPORT

There will be another federal aid to education bill before the United States Senate soon. There already have been many and there will be many more to come. Millions of dollars are spent each year on bigger and better schools, larger gymnasiums, and better desks for better posture. But where is the better pay for better teachers?

New Rochelle, Scarsdale, Scotch Plains, and Stamford find the new and modern schools to be easily built and easily financed. But your population centers, where the concentration per square mile is far greater than New Rochelle's, watch the years passing without the slightest sign of a new or modern school.

The following is an example of the retarded straits in which New York's Harlem now rests. It is a book report written two weeks ago by an eighth grade girl, age 13, and printed verbatum:

"The title of this book is The Social Life of Theodore Roosevelt Time. The type of this book is a biography fiction of someone life story.

The setting: was in the United States New York. And the time is in 1858 until 1919 when he died.

The characters in this story is President McKinley, the Mayor of New York. The Plot of this story goes like this: Theodore Roosevelt was the United States twenty-eight president. He was a student at Harvard University and graduated. He was born in New York City the years are 1858 and 1919. He was a member of the United States Civil Service Police Commissioner in New York. And he was a hunter scholar, explorer, soldier, ranchman and a statesman and etc.

In 1901 Roosevelt became the President of the United States and by filling out the expired of McKinley he almost became an author of a great book called The Winning of the West and the Naval War of 1812.

Opinion:

I don't like no fiction books because their not intertaining enough. But I do recozimen this for a girl or boy who like fiction. You will not find this book at the 115th Street or at any library because it's in my library. If you which to read this book just let me know."

"The American Cowboy" rides out of the Old West with a hoop and a holler. Straight from the land of cactus and sagebrush. This great figure of history comes alive on WFCR-FM Fridays at 10 p.m. starting December 1. From the University of Texas comes this carefully documented profile of "The American Cowboy." He leaps to life in story, song and historical fact, all held together by narrator Horton Wayne Smith. Smith says of the Cowboy: "He had courage. He was an alert, resourceful man—not a curiosity, but a partner; not an eccentric driver of horned cattle, but a man suited to his times."

"We're merely folks. Just plain, ever'day, bowlegged humans!"

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

"PROF SNARF ALWAYS MANAGES TO SCARE SOMEONE WITH ONE OF THOSE SUDDEN EXAMS OF HIS."

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

UMass students are continually being reprimanded for tramping over the lawns on campus. "The condition of the lawn in front of Goodell Library is an example of the effect of student carelessness." (Collegian, Nov. 15) Is it? Or is it carelessness in planning? It is quite obvious that the walks and lawns on our campus are not designed for the student, but for the tourist. The designers are defeating their own purpose. When walks are laid out for "beauty's" sake, and not to accomodate student traffic in the ten minute trecks between classes, the result is loss of beauty. We want a lovely campus that we can enjoy and be proud of, and sincerely hope that as new plans and buildings come into existance the walks will go where the students go.

High School Chinese Arrives in Boston

Form the New York Herald Tribune:

High school Chinese, a rare course in America, will be offered to a small group of students in the Boston area next year under a grant from the Carnegie Corp.

The corporation announced yesterday that it had given $108,500 to Thayer Academy, South Braintree, Mass., to initiate a program of instruction in the Chinese language and culture for high school students, in co-operation with Phillips Exeter, Phillips Anover, Dana Hall, and public high schools in Brookline, Lexington, and Wellesley, Mass.

According to latest statistics, only twenty-one other high school students in the country are studying Chinese—all in California.

In the Boston program, instructors will travel to individual schools during the academic year to teach the language. Next summer, before schools open, participating students will attend an intensive training session at Thayer Academy.

GRANT FOR MACHINES

The corporation also announced a grant of $70,000 to continue an experimental program in New York City junior high schools in the use of teaching machines to develop reading skills. The Center for Programmed Instruction, in cooperation with the city school system, will test programs in forty-eight junior high schools in the next two years.

To the Editor:

Over thirty students from Amherst, Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges gave up their Thanksgiving dinners last Thursday to join a fast and demonstration at the White House.

The students were protesting a possible resumption of nuclear tests in the atmosphere by the United States. Their demonstration was inspired by the three day fast and picketing at the White House the week before by students from Grinnell College in Iowa.

Students from Howard University in Washington joined them when they heard about the demonstration. No students from the University of Massachusetts were present, although press reports included them in the demonstration. Several students from the University had expressed their support for the aims of the demonstration but were unable to attend.

The idea of fasting was described as "a way of showing that we are willing to make at least a small sacrifice to encourage discussion of this crucial question and to encourage the President to decide the question in the best interests of our country and the world."

Although President Kennedy spent Thanksgiving with his family in Hyannis Port, the students were able to present a letter for the President in which they set forth their views about renewed testing. A similar letter was presented at the Russian embassy a mile away.

The letter for the President stated in part, "Because renewed atmospheric testing would not add to our security; because of the harmful effects of testing on health, on the genetic future, and on our relations with others; and because a resumption of testing would be a turning away from responsibility to our own ideals, we urge that our government refrain from such tests.

"As individuals and as a nation we often mistakenly assume that our ideal and our vision of a better world will always be with us, even if we don't remain true to them in our choices from day to day. The opportunity is open to you on this occasion, Mr. President, to make a crucial choice—one that will be in accord with both the best interests of the nation and the highest ideals that we profess."

Chemistry Dept. Receives $33,600 For Research

A major grant for basic research in chemistry over a three year period has been received by the Department of Chemistry at UMass. The grant of $33,600 has been awarded to Dr. John George by the National Science Foundation to work on "Chemical Studies of the Decafluorides of Sulfur and Tellurium."

Dr. George will be studying reactions and structure of a group of sulfur, selenium, and tellurium compounds. The purpose of this research is to gain a better understanding of the physical properties and chemical reactivity of these compounds.

A 1948 graduate of Princeton, Dr. George received his Ph.D. from M.I.T. in 1958. He has worked for Johns-Mansville Corporation and the Arthur D. Little Co. in Cambridge. The assistant professor of chemistry came to UMass this year from the University of Colorado. His research interests are mainly in the field of halogen and sulfur compounds.

Tapoff Dance To Be Given In Ballroom

This year's basketball season will be initiated by a "Tapoff Dance", given by Van Meter freshmen, Friday, Dec. 1, 8 p.m. in the S.U. Ballroom.

Penny Pitou, U.S. Olympic Skier, Speaks Here Tonight

Tonight at 8:00 P.M. in the Student Union Ballroom the Ski Club will present Penny Pitou, Olympic Skier, and her husband, Egon Zimmerman of the Austrian Olympic Ski Team, as guest speakers.

An official film of the 1960 Olympics entitled "A Flame In The Snow" will be shown. Also included will be a film of the Belnap Ski Area in New Hampshire.

Only a little over a year ago, the Gilford, New Hampshire girl, now a member of the Skiing Hall of Fame, won her place in the top rank of women amateur skiers.

Penny was America's top star in the 1960 Winter Olympics at Squaw Valley, California, coming only one tenth of a second from winning a gold medal for the United States.

Married last February to Egon Zimmerman, a member of the 1960 Austrian Olympic Team, Penny operates along with her husband the New Hampshire Penny Pitou Ski School at Belnap.

Members of the club are entitled to weekend ski trips, discounts on clothing and equipment from many ski shops in the area, and free ski instructions by our own uncertified instructors. Everyone with an interest for skiing is cordially invited to attend!

The first meeting of the UMass Ski Team will be held Thursday, November 30th, in the Plymouth Room of the Student Union at 7:00 P.M. The schedule for the 61-62 ski season was decided upon on November 12th at M.I.T. by representatives from each school in the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference. This conference was founded because of the definite need of more intercollegiate ski competition and for the purpose of creating a new competitive spirit on the college level. Included in the conference are Boston University, Boston College, Princeton, Tufts, A.I.C., Amherst, Northeastern University, New England College, Lowell Teachers' College, Brown, Saint Anselm's, Worcester Polytechnical Institute, and the University of Mass. The last three members are newcomers to the conference as of this year.

Members of the UMass Ski Team will be able to practice at Hogback Mountain in Brattleboro, Vermont afternoons and weekends. There will also be a winter training camp at Killington from December 19th through the 22nd and again from December 26th through the 29th. At this time the team members will train for the three events in which they will participate—slalom, giant slalom, and downhill.

Also active this year is the W.A.A. Ski Team which has been incorporated into the New England Intercollegiate Ski Team as the Women's Intercollegiate Ski Conference. The schools participating are Boston University, Regis, Northeastern University, Pembroke, Mt. Holyoke, Jackson, and the University of Mass. Elected to the executive committee as treasurer is Pat Anketell from the University of Mass. The girls have already started training under the direction of Miss Ven Diene of the Physical Education Department of the University of Mass. The University will sponsor a Downhill Race at Dartmouth Ski Way on March 4th. Members of the Ski Club will help officiate this race.

The Frozen Rope

by DICK MACKLEM '62

With the basketball season beginning a week from now, the polls for the top ten teams and for pre-season all-Americans are starting to come in. This should be the strongest year for collegiate basketball in quite a while.

Before continuing, however, the men of Van Meter must be commended for their Tapoff Dance this Friday evening in the Ballroom. The guys are going to use the proceeds as the beginning of a scholarship fund to benefit a deserving freshman for next semester. The promise of an appearance by coach Zunic and the Redmen and the fine band of Chuck Reid should highlight the evening. Congratulations on a splendid idea, guys. Keep it up!

The most outstanding feature of the New England season will be the play of the Providence College Friars, who are ranked among the top five teams in the nation. The Friars tangle with the Redmen January 8, in the Cage in our top attraction of the season. Whereas in past years the Friars' strength was in the backcourt with Len Wilkins and Johnny Egan, this season the front court will carry the load. Big Jim Hadnot (6'10" and cousin of Bill Russell), soph John Thompson (6'6"), and veteran George Zalucki (6'6") will not be second to any forward wall in the country. Teaming with them will be Vinnie Ernst (5'8"), who will really make them go. Little Vinnie, while playing last year with Hadnot and Egan, was elected the Most Valuable Player in the NIT in New York. This year's club should be able to equal last year's 24-5 record easily.

Individually it is going to be a tremendous battle between Hadnot and Jack "The Shot" Foley to see which one, if either, can become the first draft choice of the Boston Celtics for the next year. The Celtics have the territorial rights to New England ballplayers, but if they do not choose them on the first round of the draft, anyone is eligible to draft them.

Celt's coach Red Auerbach will probably choose one of them because: the last New England big man he let go, Rudy LaRusso of Dartmouth, has become one of the NBA's truly fine players; because the Celts need a big man to rest Russell once in a while; and because the last two New England favorites, Egan and Wilkens, have not even tempted Red in the draft, and the fans want new local blood on the team. Both Foley, the Holy Cross whiz, and Hadnot have signified that they want to play for the Celtics, so it should be interesting.

The Redmen open against Boston University next Wednesday at the Cage. Last year BU had a 9-14 record, and from that club only one consistent scorer returns. Hard hit by graduation up front, the Terriers have only 6'4" Larry Isenberg, who averaged 17 points a game last year, back for this season. Their hope for improvement stems from the addition of new beef and height up front, and the steady improvement of junior Mike Colton at guard, who was averaging 10 points a game at the end of last year. The Terriers, always a fighting ballclub, should prove an interesting opening test for the Zunicmen.

Around the country, Ohio State and Cincinnati should fight it out for top honors, with Wake Forest, Providence, and Southern California not far behind. Individually, the strongest contingent of possible all-Americans in many years is available. The NBA will drool when draft time comes around with Jerry Lucas of Ohio State, Terry Dischinger of Purdue, Chet Walker of Bradley, Len Chappel of Wake Forest, Billy McGill of Utah, Dave DeBusschere of Detroit, big John Rudometkin of Southern Cal., along with locals, Foley and Hadnot, presenting basketball at what probably will be the highest collegiate level ever.

This has been a thumbnail sketch of what to look for in college ball this winter, with feature articles on the Redmen to come soon.

However, the big news is saved until last. Goodbye, Don Buddin, goodbye—wherever you go. The Red Sox are not dead! They continue to struggle. There is a Santa Claus. Give thanks!

The Dormitory Bowling League will begin on Wednesday evening December 13th. The deadline for passing in rosters is Saturday December 9th. The Games Area manager will accept all applications.

Freshman Team Ends With Winning Season

by AL COHEN '63

This year's freshman football team, under the direction of Coach Don Johnson, achieved a winning season by downing the New Hampshire frosh on Nov. 18 for a 3-2 mark.

The triumph over New Hampshire was a 34-6 team victory. Quarterback Jerry Whelchel started things off when he grabbed a Bearcat fumble in the air and sped 90 yards for a touchdown in the first quarter.

In the second quarter, a Welchel aerial to Terry Swanson was good for 25 yards and an other score. The Bearcats rebounded on the first play of the second half by scoring on a 55 yard pass play.

The Johnsons made it 22-6 when Mike Ross went 5 yards off tackle to tally and then caught a pass for the 2 point conversion. The last quarter saw Phil DeRoss return a Bearcat punt 80 yards to the UNH 15. Fullback Ray Vitali dove over for 30-6. Terry Swanson completed the scoring by snaring a 50 yard pass to go all the way.

After initial victories over Springfield and Boston University, the Little Redmen found themselves outclassed by Brewster Academy and Connecticut. These games and the New Hampshire tussle showed some fine line play by the Johnsons, even in defeat. Reserve strength at each position proved a Redmen strong point. The quarterbacking of Whelchel and heavy duty work by DeRoss, Van der Sea, and Vitale spearheaded the offense.

Coach Johnson was ably assisted by four members of last year's varsity, namely, John Burgess, Jerry Cullen, Armand Caraviello, and Roger Benevenuti. Freshman Dan O'Mara did a creditable job of managing the squad.

Norton Wins Net Tourney

Paul Norton captured the intramural tennis tournament recently defeating frosh Mike Rose in an exciting three set final.

Rose captured a set and appeared to be in a commanding position but the steady play of the more experienced Norton paid dividends as he swept the last sets in convincing fashion.

Mr. Norton thus becomes the second Faculty member to win this tourney. Rev. Donald Bossart, the defending champ, was unable to participate this year.

Over seventy five contestants entered the tournament and Mr. Norton showed fine sportsmanship and aptitude in overcoming his opponents.

Foreign Aid To Be Topic Of Lecture

On Thursday evening, November 30, Professor Everett Hawkins of the Department of Economics at Mount Holyoke College will speak on "Some Aspects of the Kennedy Administration Policy on Foreign Economic Aid."

Prof. Hawkins is an authority on Far Eastern Affairs, having spent time in Indonesia, Java, and Sumatra doing research and advisory work for the government.

This is the second in a series of lectures on "Economic Policy on the New Frontier" sponsored by the University Economics Association. The meeting will be held in the Worcester Room of the SU at 8 o'clock and is open to the general public.

The love-struck collegian was trying to reason with his father. "But, Dad," he persisted, "don't you believe two can live as cheaply as one?"

"Certainly," growled Dad. "Right now your mother and I are living as cheaply as you.'

Clements To Discuss Congressional Setup

Former U.S. Senator Earle C. Clements will give the second in a series of four lectures on American politics and Congressional operations Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Middlesex Room of the S.U. He will speak on "The Organization of Congress: A Senator's Analysis."

Senator Clements, Governor of Kentucky from 1947 to 1950 and Assistant Majority Leader in the Senate during the 83rd Congress, is now Distinguished Professor of Public Affairs at UMass.

The public affairs professorship which the Kentuckian now holds was established under a Ford Foundation grant made to the University's government department. The program is designed to bring to campus persons who have held top-level positions in federal, state or local governing bodies. Appointees serve on a one-semester basis, teaching undergraduate and graduate courses in government.

Land Reform Head To Discuss Issues Important In India

Friday, Dec. 1, at 4 p.m., the International Relations Club will present Donald G. Groom, speaking on "The Real Issues in India Today". The lecture will be given in the Barnstable Room of the S.U. Groom has lived in India for the last twenty years, in small Indian villages. He is a leader of a land reform, called Bhoodan, which persuades rich landowners to give land gratis to tenants and other needy people.

Mili Ball Candidates Tour Armored Units

Mili Ball candidates pose with Col. W. F. Woodward and advanced ROTC officers on visit to Army base. The girls will compete for Queen title on Saturday December 9, at the annual Military Ball.

Two Plays To Be Presented By New 'Accents of Alviani'

On Dec. 10 at 6:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium "Accents of Alviani," a new light opera company of the University, will present as its initial offering a two-part program of Christmas favorites: the all time favorite Hansel and Gretel, and the near-classic Amahl and the Night Visitors. General admission at the door is $.45 for children under 12, $.50 with a UMass. I.D., and $.75 for all others.

"Accents of Alviani" is an outgrowth of the Operetta Guild, and many members of the "Oklahoma!" cast will be appearing in this program. Business and Personnel Manager for both productions is Lucille Ashley '62. Prof. Doric Alviani is the director. The recently formed Pan-Hellenic Chorus will provide background music for Hansel and Gretel. Hansel will be played by Natalie Chase. Janet Fortin will appear as Gretel. Other principals include: Jean Roanowicz as Mother; Ernie Bilodeau, Father; Carrie Sherriff, the witch; Paul McAvoy, Sandman; and Lue Ashley, Dewman. Children from surrounding communities will appear as Angels.

Miss Beverly Anderson, graduate of the University of Nebraska and soloist at Trinity Church in Springfield, will portray Amahl. Alan Giles, Minister of Music at Wesley Methodist Church, will appear as King Melchior. Steve Allen, graduate student this year and well-known bass of the University Statesmen, will take the part of King Balthazar. Other Amahl principals include Jean Alden, as Mother, Frank Mancuso as King Kasper, and Dave McQuestion as the Page. Norma Fairbanks will dance and University Students will make up a chorus.

Rehearsals and back stage developments are progressing on schedule and all indications are that this evening of musical theatre, presented in the Alviani tradition, will be enjoyable to young and old alike. Staging is under the direction of Dan Hart; costumes are by Mrs. Alviani; props, Marjorie Cooper; make-up, Chairlene Prentiss; and lighting, Nurit Strauss. Chris Hosford is the scenic designer, and lighting design is by Ann Baker.

UMass Band Will Perform On Saturday

On Saturday, Dec. 2, at 8 p.m. the UMass Concert Band will present its annual winter concert in Bowker Auditorium.

Under the direction of Conductor Joseph Contino, the 60-piece band will play various selections ranging from Strauss Waltzes to Bernstein's "West Side Story".

Other works on the program are "Overture" by Simon Catel, ballet music from Borodin's "Prince Igor", "Chester Overture" by Wiliam Schuman, and "Bravura March" by Duble. Admission is 75 cents or student I.D.

Honors Colloquia Will Admit Outstanding Freshmen in '62

Freshmen at the University will have a chance to respond to "a special kind of intellectual challenge" when the Honors Colloquia are opened to first-year students next semester.

Restricted to sophomores and juniors since their inception last year, the Colloquia will admit qualified freshmen in a move designed to extend opportunities of the Honors Program to all four undergraduate classes.

According to Dr. Louis Greenbaum, Director of Honors at the University, a call has been issued to all members of the faculty to submit names of "first-year students whose intellectual talents and motivation mark them as superior students."

Gifted freshmen who qualify and are admitted to the Honors Colloquia will have a chance to take part in what President John W. Lederle has called "a creative program offering our best students a special kind of intellectual challenge and the possibility of a special kind of intellectual reward."

HONORS COLLOQUIUM IN SESSION

40 Frosh To Enroll

Some 80 sophomore and junior students are enrolled in the Colloquia this semester, and 40 freshmen will be added in the second semester. Conducted on an interdisciplinary basis, each seminar enrolls about 10 students representing a cross-section of scholarly interests. And instead of one teacher to guide the group, each Colloquium has two instructors from different fields. Honors Colloquia students receive academic credit together with special library and study privileges.

Aim of the innovation is to provide superior students with the academic liberty not always available in the undergraduate curriculum. The Colloquium stresses the interdisciplinary approach to major human problems, cutting across conventional departmental orientations and pointing up the interrelationship and totality of knowledge. This is why one Colloquium instructor in physics and another in sociology might be found conducting a seminar in which engineering majors sit alongside philosophy or history majors, home economics or psychology students alongside others specializing in literature or forestry. Colloquium learning provides a remarkable feeling of shared experiences between students and teachers.

Study and discussion are not centered on specialized topics but on central themes of "general intellectual concern." Titles in the current semester include: The Individual and Society, Study of Eastern Thought, Ways of Knowing, Philosophy of Science, Aspects of 20th Century Social Thought, and others of similar scope.

Helps to Destroy Communications Barrier

The two-hour discussions are informal and based on rigorous individual reading and thinking. Students are encouraged to make significant personal investigations, to formulate their own ideas, and to defend them during the exchange of views in the Colloquia. A specific purpose of the honors seminar is to break down the communications barrier often found in large lecture-type classes and to liberate talented stu-

Area Poets To Give Readings From Own Works Tuesday

On Tuesday, Dec. 5, at 7:30 p.m., Anne Halley (Chametzky) and Robert Francis will read from their own poetry. Students are invited to attend the reading which will be held in the Jones Library.

Anne Halley, who writes under her maiden name, is a part-time instructor of English at the University. She is married to Prof. Jules Chametzky, also of the University's English Department. She has published poems in Massachusetts Review and in several "little" magazines. Last spring she received a Longview Foundation award for A Prose Memoir.

Francis is a nationally known poet who has lived in the Amherst area for more than thirty years. He has published five volumes of poetry the most recent of which is The Orb Weaver published by the Wesleyan University Press in 1960. Francis has received a number of awards including one granted by the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, a "Rome Prize Fellowship," which gave him the opportunity to spend 1957-58 at the American Academy in Rome. Wednesday, Nov. 29, he was the speaker at a "Meet the Author" coffee hour held by the English Department.

David R. Clark, UMass associate professor of English will introduce the speakers. Members of the audience will receive a printed copy of a single poem by each poet, and at the close of the meeting refreshments will be served.

THE SEMESTER UMASS SLEPT?

One month ago this week, we wrote an editorial about an "aura of peace pervading this campus." We also noted that the strife, dissension and frustration which have characterized our existence in previous years now have given rise to trust." All this is true but perhaps to an extreme. This first semester of the academic year 1961-62 is more than half over and there are indications to lead us to believe this year will be THE YEAR UMASS STUDENTS SLEPT.

While the Administration and faculty struggle with the problems of expansion, autonomy, etc., University life goes on quite normally. Students rise in the morning, have their coffee, attend classes, take naps, eat supper, study, chat with their neighbor down the hall, and finally fall asleep. The Collegian is published three times a week, the Senate convenes once a week, football and cross country teams entered and passed, Roister Doisters and Operetta Guild presented themselves, and UMass sleeps. There is no dissent. There is no controversy. There is no disagreement. There is nothing. Six months or two years or five years from now, who will remember this semester as the one in which students lived? People will more likely ask, "What ever happened to first semester that year?"

The University raises room costs, Adelphia changes its admissions policy, WMUA writes a revolutionary new answer to the converter problem, student peace organizations sponsor controversial speakers, but no one awakens long enough to comment, agree, dissent, or even care.

IT IS ALMOST DECEMBER AND ABOUT TIME UMASS WOKE UP.

I'm Glad I'm in ROTC

by MARK CHEREN '64

Chances are that somewhere in the world, at this very moment, a United States B52 jet bomber is poised in the air 1,000 miles from Russia, wih a ballistic missile carrying a nuclear warhead strapped beneath its wing. As this missile, called the Skybolt, is there, ITS ROCKET MOTOR GOING, AIMED AT A SPECIFIC TARGET IN RUSSIA, the pilot, who does not know if this is a practice alert or the real thing, tensely watches the second hand of a clock which is timing the count down.

There are two possible outcomes to this situation. First (and most likely), the second hand will pass the zero position. The pilot will turn off the missile's motor and return to his base. But there is the second possibility. Sometime before the second hand reaches zero the pilot may receive a coded message relayed from Strategic Air Command Headquarters telling him to press the two buttons which will release the missile and "arm" its warhead respectively, this as a response to Soviet attack. The pilot sits there praying it's not the real thing, but ready to "finish" the destruction of the Northern Hemisphere.

The film which depicted this episode for every sophomore Air Force R.O.T.C. Cadet did not, however, discuss the third possibility. It did not consider the known fallibility of men and electronic equipment as demonstrated by the accidental release of a rocket by a fighter, during a practice maneuver, which downed a bomber a few months ago. But of course, this only killed a few men.

What if the pilot cracks under the strain and "gets this damn holocaust over with."? (The film showed the pilot steadily pounding the steering mechanism with his fist as a result of the tension.) What if something short circuits? Our text says there are adequate safeguards (just like on that fighter), but during that practice alert a few Sundays back when all commercial planes were grounded, one of those Skybolt carrying bombers didn't come back. One, out of 153, disappeared. Could not one of those 153 just as easily have started the war which will end civilization as we know it? Where has our "deterrent strength" taken us then?

I'm glad that I'm in R.O.T.C. because it has opened my eyes to the greatly increased possibility of accidental war and to the need for a drive toward disarmament, and the creation of adequate inspection and control devices needed for its implementation, commensurate with this country's resources.

How do the hundred or so people in our government devoted to the task of disarmament compare with the hundreds of thousands, if not millions, devoted to the task of waging and perfecting nuclear war. There are barely one hundred people, in this country of 185 million, with all the facts pertinent to the problem of disarmament, working to solve this problem and ready to implement the result. Many people who have studied the problem of disarmament with a large number of facts at their disposal (but I must again stress, not all the facts) think that disarmament is an impossibility. After studying the problem of hurling a missile 7,000 miles and having it land within 7 miles of a target, with a large number of the facts at my disposal, I would say that this is an impossibility. The fact that this country has been able to do the latter goes a long way in convincing me that a similar application of resources could achieve the same success with the "impossible" problem of disarmament.

What is that damned tank doing in front of the Student Union Building?

I, for one, would like to know the answer. If it is meant to destroy us, then why doesn't it open fire on the students returning from their ten o'clock classes? Certainly, this would be an extremely opportune time for such an advance. The students might be deployed in a single file—this is a single file school, let's face it—and they would be, except for a few green jackets, completely uncamouflaged. Is it meant to threaten or vilify apathetic students? This is the feeling I got as I approached the thing, half expecting the turret to wheel around and blast me in the area of my spleen (my most vital part). But, since there is no real phalanx of students, it would be easy to pick off most of the student body. Is that the intention?

If it is a symbol of America's strength then why does it sit menacing the student body? Or is it a sterile behemoth signifying nothing except the naivetè of the military who think that the way to world peace is village armament? Does America's strength lie in a useless and expensive piece of metal or does it lie in the minds of its thinking population? I was under the impression that this is the Nuclear Age or the Atomic Age or the Age of the Bomb and the presence of this monstrosity in front of the Union is both unnerving and infuriating to me. Is this collection of bolts America's strength? Isn't there someone human up front in the military?

This whole thing is ludicrous in a very grim sort of way. But this type of sick humor is very dangerous and it is only after savoring a little bit of it that one gets a terrifying sensation that somebody is serious about Amherst Guerrilla Warfare.

Is this tank somehow symbolic of the militant attitude on the campus? Does it show how strong we are in the ROTC, how far we've come from the Age of Adventure when Leonardo da Vinci invented the tank? We've certainly come a long, long way—now we have flush toilets and even steel tanks. But this doesn't improve matters for me. This only clouds the issue, for we haven't really made any significant progress if all we've done is clad a wooden tank in armor.

But somehow or another this tank is symptomatic of a definite trend which has always remained with the military. And I could emphasize here that the military is NOT the intelligentsia of a country—it is, if anything, the bicep of a country. In a normal organism the natural order for movement is a stimulus followed by a response—this is simple. But there is a cerebrum and cerebellum in the human organism which coordinates the function of the bicep. In this day and age a dichotomy has produced the Military on the one hand and the Intelligentsia on the other and they seem to be unable to communicate with each other. Lord Russell, Albert Schweitzer, Maxwell Geismar, Gore Vidal, Linus Pauling and many others have spoken out against the military attitude toward war. But their words go unheeded and the tanks and howitzers remained parked in front of the VFW, the American Legion, and of course, the Student Union reminding us daily who is really in charge.

This whole issue becomes clear when we pass the Student Union. The whole attitude of a nation is expressed in the Tank parked truculently in the driveway. This olive-drab machine summons up a world, a history, a consciousness.

Whatever the reason for the tank, whether to fire upon students if they get unruly, or to show the strength of a nation that needs to be reassured of the crimes it is capable of committing, or whether it is merely a symbol expressing the sterile masculinity of a bicep without a brain, I am bothered by it. If there must be a military symbol let it be a human, for only in the human mind and action can we expect world peace. We can never expect peace of any kind or a relaxing of any anxiety or any kind of reassurance by displaying weapons of war . . . for any purpose whatsoever.

DaVinci, inventor of the tank, says himself, words which might be echoed by any one of us if the Bomb is dropped, "While I thought that I was learning how to live, I have been learning how to die."

If there must be a symbol, let it be a man.

Snow Fall(out)

by RAY WILSON '64

Sirens ring. Are you listening?
In the lane, snow is glistening.
No wonder it is, for it is no quiz.
We're in a radioactive wonderland.

Gone away is the blue-jay.
Here to stay is the death-ray.
We'll sing us a dirge, for we're on the verge of death in our atomic wonderland.

In the meadow we will build a shelter to protect us from the fallout snowing down.
There can be no doubt that we will swelter while folks are decomposing in the town.

In our hut, we'll perspire
while others burn in the fire.
We'll walk unafraid,
while dreams that we made collapse in our atomic wonderland.

The Devil Strikes at Night

(German dialog with English subtitles) In 1944 unknown both to the Gestapo and the German criminal police, homocidal Bruno Luedke has murdered close to eighty women. When a Hamburg waitress is found strangled, her Nazi officer boyfriend, Willi Keun, is arrested. However, police investigator Axel Kersten suspects the killings are the work of a maniac. Kersten's assistant plans to use Luedke's case as an example of the need to eliminate "misfits" to build the "master race."

Books For Shelters

by GEORGE DeFALCO '65

As this country begins to prepare survival kits for bomb shelters a question arises, "What type of reading matter should be included in the survival kit?" In an effort to get to the core of this subject the Crusader News Bureau made a survey of a large group of men and women across the United States.

Of the fifty-five books or magazines chosen by the persons queried, seventeen were of religious or devotional nature. On the basis of points assessed to each book, the Bible was by far in the first place position. The following is a partial list with points scored by each according to its place in the selections: The Bible . . . 104, Dictionary . . . 15, Hymn Book . . . 12, Shakespeare's Works . . . 9, Reader's Digest . . . 9, Agony & Ecstasy . . . 5, Advise & Consent . . . 5, Tales of the South Pacific . . . 4, The Big Family (Novel) . . . 4, Hawaii . . . 4, Winter of our Discontent . . . 4, The Day Christ Died . . . 4, Decline & Fall of the Roman Empire . . . 4, Gone with the Wind . . . 3, War & Peace . . . 3, Newsweek . . . 3, Pilgrim's Progress . . . 2, Ben Hur . . . 1.

UMass Rock Study Is Awarded $5,000

What happens when rocks are compressed under terrific heat deep within the earth's crust will be the subject of laboratory studies under a Research Corporation grant to UMass.

George E. McGill, assistant professor of geology, has received $5,000 from the Corporation for purchase of basic equipment needed to develop apparatus for subjecting specimens of natural rock to high pressures and temperatures. The experimental conditions will approximate those existing far under the earth's surface.

McGill's studies are expected to provide important knowledge about rock deformation as related to mountain building. The Massachusetts geologist says that equipment for conducting such experiments is not commercially available and that he and his assistants will have to design and build most of the required apparatus.

A graduate of Carleton College, McGill undertook advanced work at the University of Minnesota and at Princeton University. He received his doctorate from the latter insitution in 1958.

McGill's principal area of study is structural geology. In addition to the research he will do under the present grant, he will continue other studies based on summer field work in Montana. The latter project is being conducted under a grant from the National Science Foundation.

Music Dept. To Introduce New Course

The Music Department will be offering for the first time, this coming spring semester, Music 59: 20th Century Music. The course is designed as an elective for general students not majoring in music. Previous experience in music is not required.

The instructor will be Elliot Swantz, and the course will be held Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, 1-2 p.m.

The course will cover trends in music since 1900, the influence of jazz on serious music, experimental music, and electronic music.

An additional "libarotary" hour will be offered on Wednesday from 2-3 p.m., in which students will analyze and compose short pieces in various contemporary idioms. Required of all students majoring or concentrating in music; optional for all other students. Ability to read music is required for this laboratory period.

Honors Colloquia ...

dents from the traditional and limiting requirements of regular courses. In the Colloquium, students are expected to seek their own explanations, to express themselves at length, to make the most of their independent preparation and speculations on prob-

Reading lists are extensive and challenging, and often chosen by the students themselves. Included among current reading are books by sociologist C. Wright Mills, philosopher Ernst Cassirer, theologian Reinhold Niebuhr, historian D. W. Brogan, and other modern writers.

For a colloquium on Freud and Literature, now in progress, the reading list includes works by Sophocles, Shakespeare, Dostoevsky, D. H. Lawrence, Arthur Miller, and others. In another seminar on Eastern Thought students read Aristotle, Plato, the Koran, literature of the mystics, and the thought of Mohandas Ghandi.

Aimed At Sharpening Perspectives

Through such a program of close reading and identification and analysis of major ideas, the Colloquia are aimed at sharpening student perspectives, expanding intellectual horizons, and increasing the student's ability to express himself effectively. In short, to stretch superior students to their capacity in training which seeks to strengthen competency in inquiry, ability to evaluate conflicting issues and opinions, and awareness of the responsibilities of leadership.

Dr. Greenbaum explains, "What happens is that the Colloquium gives a talented undergraduate a good chance to become personally involved and committed to the world of ideas. In refining his own thinking and convictions he is obliged to sift the levels and graduations of truth and submit his conclusions to the robust give-and-take of astute colleagues and teachers.

"We don't pretend to give answers to important problems or issues raised in the Colloquia. And this is not important. Rather, much if not most of the work, is directed towards enhancing one's ability to ask the right questions, to probe sensitively and honestly, and to gain creative insight into the problems of human condition and conscience."

Honors Program Close To Full Development

Opening of Colloquium doors to freshmen brings the University's overall Honors Program close to full development. Early admission of superior high school students, advanced placement for entering freshmen, waiver of requirements and prerequisites, credit by examination, the Honors Colloquia, and Senior Honors together constitute the University's prime means of providing an integrated program for gifted students in all undergraduate classes and majors.

As Dr. Greenbaum points out, "As our enrollments increase, the number of superior people we get increases proportionately. Our honors programs have been designed as a means of being ready for the increasing number of able students we are getting each year.

"While we recognize that there is—and must be—great diversity at a large state university, the Honors Council feels strongly that programs like the Honors Colloquia are essential in that they provide challenging and meaningful educational opportunities for students of high intellectual ability and purpose. In expanding its honors offerings, the University reaffirms its abiding concern for the training of the future leaders of our state and nation and recognizes that the ferment and example of honors study can do much to raise the tone of scholarship and learning among the whole academic community. In extending the Colloquia program to the freshman class, we believe that the University of Massachusetts for the first time in its history has a comprehensive means of meeting the needs of many of its superior students."

Sororities Entertain Prominent Guests

Pi Beta Phi

This week, the Pi Phi's have had the pleasure of a visit from their Province President, Mrs. Phillip Adams. She arrived Sunday evening, there was a brief coffee hour held after the housemeeting, during which the girls had a chance to become better acquainted with Mrs. Adams. On Tuesday afternoon, there was a tea given in her honor which housemothers and sorority presidents attended.

Pi Phi has quite a few practice teachers this semester—seven in all. Marcia Frost, Marcia Howard, Judith Kelley, Patricia Kraft, Debbie Read, Bonnie Scally and Ginny Venti all seem to be enjoying this new experience a great deal.

The Pi Phi's would like to thank AGR for the enjoyable exchange supper they had before Thanksgiving vacation.

Alpha Chi Omega

The sisters of Alpha Chi thank the brothers of QTV for a great exchange last night. Everyone had a really great time!

The Alpha Chi's extend special congratulations this week to two of the houseboys. George Bejian was recently elected treasurer of Zeta Nu and Tom Antonucci was recently elected president of Zeta Nu.

Kappa Kappa Gamma

Hats are off to the Kappa swimmers who placed 4th in the inter-dorm and sorority swimmeet held November 14th.

The Kappas thank the brothers of AEPi for the exchange supper November 15th and also the brothers of TEP for Wednesday night's supper.

Sigma Delta Tau

The SDT's were proud to have the Lederles as dinner guests before vacation for a most enjoyable meal.

SDT would also like to thank the brothers of AGR for the spaghetti supper. It was lots of fun.

This weekend, the house will be in an uproar as the pledges move in and take over for their pledge weekend. Can't say the sisters are too happy about it all.

Mary Lyons Shows Spirit

From the halls of Mary Lyons comes much news of the past and present. Two weeks ago a Freshman tea was given. Dr. Southworth spoke on better study methods.

The never ending activity at the dorm has quickened with the on-coming Christman spirit. Not only are the girls planning for their annual dorm party, but have also added to their schedule a talk by Miss Wooliams about her native England, a candy drive to acquire money for a new television, and a "Twist and Trim" party with invited guests on December 17th.

Pinnings

Rosemary Kirchner, Sigma Kappa to John Wall, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Alliance College.

Maddy LaMoth, Framingham St. College to Roger Cavanaugh, Theta Chi.

Barbara McDonough, Alpha Chi Omega to Roger Hardy, Phi Kappa Tau, William and Mary College.

Rochelle Simons, Sigma Delta Tau to Mel Nelson, Phi Epsilon Pi, Boston University, '58.

Marjorie St. Aubin, Pi Beta Phi to Bernie Murphy, Q.T.V.

Honor Given To Dr. Wertz

Mrs. Anne Wertz, a member of the home economics staff at U-Mass. and a well known authority in the field of nutrition, was recently honored by the Connecticut College for Women, New London.

Dr. Wertz, who received her A.B. degree from Connecticut College was made an honorary member of Phi Beta Kappa. Earlier this year she was named Commonwealth Professor of Home Economics here at UMass.

A 1948 recipient of the Ph.D. degree from UMass., and author of numerous articles, Dr. Wertz has also done work at Columbia University. She has received particular recognition for her work in vitamins and amino acids.

Dr. Wertz has been on the faculty since 1939. In the course of her research work she has collaborated with medical personnel, on dietary studies in pregnancy, and is the author of an Experiment Station bulletin on the subject.

Sorority Sing Competition To Be Sunday

This Sunday at three o'clock Bowker Auditorium will be the cite of the annual Inter-Sorority Sing. Eighteen girls from each house will fill the air with music. Each house is required to sing one show tune and one other song of their own choice.

Also on the program will be the sorority dramatization, better known as "the Dec." This will be done by one girl from each house. Their piece may be either serious or comical depending on the choice of the house. Those attending can certainly look forward to variety.

The newly formed Pan-Hel Chorus will make its first appearance.

First second and third places will be awarded in each category. The first place winners will receive a place to keep for the year.

Although this is a sorority sponsored activity, the public is welcome and urged to attend.

Winter Weather Brings Fashions

As the cold weather sets in with full force on the UMass. campus, many new fashions appear.

Tops on every girl's list this winter is the new fuzzy Cossacks. These may be obtained in a multitude of colors ranging from pure white to the frosted greens and blues to black. These are not only cute, but also help to avoid frost bitten ears. The best part of it all is that these are inexpensive enough to become a part of every college girl's wardrobe.

Also in fashion again are the "good ole" Loden coats, with navy blue being one of the most popular colors. Along with last year's short jackets the three quarter length Lodens are also appearing. Remember the Boy coats of high school days? They're coming back too.

Tip to our male readers—Girls are wearing their skirts no longer this year!

UMass Harriers Perform Well As Michigan St. Wins IC4A Meet

by ABE SCHEINKER '62

The UMass cross country team had a busy weekend before Thanksgiving to finish off their 1961 season.

The recently crowned New England champions easily rolled over New Hampshire, 21-40, in a meet at Durham on Nov. 18. Bob Brouillet won his fifth race of the season, finishing in 23:59.2 over the 4.3 mile course. Jim Wrynn showed vast improvement while taking second place in 24:18. Dave Balch was fourth and Dick Blomstrom was sixth in what was little more than a warm-up for the IC4A meet.

The Redmen Warriors then journeyed to New York City for the Intercollegiate Assn. of Amateur Athletes of America meet. The IC4A is made of 65 colleges, most from the East and a few from the Midwest.

Although UMass did very well against the fine competition in the meet, it was a nightmare as far as cross country running goes. The combination of snow, rain, cold, and mud made footing treacherous over the rocky five mile course. Several competitors were injured in falls and all were drenched and mud-spattered.

UMass placed 12 in the team standing as Michigan State won its fifth title in the last six years. Twenty-four teams competed and the Redmen beat every New England school, proving their sectional title is no fluke.

Bob Brouillet again paced the Redmen as he placed 22nd, only a minute and one-half behind the winner, Steve Machooka of Cornell. Jim Wrynn, Dick Blomstrom, Dave Balch, and Ken O'Brien also scored for UMass in that order. Bob Avery finished right behind O'Brien in the 175-man race.

The top 15 teams: 1, Michigan State 82; 2, Penn. State 90; 3, Villanova 104; 4, Manhattan 129; 5, Army 189; 6, Princeton 195; 7, Cornell 221; 8, Syracuse 244; 9, LaSalle 256; 10, Fordham 278; 11, St. John's 286; 12, Massachusetts 372; 13, Providence 391; 14, Brown 394; 15, Delaware 410.

UM's Giddings Top Lifter At Eastern Championships

Three members of the UMass varsity track team competed in the Eastern States Power Weightlighting Championships held at the Boston YMCA on Nov. 18.

George Giddings, a shotputter on the team, was outstanding as he won the "best lifter of the meet" award in addition to capturing the heavyweight division title. The junior food technology major squatted with 490 pounds, bench pressed 375, and dead lifted 580.

The best lifter award is decided on the basis of a scoring system which takes into account the lifter's body weight. Giddings, who weighed in at 233, was an unusual winner since the award is generally won by a lifter in the lighter classes.

Giddings' 1445-pound total was 100 better than any reported in the nation for the three power lifts this year. Bob Bachus, 263 pound world 56-pound weight throw record holder and former Olympic hammer thrower, was second with 1280. Dick Ward, UMass hammer thrower and high jumper, and a Bachus pupil, was third in the heavyweight class. He had a 405 squat, a 240 bench press, and a 460 dead lift.

Abe Sheinker, also a UMass hammer thrower, squatted 320, bench pressed 200, and dead lifted 425 to finish 7th in lightheavyweight (198 pound) class. This division was won by Bob Ceccoli of Wyoming, Pa., with a 1290 total.

Giddings' bench press was his best ever and is believed to be a New England record. The meet was the first lifting competition for Ward and Sheinker, but both bettered personal marks in several of their lifts.

by PEG BAGDON '63

An interdorm and sorority swim meet was held at the WPE pool on the Nov. 14. The winner was Chi Omega with 38 points and Leach a close second with 34 points. Pi Phi was third with 30 points while KKG and Johnson took fourth and fifth place, respectively. The individual standout was Ginny Quirk who won 2 events while the top relay teams were from Leach House.

Recently two UMass. students were chosen for the Northeast Team at the regional tournament held at Smith College. Jean Condon was selected as left wing on the third team while Peg Bagdon was chosen for the second team, as left halfback. These two girls attended the National Women's Field Hockey Tournament on Long Island from Nov. 22-26.

Winter sports are in full swing at the WPE building now.

Baker Team Bows to New Hampshire's Lambda Chi

Baker "A", the intramural champs of UMass., traveled to the University of New Hampshire recently to face Lambda Chi Alpha in what proved to be the roughest football game of the year. The New Hampshire team blanked Baker 13-0.

Baker received the opening kick in this nine-man version of touch football, but was forced to punt on their last down. The passing combination of George Poirier and Bobby Sullivan, unstoppable in campus contests, was thwarted by the solid rush of the N.H. linemen.

On the other hand, the great Baker defense, led by Frank Veneri, Bill Walsh, and Steve Johnson, had little trouble with the highly-touted Lambda Chi offense. The first half ended at a tight 0-0 score.

Baker put on a surge to open the second frame as Sullivan hit John Murphy to advance to the ten yard line. Here the rival defense held and took over on downs, L.C.A. then began another march, but this scoring bid was broken up by a Mike Pressler interception, Rich Baird throwing a fine block on the runback. Baker was still unable to move, however, and with two minutes left, the Baker bubble burst as Lambda Chi hit paydirt with a twenty-yard pass.

The final score came with less than a minute left in the game, when a N.H. back intercepted a long desperation pass and trotted into the end zone.

This defeat was a great moral victory for the Bakermen, as Lambda Chi had scored 148 points in six games, while allowing only one touchdown. Their previous low score was fourteen. Another big factor in the win was the field width; the field was only thirty yards wide, while Baker's plays were designed for a fifty-yard area.

Lussier and McCormick Head Redmen 1961 Football Statistics

Halfback Sam Lussier and quarterback John McCormick paced the University of Massachusetts varsity football statistics released this week by the UMass Sports Information Department.

Lussier, led the team in scoring with six touchdowns and 38 points and in rushing with 609 net yards. He was second in punt returns and kickoff returns and tied for third in pass receiving with six for 47 yards.

Co-Captain McCormick completed 50 of 107 passes for 562 yards and seven touchdowns. John's three-year varsity totals show 134 completions on 297 attempts for 1860 yards and 17 TD's. McCormick was also the top punter, averaging 39.9 yards on 27 punts, and led in pass interceptions with four for 70 yards.

Sophomore halfback Fred Lewis was second to Lussier in scoring with five touchdowns for 30 points and in rushing with 522 net yards. Lewis carried the most times, 125, and caught two passes for 58 yards and one TD. Senior halfback Jim Hickman led in punt returns with five for 77 yards and in kickoff returns with 10 for 261 yards.

Place-kicking specialist John Bamberry was the team's third highest scorer with 28 points. Bamberry successfully converted 13 of 16 extra-points and connected on five of ten field goal attempts. In his two varsity years "Bumps" made 36 of 40 extra point boots.

Sophomore fullback Ken Palm was third in rushing with 289 yards net and a fine average of 6.1 per carry. Junior fullback Art Perdigao averaged 6.2 per carry and netted 111 yards.

In pass receiving, junior end Paul Majeski, although missing two games and playing sparsely in two others, caught 11 passes for 111 yards and three tallies. Senior end Ed Forbush snared 9 aerials for 93 yards and one score, while junior halfback Ken Kezer grabbed six for 88 yards and two TD's.

Senior tackle Bob Foote paced the linemen with four fumble recoveries, one of which he carried six yards for a touchdown. Foote also made the ECAC Major team of the week twice, while guard John Kozaka recovered three fumbles and made the ECAC team twice, also.

SPORTSENSE

by BEN GORDON '62, Sports Editor

Although the University of Maine kept up its chain of squeaker victories to nudge the Redmen out of the Bean Pot winner's circle, it is obvious that the UMass squad is on its way to bigger and better days.

Taking a look at the record books, we can see a new trend in Redmen football. This has been the first time since 1934 and '35 that the team has put a pair of winning seasons back to back. The team, finishing with a 5-4 slate in the roughest grid slate in UMass history, remained on the winning track after last year's 7-2 mark, and smashed a few jinxes in doing so. Rhode Island and UConn saw themselves smothered under the UM attack in the same year, something which has never happened before. UConn, beaten by the Redmen for the first time since 1954, also gave the team their first Homecoming victory since that same year.

Head Coach Vic Fusia's preseason problem of lack of depth finally materialized late in the season, becoming obvious at the Boston University game which the Redmen lost in the final minutes of play. The nemesis was further increased during the Crusader skirmish in which Dick Eger, John Kozaka and John McCormick were injured, making things tough for the team during both the New Hampshire and Maine contests.

The final outlook is optimistic. The spirit of the team and of the campus in general is an indication of future grid success, and Coach Fusia is looking for good time next year.

The Maine Bears, putting together their second YanCon championship, couldn't have cut things any finer than they did. The Bruins won over Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Hampshire and UMass by a total of eight points. The Redmen, on the other hand, had not scored more than one touchdown per game in the last three games before entering Maine territory, and the lack of depth and costly errors (errors which they had not made throughout the season) again held them to only one tally.

Looking back on pre-season forecasts, it's interesting to note that nearly every prediction saw the UConns as winding up on top of the Yankee Conference heap. The Huskies had one of their worst seasons ever.

UMass fans will turn to basketball now, as the Terriers from University invade the Redmen hunting grounds Wednesday night. After early-bird views it looked as if the B.U. squad would be quite powerful this year, but Coach John Burke has been having this problems since then. The first big man in years for the Terriers, Dick Moreshead (6'8") developed rheumatic fever and dropped out of school for the year. Larry Isenberg, last year's top scorer for B.U., ran into some personal problems and dropped out early in the first semester.

There is one bright spot for Coach Burke however. Larry McNulty, a former record holder in high school and holder of the rebounding and sophomore scoring record at Brandeis, has transferred to Boston University and will be seeing starting action at the center spot.

Waugh Plays Major Role In Success Of American Agricultural Programs

Agricultural Economics: Class President (1, 2,); Mandolin Club (1, 2, 3); Orchestra (1); Student Committee for 50h Anniversary (1); Y.M.C.A. Delegate to Des Moines Conference (2); Nominating Committee (2); Assistant Manager Varsity Football (3); Class Smoker Committee (3); Informal Committee (3); Soph-Senior Hop Committee (2); Junior Prom Committee (3); Interfraternity Conference (2, 3); Agricultural Economics Club (3); Chairman of Class Nominating Committee (3); Honor Council Committee (2); Kappa Sigma.

"The success story of American Agriculture is unmatched in history in fulfilling human needs of food and fiber!" These words of Agricultural Secretary Freeman emphasize the important roles of Department of Agriculture employees in this tremendous success story.

Waugh Has Leading Role

One employee who has had a leading role in this achievement is Dr. Frederick V. Waugh, '22, director of the economic and statistical analysis division of the Economic Research Service. During the past two years Dr. Waugh has received two important honors. In 1960, the Social Science Research Council gave him its Distinguished Research Award in Governmental Affairs, enabling him to spend a year making an independent study of the management of agricultural surpluses. In 1961 the U.S. Department of Agriculture gave him its Distinguished Service Award.

Nationally known for promoting the importance of the expanding markets as a means of maintaining farm income, Dr. Waugh has been with the Department of Agriculture for 33 years. He also has played an important role in the development of food distribution programs including the Food Stamp Plan, a program recently inaugurated in eight areas of chronic unemployment.

FREDERICK V. WAUGH

Dr. Waugh has been a leader in the Econometric Society and the American Farm Economics Association for a number of years.

Leads Agricultural Groups

In one of his early jobs he succeeded William Munson, class of 1905, as the Director of the Massachusetts Division of Markets. He was secretary of the New England Research Council from 1928 to 1932 and was one of the original staff of the President's Council of Economic Advisors.

Author of Many Publications

He is author and co-author of a number of articles, publications, and books on statistical methods and economic subjects, and he is active in several professional associations.

Dr. Waugh was on campus in October of this year to talk to Professor Blackmore's Seminar in Agricultural Economics.

Clements Discusses Senate From 'Inside'

by ANN MILLER '64

"The U.S. Senate is at times one of the most dramatic institutions on the face of the earth—and at times the least," stated Senator Earle Clements in opening his public lecture last Thursday night in the Middldesex room of the S.U. His speech, "Congressional Organization: A Senator's View," was the second in a series of four that he is giving on campus this semester.

Students may wonder, he noted, how 535 men, with differing interests, could ever get any legislation through. Certainly the great mass of members cannot give personal attention to each of the thousands of bills which come in he said.

Business is conducted because of the work done in the committee room, he said, calling the committee system one of the most important facets of Congressional organization.

To emphasize this point he called Cal Hayden of Arizona one of the most important men in the Senate, because of the work-horse load he carries in committee. Hayden, Clements asserted, "is one of the most effective members in committee . . . never says anything on the floor."

"Traditions and practices established over the years . . . I would say are of paramount importance to both houses . . . in fact tradition and custom may be more important than rules."

The Speaker of the House has probably more power than any other person except the President, simply in the carrying out of his duties as speaker, asserted Clements. "He has the gavel."

As one example of the Speaker's power, the ex-majority leader explained, "I don't believe I've heard a presiding officer explain his position but once."

He told of when Maine's Reed was Speaker and having difficulty in getting members present at a meeting to declare themselves present for purposes of a quorum. Said Clements, "Reed wrote his own set of rules."

"When you go over to the Senate, you don't find anyone that near equals the power of the Speaker in the House . . . you expect the president of the Senate to be totally impartial . . . On the other hand, the president of the Senate . . . has some political usefullness and strength . . . only he can't' work at it on the floor."

Clements' next lecture will be Thursday, December 7, at 8 p.m. in the Council Chambers of the S.U. The topic will be "Congress, Pressure Groups and the Public Interest".

Lambda Delta Phi Becomes National Sorority At U. R. I.

The initiation of a new national sorority, Lambda Delta Phi, took place at the University of Rhode Island Saturday afternoon. The chapters initiated were the Alpha chapter from UMass, Beta from the University of Rhode Island, and Delta from Boston University. The University of Minnesota will be initiated separately.

As stated in the constitution, Lambda Delta Phi is founded on the belief in "'the intrinsic worth and dignity of the individual, regardless of cultural, racial, and religious backgrounds."

Douglas M. Richter, Springfield Esso sales supervisor, presents Wayne J. Fowles '62, Douglas J. McVeigh '65, and Jonathan Goldthwaite '64 with $200 checks.

These checks are received annually by the recipient during the four years he is in college and awarded to individuals outstanding in 4-H activity and scholastic aptitude.

Not present is John Reisen, Esso scholarship winner from the class of '63.

The impetus towards the formation of Lambda Delta Phi was the desire of a local sorority, Phi Delta Nu, to form a national based on ideals similar to their own.

At the invitation of Phi Delta Nu other interested local sororities attended a convention at the University last summer. At this convention the new constitution, name, and pin were decided upon.

Elected as the National Officers of the new sorority were: president: Mrs. Paul Knight, UMass.; vice-president: Miss Lora Hagglund, Univ. of Minn.; secretary: Miss Anne Galloway, Boston University; and treasurer: Miss Marilyn Bennett, UMass.

Ceremonies at U.R.I. began with a luncheon at 11:30 a.m. From 1:30 until 4 p.m. the charter was accepted and the installation of members, pledges, officers, honorary members, and alumnae took place. To conclude the events a formal banquet was held at the Smith Manor in Rhode Island.

The main speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Paul Knight, the national president.

Invited guests included the advisors to the chapters, Assistant Dean of Women Mrs. Gonon from UMass, and the Dean of Women from U.R.I.

AID Must Be Suited To Country—Hawkins

by MARCIA VOIKOS '63

"In the 'Decade of Development' Kennedy's new foreign aid program (AID) must stress long-term-loans repayable in dollars," stated Prof. Everett Hawkins of the Mount Holyoke economics department in a lecture given last Thursday in the Student Union.

In commenting on Kennedy's new AID program, Prof. Hawkins discussed the success of the post-war Marshall Plan as a European Recovery Program which helped to stem the spread of communism in Europe.

Not Applicable To Asia

"But the Marshall Plan can't be applied to the emerging nations of Asia and Africa," he said, "because we can't expect development and recovery to move as fast as it did in Europe—this will be a longer process—unlike Europe, they lack the necessary technology and manpower—and they must repay these loans, whereas the Marshall Plan was strictly a recovery program.

"Neither can the Point Four technical assistance program be used to cut foreign aid expenses," he continued. "More training means more industries and factories — which means more requests for money from the U.S."

Hawkins went on to say that the new AID program stresses a unified administration based on continuity and cooperation of the many separate agencies.

Countries Still Unsettled

"I was in four different agencies in four years," he added. "If you think I was confused, the country I was in was even more baffled. Moreover, we must be aware that some of these countries are still unsettled politically and are not yet ready to take on the Five-Year Plans.

"The AID program must separate the military from economic development," he continued. "These new countries don't want to identify themselves with a military situation."

The success of Kennedy's program will lie in the following necessary conditions:

(1) The U.S. must change its image to the rest of the rest of the world. "Colonialism is dead" and we must make our position clear.

(2) We must realize that many of the new countries don't want to participate in the cold-war struggle. Hawkins cited the U.S. isolation policy after the Revolutionary War as indicative of our reluctance to involve ourselves in the European struggle for power.

"The new administration can't treat all these countries alike," he concluded, "but must consider the political and social background of each one."

Foster To Speak To Watershed Group About Land Use Potential on Dec. 5

"Land use potential in our watershed" will be the subject of a talk by Prof. John H. Foster of UMass at the Dec. 5 meeting of Westfield River Watershed Association at Grange Hall in Huntington.

Dinner Planned

Association members, their families and the public are invited. A dinner at 6:30 will precede the program, with Friday the deadline for reservations.

A Rhode Island native, where he grew up on a farm, Prof. Foster is a Cornell University graduate who has advanced degrees from that institution and has been in the deparment of agriculture and food economics at UMass since 1957. He is doing research work on land use in Massachusetts. Prior to becoming associated with UMass, he made a study of land use and agricultural change brought about by construction of the S. Lawrence Seaway.

"His talk is one which should interest many in our watershed, including landowners, civic leaders, municipal officials, sportsmen and recreational interests," an association spokesman said Tuesday. "Proposals Prof. Foster may advance for utilizing land and water to offset a declining agriculture economy in many communities will be welcomed by assessors and tax collectors also,"

Directors To Meet

The association's directors will have their quarterly meeting after Prof. Foster's talk, with members invited to attend. The agenda includes adoption of recommendations to the state Department of Public Health relative to classification of the Westfield River and its tributaries in reference to pollution, consideration of projects for major attention next year, discussion of an association policy statement, adoption of a budget and plans for renewing and expanding memberships.

The association also announced a conservation education committee is developing a program to help stimulate greater interest in the area's natural resources among school pupils.

Mili Ball Queens To Grace ROTC Tanks—If O.K. Given

If the UMass maintenance department gives its okay, a platoon of tanks will rumble into the driveway in front of the S.U. Wednesday. But the best part will be when the tanks leave for the stables at 4 p.m., as five Mili Ball Queen finalists climb into the turrets to take command of the vehicles.

The girls, dressed in fatigues, will give the orders which will take them on an armored tour of campus including a spin up Ellis Dr. to the Dining Commons where they'll turn right down Rte. 116, go to the lights and make another right turn, down Ellis Dr. to the Cage, and finally to the stables.

Riding in the tanks will be Jeanne Mullaney, Sheila Ryan, Joan Werner, Sue Lydon, and Marilyn Anderson who will direct their drivers along the route.

The drivers fortunately will not be strangers to tank travel since they will be members of the ROTC Corps including Capt. Huggins, lead tank driver and coordinator, Capt. Lesley, Capt. Williams, Capt. Murray, and SFC Mason.

The armored foray is part of a promotion for Mili Ball ticket sales. Tickets are on sale at the lobby counter until Friday.

--LETTERS--

To the Editor:

For someone who is "glad to be in R.O.T.C." you do not seem to be very concerned about learning what is presented to you in your ROTC class. If you had been paying attenion to the film you quoted in your article in Friday's Collegian, you would have seen that the missile in the film was a Hound Dog missile, and not the Skybolt, which is not as yet in the Air Force inventory. Your close attention to your instructor and to other previous films would have shown you that NO ONE MAN activates or is allowed near a nuclear weapon. This is to eliminate the factor of human error which would, as you put it, "get the damn holocaust over with." Every nuclear weapon contained in our missiles and bombers can be "armed" only by more than one member of the crew, and while well on the way to enemy territory, in the event of war. No one man has complete control over one of these missiles or bombers, thus creating a safeguard if one man should "crack," and try to start a war.

If something in ROTC opened your eyes to the need for disarmament it must have been the bell ending the class. You should know that it takes hundreds of thousands of people to maintain peace in this troubled world, in the form of a strong military force, because that is what our enemies fear most. But contrary to this, it takes only one man, namely Mr. Khrushchev, to say "NO!", and ruin all hopes of disarmament. I do believe, however, that disarmament of some sort is a possibility, but even if this country had a million people working on the problem, it will not be solved until Mr. Khrushchev wants it to be, and agrees to a sensible disarmament plan. Until that disarmament plan is agreed upon, a strong military force must continue to be built up to serve as a deterrent and to give this country something to bargain with in future disarmament talks.

The ROTC program that you are glad to be in, Mr. Cheren, provided trained officers to serve in the services which keep this country free. That is why you should be glad you're in ROTC.

Collegiate Courtesy

To the Editor:

One of the first things a child learns is courtesy. I believe it is assumed that by the time we reach "college-level maturity," we are sufficiently schooled in the social amenities. Of the students, I find this to be a correct assumption, for the most part.

However, it behooves me to say that this assumption is incorrect when applied to certain members of the staff. I am referring to an incident involving a secretary employed by the English department.

The incident to which I refer did not actually involve me, but I was present at the time. A student knocked on the door, and when admitted to the office politely asked directions to the German department. The secretary responded with a sharp, rude answer, something like "Why don't you read signs?" and then turned her back on the student.

The incident was minor, of course, but if the staff does not exhibit respect for the student they certainly cannot expect respect in return.

We have come to the University for an education. --- Are next year's prospective Freshmen to be met with such an obvious lack of it? I hope not!

The Excellence 'Kick'

Excellence is a fine and noble ambition. The aspirations to Excellence should be nurtured carefully and the achievement of Excellence should be rewarded. But Excellence can be carried so far that it blinds the individual(s) involved to all that is below that level. The University is currently in serious danger of losing control of its mascot—Excellence. Excellence can be like a loving pet and mascot; or it also can become a blind, raving dog. Louis T. Benezet, president of Colorado College, has said, Excellence is in danger of being manhandled, like the word Democracy. It might even end up as a property of the reactionaries, such as befell the word Americanism in some circles."

The most recent moved toward Excellence was the Administration's threat to Adelphia to raise its standards or else be relegated to a service organization's status. The fact is, Adelphia would lose at least two of its members and two others would make it by only one tenth of a point if the new standards were applied to the present ten members. The two who would not make the society hold the two most prominent positions on campus. It adds up to another move on the part of the University in refusing to recognize anything but academic Excellence.

The University expects its Senate to convene, its Collegian to publish, its Index to print, its radio station to broadcast, and its athletic teams to win. The University also expects the Senators, Editors, Station Managers, and Captains to earn enough money on their own time to pay their way through the University. The University also expects that if you want recognition for any of your efforts, you will have to achieve Excellence in your studies at the same time. And the University expects more than it gives.

Many large Universities and colleges offer scholarships to those students holding time-consuming campus positions which serve the collegiate community. UMass offers none—unless you are among the few who are able to apply for a scholarship, at which time you are measured by an academic ruler (i.e., by cumulative average ABOVE the top one-third of your class). Thus, many students are forced to take paying jobs along with their campus positions. What happens? Naturally, in most cases their marks go down. The President of the Student Senate, the Editor of the Index, the Collegian's Editor-in-chief and four of his page editors, the President of Adelphia, and WMUA's Station Manager and Program Director all HAVE TO work in order to stay in the University. And five of the above nine are not in the top one-third of their classes. Is it any wonder?

There are ONLY THREE seniors in the Student Senate, ONLY SIX seniors on the Collegian, and ONLY THREE seniors on WMUA. Certainly this shows that by senior year, students realize that their services are not appreciated and, for the most part, go unnoticed amid the pennants of Excellence flying in front of the South College.

If the present trend continues, the realization of how far behind UMass is in dealing with student service positions and their needs will pass from the senior class to the junior class and right on down the line. Does the University have any idea of how much money it would cost to handle the communication work now done by the Collegian and WMUA? Or the budget problems of the Senate? Either UMass should broaden its view on what Excellence is or it should subsidize its student service officers in order that they may attain the present status of academic Excellence without holding an outside job.

Presently, the Collegian is polling 120 American universities and colleges in order to find out how many offer incentives or subsidy to its student leaders. Until our queries are answered, we will continue to print more editorials on this topic and will welcome all Letters to the Editor on the subject.

Changing Times by Mike Palter

Dominican Republic—Part 2

Recently, the United States, in a move which was regarded by some as a righteous act in the cause of fredom, effectively intervened in the Dominican Republic. According to the New York Times, (Dec. 1) President Kennedy took this action because he wanted to see the Dominicans set up "the kind of government which will permit the Dominican People to control their own destiny."

Thus, the President self-righteously carries the "white man's burden." How proud we should be that the United States stands able and ready to define and effect democratic processes throughout the world! Then again, are we so able? Let's look at the Dominican Republic.

• At this moment, tanks roll through Santo Domingo. Apparently President Balaguer, a Trujillo appointee, feels that these are necessary to prevent takeover by Fidelistas. Balaguer has not, however, explained why so many of the Dominican People are rising against him. Can they all be Fidelistas?

Do you suppose that the United States, under the guise of an almost religious dedication to freedom, has found it feasible to support a despot?

N.Y. Times (Oct. 29)—"Almost daily soldiers, policemen and the regime's hoodlums shoot at shouting crowds of oppositionists or beat them up with clubs."

As of Dec. 3, a general strike against the regime of President Balaguer, "was still widely effective despite extraordinary efforts by the Government and armed forces to break it." By "extraordinary efforts," we must assume that this means clubbing, and an occasional murder or two!

In addition, the Government troops have apparently found it necessary to curb women-demonstrators (perhaps under the assumption that they also are Fidelistas!) If you're interested, you might want to glance at page three of the Times (Dec. 3). The caption under an extremely interesting photo reads (among other things): "Several Women were wounded by troops who opened fire and hurled fragmentation grenades at paraders."

Thus, it is important to know why intelligent people laugh when Tad Szulc (Times—Oct. 29) says: "Yet, it is in these incredible, paradoxical and chaotic conditions that democracy is beginning to be reborn in the Dominican Republic after a long and bleak night of oppression."

Of course, in this confusion, not one has said what is reasonably obvious (in the moral sense), namely, that the United States has absolutely no right of intervention. While on the one hand Kennedy talks of allowing people to "control their own destiny," the United States intervenes on the other. Thus, one question comes to mind: Who's kidding who?

"HAPPINESS CAN'T BUY MONEY"

I have asked the makers of Marlboro—an enterprising and aggressive group of men; yet at the same time warm and lovable; though not without acumen, perspicacity, and drive; which does not, however, mask their essential great-heartedness; a quality evident to all who have ever enjoyed the beneficence of their wares; I refer, of course, to Marlboro Cigarettes, a smoke fashioned with such loving care and tipped with such an easy-drawing filter that these old eyes grow misty when I think upon it—I have asked, I say, the makers of Marlboro—that aggregate of shrewd but kindly tobacconists, that cluster of hearty souls bound together by the profit motive and an unflagging determination to provide a cigarette forever flavorful and eternally pleasing—I have asked, I say, the makers of Marlboro whether I might use today's column to take up the controversial question: Should a coed share expenses on a date?

"Yes," said the makers simply. We all shook hands then and squeezed each other's shoulders and exchanged brave smiles, and if our eyes were a trifle moist, who can blame us?

To the topic then: Should a coed share expenses on a date? I think I can best answer the question by citing the following typical case:

Poseidon Nebenzal, a student at Oklahoma A and M, majoring in hides and tallow, fell wildly in love with Mary Ellen Flange, a flax weevil major at the same school. His love, he had

"Oh, foolish reaper! Why have you not told me before?"

reason to believe from Mary Ellen's sidelong glances and maidenly blushes, was not entirely unrequited, and by and by he mustered up enough courage to ask her the all-important question: "Will you wear my 4-H pin?"

"Yes," she said simply. They shook hands then and squeezed each other's shoulders and exchanged brave smiles, and if their eyes were a trifle moist, who can blame them?

For a time things went swimmingly. Then a cloud appeared. Mary Ellen, it seems, was a rich girl and accustomed to costly pleasures. Poseidon was bone-poor and he quickly ran out of money. Unable to take Mary Ellen to the posh places she fancied and too proud to tell her the reason, he turned surly and full of melancholy. Soon their romance, so promising at the beginning, was headed for a breakup. But at the last moment, Poseidon managed to blurt out the truth.

"Oh, beloved agrarian!" cried Mary Ellen, grappling him close. "Oh, proud husbandman! Oh, foolish reaper! Why have you not told me before? I have plenty of money, and I will contribute according to my ability."

Poseidon, of course, protested, but she finally persuaded him of the wisdom of her course. From then on they split all expenses according to their incomes. Rather than embarrass Poseidon by handing him money in public, a joint bank account was set up to allow him to write checks. Into this account each week they faithfully deposited their respective allowances—35 cents from Poseidon; $2300 from Mary Ellen.

And it worked fine! They were happy—truly happy! And what's more, when they graduated they had a nice little nest egg—eight million dollars—with which to furnish a lovely apartment in Lubbock, Texas, where today they operate the local laundromat.

So you see? You too can salvage your failing romance if you will only adopt a healthy, sensible attitude toward money.

Spielman, Davis Receive Land-Grant Assignments

Two top administrators of the College of Agriculture at UMass have been named to important committees for 1962 by the American Land-Grant College College Association, which met recently in Kansas City, Mo.

Arless A. Spielman, dean of agriculture, director of the Agricultural Experiment Station and director of Cooperative Extension, was named to the State Experiment Stations Committee on Organization and Policy and elected to the Executive Committee of the Agricultural Division. The executive committee is responsible for curriculum and research policy in colleges of agriculture.

Named To Senate

Dr. Spielman also was one of three representatives named to the Senate of the Land-Grant Association to represent the division of agriculture. The Senate is a high level, policy-forming unit.

Lloyd H. Davis, associate director of Cooperative Extension in the College of Agriculture, was appointed to five important committee posts including the Extension Committee on Organization and Policy, and to the Extension Marketing Committee which advises the U.S. Department of Agriculture and 51 Extension Services in the U.S. and Puerto Rico.

Will Serve As Advisor

Dr. Davis also will serve as advisor to the Northeast Extension Farm Management Committee which coordinates programs in farm management among the 12 northeastern states.

He was named to the National Extension Farm Policy Committee, set up to assist the 51 state Extension Services in developing programs concerned with national policies affecting agriculture, and was designated a member of the Extension Administrative Management Training Committee concerned with in-service training of Extension administrators. Prior recognition came to Dr. Davis when he was recently appointed secretary of the Northeast Extension Directors' Committee.

Lodge to Talk On Challenge Of '60's Wed.

The four-college Young Republican Clubs will sponsor a lecture by George Cabot Lodge, former Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs, at Amherst College on Wednesday, Dec. 6. Lodge, often mentioned as a possible Republican choice to run for the Senate seat vacated by Kennedy, is the son of former Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr.

George Lodge held several positions, including Director of Information at the Department of Labor before being named Assistant Secretary for International Affairs by President Eisenhower in 1958.

A graduate of Harvard, he is married and has five children. He served with the Navy during World War II.

Lodge's lecture on "The Challenge of the Sixties," will be given in Mead Auditorium on the Amherst campus at 8 p.m. and is open to the public.

A New Yorker boarded a Greyhound bus in Butte, Mont., and politely asked the driver if smoking was permissible.

"Mister," he replied, "this is Montana. If you've got two good fists, anything is permissible."

Four-Colleges To Participate In Broadcast On 'Review'

A special program, "The Massachusetts Review Meets the Critics," will be broadcast on the Educational Radio Network (ERN) Tuesday Dec. 5 at 9 p.m. Listeners in the Western Massachusetts area may hear the program via WFCR-FM (88.5), the educational station supported by Amherst, Smith, Mount Holyoke and UMass.

Participating in the December 5 program will be Denis Johnston, chairman of the theatre and speech department at Smith and an instructor at Mount Holyoke; Ramon Ruiz, a spepcialist in Latin-American affairs and member of the Smith history department; Jules Chametsky, assistant professor of English at UMass and managing editor of The Massachusetts Review; and Elliot Offner of the Smith art department. Miss Doris Abramson of the UMass speech department will be moderator of the program. Vincent Brann, Four-College Radio Program Coordinator and a member of the Smith theatre and speech department, is its producer.

The Massachusetts Review, a literary quarterly magazine of international reknown was first established in 1959 by several faculty members of UMass. It is now a four-college magazine supported by Smith, Amherst, Mount Holyoke and the University, with members of the four faculties serving as contributors and editorial advisers.

The Educational Radio Network (ERN), which will broadcast the program over its 6 stations extending from Boston to Washington, D.C., started its operation in early November. The network represents 20 educational and cultural institutions in the northeast area of the country.

UMass Hoop Season Opens Wednesday Against Terriers

The UMass varsity basketball team opens its 23-game schedule Wednesday night when it hosts the Terriers from Boston University at 8:15 p.m. in the Cage.

With eight members of his 12-man squad inexperienced, Coach Matt Zunic has had his problems trying to find a starting combination. To add to the situation, sophomore guard Jim Painten has been dropped from the squad for disciplinary reasons. Painten was the third highest scorer on last year's frosh squad and figured to be an important cog in this winter's machinery.

SCRIMMAGES GAIN EXPERIENCE

Scrimmages with Army and Fordham have provided the Redmen with some much-needed game experience. "We learned a lot from the scrimmages," states Coach Zunic, "which should help us in our early season games."

Zunic stated that the probable starting lineup for the opener with B.U. would include Captain Kirk Leslie (6'5", Pittsfield) and Roger Twichell (6'5", Westfield, N.J.) at the forwards, Don Black (6'8", Athol) at center, and Charlie La Pier (6'2", Worcester) and Don Laakso (6'4", Norwood) in the backcourt. Both Twitchell and Laakso are sophomores.

Head Coach John Burke at B.U. has also had his manpower problems. Dick Morehead, 6'8 soph. and Larry Isenberg, last year's leading scorer, have both dropped out of school. But center Larry McNulty, 6'5 transfer from Brandeis, will give Burke a capable pivot man, and speedy guard Mike Cotton is a good playmaker. The Terriers will also rely on promising sophomore Adam Florczak, a 6'3 forward, for rebounding strength.

REDMEN WON LAST YEAR

The Redmen edged the Terriers, 61-59, last year in Boston, however B.U. leads in the all-time series with 17 wins compared to 11 UMass victories. The series originated in 1904, was interrupted several times, but has been a regular rivalry since 1951.

Prior to the Redmen-B.U. contest, the UMass frosh hoopsters will take on Worcester Junior College at 6:15.

Coach Jack Leaman will send a 17-man squad into action, containing five out-of-staters, from Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Washington, D.C.

Student I.D. cards, or $1.50 will be required for admission to the double-bill.

EXPECTS OVERFLOW

Coach Zunic is expecting an overflow crowd for this important opener. When asked about his squad's chances of grabbing the YanCon title from defending champion Rhode Island, Zunic said "We'll be right in there scrappin'."

Swim Squads Will Begin Seasons at M.I.T.'s Pool

by KIM WALLACE '64

The Massachusetts swimming squads will begin their season on Dec. 6 as they swim against MIT in Boston. The varsity squad is weakened considerably this year as many fine swimmers of last season are not out for the team.

Some of the top performers this season are as follows: freestyle—Chiras, O'Neil, Rothchild, Coffey, and Rutkowski, the captain, who is said to be ailing. The backstrokers should be Jim Coffey and also Bruce Morton, who stands a very good chance of breaking the school record in the 200 backstroke. His pre-seasonal times have been only one-third of a second from the record. Butterfliers and individual men will be O'Neil, Grant, and Morton; the breastrokers being John Grypko, Don Grant and Dave Desjardins.

The mermen team has quite a few good swimmers, but it lacks depth in all events and should suffer considerably for this at MIT, not to mention the fact that they have no diver out for the squad.

The freshman team has a great deal of strength this year with such hopefuls as John Francis, Charles Monnier, Dan Omera, John Daly, and Ted O'Sullivan.

Annual Sports Banquet Honors Letterwinners

Fifty-seven varsity letterwinners were honored Thursday evening at the University of Massachusetts Annual Fall Sports Banquet held in the Student Union Building.

Special awards were presened to Cross Country Coach Bill Footrick and his squad in recognition of their excellent season that was climaxed by winning the Yankee Conference and New England Intercollegiate Team Championships as well as eight out of ten dual meets. Sophomore Robert Brouillet of Phillipston received the Llewellyn L. Derby Trophy for his outstanding contributions to the squad during the past season.

Head Football Coach Vic Fusia presented the two individual football awards, the Allen Leon Pond Medal and William T. Evans Memorial Trophy, to Richard Eger and David Harrington, respectively. The coach also paid tribute to the entire squad for its unselfish efforts which resulted in a winning season for the Redmen.

The Maurice Suher Soccer Award was presented by the donor to David Amundsen of Medford, captain of the 1961 squad. Speakers during the festivities included Roger O'Gara, Sports Editor of the Berkshire Eagle, Dr. William Field, Dean of Students at the University, and Warren McGuirk, Dean of the School of Physical Education and Director of Athletics.

Davis, Ferguson and Romig Are All-America Repeaters

Two backs and a guard have been named for the second consecutive year in the East dominated 1961 All-American Team announced today by the American Football Coaches Association.

Halfback Ernie Davis of Syracuse, Fullback Bob Ferguson of Ohio State, and Colorado's be-where-the-ball-is guard Joe Romig are repeat members of the nation's Original All-American Team, now sponsored by Eastman Kodak Company. First, second, and third squads are selected by ballots of the 2,000 college and university coaches who are members of the Association.

The first team, announced by Association President Jack Curtice, Stanford head coach, includes:

Ends—Bob Mitinger, Penn State
Gary Collins, Maryland
Tackles—Bill Neighbors, Ala.
Bob Bell, Minnesota
Guards—Joe Romig, Colorado
Roy Winston, Louisiana State
Center—Alex Kroll, Rutgers
Quarterback—Roman Gabriel, North Carolina State
Halfbacks—Ernie Davis, Syracuse
Jim Saxton, Texas
Fullback—Bob Ferguson, Ohio State

Ferguson was the runaway choice for fullback, polling 89 per cent of the votes cast at that posion. Davis topped the halfbacks, and Gabriel earned quarterback honors in a close three-way duel with John Hadl of Kansas and Pat Trammell of Alabama.

Three times during the season, the coaches added nominations to the pre-season list of All-America candidates. Final voting was completed at the season's end. Selection of the 1961 squad for the All-America—which was started in 1889 by Walter Camp—was based on careful evaluation of each player's season performance, including the slow motion analysis of many game movies. Widespread exchange of game movies gave all coaches and the 24-member All-America Review Board maximum opportunity to select the outstanding players from distant as well as nearby areas.

The All-America eleven will meet for the first time on Sunday, December 3, in New York.

Redmen '61 Cross Country Team Finishes With Best Slate Ever

by ABE SHEINKER '62

Coach Bill Footrick guided the UMass cross country team to its best season in the school's history this fall. Since Footrick came to the University in 1954, its cross country teams have steadily improved. He's had only one losing season, that being his first. His past three season's records are 6-2, 6-2, and 8-2, and his overall record now stands at 39-18. In 1957, the squad was undefeated.

This year the Redmen Harriers not only compiled an 8-2 slate, but they also won both the Yankee Conference and New England Championships. It was their second straight conference title and the sixth time in the past seven years they have been in the Yan-Con top three. In their second year of IC4A competition, they took 12th place out of 24 top Eastern teams.

Strong depth was the key to the Harriers' successful season. It takes five men to win a cross country meet and the fifth man is just as important as the first. The Redmen always had five good men because eight were fighting for those five places.

Bob Brouillet led the team in every meet, but Dave Balch, Jim Wrynn, and Dick Blomstrom were never far behind him. The fifth spot was usually a battle among Gene Colburn, Ken O'Brien, Bob Avery and Charlie Proctor. Thus, when one man had a bad day, another had a good one.

Brouillet, a sophomore who set many records in track and cross country as a freshman, had a great season. In dual meets, he won five races, and had two seconds and one third place. Two of the men who beat him in dual competition became his victims in the New England meet, in which he was third. He set a course record to win the Yankee Conference title and was 22nd in the all-east EC4A meet. One of his greatest accomplishments was beating every member of Army's highly rated team in a practice meet.

Brouillet was awarded the Derby trophy as the outstanding runner of the season, an unusual distinction for a sophomore.

Balch, top Redman of 1960, had another good year, but just had to take a back seat to his younger teammate. A "pressure" runner, he was at his best in the big ones, the Yankee Conference and N.E. meets.

Blomstrom never has run a bad race—he's that consistent. Wrynn really hit his stride late in the season, just in time for the big meets where he pushed and even outran Balch and Blomstrom.

Looking ahead to next year, Coach Footrick should be optimistic; LaMarre is the only man on the team who will be graduating this June.

The 1961 record (low score wins):

U.M. 20, Coast Guard 40, Hartford 80
U.M. 15, Union 50
U.M. 29, Maine 37, Northeastern 61
U.M. 27, Connecticut 42, B.U. 71
Harvard 21, U.M. 36
Yankee Conference, U.M. 42, Maine 46, R.I. 79, UConn 90, Vt. 108, UNH 110.
Springfield 26, UM 29
N.E. Championships, U.M. winner 101
U.M. 21, New Hampshire 40
IC4A, U.M. 12th
(8 wins, 2 losses, 2 championship titles)

Rifle Squad Loses 2; Defeats Alliance, Yale

Col. John C. Marchant's Stockbridge rifle team burnt up a good deal of ammunition, recently, as it performed in four matches, winning two and losing two. The Air Force and North Carolina squads bested the shooters, while Alliance College and the Yale Freshmen fell before their marksmanship.

Leigh Beadle, one of the nation's top collegiate rifle shooters, made the difference in University of North Carolina's postal match win over the Stockbridge School rifle team. With Beadle's 293 for the three positions, the North Carolina team total of 1353 was well in front of the 1334 fired by the Stockbridge five. Loren Valley with a 272 edged out Bob Haynes as top gun for Stockbridge.

The boys in blue proved to be too much for Stockbridge School in a shoulder-to-shoulder match at the local rifle range. Avenging two years of defeat at the hands of the Aggies, Kwist and Freidman led the Air Force ROTC team to a 1323 to 1289 victory that became evident early in the match. As the first shoulder-to-shoulder match for both teams this season, first-night jitters took their toll. Although a loss for Stockbridge, the experience is bound to help this team in its shoulder-to-shoulder match with the Yale frosh at New Haven on December 2nd.

Repeating last year's victory over Alliance College of Pennsylvania provided the first win of the current season for the Stockbridge rifle team. Led by Bourbonnais with an individual 275, all members of the Stockbridge team topped the No. 1 man for Alliance to win by a margin of 84 points.

Led by Bob Stansifer's 271 the Stockbridge Rifle Team outshot the Bull Pups in a shoulder-to-shoulder match at New Haven on Saturday. A warm-up match for their test against the West Point Plebes next Saturday, the Yale Freshmen were outshot in all positions by the Massachusetts team while Stockbridge gained further confidence for their shoulder-to-shoulder matches with the Northeastern Freshmen and Harvard varsity teams coming up on successive week ends.

Novel Prank Leads Fraters On 'Secret' SAC Mission

(ACP)—One of the slickest hoaxes ever fabricated on a college campus has left officials of the FBI and Pentagon security agents in confusion.

The Heights Daily News of New York University says the incident began when one of two fraternity brothers at the University of Pennsylvania lifted his phone receiver to make a call at 10 p.m. He heard a series of words and numbers which he said sounded like "altimeter readings or a ship-to-shore-phone call."

Almost immediately, he received a call from a man claiming to be chief Air Force security officer at Philadelphia International Airport.

The voice on the phone said two existing Strategic Air Command lines had been cut and that their phone line had been accidentially connected to the only operative SAC Communications unit in eastern North America.

The two students were ordered to remain at their phone and to wait for word from Air Force Security and the FBI. At 4:30 a.m., they were called and told by a supposed U.S. Security official that a taxicab would pick them up in 20 minutes.

The cab driver presented the students with two sealed envelopes, one instructing them to proceed to the railroad station, avoiding contact with strangers, and the other, to be opened on arrival in Washington, telling them to poceed dircetly to the Pentagon.

Tickets to Washington were awaiting them at the railroad station.

At the Pentagon, officials supposedly disclaimed any knowledge of the incidents, but interrogated the students for six hours.

Investigation led to a theory that a nearby fraternity may have carried off the hoax by switching telephone wires between the two houses.

Calif. Orchid Co. Donates 120 Plants To Dept. of Hort.

Orchids in the snow. That's the picture at UMass, according to Randolph A. Jester, assistant professor of floriculture.

It won't look much like winter in Durfee Conservatory, notes Jester in announcing a gift of 120 orchid plants to the department of horiculture in the College of Agiculture. The plants, worth $2,000, were donated by the Dos Pueblo Orchid Co. of Goleta, Calif., through its president, Samuel B. Mosher, and come from his personal collection.

These hybrid orchids of the cymbidium, cattleya, cypripedium and phalaenopsis groups augment the department's rather meager collection of commercially valuable orchids. They will be used in teaching classes in floral design and arrangement.

Poet Ogden Nash To Appear Dec. 14

Ogden Nash, the famous writer of light verse, will appear at UMass on Thursday, Dec. 14, 8 p.m., at Bowker Aud., under the auspices of the Distinguished Visitors Program. He will recite a number of his classical verses and comment on the turn of events in his life that caused their creation.

Called Three Partite

According to some critics, there are at least three Ogden Nashes: the skylarking humorist, the deft and experienced craftsman and the remarkably serious social satirist. Each has its particular merits but it is when the tripartite Nash operates in unison and harmony that he is at his brightest and most engaging best.

Ogden Nash was born in Rye, N.Y., the first of his family to emerge north of the Mason-Dixon Line. One of his ancestors was Revolutionary governor of North Carolina and another forbear, a Revolutionary general Francis Nash, gave his name to Nashville, Tenn.

Attended Harvard

Nash entered Harvard in the class of 1924, but left after one year. This he maintains was his original intention.

OGDEN NASH

His most current books are Parents Keep Out and The Private Dining Room. Recently he was commissioned to write his peculiar brand of verse for a Columbia recording of Saint-Saen's Carnival of Animals, recited by Noel Coward with music conducted by Andre Kostelanetz.

For three years now, the famous poet has been developing into something of a top-flight TV personality on Masquerade Party.

Rep. Vigneault Co-Sponsors Bill For Abolishment of Tuition Fee

A bill calling for the elimination of tuition at the state's schools of higher education has been introduced to the House by Beryl W. Cohen (D.-Brookline) and David N. Vigneault (D.-Springfield).

Would Affect Just Mass. Residents

Vigneault, a former UMass student, said that the bill, which is being prepared by the house clerk now, would affect only Massachusetts residents and not out-of-state residents.

"It's a new concept in education", stated Vigneault, "in terms of competition with Russia and the fact that the Commonwealth has only brainpower as a natural resource."

In this day, explained Vignealt, because of "technological complexities we need the abilities of our young people." In terms of necessity, a college education has become as necessary as a high school education which the state supports, he added.

23 States Have No Tuition

Twenty-three states have no tuition, note Vigneault, and he cited Connecticut as one of these states which leads in education. "I'm disturbed by continual agitation for a rise in tuition. Those who advocate a rise are penny wise and pound foolish."

"We should equate roadbuilding with brainbuilding," asserted Vigneault. He explained that the state spends $175 million on road biulding and only $110 million on education. Four million dollars more for tuitions would amount to less than one per cent of the total state expenditures.

"I question what percentage of qualified students not accepted by both public and private schools for financial reasons go on to higher education anywhere," Vigneault said.

He urged students and the parents of students to write to their representatives over the Christmas holidays and to the members of the Education Committee which includes Senators Fonseca, Bristol; Kevin B. Harrington, Essex; Mahar of Franklin and Hampshire; and Silvano of Norfolk and Suffolk.

Representatives Desmond, Lowell; Doherty, Boston; Bretta, Somerville; Garczynski, Chicopee; Piagga, Worcester; Kuss, Fall River; Bulger, Boston; McGuane, Greenfield; Dower, Athol; St. Johns, Adams; and Muther, Newton.

Auditions To Be Held For 'Pajama Game'

Pictured here is Professor Doric Alviani, Head of the UMass Music Department, who will direct the Operetta Guild's spring production of Pajama Game.

The UMass Operetta Guild has chosen as its spring production the Adler-Ross Broadway musical comedy, The Pajama Game.

Auditions for the production will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons, Dec. 12 and 13 from 1:30 to 4:30 in Old Chapel and on Tuesday evening, Dec. 12 from 7 to 9 in Memorial Hall Auditorium. All students interested in acting, dancing, solo, chorus, orchestra, or technical work should report at one of these sessions for preliminary registration and processing.

Based on his own novel 7-½ Cents, The Pajama Game was written by Richard Brissell in collaboraion with George Abbott. Is music and lyrics are by Richard Adler and Jerry Ross. The light-hearted musical comedy opened at the St. James Theatre in New York City on May 13, 1954 and brought raves from all areas of the theatre world.

In brief, the story concerns an employee campaign for a 7 ½ cent hourly wage increase in a mid-western pajama factory.

"Management is principally represented by a volcanic factory head who quotes Fulton Lewis, Jr. at the drop of a production graph; also by a nimble time study man whose own effeciency is periodically retarded by the boss' secretary and by a handsome superintendent who plainly could cause a plant slowdown merely by walking past a row of seamtresses. The opposite number and other romantic principal is the toothsome chairman of the factory grievance committee."

Ferrigno Gets Grant As Exchange Prof.

Dr. James M. Ferrigno, professor of Romance languages at UMass, has been awarded a grant under the Smith-Mundt Act and is serving as visiting professor at the University of Costa Rica n San Jose, C. R. He will remain on sabbatical leave from the University until completion of his current assignment late in January, 1962.

Under the Smith-Mundt program, lecturers are recommended to the U.S. Department of State by the Conference Board of Associated Research Councils. Final selection is made by the Department of State.

Serves As Consultant On Language Laboratory Techniques

Dr. Ferrigno's work in the Latin American country includes teaching of languages at the University as well as trainng of instructors in the operation of language laboratories. The Massachusetts professor is also serving as consulant on language laboratory techniques in the U.S. Cultural Office and the U.S. Embassy in Costa Rica.

Dr. Ferrigno, who directed the UMass language laboratory from 1957 to Sept., 1961, is an authority on the use of electronic recording and listening devices in language study. Consulted regularly by schools and colleges interested in planning and operation of language laboratories, he has conducted workshops in Massachusetts and in other states for prospective laboratory supervisors.

Co-Author Of Textbook

Dr. Ferrigno is co-author, with A. Bruce Gaarder, of "Everyday Spanish for the Language Laboratory," now in use throughout the country as a text-book for courses in beginning Spanish. He has also written scholarly articles as well as a number of papers on language laboratory techniques. He is a frequent contributor to the Bay State Foreign Language Bulletin, a publication edited at UMass and distributed to teachers of languages.

Appointed to the University staff in 1946, Dr. Ferrigno has been a member of the Italian School staff in the Middlebury College summer program and visiting lecturer at Boston University and Louisiana State University. He also directed the Language Laboratory at Cornell University during three summer institutes conducted under the National Defense Education Act.

Coordinator Of Spanish And Italian Courses

At the University, Dr. Ferrigno is coordinator of the Spanish and Italian curriculum in the Department of Romance Languages, adviser to freshmen and to majors in Spanish, and a member of the thesis committee in the University's doctoral program.

He is currently president of the New England Association of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese and a past president of the New England branch of the American Association of Teachers of Italian. He holds membership in several other professional societies.

Met. Operas Broadcast On WFCR

The Metropolitan Opera Broadcasts, a familiar Saturday afternoon feature on AM radio for thirty years, will be airead for the first time in this area over the high-fidelity FM facilities of WFCR, beginning Saturday, Dec. 9, at 2:00 p.m.

By special arrangement with the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera Network and WTIC-FM in Hartford, the Opera broadcasts will be relayed from New York to WFCR's many listeners in Western Massachusetts and Connecicut, as well as to scattered but faithful listeners in Vermont, New York State, and even New Jersey.

The first "Met" presentation will be "Lucia Di Lammermoor," Donizetti's melodious and romantic warhorse, with Australian colortura soprano Joan Sutherland in the lead role.

Along with the operas themselves, listeners will be able to hear the traditional voice of Milton Cross, as well as the very-popular intermission interviews, footnotes, and quizzes.

WFCR, the non-commercial 34,000 watt FM station operated cooperatively by Amherst College, Mount Holyoke College, Smith College and the University of Massachusetts will carry the entire winter season schedule of the Metropolitan Opera, concluding with Verdi's "La Traviata" on April 21.

Who Is Inconsiderate?

It's a common thing on this campus (and probably on many others) to hear students complain about "inconsiderate" instructors who keep classes one or two minutes beyond the bell. Some of these students have a valid complaint: being kept a couple of minutes late in a class causes them to be late for their next class. This is true, and we believe that most instructors are aware of the students' need to travel between buildings and consciously attempt to keep their lectures down to the allotted time. As soon as an instructor does go over the limit in an attempt to finish a thought, however, the groans arise from the back rows, students slam books and notebooks closed, many start donning their outer garments, and some even get up from their seats and start moving toward the door while the instructor is still speaking.

The ironic thing is that the students who groan the loudest, who shut their notebooks first, and who get up to leave, are usually those who do not have to rush across campus to classes, but who are upset because the instructor is "cheating" them out of Hatch time. Indeed, according to a very prevalent type of student on this campus, one of the marks of a good instructor is the frequency with which he calls off clases or lets them out early.

We realize that this attitude is not dominant on the campus, and that the majority of students are not guilty of such juvenile actions and thoughts. But the fact is that there is an unusually large faction that does think that way: that believes its only obligation in coming to a University is to sit patiently through the required number of hours in the required courses; that feels cheated when lectures last too long and feels rewarded when excused early; that thinks the instructors owe a certain amount of consideration to the students but that the students owe none to the instructor.

Not only do these students insult the instructors, but they also embarrass the majority of students who are perfectly willing to remain the extra two minutes to have a certain thought cleared up, even if they do have to walk a little faster to their next class.

This type of high-schoolish attiude does not belong in a University, where instructors have every right to expect that students are there because they want to be, not because they are forced to be as they were in high school.

We would ask these students: who exactly is being inconsiderate? Is it inconsiderate of an instructor to want to help his class to understand a difficult point? Is it inconsiderate to want to give the student as much education as possible in the short time available in the classroom?

Or are the students actually the inconsiderate ones?

Excellence 'Kick'

To the Editor:

RE "The Excellence 'Kick' Editorial of 4 December. "Either UMass should broaden its view of what Excellence is or it should subsidize its student service officers in order that they may attain the present status of academic excellence without holding an outside job."

One becomes upset, in the semester that UMass slept, in reading the above quotation. The editorial writer is preaching a cheapening of the University and its standards. The natural outcome of broadening the standard of excellence is the equating of extra-curricula abilities, gifts, or talents with the academic virtues.

A broadening of standards of excellence would be equivalent to recognizing excellence in basket weaving, sports broadcasting, gavel weilding, hand shaking and back slapping.

Subsidizing student service officers would have a similar degrading effect upon the little intellectual atmosphere that we have here in Umieland. Instead of devoting the attention of the University community on the curricula, the emphasis would be on how that newly subsidized student service officer was handling the Winter Carnival, Student Senate, and other would be "excellent" activities.

Subsidizing student service officers, who in less tranquil an dmuch more vigorous semesters were called student leaders, would be detrimental in that it would be contrary to the American Myth that students in college, for the most part, knew that they were there for academic reasons, not "student service".

In conclusion, let us stop polling other coleges and Universities as to what they do, and turn to the academics, the reason for the existance for the University of Massachusetts.

ROTC Gladness

To the Editor:

I, too, am glad you, Mr. Cheren, are in ROTC for perhaps when you are serving your time in the military, which it may be assumed you will, you will recognize the need not only for having a massive retaliatory force in being, but the need for being willing should the provocation arise, TO USE IT.

Perhaps, ROTC will team you to place some faith in the minds of the scientific men who have made possible the striking of a target within 7 miles, with a missle launched some 7,000 miles away. The planning of the strategists, too, I am sure will find is not superficial. True, the scientists and engineers who provide the intricate guidance systems which provide the relatively "pinpoint" delivery you refer too, have also devised electronic mechanisms to control the launching and arming, "respectively," of the ballistic missiles which carry THE BOMB. But they have not, you will find by attentiveness, overlook the human error. Electronic pushbuttons have replaced the older manual system whereby each crew member inserted a key in slot in the bomb and turned it. But you will, I am sure, find that the launching and arming of an atomic missile CANNOT be accomplished by one man. EACH of the crew members must press his arming button simultaneously in order to arm the bomb.

Yes, Mister Cheren, I am glad you are taking ROTC because at the same time you are learning of the horrors of a weapons arsenal that all of us hope will never need to be used, you may gain insight and courage so that if you are ever responsible for the care of one of the many little black buttons that form the nerve network of our defense system, you will exercise this responsibility wisely, appreciating the awesome power of which you are a part, but recognizing that, if and when the button must be pressed, you MUST press it decively and unflinchingly. The strength of our defense lies not in the mere possession of massive power but in our determination to use it if we are provoked.

Georgetown Pub Spat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At Yale, Old Blues drink at Mory's. Sons of Princeton gather at the Nassau Tavern. Lo, the lads of Georgetown. Where can they down theirs?

Not near by and that's where this tale begins. It began some time ago when Richard J. McCooey decided that his Alma Mater needed a convival old-style eating place and pub for students, old grads and faculty.

Mr. McCooey prevailed on the university authorities to lease him a two-story building for the purpose right off campus. There the old conflict of town and gown flared anew.

For the truth of the matter is that Georgetown's residents do not want a tavern in their town. They like it quiet. They want it to stay quiet.

Priest Files For Permit

Father Byron Collins, vice-president of the university, has no objections to Mr. Cooey's pub. He has filed for a liquor permit on Mr. McCooey's behalf.

"If students are going to drink anyhow and they want a place of their own, the university should not be averse to suitable premises somewhat under its auspices and control," Father Collins said.

To entice the neighbors into acceptance, Mr. McCooey has hired an architect to design a pub in the best Georgetown Federal architecture. It would match the colonial-era charm of the neighborhood, he insists.

But neither the clamor of students, the backing of the Jesuit fathers nor Mr. McCooey's exhortations have brought the neighbors around.

THE ACELDAMA

by MEL SHULTZ '65

The letters continue to come in . . . students want more rights for women. Or perhaps it should read . . . men students want more rights for women. Either the female body of this campus is illiterate or the women find no fault in the present system. In either case, the men's position should be heard and evaluated.

There are many individuals who insist that the only rule governing the conduct of women on or off campus should be the honor system. The men sincerely believe that college-age women have more self-discipline than the administration gives them credit for.

Why do women have to be back at their dorms before a specific time? The answer is implied by an incident not long ago at the University of Rhode Island. A young coed awoke to find a strange man kneeling on her bed. Whether or not the man was a stranger seems irrelevant; men will be men. Little wonder is the policy here to lock the doors of women's dorms by a certain hour.

If women were allowed to return to their dorms at any time of night, they would have to possess glass cutters. Since this would be an inconvenience, women must be back before the doors are locked.

Nobody actually wants to give us a hard time of it, but their seems to be no alternative. Even if prowlers were put on the honor system, they would not restrain themselves. College men are about as restrained as coiled rattlers teased by people scratching their bellies.

As long as rules exist, there will be many to criticize. In fact, anybody completely satisfield with the situation at UMass probably needs a little session with the family doctor. The fact that few women have written criticism of the social rules might make one wonder.

J. D.'s CORNER

Well, they say it pays to advertise, and I guess it's so. As a result of last week's column, lots of people gave or mailed me stamped self-addressed envelopes, all of which I filled with fascinating junk from my 20-year collection and returned. Amazingly enough, there is still plenty of junk left. So if any of the rest of you want your share, bring me a stamped self-addressed envelope; leave it in my box at Arnold House or in the Collegian office; or mail it to J. D., % The Collegian, Student Union, UMass. Free, as long as the supply lasts (and at this point, it seems that it could last indefinitely.)

Of course, I'm always glad to hear from readers, but I do prefer that they identify themselves, so that I can print full details on any exciting campus news. For example, the other day I received the following post card:

"We are happy to announce that 410 Baker has successfully captured the first Mong. Before this time, other persons' Mong filters caused these invisible animals to distintigrate.

"However, the new hypersonic Mong filter in 410 has captured a visible and healthy Mong."

The card was signed "Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Mongs."

Who are these busy scientists in 410 Baker? Personally, I'm skeptical, but if you live in the vicinity, why not go to 410 and ask to see their Mong? That should serve them right!

* * *

The study of political science can turn out to be quite disillusioning; I just learned that this big exciting "space race" is nothing more than the Russians trying to prove that their German scientists are better than our German scientists.

* * *

Here's a device of a fellow with ingenuity! Onto items in homes and hotels he happens to visit, a young man attaches the following tag:

"HOUSEKEEPER: Please properly package this item and ship prepaid to Gene Hall, 713 West Main Street, Elkin, N.C . ."

It looks very official, and Gene says that already people have shipped him two radios, a lamp, and a typewriter, but I don't believe him.

Here's the latest entry to J. D.'s Daffy Dictionary:

A COLLEGE STUDENT is a young adult utterly incapable of counting up to 70 with a straight face.

Have you tried the new "miracle" sedative drug? It's called Dammitol.

* * *

I'm told that in Ohio there is a town called Hume. And on roads leading into the town, the citizens have placed the following sign:

WHEN IN HUME, DO AS THE HUMANES DO.

Surveys show that the two greatest highway menaces are drivers under 25 going over 65, and drivers over 65 going under 25.

* * *

The final word for today is a bit of serious philosophy:

To be really well-educated, get to know something about everything, and everything about something.

I. Q. Results Poor Gauge Of Intellect

Intelligence tests are no longer very intelligent ways to judge intelligence.

In fact, a pupil's intelligence can be as accurately revealed by his grades and his behavior than they can by I.Q. test scores.

This is among conclusions drawn by many psychologists and educators and reported by John Lagemann in a December Reader's Digest article, which criticizes too-rigid reliance on I.Q. tests as outmoded and harmful.

I.Q. Tests Once Regarded As Accurate

I.Q. (Intelligence Quotient) scores were once regarded as accurate harbingers of academic success. "High-I.Q.'s" were carefully nursed along toward college careers, while low scorers were academically sidetracked. I.Q. scores are still heavily relied upon in deciding how our children fare academically, although teachers are becoming more cautious in their use of the tests.

One drawback of I.Q. tests: they don't really measure intelligence, which is an amalgam of many different qualities. Dr. Henry Dyer of the Princeton, N.J., Educational Testing Service says: "An aptitude test tells how well a pupil can cope with tasks like those in the test at the time he takes the tests, and it tells nothing more."

Tests Fail To Reveal Many Important Traits

One of the qualities I.Q. cannot accurately reveal is creativity, a vital factor in intelligence. Another is adaptability. Tests tend to favor fast, "top-of-the-head" thinkers over creative, reflective ones.

Another objection to I.Q. tests is that they tend to equalize intelligence with cultural advantages. Children in prosperous surroundings show about four times as many above—125 I.Q. scores as their poorer, city-dwelling counterparts—not because of greater ability, but thanks to greater exposure to such cultural advantages as books and magazines.

Some educators have suggested that we throw out the standardized, machine-graded tests altogether, and rely on more individual methods of measuring intelligence. Whatever the solution, the Digest article suggests, we can no longer afford to overlook every potential source of brain-power. To increase our development of this potential, it is time for a long look at our present standards of measurement.

Entomology Assoc. Honors UMass' Professor M. Smith

It may be a man's world, but the nation's pest control operators think otherwise and are willing to back up their opinion.

A their annual convention in Miami, Fla., members of the National Pest Control Association passed a resolution to extend an honorary membership to Dr. Marion E. Smith, department of entomology and plant pathology in the College of Agriculture at the University.

So far as known, this is the first time that a woman has been so honored by the association. A certificate of membership will be presented Miss Smith here in January at the annual Eastern Pest Control Operators' Conference.

The resolution cites Dr. Smith for her distinguished record as a vital figure during the history of regional Eastern Pest Control Conferences, and her work in the preparation of insect identification keys and laboratory manuals used by participants in all regional conferences.

"The quiet industry and modesty of this rare scientist, teacher and co-worker render elusive any adequate expression of recognition of her helpful, multiple services to the pest control industry," the resolution concludes.

As assistant professor of entomology, Dr. Smith joined the staff in 1938. She received her B.S. and Master's degrees from the University, and her Ph.D. from the University of Illinois. Engaged in teaching, she is also curator of the department's insect collection.

International Club To Fete Tanganyika's Independence

On Tuesday, December 12, at 4:30 p.m., the International Club will hold a celebration for Tanganyika's Independence Day, in the Commonwealth room of the Student Union.

This information was announced today by Abdul Samma, president of the International Club, and an exchange student from Tanganyika.

Dr. Gwendolen Carter of Smith College, a distinguished authority on Africa south of the Sahara, will give the keynote address.

Tanganyika gains her independence from Britain on December 9. After the defeat of Germany in World War I, Britain gained control of the country. In 1946, it was made a trust territory under the U.N.

Although it contains three races, Africans, Asians, and Europeans, Tanganyika is one of the few countries where race relations are most cordial. The three races are working together, shoulder to shoulder, to build up the country.

The Frozen Rope

by DICK MACKLEM '62

During the recent winter baseball meetings in Miami Beach, only one team, the frustrated Chicago White Sox, had the gumption to try to improve their standings. Because the Yankees ran away with the race again last year and because the military call-up of many key young players left leading contenders hurting, the meetings were expected to be among the most active and most controversial in recent years. However, just about everyone stood still. The White Sox must be commended for their trading, because they traded away the nucleus of a certain first-division team and decided to try to catch the Yanks in the future. How many teams could trade away Minnie Minoso, Roy Sievers, Billy Pierce and Don Larsen in one week and still hope to have their fans behind them when the next season rolled around? Color, attendance, and next season in exchange for a faint hope for the future? It tells us at least that the whole league hasn't fallen dead before the Yanks. Let's have faith in the Chisox, our own team does nothing.

I rejoice because the two big "fights" the other night ended the way they did: Sonny Liston destroying Albert Westphal in 1:58 of the first round, and champion Pat Floyderson or Lloyd Flatterson, or whatever his name is, showing enough spark to retain his tarnished crown against overmatched, but courageous Tom McNeely of Arlington. The two bouts indicated several points which I think are worth listing:

First: that Sonny Liston, as corrupt as his background might be, is the only fighter today who can honestly contest the crown. (Did you see Eddie Machen vs. Doug Jones last Saturday p.m.?) it was a Russian Ballet with neither fighter even stunning the other over the distance. How sad. Gus D'Amato, Platerson's manager, stated Monday night that Liston can have his fight as soon as he rids himself of the corrupt element surrounding him. Second, that Albert Westphal should gather in his European cronies such as Brian London and Henry Cooper, and go run and hide until the Continent can legitimately contest the championship. Third, how amazing the powers of psychology and of the green folding stuff are! Pete Fuller, the Ivy League millionaire, nursed McNeeley along from the start and actually had young Tom believing that he was a better fighter, but rather, how soon would Tom knock him out? The tremendous psychological edge that Fuller gave Tom through fast living and fast talking speaks very highly of Pete's managerial ability; but their dream world has crashed to the ground. Nice try, boys; but now we must fold our tents and give boxing back to the underworld until another Ingo or young Tom is born.

Last Sunday the Boston Celtics decided to try an experiment; it worked amazingly well, and went further in proving just how great a team the Big Green really is. Playing without Bob Cousy, who had pulled a ligament in his knee, the Celts were scheduled to play the Cincinnati Royals, who with Oscar Robertson, Jack Twyman, and Red Embry, had upset the Green the week before, and who were averaging 124 points a game. Sam Jones played forward and guarded Twyman, K. C. Jones guarded Robertson, Satch Sanders played Red Embry, Tommy Heinsohn and Garry Phillips scored the points, Bill Russell played the "Hey, Bill" defense and the Royals scored their lowest total in many years, 96 points. The definition of the "Hey, Bill" defense comes from Twyman. When the Celtics are winning Russell never comes up the floor on a fast break. When the Celts don't score and the opponents get the rebound and start a break, and if Cousy or the Jones Boys can't steal the ball, they just stop and holler "Hey, Bill," where upon Russell, standing in the backcourt picks up and demolishes the entire fast break. Effective, what?

LESSON 5 - The importance of head control

We are told that bird watchers, who always take notes while they watch, are able to keep one eye on the bird and one eye on the notebook. Eye dexterity of this type is also a great asset to the girl watcher. It enables him to watch two girls at the same time, even when the girls are sitting on opposite sides of a classroom. The beginner, who must watch the girls one at a time in a situation of this type, must learn to restrict his movements to the eyeballs. The girl watcher never moves his head. Undue head-turning, particularly if it is accompanied by shouts or whistles, is the sign of the amateur. Paul Majeski and Tom Kirby Named to Captain Grid Squad

Paul Majeski, junior end from Westfield, Mass. and Tom Kirby, junior center from No. Adams, Mass. will co-captain the 1962 University of Massachusetts varsiy football squad following the selection at the squad's final meeting held yesterday.

Majeski, a physical education major who was a high school gridiron standout at Westfield, has been the Redmen's leading pass receiver for the past two years in addition to being one of the team's defensive standouts. Following a back injury in the Northeastern win, Majeski saw little service during the last four Massachusetts games and his presence was sorely missed as the team dropped three of these four encounters. A member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, Paul is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Majeski of Little River Road, Westfield.

Kirby, a native of North Adams, Mass. where he was an All Western Massachusetts center while playing for Drury High School, is also a physical education major. He has alternated at both guard and center this fall for Coach Vic Fusia and his staff.

Kirby is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kirby of 465 Union Street, North Adams.

Gymnastics Squad Will Host Ithaca

The University of Massachusetts' Varsity Gymnastics Team, coached by Bob James, will entertain Ithaca College for the initial meet of the 1961-62 season on Saturday, December 9. This meet will mark the first time that UMass has competed with Ithaca, a small college in central New York state.

This year's squad is captained by Charles Paydos '62, an excellent competitor on the parallel bars and the still rings. His efforts will be supported by Dave Yates '63, brilliant and graceful in free exercise; by Jim Adam '62, a better than average side horse man; by Bruce McCracken '63, a keen high bar man; and by Dexter Brown '64, a newcomer who shows excellent skill on the long horse.

Fans who arrive a little early for the 2 p.m. meet will have a chance to look over the colorful pictorial program which includes cludes a list of all required moves. By looking at the program, you can more readiiy follow these agile men through their routines. Spectators are continually amazed by the beauty and continuity of a performance.

COACH VIC FUSIA
With the class of the "Eagle" and the calmness of the "Turtle."

Sports Editorial:

Head Coach Vic Fusia— Strength Behind the Team

Coming to the UMass campus last spring, after the hasty departure of Chuck Studley, Coach Vic Fusia had his work cut out for him. The squad under Studley had put together the first winning season UMass had seen since 1952, and had won half of the honors in the Yankee Conference Bean Pot.

The schedule for this year's grid activities was the roughest Redmen teams or fans had ever seen, and Fusia was just stepping into the job.

What Coach Fusia has done with the Redmen is obvious. A winning season, despite serious injuries to the team and the lack of depth wihch plagued the squad throughout the season, was the final outcome. After performing better than anyone thought the team would do against Villanova, the Redmen went on to drub Connecticut, which hadn't been done by a UMass squad since 1954.

Even more important, Coach Fusia is vitally concerned with the character and scholarship of his athlettes and places football in a subordinate position to them. With this kind of combination in a coach it becomes evident that Coach Vic Fusia is the strength behind the team.

UMass fans are more football-minded than ever before and are looking for many good years of UMass football under Vic Fusia. I think the Collegian Sports Staff expresses the opinion of the campus when it says "Congragulations, coach, for a job well done."

Sister Colleges Plan 'Centennial Serenade'

The Student Centennial Committee met last Wednesday night to discuss the major events scheduled for 1963 concerning UMass students.

A "Centennial Serenade" is scheduled for the spring of 1963. It will be a combination of the orchestral and choral groups from our three sister colleges, Amherst, Smith and Mt. Holyoke, to be held on the UMass campus. It has been proposed that the program be taped and broadcast over WFCR-FM, the cooperative four-college radio station.

A 32 page pictoral history of UMass will highlight the 1962 Index. The photographs, taken during the last hundred years, will be of University scenes and people. This section may be reprinted as a separate publication.

The University band will perform as a tribute to Jonathan B. Turner (1805-1899) in Templeton during a commemorative ceremony on May 6, 1962. At this program, sponsored jointly by the UMass Centennial and Templeton Bicentennial committees, prizes for a high school essay contest will be awarded by the University. In honor of the landgrant educational movement, initiated by Turner, several University representatives will speak.

Prof. Tunis Will Head Research Staff At UMass Field Station In Waltham

Dr. William D. Tunis, associate professor of entomology in the College of Agriculture at UMass since 1959 and an alumnus with the Class of '49, has been appointed head of the University's Waltham Field Station at Waltham effective Oct. 3.

To Replace Dr. Havis

Dr. Tunis, who assumes his new post on Monday, succeeds Dr. John R. Havis, head of the station since 1954. Dr. Havis asked to be relieved of his administrative duties in order to devote full time on research as a member of the horticulture department on campus, said Dean of Agriculture Arless A. Spielman in announcing Dr. Tunis' appointment.

As the new director of the field station, Dr. Tunis will head up a staff of 14 professional persons specializing in the fields of entomology and plant pathology, landscape architecture, veterinary science and horticulture.

Station Conducts Research

The Waltham Field Station is a part of the College of Agriculture and conducts research projects in horticulture with special emphasis on vegetable gardening, floriculture and nurseryculture. Extension programs in commercial and home horticulture, a shade tree laboratory and a poultry diagnostic laboratory provide other services and activities for residents of the state.

From 1949 to 1951, Dr. Tunis was a teaching assistant in entomology at the University of Minnesota, obtaining his Master's Degree in the latter year. From 1952 to 1959, he served as Extension entomologist at the University of Connecticut. He received his Ph.D. from the University in 1959.

Has Written Articles

Dr. Tunis is the author and coauthor of numerous Cooperative Extension publications, Agricultural Experiment Station research bulletins and technical journal articles. As Extension entomologist, he has been responsible for the publication of material dealing with the control of fruit and vegetable insect pests of concern to commercial growers, and for literature on home garden and household insect control.

The new Walham Field Station head is a member of the Entomological Society of America, American Institute of Biological Sciences, Sigma Xi, a professonal honorary society, and Phi Kappa Phi.

MILI BALL WEEKEND

Jackie Washington, Boston Folk Singer, will perform in the S.U. Ballroom on Sunday afternoon of Mili Ball weekend.

Jackie sings in Boston at such places as the "Golden Vanity", and did a show for the summer school students here last summer. He has sometimes been described as a cross between Belafonte and Mathis.

More will be said about Jackie Washington in Friday's Collegian. A 25 cent admission will be charged.

Dr. Johansson Aids Vermont Map Survey

A good neighbor policy between Vermont and Massachusetts has helped in producing a new and authoritative geological map of the Green Mountain state.

Among Massachusetts geologists called upon to assist in the project was Dr. Warren I. Johansson, assistant professor of geology at the University. Dr. Johansson, working with Dr. B. G. Woodland, formerly of UMass and now geological curator at the Chicago Museum of Natural History, spent the past four summers surveying the large wilderness areas of Essex and Caledonia counties in Vermont.

10 Years Needed For Completion

The major project, involving about 50 geologists in all, has taken a decade to complete. It commemorates the 100th anniversary of the completion of the Edward Hitchcock Geological Map. Dr. Hitchcock, who was a president of Amherst College, was Vermont's first state geologist.

The new bedrock map, printed in color to a scale of 1:250,000, clearly shows the distribution of the important rock formations in Vermont. Complexities of the state's geology are shown in six cross-sections of rock structure. There are also metamorphic and tectonic geology maps accompanying the larger map.

To Be Basis For Modern Studies

The Centennial Map will serve as a basis for modern studies and should prove valuable to mining and exploration companies, civil engineers, geologists, mineralogists, teachers and others interested in the earth sciences.

Information about obtaining copies of the map should be addressed to the Vermont State Library at Montpelier.

ROTC Will Hold Annual Mili Ball Tomorrow Night

The annual Military Ball, social highlight of the Reserve Officer Training Corps program at the University, will be held tomorrow evening in the ballroom of the Student Union. Army and Air Force cadets will dance to the music of Bob Bachelder ad his orchestra starting at 8 p.m.

Janet Wehmann To Present Cape

Climax of the gala evening will be the presentation of the traditional military cape to the new Honorary Lt. Colonel by incumbent Janet Wehmann of Berkeley Heights, New Jersey. Five pretty girls have outbattled 30 recruits to become finalists in the competition. One will receive the coveted promotion assigning her to serve a one-year hitch as Honorary Lt. Colonel.

The five candidates are: Sheila Ryan of Swampscott, Sue Lydon of Walham, Marilynn Anderson of Auburn, Joan Werner of Barre, and Jeanne Mullaney of Worcester.

Cadet dress will be class 'A' with white shirt and black bow tie. Guests should be in formal attire.

Confederate Uniforms Permissible

Any federally recognized uniform will be acceptable. Confederate uniforms will be permitted in honor of the centennial of the civil war.

A large number of formally-garbed cadets from the 2,000 members corps will attend. Arrangements for the Ball have been under the general chairmanship of Cadet John R. Wylde of Pittsfield.

Redmen Open Hoop Season With Last-Minute 75-71 Win

by AL BERMAN '62, Editor-in-Chief

Somebody forgot to tell Pete Bernard that basketball is a big man's game. Nobody mentioned to him that because he was the smallest man on the court he wasn't supposed to be a hero.

The 5'8" soph from Brockton made a mockery of the old basketball cliches as he came into the Redmen lineup Wednesday night at the Cage and singlehandedly stole victory from the B.U. Terriers. Scoring 17 points in nine minutes, the chunky Bernard couldn't do anything wrong as he sparked up the hitherto lifeless UMass forces to save them from what seemed an almost sure defeat.

Started Slowly

Both teams were playing their first game of the season and were fairly cold during the first few minutes of the game. By midway point, however, tne Redmen had pulled out to a 25-17 lead.

Then B.U. started to warm up and close the gap. After tying the knot at 34-all with 2:30 left, the Terriers went on to chalk up a 40-36 lead at the halftime buzzer.

After their momentary spurt early in the first half, the Redmen seemed to fall victims of carelessness, sloppy ball handling and panic. In frantic, unthinking attempts to stop the rapidly approaching Terriers, they made costly errors, allowing B.U. to catch up with and overtake them.

B.U. Rolls

The story was much the same as the second half began. B.U. pulled further and further ahead. Coach Matt Zunic kept using different player combinations on the floor, but nothing seemed to stop the Terriers, who were coasting on the tails of Larry McNulty and Mike Cotton.

By 12:00 B.U. had opened up a 14-point breach, and everyone at the press table had begun writing the leads to their stories.

Even the spirited UMass fans began to lose hope when the Redmen hadn't made any headway by 10:00, when the score stood at

Marston Gets Land-Grant Assn. Post

George A. Marston, Dean of the School of Engineering at UMass, has been elected to a major liaison post in the Senate of the American Association of Land-Grant Colleges and State Universities.

Dean Marston, who attended the recent Land-Grant Centennial meeting of the Association in Kansas City, Mo., will be representative of the Association's Division of Engineering to the Senate. He will serve for a three-year term.

The Massachusetts educator has served as chairman of the nominating committee of the Division of Engineering and as divisional secretary and chairman. He is also vice-president in the American Society for Engineering Education with responsibility for all sections east of the Mississippi. In that capacity, Dean Marston attended the ASEE meeting also held in Kansas City.

Accompanying Dean Marston to the latter session was Prof. Joseph S. Marcus of he University's civil engineering dpartment. Prof. Marcus attended as delegate to the ASEE Council from the New England Section.

Mellon Vetoes Tanks' Movement On Campus

by AUDREY RAYNER '63

The armored tank has disappeared from its annual pre-military ball stance in front of the Student Union.

The reason, according to Major Roderick Huff, is Superintendent of Grounds George Mellon's refusal to allow any of the oversized vehicles to be moved anywhere on campus. Apparently the tanks are ruinous to the surrounding roads. However, Mellon was unavailable for comment.

The problem arose this year because the tanks have been moved twice a day instead of remaining stationary, as in the past. Major Huff's comment on this fact was that it "isn't safe as far as property responsibility is concerned . . . restitution for a tank is too great; we couldn't afford to leave it out." The tank carries 160 gallons of highly flammable fuel.

Besides being forbidden to run the tanks back and forth to the Student Union, the military was not allowed to continue with their "grandiose plans" for transporting the Mili Ball Queen candidates around the campus on Wednesday.

Synthesis, a four-college pacifist group which had met to organize a program picketing the S.U. Circle, was prevented from its protest when the tanks failed to appear for the Mili Ball promotion.

Worthy Students To Receive Grants For Extension Work

by DICK HAYNES '64

Twenty $250 scholarships will be awarded in 1962 to undergraduate students of Land-Grant Colleges who are interested in extension work as a career. The scholarships are made available by Charles Pfizer and Company, Inc. through the Federal Extension Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The grants are awarded to recognize outstanding students in professional extension education courses and to motivate their interest in extension work as a career.

Scholarships are offered to juniors and must be used toward expenses in county field experience. Awards will be made by a national selection committee on he basis of: academic standing, interest in extension work as a career, record of 4-H Club work, leadership ability, and a paper by the candidate on "A Plan of Work for an Extension Animal Health Program," or "A Plan of Work for Teaching the Relation of Animal Health to Human Health."

Room For All

Very seldom does one see spirit displayed as it was at Curry Hicks cage two nights ago. And this spontaneous excitement could not have chosen a more propitious moment for is inception.

Not only has the campus been wallowing the depths of apathy for several months now, but Wednesday night welcomed the opening of the 1961-62 basketball season for Head Coach Mat Zunic as well as the initiation of the Redman Sports Network with its thousands of listeners. Had Wednesday's game never occurred in the fashion it did, the apathy might have deepened, Zunic's charges might have met a serious setback in the way of team morale, and many western Massachusetts radio fans might have listened to their last game.

The enthusiasm was wonderful. Massachusetts listeners were given an earful of the kind of spirit which its college students hold and savor. Peter Bernard was magnificent, Zunic was happy, the Network and its sponsors were pleased, and UMass came out of Curry Hicks with the knowledge of how useful and entertaining collegiate athletics can be. Wednesday night, without shame, could have taken its place beside any concert, dramatic production, or literary reading. There is room for all under the roof of the University.

REVIEW: Winter Concert

The UMass concert band performed its annual Winter Concert in fine fashion Saturday night before crowd in Bowker Auditorium. The band treated its audience to selections ranging from a Concerto Grosso by Handel to songs from Bernstein's West Side Story.

Outstanding throughout the entire program were the clarinets and flutes, particularly the three soloists: Bonny Waye (flute), Norma Wolfson (flute) and Allen Blustine (clarinet). The latter's performance was so distinguished that he earned a special handshake from conductor Prof. Joseph Contino at the conclusion of the concert.

It is difficult to single out a particular selection as being better than the others. From the opening Overture in C of Catel through the remainder of the program the band displayed fine musicianship, undoubtedly the result of an excellent job of direction by Professor Contino.

The audience realized and appreciated the quality of the performance by calling conductor Contino back for an encore, and would have had still more encores had not Contino shruggingly admitted that the band had nothing else prepared. The polished job of the concert band leaves us looking forward already to the Spring Concert.

EXCELLENCE "KICK"

A Student's Responsibility

To the Editor:

I would hate to think that the main reason for participation in an extra-curricular activity is to 'serve' the Unversity, as the Collegian suggests in its editorial, "The Excellence Kick"' On the other hand, I take objection to Paul J. Cassidy's opinion that academics lies solely within the curricula as such. I would rather think that the "reason for the existence (of) the University of Massachusetts" is to give its students more than the facts and theories that they learn in their courses. It is to give them an education. It is to teach them to think.

When deciding if a particular extra-curricular activity is worth his time a student should weigh carefully the benefits of the activity versus the possible harm participation might do to his classroom studies. If he can participate at no expense to his studies, then by all means he owes it to himself to do so.

There shall be times, however, when this participation will result in the lowering of his academic average. This is the time when the student must ask himself if he shall benefit enough to warrent the lower quality point average he will find on his little yellow sheet of paper come the end of the semester.

There shall be times when a student can say yes to this question. He can realize his responsibility to himself as a student, ignore University recognition of his excellence, lower his average, and still gain by his decision.

It would be idealistic to believe that all students who have participated in an extra-curricular activity have gained by their participation. It would be just as idealistic to believe that all students whose grades have suffered at the hands of the extra-curricular activity have participated after making the carefully thought out decision that I described. Nor am I suggesting that the University should devise a system of recognizing the true excellence a student is striving to attain by making such a decision. This is impossble.

I am suggesting that every student should realize that his first responsibility is to himself as a student, and know that his excellence as a student cannot always be rewarded except as such rewards shall exist within himself.

Aerospace Views

I would like to apologize to Airman Guzowski for having incorrectly named the Skybolt (which has just been placed in the Air Force inventory) as the missile aimed at a Russian target in my article of December first. It concerns me very much to learn of this mistake, not so much because I was wrong, but because this means that we do not send a plane to within 1,000 miles of our enemy, but instead, because of the Houndog's limited range, are forced to send such a potentially destructive weapon to within 500 miles of the U.S.S.R. on a practice alert.

I am entertained by Mr. Guzowski's wonderful hallucination. I had no idea that our scientists had devised a way for the crew of a plane travelling just under supersonic speed to crawl out onto the wing, climb aboard the missile, arm the warhead after the missile is launched (thereby riding it half way to the target), and then to reappear magically wihin their craft (which is waiting for them hundreds of miles away) so hat they can return to their blown up base to die (or fly) happily ever after.

It seems that Mr. Guzowski has not been as attentive in ROTC as he would have me be, since ne missed the fact that the warheads of these missles are armed after being released from the plane. It is true that in the past most or all of the crew took part in arming the bombs manually as they lay within the bombays just prior to dropping. Indeed, this involved quite an intricate series of procedures, including key insertions, combination settngs, and the like; however, I would expect the most unscientific individual to induce that arming could only be accomplished electronically by radio signal once the missle has been released. This is a long way from and a lot riskier than manual arming, Mr. Mitchell, despite the fact that the Air Force utilizes dual controls. No one in our A.F.R.O.T.C. department knows that two men, only two, Mr. Mitchell, must each throw a switch at the same time. I had been told that only one man did it, and only found the truth in an Air Force Journal while preparing this article. But even if five, ten, or twenty men had to make the decision, mass hysteria and incompetance are realities.

I'm afraid Mr. Guzowski has missed my whole point. The Air Force itself states that "safety devices are incorporated into our weapon systems to assure safety for personnel and weapon systems. Still the hurried, unthinking, careless person can always defeat any device." Further, such accidents as the blowing up of a missle because a crew of skilled armament personnel installed a destructive package out of sequence are "not a rarity. To the contrary, they appear with great regularity." (Aerospace Safety—June, 1961) One of the Air Force's own top disarmament experts asserts that "once there is a possibility [for accidental war], there is a probability associated with it," and that "we need serious, hard, inventive, imaginative, massive, expensive work on the subject of disarmament and arms control . . . There are, presently, no real experts on disarmament; there are only experts in talking about it." (Air Force & Space Digest—May, 1961) The Air Force itself expresses fear because (1) We do not know how meticulous Russia is in her safety precautions, (2) before long both countries will have too man ybombs and missiles hidden to be found and either monitored or destroyed (EVEN VOLUNTARILY BECAUSE OF OUR INADEQUATE RETROACTIVE BOOKKEEPING SYSTEM-WE DON'T KNOW WHERE ALL OUR NUCLEAR BOMBS ARE!), and (3) a war could be started by a third country which felt it had something to gain from the mutual desrucion of the U.S. and Russia. The Air Force, itself, feels that we had better hurry and use the deterrant force it is providing before it is too late . . .

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Accidental War

To the Editor:

I would like to put a couple of simple questions to those whose minds are oriented along the lines expressed by Mr. David S. Mitchell.

First of all, since the United States and the Soviet Union both possess the capacity to annihilate tens,if not hundreds, of millions of human beings, and since any use of the "massive strengths" of these nations would mean the utter destruction of anything resembling organized society, if not virually all life, WHAT DO THESE ARSENALS DEFEND?

Secondly, if all the men in command of these arsenals, on both sides, realize that the power of the other has eliminated the possibility of any outcome other than destruction and extermination, in other words, that "victory" is now a nonsense word, and that any offensive means suicide, WHY CAN'T WE AGREE TO ELIMINATE THESE WEAPONS?

And finally, if we agree that the use of these weapons is absurd and impossible, but still cannot agree to junk them, IS NOT THE ONLY REMAINING THREAT THE THREAT OF ACCIDENTAL USE, the accident being misinterpretation of radar or other warnings and the deliberate triggering of the bombs if not their accidental triggering?

Alumni Association

To the Editor:

On Saturday, December 2, Plymouth Dormitory put on a dance in Memorial Hall. Socially and Financially it was a success. Over 300 students attended it in the course of the evening.

The surprising fact about this is that this was the first dance to be held in Memorial Hall in Four years. As president of Plymouth Dorm, I decided to write this letter as a public vote of thanks to the Alumni of this University for allowing us the use of their hall. I hope that this has set a precedent for future use, as the hall is in a very good location for social activities.

Again I wish to thank the Alumni Association for their help and cooperation in making our dance a success. Also, to the student body, and in particular to those who came, I want to express my gratitude for your acceptance and support, and I hope that you will see fit, in the future, to be at other dances at Memorial Hall, as I feel sure that there will be many.

Women's Blue Laws

The Women's Rules on this campus, it is true, need revision. Many are as outmoded as the Blue Laws.

The big question seems to be closing hours and are the girls responsible enough to be put on their own. In answer to this I say that any junior or senior girl, especially 21 years old and over, who soon will be cast out on the world to shift for herself and live by her own rules, will by this time have her own moral code plus intelligence to know what is best for her. She knows how hard it is to stay in school and has planned her life accordingly. She doesn't need babying.

The two lower classes, for their own good, should have specific curfew hours. Let's face it—the men on our campus are irrestible and girls off on their own for probably the first time in their lives are persuadable to say stay out later than would be good for them study-wise, among other things. All night parties would be tempting but impractical. Also, curfew puts an end to these at a reasonable hour.

However, the prowler problem is a real and a serious one. This can be solved by the system used in many schools. The doors are locked at a certain hour, but the junior and senior women are issued keys and can enter when they like. Violation of this right means loss of the key by the offender for the rest of the semester. This would cut the possibility of lending down considerably.

In addition, Sunday's closing hour should be changed to 12 since this is the day many girls are returning to campus from an away weekend, which for many may be quite distant.

In connection with this, the Dean of Women's Office might get together with members of the Women's Affairs Committee and any student representatives desiring to work on the problem and reach a rational answer.

Finalists Choose Cocktail Dresses For Mili Ball

Excitement is running high as everyone looks forward to the Military Ball Saturday night. All eyes will be on the candidates for queen as everyone awaits the crowning.

Joan Werner will be wearing a short length gown of white lace with gold threads running through and a gold cummerbund. Her shoes will be white gold. Joanie will be escorted by Atkin Simonian, a junior at Brown University.

Lynne Anderson will wear a nylon organdy cocktail dress with a Sweetheart neckline. A two tone blue Gingham print, the dress has a white embroidery border on the skirt. She will be wearing blue satin shoes. Dick Maloy, a UMass. freshman, will escort her.

Jeanne Mullaney will be wearing a red satin cocktail dress with a bell shaped skirt. The dress has a straight neckline with thin shoulder straps. Jeanne will wear matching red shoes. Dennis Snay, a junior at Worcester Tech will be her escort.

Sue Leydon's dress is a pink chiffon cocktail dress with a V shaped neck line and wide matching belt. Her shoes are of the same color. Sue will be escorted by Dennis Morrissey, a sophomore here at UMass.

Appearing in a white chiffon cocktail length dress will be Shiela Ryan. Her dress has a narrow mint green satin band on the waist and a satin mint green bow at the center of the waist in the back. The bow has long mint green streamers hanging from it. The bodice is white chiffon with mint green embroidery and the same color spaghetti straps. Shiela has green satin dyed to match shoes. Escorting her will be Brian Graves, a UMass Junior.

Musigals To Appear During Intermission Of I.F.C. Skits

The Musigals will appear during the intermission of the I.F.C. Skits Friday night. They will sing an arrangement especially dedicated to the fraternity men as well as songs of the barbershop and acappella types.

This new women's singing group started off the year by appearing at the Inter-Dorm Sing. Subsequently they sang for an Amherst town banquet, the Newman Club Dance, the Fall Fashion Show, the Senior Mix, and the Eastern Newspaper Editors Convention.

The group has been asked to sing at various other functions such as the Northampton Rotary Club's Annual Christmas Party, the UMass. Football Banquet, the Dames Club and the Extension Club. The Musigals are especially proud to be singing at President Lederle's annual Christmas Party on December 16th.

The Musigals were organized last spring by Jayne Hayden, Alsie Edgerton, and Fran Lovejoy, the leader of the Statesmen. All-university try-outs were held at this time. The name "Musigals" was coined by the group's advisor, Mrs. Field, Dwight's housemother.

The officers of the group are Alsie Edgerton, Leader; Carrie Sherriff, Business Manager; Jayne Hayden, Spokesman; Carol Scobie, Secretary; and Pat Oliveira, Treasurer.

Career Cues:

"This age of specialization opens special opportunities for the well-rounded man!"

Robert Saudek, President
Robert Saudek Associates, Inc.

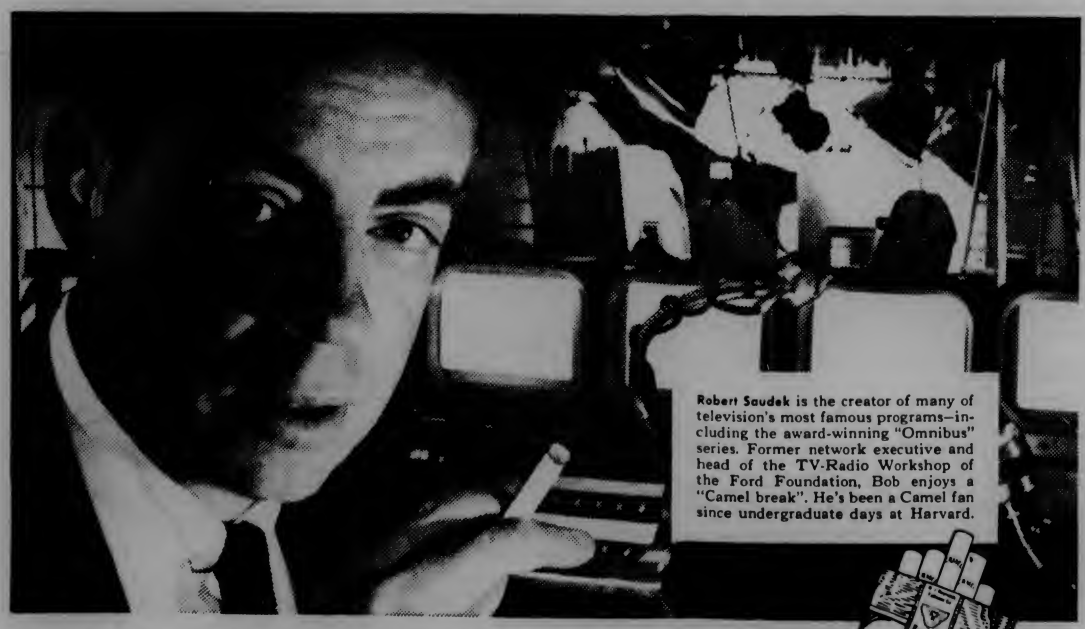
"The more specialists society creates to cope with its complexities, the easier it can be for a non-specialist to achieve success.

If that seems paradoxical, look at it this way: the more men who go out for specific positions on the ball club, the more chance you have to wind up as manager!

Today's world—in government, business, the arts, even science—needs the well-rounded man. He's the man who can see the entire picture...the man who can draw on a broad background of knowledge, evaluate the problem, then assign the details to specialists.

The world of entertainment may seem somewhat special, but it's a case in point. These days, it demands more of its people than ever before. Today's musical comedy score is often as sophisticated as grand opera. Drama draws heavily on psychology and history. Television productions are concerned with nuclear science and political science. If you've ever watched 'Omnibus' you may have seen how our productions have run the gamut of a wide range of man's interests.

So I suggest to you that even though you may concentrate on one special field of interest, keep your viewpoint broad. Keep your college curriculum as diversified as possible. Attend lectures and concerts, the theatres and museums. Above all, read and read, and listen and listen! But pay scant heed to the oracle who says there's no route to the top but that of specialization. I don't believe it!"



And for a special kind of smoking satisfaction...

Dr. Fairbairn Named Zoo Department Head

A Canadian scientist, Dr. Donald Fairbairn, has been named Commonwealth professor and head of the department of zoology at UMass, it was announced by Provost Gilbert L. Woodside.

Dr. Fairbairn, 45, is recognized as a leading researcher and teacher in the field of parasite biochemistry. Presently associate professor of parasitology at McGill University in Montreal, ne succeeds Dr. Woodside who headed the zoology department for 12 years prior to becoming provost in 1961. Dr. Fairbairn's appointment is effective Sept., 1962.

DR. DONALD FAIRBAIRN

Will Head Zoology Faculty

Dr. Fairbairn will head the zoology faculty of 16 full-time members. He will supervise all teaching and research activities, including the University's work in electron microscopy. Acting head of the department since January has been Dr. Lawrence Bartlett, professor of zoology.

Taught At Queen's and McGill

The new department head has had extensive teaching and research experience. A member of the Canadian Army during World War II, he worked on classified research in laboratories in Canada, the United States, and the United Kingdom. After the war, he taught at Queen's University in Canada until his appointment to the McGill Universiy faculty in 1946. In 1959, he was granted a year's leave to work on problems in pathobiology at the Johns Hopkins University.

Author of many articles in parasite biochemistry and other fields, he is associate editor of the American Journal of Hygiene, a member of the editorial board of Experimental Parasitology, and official referee for the Canadian Journal of Zoology.

Currently Conducting Research

A council member of the American Society of Parasitologists and one of the few foreign members of the study section of Parasitology and Tropical Diseases of the U.S. Public Health Service, Dr. Fairbairn is currently conducting research under substantial grants from the latter agency and from Canada's National Research Council. He was recently appointed to a committee of the U.S. National Institute of Healh studying the feasibility of establishing parasitology training centers in American institutions.

APPLE POLISH HOUR

There will be a faculty student FIRESIDE CHAT December 14, 1961, at 4:00 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge of the S.U. Members of the Education Department have been cordially invited as honored guests.

Each month the Special Events Committee under Sudent Union Programming sponsors these informal hours for faculty and students. The name's changed—from Apple Polish Hour to Fireside Chat—but the program's the same!

Grad School Will Award 62 Degrees

Sixty-two graduate students have been named recipients of advanced degrees at the University of Massachusetts, the Graduate School announced Tuesday.

The list includes, master of arts, Robert L. Gonsor, Holyoke; David B. King, East Brookfield; John M. Lovejoy, North Wilbraham and Leon R. Pomeroy, Westfield.

Master of education, Howard C. Barre, Spencer; David M. Bartley, Holyoke; John R. Dayle, Jr., Springfield; Katherine Mary Finn, Northampton; William Russell Holland, South Hadley Falls; Frank E. Kenison, Brattleboro, Vt.; Kendall B. McClure, Northampton; Daniel Roger Morrison, Easthampton; John A. Murphy, Jr., Greenfield; Ivy Isherwood Naumowicz, Amherst; Constance E. Petroski, Amherst; Mrs. Finis M. Reed, Hadley; James L. Rushford, Greenfield; John Joseph Shea, Adams; John Alfred Siano, Greenfield; Mrs. Marilyn G. Singer, Amherst; Donald Skib, South Vernon, Vt.; Richard Keith Sullivan, Great Barrington; Edward I. Werenski, Amherst and Richard J. Zanini, Housatonic.

Master of science, Elwin Ralph Boyden, Montague Center; Alan R. Corwin, Springfield and Winston H. Lavallee, Great Barrington.

"What's In A Name?" Discussed By Article

Ever wonder how a place got its name? Or what the name means?

Writer Gary Jennings did and from his curiosity has come an article titled "Why Did They Call It That?" which appears in the December Reader's Digest.

Among the conclusions Jennings came to was that many of our early settlers were hungry or thirsty. This may be a natural assumption in view of the historic travails of explorers and discoverers. But Jennings bases his case on more than history; he cites such names as Bread Loaf and Sugar Loaf Mountains and Martha's Vineyard, among others, as evidence of our forebears' gastronomic interest. They were tired also if the proliferation of names such as Kate Comfort are proper indications.

Indian names, which we surround with an air of mystery and romance, are somewhat more prosaic than we like to think. For example the lovely Indian word "she-ka-gong," which in transliteration became Chicago, actually means "stinking river."

Occasionally citizens will realize the publicity value of a name-change for their community, as happened recently when the tiny community of Tightsqueeze, Va., changed its name to Fairview. Dazzled by breaking into news columns with this switch, the town fathers promptly changed the name back to Tightsqueeze and made headlines again!

Newman Club Hears Talk On Marriage Preparation

The Newman Club was honored to hear Reverend John Knott speak about "Preparing for Marriage." For many years Reverend has been national director of the Catholic Family Life Bureau whose home is in Washington, D.C.

Father spoke of the many external factors that cause a marriage to dissolve. He explained that all marriages are effected by one of many factors, such as alcoholism or money, but marriage will last only if its interior life is strong.

The deepest human hunger is to love and be loved. Unless these two needs are satisfied, a marriage may remain only because of human respect, habit, religion or some other reason, but the couple is not truly married. Babies, provided with every hospital convenience will die in an orphanage unless individual care and love is given to them.

Father offered a few suggestions to those thinking of marriage. He said not to bother reading marriage manuals, they are a waste of time. Marriage, he said, is for adults and demands sacrifice. A partner must put the other partner in first place. Pick out someone who knows how to love. An absolute must for the married is a sense of humor.

Father also mentioned the Christian attitude of sex as one of sacredness. Both husband and wife cooperate with God in the initiating of life and in its final perfection. Marriage demands a sense of vocation, concluded the Reverend.

Converter Servicing Continues

It has been disclosed by the Student Senate Public Relations Committee that over Thanksgiving vacation WMUA reviewed all the present converters in the dorms.

Since WMUA proposed their new policy (Collegian, Nov. 1), to be voted on by the Senate this spring, much concern has been shown over the discontinuation of the FM converters. During the past month Betsy Robicheau has been working with the WMUA coverter problem in the Finance Committee. The committee has held two meetings with WMUA and has the matter under further consideration.

Many hours have been spent in repairing and restoring the converters to operational level, although WMUA has expressed their doubts in the practicality and legality of the converters. Due to the efforts of Dave Mainwaring and the Student Senate the dorms will have FM converter service for the rest of the school year.

Increased Size Of Campus Is Creating Time Problems

With the increase in size of our campus, there seems to be an increase in problems. One of our most recent problems is the time factor involved in getting from or to the new Education Building. It is the furthest building from the central point on our campus.

Students without cars and those who eat in sororities or fraternities are reportedly finding it quite a chore to get to this building on time. It has been measured at more than a mile from one of the fraternities.

One of the students commented: "It takes me nearly 20 minutes to get from the Education Building to Bartlett, and when I have a quiz the professor doesn't wait, but we are the ones who suffer from it." This is typical of the comments that are heard.

One of the professors in the Education Dept. starts her classes five minutes earlier so that the students get out at quarter of the hour, but this doesn't solve the problem.

With an increase in educational facilities, there should be a realization of the new problems associated with them.

Marlboro—campus favorite in all 50 states!

...It's a top seller at colleges from U.S.C. to Yale
...and 1st in the Flip-Top box in every single state

If you think you're seeing more Marlboro men lately, you're right. More than 25,000 smokers all over the country are switching to Marlboro every month!

You'll know why when you try them.

Marlboro is the filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste. The secret of the flavor is the famous Marlboro recipe from Richmond, Virginia... and the pure white Selectrate filter that goes with it.

Try Marlboro and judge for yourself. On or off campus, you get a lot to like.

Pete Bernard Scores 19 in Final Quarter To Pace Redmen Over Boston Univ., 75-71

64-50.

Then Bernard came on the scene. He quickly made a jump and converted a pass from Kirk Leslie into two points.

After a foul shot by B.U., Charlie LaPier hit a jump, then stole a pass and missed an all-alone layup. But guess who was there to sink the rebound?

At 6:45 it was 65-60, B.U. The UM stands were in pndemonium. Just a few minutes before their team had been an almost hopeless 14 points behind and now they had come to within striking distance of the Terriers. Fans began to remember the UM-BU football game, and wanted revenge. So loud was their cheering and so strong their stomping that announcer Hugh Calkin had to ask them to try and calm down, or else the stands would collapse.

Last Breath

In a dying effort, B.U. scored four quick points on baskets by McNulty and Cotton, to dampen spirits a little. But Pete Bernard came back with a basket and a free throw. Then Don Black hit on a hook and Bernard stole the ball and scored again to bring the Redmen to a two point deficit with five minutes left.

Realizing that Bernard was of their good thing by just giv-hot, the Redmen made the most of their good thing by just giving him the ball and letting him go. He then bombed a long jumper to tie the score.

UMass retrieved the rebound from a wayward McNulty jump shot, fed to Bernard, and went ahead for the first time in the half, 71-69.

B.U. tied it up at 71-all, but LaPier and Bernard put the game on ice for the Redmen by hitting on successive shots.

Dribbling Around

Not only did Bernard save the game offensively, but also his fine defensive hounding of the B.U. guards caused the Terriers to make many miscues and lose the ball in crucial situations . . . Sub Mike Johnson came in late in the game and made a vital block of a Mike Cotton layup when the little B.U. guard had broken in all alone. The score was then 73-71 UMass, and a B.U. hoop then could have been troublesome. . . . Boston University has only a seven-man squad, of which six played in the game. This might be one explanation of how the Redmen were able to reverse the trend of the game so completely in the final minutes. Coach Zunic had been substituting freely, and the Massmen were not nearly as tired in the final minutes as the Terriers . . . Another factor in the UM win was the outstanding backing and support given the team by the fans. The steady "go-go-go" from the stands had its effect . . .

Playmaker DICK CONLIN dives in for the layup while Boston University Guard John Clarke tries to stop him.

Still Dribbling

It'll be a surprise if Bernard doesn't start Saturday against Rutgers. He's won the hearts of UMass fans and if he doesn't score another point all season his performance Wednesday night won't be forgotten . . . The next home game is Tuesday night, when the UConn Huskies invade the Cage for the first YanCon game of the season . . . This is a big one, as UMass and UConn are expected to fight it out for the Conference Crown with defending champ URI . . . What game could have been better to start off the season and the infant Redmen Sports Radio Network than the B.U. contest? It couldn't have been planned any better!

Freshman Hoopsters Outclass Worcester Junior By 67-54

by AL COHEN '63

The freshman basketball team, under the direction of Jack Leaman, opened the 1961-62 season with a convincing 67-54 win over Worcester Junior College in last Wednesday night's preliminary in the Cage.

Leaman, in his first year as freshman coach, featured a well-balanced attack against Worcester. Jack, a graduate of Boston University, captained the team that went to the Eastern Regional Finals of he N.C.A.A. when Matt Zunic was head coach at Boston.

John Hoss of the Braves, a 6'5" center from Rockland opened the scoring with a foul toss. Clarence Hill, a flashy 6'1" guard from Washington, D.C. then set the pace with three layups to put the fast-breaking Braves ahead by 7-1. With Hill moving the team and Co-Captain Steve Bonds dominating the boards, the Leamans pulled away from their shorter opponents. Bonds, another Washington, D.C. resident, electrified the crowd with his rebounding and defensive tactics.

Gerry Knight, a 6'3" guard from Somerville sparked the Braves to the biggest lead of the first half. Gerry came off the bench and hit for eight straight points in a hurry. His ninth point made it 27-13, However, Worcester, behind the shooting of diminutive guard Jack D'Elio, narrowed the gap to 29-19 by halftime.

Hill began the second half with another driving layup and from then on Worcester offered no threat. Hill, with his ball hawking and the board control of Bonds, Hoss and Amherst's Charlie O'Rourke, gave the home forces the biggest lead of the night at 51-35.

Hill led all scorers with 26 but was closely followed by Worcester's D'Elia with 25. Bonds and Knight each contributed 11. Both Knight and Hill displayed a lot of backcourt savvy as did Springfield's Charlie Kingston. Big men O'Rourke and Hoss impressed in the forecourt. O'Rourke, whose father was a former UMass football coach, showed he could shoot as well as rebound. He had eight markers to his credit. Guard Jim Neary failed to score but worked the ball well.

The victory . meant revenge for the Little Redmen. Worcester beat them twice last year. Worcester is now 3-2 on this season, the frosh are 1-0. The real test for Coach Leaman will come on December 12 when Connecticut's always strong Pups engage the Frosh in another Cage preliminary.

UMass Swimmers Are Unable To Catch MIT

by KIM WALLACE '64

The University of Massachusetts varsity swim team dropped its first meet on Tuesday evening, losing by a 39-55 margin to MIT at Boston.

Coach Roger's mermen took six first places in eleven events, but couldn't muster enough strength in gaining second and third spots to gather points for a victory. Also, because of a lack of depth, the Redmen were unable to enter two events—diving and the 400 yard medley relay, thus losing both events by forfeit.

Leaders for the UMass squad were Mat Rutkowski and Bruce Morton. Rutkowski took first place in the 100 yard freestyle, second in the 200 yard freestyle, and was a member of Massachusetts' winning 400 yard freestyle relay. Morton won the 220 yard backstroke and took a second place in the 200 individual medley.

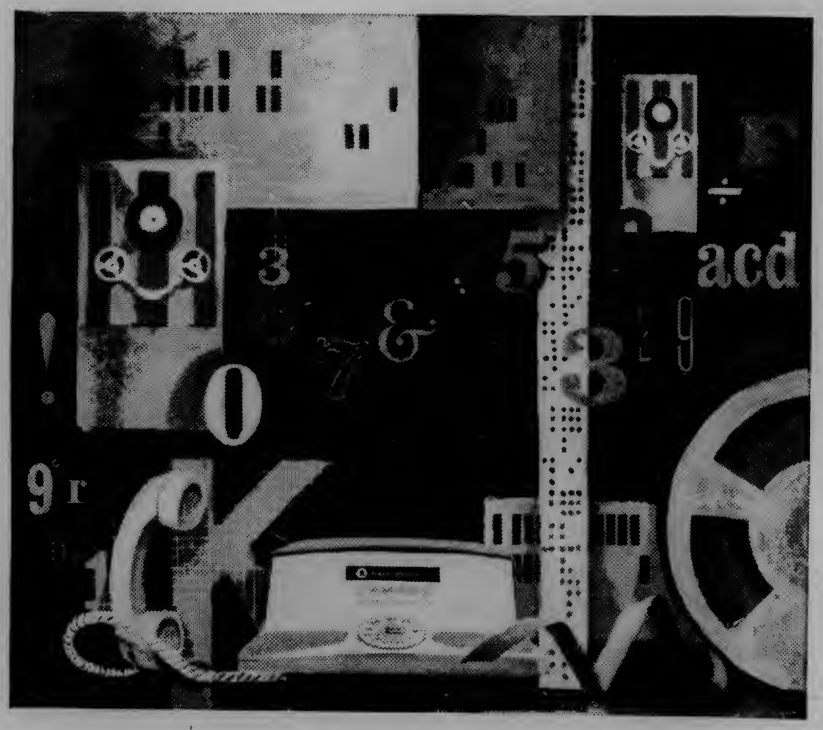
Creditable performances were also turned in by Brendon O'Neil, who won the 100 yard butterfly, Mike Rothschild, a winner in the 440 yard freestyle, and John Grypko, who placed first in the 200 yard breaststroke.

A new pool record was set by Bill Matson in the 50 yard freestyle with a time of 23.7.

The freshmen squad lost its first meet also, losing 35-47 to the MIT freshmen.

Dan O'Mera was the Massachusetts freshmen squad's best competitor with a first in the 100 yard breastroke and a second in the 200 yard individual medley. Other top swimmers were Pape, Monnier, Francisco, O'Sullivan, and Daly.

Coach Roger's squad will meet Wesleyan on Dec. 13 at the Men's Physical Education Pool.



Bright futures in data transmission at W. E.

New engineers with initiative who can meet Western Electric's high standards are offered many exciting career opportunities with our company in data processing development work as it relates to communications.

For example, Western's engineers—working closely with Bell Telephone Laboratories—have solved development and manufacturing problems connected with the Bell System's new DATA-PHONE Data set (made by Western Electric). DATA-PHONE service lets business machines, such as computers, "speak" to each other in a language of numbers and symbols over existing telephone communication networks. This represents a tremendous boon to business; and consequently, it is estimated that some day there may be more machine talk than people talk using telephone lines.

Of course, data communications is only one of many rewarding career areas that await you at Western Electric. Here are just a few of the others: electronic switching . . . solid state electronic devices . . . microwave radio relay...computer-programmed production lines . . . solar cells . . . optical masers . . . futuristic telephones.

We need high-caliber, forward-thinking engineers now to help us transform these plans into realities or to work with us in scores of other key communications areas. Your future, the future of Western Electric, and the future of America's communications—could well depend on your first career connection.

Challenging opportunities exist now at Western Electric for electrical, mechanical, industrial, and chemical engineers, as well as physical science, liberal arts, and business majors. All qualified applicants will receive careful consideration for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. For more information about Western Electric, write College Relations, Western Electric Company, Room 6106, 222 Broadway, New York 38, New York. And be sure to arrange for a Western Electric interview when our college representatives visit your campus.

The Massachusetts COLLEGIAN

VOL. XCI NO. 34 5¢ PER COPY UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS, AMHERST, MASS. MONDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1961

Globe Report Knocks Education Financing

First in a series of articles condensed by Collegian Reporter Mo Wronski from "The Mass in Bay State Education", which appeared in the Boston Globe daily from September 17-24, by Ian Menzies and Ian Forman, Boston Globe Science and Education writers.

Massachusetts has failed to develop its greatest natural resource — 925,000 public school children and 20,000 students at state-supported institutions of higher educaion — to its fullest extent.

Massachusetts stands 47th in the nation in state money given to education.

The children of Massachusetts are victims of a discriminatory two-standard system of education. In a system where economic factors dictate the standard of education, well-to-do communities such as Lincoln, Sudbury, Wellesley, Weston, and Wayland have turned their public school systems into semi-private school systems, while the children of poorer communities must attend second-rate public schools. Education becomes an accident of geography.

In Massachusetts, communities must pick up the tab for 84 percent of the cost of education. In only three other states in the nation do the communities have to pay such a large portion of the cost of public schools.

Furthermore, the formula for distributing state money for education is based on 1945 community property valuations. The towns with the most money are thus receiving more in state education funds because of changes in property values since the mid-40's than the cities, hard-hit financially with the exodus of industries from Massachusetts.

These 1945 property-valuations, under the complex distribution formula, are divided by 1000 then multiplied by six. This figure is then subtracted from an amount determined by the number of school-age children in the community in the present year. Thus a 1945 property valuation was weighed against a 1960 children-count figure in determining the amount of state aid to education in Massachusetts communities last year. The resulting amount is then, for no apparent reason, divided by two.

The use of the 16-year-old "equalized assessed valuation" figures hits hardest at cities like Boston, Lawrence, Fall River, and Holyoke, which appear much richer on paper than they really are. Industry in these cities hasn't increased at the same rate as it has in the suburbs, especially those along route 128. Burlington's value has increased 25 times; Bedford 17 times, Wilmington 11 times. In comparison, Lawrence has increased only three times in value, but the suburbs continue to be looked on as "poor country towns" under the 1945 formula. And 420,000 city children are being treated as second-class citizens as a result.

The anachronism of Massachusetts' two standards of public education occurs at a time when education is serving as Russia's greatest weaopn. No attempt has been made to coordinate public elementary, secondary and higher education since Horace Mann first gave public education here its impetus in 1838.

Public education in Massachusetts—from kindergarten to university—is being run today by uninformed executives, legislators and fiscal clerks in the State House.

The elected politicians and their aides have inherited the task by default, from the responsible educators who failed to do the job themselves. Educators and boards of education should remember that it is their responsibility to inform the Legislaure, not once, but repeatedly.

Anti-ROTC Pickets At Ball; Police Hold, Release Student

by THOMAS A. McMULLIN '64

A group of students organized as the Campus Committee to Abolish Compulsory R.O.T.C. picketed the annual Military Ball at the S.U. Saturday night. The group of about thirty students began picketing at 7:30, a half hour before the beginning of the dance.

Keep Orderly

Shortly after the start of the demonstration, the campus police made an unsuccessful attempt to stop the picketing, reportedly informing leaders they were picketing illegally and taking one student back to his home for not having his ID card. Soon the officers relented and the picketing was allowed to continue in front of the S. U. with the provision that the picketers keep moving and remain orderly.

The demonstration persisted until 9 p.m. at which time the students disbanded. No trouble was reported by the picketers or by people attending the dance.

In addition to the picketing, the committee passed out letters stating "Compulsory R.O.T.C. has no place in the University where intellectual freedom must be paramount. We will submit to academic discipline, but never to militaristic indoctrination. There can be no compromise."

The organizers stressed that the committee has no connection with any campus pacifist groups and was formed among students opposed to compulsory military education while they are attending the University.

Lederle Arrives

Shortly after the disbanding of the pickets, UMass President John W. Lederle arrived to crown the Mili Ball queen. Lederle was informed of the student picketing and stated, "We've got it (Compulsory R.O.T.C.) and we'll have it until there's a change in University policy."

The President did say that the armed forces were considering changes in the R.O.T.C. program and that any University action would be contingent upon those of the armed forces. Lederle also referred to the faculty committee that was formed to investigate the R.O.T.C. program on campus. That committee has recommended that the program be continued, with some changes, and then in two years, reassessed.

Chorale Airs Yule Show On Eastern Hook-up Tues.

by DICK HAYNES

The UMass Chorale will present an hour-long concert over the Educational Radio Network at 9 p.m., Tuesday, December 12. The program, to be carried by WFCR in Amherst and WGBH in Boston, will be the first concert from one of the four local colleges to be carried over the entire network, which ranges as far south as Philadelphia and Washington, D.C.

Sponsored by the Department of Music, the Chorale has 57 members under the direction of Professor John R. King of the UMass Music Department.

Harpist to Accompany Chorale

Included in the program will be the Finale of the Cantata, "The Childhood of Christ," by J. C. Bach, and the "Ceremony of Carols," by Britten. In the latter the chorale will be accompanied by Mrs. Alice Stusick, noted New England Harpist.

Other numbers will be: "Glory to God in the Highest", by Randall Thompson; "Gloria in Excelsis Deo," by Thomas Weelkes; "Says, O Shepherds, Whom Saw Ye?" by Richard Dering; "The Virgin's Slumber Song," by Max Reger; and works by Boughton, Byrd, Rutcliffe, and Wood.

Christmas Concert to be Presented

On Sunday, December 17, at 4:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, the Chorale will present a similar concert of Christmas Music under the conduction of Professor King.

CAROL SING

The annual Carol Sing will be held this year on Dec. 17 at 9 o'clock in front of the S.U. The entire campus community is invited to attend and join in spreading the Christmas spirit by singing the traditional Christmas songs. After the singing of carols in front of the S.U. refreshments will be served in the S.U. ballroom and the singing will be continued.

Chorale tapes Yule show for broadcast on December 12.

THE STUDENT LEADER SHORTAGE

What's in store for next year?

That's a common question being asked by the present campus student leaders, as they begin to consider who will be replacing them in 1963. The brazen fact is that the ourrent lack of interest in extracurricular activities being exhibited by the classes of '63, '64 and '65 is having an effect that will only be realized in full this spring during the election season and on Student Leaders' Night.

Several offiicers of the student senate have already expressed their worry that there will be no qualified member of the class of '63 to assume the gavel next year (35 out of the 42 members of the present senate are newly elected). The problem is also acute on the Collegian staff. Failure of the underclassmen to want to help put out their newspaper is placing a great work burden on a few staff members. These overworked staff members are now on the point of resigning themselves, due to sheer lack of time. If these proposed resignations materialize, the Collegian will also find itself without a head for '62-'63. WMUA and the Index have the same story to tell.

The fact that so many organizations are having the same staff problems leads us to believe that the fault lies not in any particular organization, but somewhere else. Perhaps the blame is the students', perhaps it is the administrations'; but something's wrong somewhere and the Collegian staff is attempting to find out exactly where.

Already answers to the poll that we sent out are beginning to come in. While nothing can be assumed definitely on the basis of so few results, the trend is beginning to emerge. On campuses where there is some sort of administrative impetus, there is also a greater enthusiasm for extracurricular activities.

Les Archambault, Editor-in-Chief of the University of Connecticut's Daily Campus, tells us that at UConn conditions aren't much better than they are here.

> "We have found at this school that we face many of the same problems that you are now facing. Some years the problem isn't too great, and other years it takes the entire efforts of a few persons to enable the organization that they care about just to maintain their existence.
> "I feel that this sort of thing is something that you will find more often in State Universities than at private ones where the administration and/or faculty encourages participation in closely supervised activities."

Whether or not Archambault is correct in his statement that the problem is more common to State Universities, we hope our poll will find out.

At any rate, we are looking for the answer. We agree wholeheartedly with Archambault when he states later in his letter that "by no means are these problems to be overlooked or to be thought of as hopeless."

In our growing University, where the enrollment increases every year, there is a dangerous risk of losing student individuality. Unless interest in student activities keeps pace with the other phases of University growth, the atmosphere could become stagnant.

We hope that there are others on this campus who are aware of the grave potentialities of the trend that has set in this year. While we are sampling the opinions and solutions that other campuses have applied to their problems, we hope that students (and faculty, too) on this campus will let us know how they feel about the problem.

The Dignity of Orderly Demonstration

by M. PALTER and P. THEROUX

Neither imprudent action by the campus police nor foolish action by an irate R.O.T.C. cadet could daunt the fifty students who were picketing against compulsory R.O.T.C. at the Military Ball last Saturday.

The campus police, apparently caught off guard, attempted to hinder the demonstration by demanding that the students lay down their signs. There was absolutely no legal basis for this. In addition, it was only with great reluctance that the police permitted the picketers to march on the grass across from the union. Paul Theroux, however, pointed out that not only had they the right to picket on the grass, but furthermore could picket on the sidewalk in front of the union.

In addition, one of the demonstrators who was supplying hot coffee, was "accidently" struck by the heavy door of the Union when one of the R.O.T.C. cadets "accidently" lost his grasp on the handle. This action on the part of the frustrated cadet was unwarranted.

The point is that these actions both by the campus police and the frustrated cadet were not premeditated and overly vicious. They were worse than this; they were reflex actions, actions taken by men in uniform against civilians. They were actions taken by men whose minds had been conditioned.

Quite obviously, the action by the police violated civil liberties. The action of the cadet violated the rule of decent human conduct, nothing more.

On the whole, the R.O.T.C. cadets behaved properly. In fact, most graciously accepted the statements of purpose which the demonstrators were passing out. One got the impression that many were in agreement with the demonstrators!

The fact remains, however, that the question of compulsory ROTC has been raised. In the past this question has either been ignored or allowed to die a natural death, but the initiative of the fifty irate students—students who for practical reasons find ROTC a burden—amplified the issue on the steps of the Student Union.

The demonstration was neither "communist oriented" (as has been suggested in the past), Pacifist inspired, nor blatantly truculent. The students picketted orderly in a "double envelopment" reminiscent of Alexander the Great's battle at Arabella, and deployed themselves in dignified fashion.

But the question remains: will Compulsory ROTC Continue? The Pentagon has already said that they cannot use all the officers which the ROTC programs on the campuses turn out. Ostensibly, it is a question of whether the United States can USE an Army of generals—on this basis ROTC at Connecticut was discontinued.

University officials can either take the matter under study or they can sink back into the lethargy which has persisted. In any case, we visualize a strongly contested struggle between the growing Committee to Abolish ROTC and the hitherto silent Administration. If there are any opinions now—either pro or con—this is the time to express them.

President Lederle Officially Recognizes '2.0' Bill

In a letter written to Arthur Tacelli, President of the Student Senate, President John Lederle expressed the following:

"I am pleased to accept the recommendation of the Student Senate and the Committee on Recognized Student Organizations as embodied in the legislation passed Spring 1961 relating to the 2.0 quality point average.

Your action, which serves to further establish a close logical relationship between student academic accomplishment and student leadership, is a positive and welcome one. It has already earned the wholeheartedness endorsement of Provost Woodside and the Academic Deans.

I am directing the Office of the Dean of Students to take all steps necessary to establish this quality point qualification as part of our basic operating procedure, and to cooperate in all ways necessary with both the student and the faculty members of the Recognized Student Organizations.

Cordially yours,
John W. Lederle

Defends Fraternities

Every few weeks, there appears a derogatory article on the fraternity system here at the University in one of our various campus publications. It is certain that the people who are responsible for these unimaginative and worthless quips have no Greek affiliations. Furthermore, it is very interesting to thumb through the lists of rushees of the various houses and find that most every single one of these people has been cut, (i.e.) an unacceptable person to the fraternity system. Thus, these third-rate humorists use campus publications to gain revenge for the social "humiliation" that was handed them by the various fraternities. It is particularly strange that fraternities are such "dens of iniquity" and yet these same people are not of acceptable character to be admitted into these ignominious societies. I would like to suggest to these narrow-minded, incensed individuals that they try improving their own character instead of wasting their time thinking up cheap sarcasm on fraternity life.

Commons Defaced

The author of the letter on Collegiate Courtesy (Dec. 4 issue) stated that a student has learned the social graces by the time he has entered college. However, if one were to survey the condition of lines four and five at the Dining Commons after dinner, he would not be apt to agree with this opinion. He would rather believe that a generation of wild animals had been raised in the place of human beings.

I have been working at the Commons for two months now and have found the situation to be the same each evening; chairs and tables shoved in all directions, food dumped on the tables and floor, napkins and straws scattered over the floor, trays of dirty dishes left for the workers to take care of, and salt, sugar, and pepper deliberately spilled on the tables. This not only adds to the work of the kitchen staff, but also defaces University property. Is this how a student "sufficiently schooled in social amenities" acts?

Professional Athletes?

To the Editor:

Athletics are an integral part of our American educational system, but I do not think that they are as important as we are led to believe.

It has been said repeatedly that "it is athletics that put a school on the map." But what happens to the school in the meantime? And what about the sports program once the established goal has been reached? Does "going big time" mean producing winning teams, or else? Will there be more athletic scholarships at the expense of the other students? What other problems common at other schools will exist here?

If this is the direction in which we are headed, I say let's take another look before it's too late. I feel that the foremost goal should be good sportsmanship—being able to accept the results, win or lose, and playing a clean, hard-fought game. Is the simplicity of this idea becoming last and out-dated in our materialistic society?

All I ask is that athletic contests, like all other non-academic functions here at the University, find their proper perspective. I wholeheartedly agree with intramural programs and compulsory physical education classes which allow all students to participate. But the increasingly professional atmosphere of the inter-collegiate games on our campus and across the country is another matter.

Result of Increased Bus Patronage Is Lower Charge For Four-College Transit

by MONETTA WRONSKI '63

The two blue Volkswagen buses which transport students to their classes at the four colleges are in their second year of operation. During the first six weeks this year there has been a gain of 42% in the number of passengers over the corresponding first six weeks of operation last year. This gain produces a substantial drop in cost per passenger. Some improvements have been made in scheduling which further help the transportation problem.

Students at Mount Holyoke and Smith College are not allowed to have cars and therefore depend on the buses more than students at UMass and Amherst, who can often get rides from friends with cars.

The buses are not intended for transportation for anyone who happens to want to go from one college to another. They are intended almost exclusively for the use of students who are taking courses at one of the other colleges or who need to use the library for honors work or similar projects. Bus tickets are issued to students who need them at the beginning of a course and to those who need them for special trips, they are issued as need arises.

Arrangements can be made for the buses to be used for evening trips, but these trips are paid for by the students who use the buses. Each institution sets its own arrangements and cost for the use of the buses in the evening. Transportation is free for students who are taking courses in other colleges or using the library.

Four-college events this week:

A Four-College Art Show now in Memorial Hall until Dec. 15.

Monday, Dec. 11th, 4:10 p.m., Hooker Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College, Lecture: "The Millet System in the Ottoman Empire", Robert M. Haddad, Intercollegiate lecturer in History.

Monday, Dec. 11, 7 p.m., Babbott Hall, Amherst College, Lecture: Harlan Fiske Stone Law Society, program with Harvard Law School.

Tuesday, Dec. 12, Amherst College: varsity hockey vs. Brown, 3:30 p.m.

Tuesday, Dec. 12, an hour-long concert by the UMass Chorale over the Educational Radio Network at 9 p.m.

Wednesday, Dec. 13, Chapin Auditorium, Mount Holyoke, 8 p.m. Lecture: Disarmament or Arms Control; What's Ahead for the United States, Professor Lawson.

NOTICE

Positions are now open on the various Student Union Program Committees for freshmen and sophomores. There will be a recruitment meeting on Wednesday evening, Dec. 13th, at 7 p.m. in the Middlesex Room at which time the programs of the various committees shall be explained in detail and applications for membership will be taken.

The Student Union Committees are: Arts and Music, Games and Tournaments, Movie, Dance, Special Events, Personnel, and Public Information.

There are a limited number of openings on the Personnel and Public Information committees. All students interested in either of the above listed committees are invited to attend to learn more about S.U. Programs and how they may become a member of the committee.

Globe Reports . . .

Over the years the strong position of the parochial school in eastern Massachusetts diminished the interest of many legislators in giving funds to public education. The elimination of parochial elementary schools would bring about an overall improvement in the standards of elementary education by concentrating political and budgetary interest in a single system, suggested Rt. Rev. George W. Casey in the August issue of The Pilot, a Catholic weekly magazine.

Whatever the reasons, though, the Massachusetts public, legislators, and educators seem to have forgotten something — 925,000 children in the Massachusetts public system.

FROM SEA TO SHINING SEA

America is a great country. America's cities are full of houses. America's forests are full of trees. America's rivers are full of water. But it is not houses and trees and water that make America great: it is curiosity—the constant quest to find answers—the endless, restless "Why?" "Why?" "Why?".

Therefore, when I was told that Marlboro was a top seller at colleges from USC to Yale, I was not content merely to accept this gratifying fact, I had to find out why.

I hied myself to campuses in every sector of this mighty land. First, I went to the Ivy League—dressed, of course, in an appropriate costume: a skull-and-bones in one hand, a triangle in the other, a mask-and-wig on my head, a hasty pudding in my chops. "Sir," I cried, seizing an Ivy Leaguer by the lapels, which is no mean task considering the narrowness of Ivy League lapels, but, I, fortunately, happen to have little tiny hands; in fact, I spent the last war working in a small arms plant where, I am proud to say, I was awarded a Navy "E" for excellence and won many friends—"Sir," I cried, seizing an Ivy Leaguer by the lapels, "how come Marlboro is your favorite filter cigarette?"

"I'm glad you asked that question, Shorty," he replied. "Marlboro is my favorite filter cigarette because it is the filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste."

"Oh, thank you, sir!" I cried and ran posthaste to several campuses in the Big Ten, wearing, of course, the appropriate costume: a plaid Mackinaw, birling boots, a Kodiak bear and frost-bitten ears.

Spying an apple-cheeked young coed, I tugged my forelock and said, "Excuse me, miss, but how come Marlboro is your favorite filter cigarette?"

"I'm glad you asked that question, Shorty," she replied. "Marlboro is my favorite filter cigarette because the flavor is flavorful, the flip-top box flips and the soft-pack is soft."

"Oh, thank you, apple-cheeked young coed," I cried and bobbed a curtsey and sped as fast as my little fat legs would carry me to several campuses in the Southwest, wearing, of course, the appropriate costume: chaps, canteen, and several oil leases. Spying a group of undergraduates singing "Strawberry Roan," I removed my hat and said, "Excuse me, friends, but why is Marlboro your favorite filter cigarette?"

"We are glad you asked that question, Shorty," they replied. "Marlboro is our favorite filter cigarette because we, native sons and daughters of the wide open spaces, want a cigarette that is frank and forthright and honest. We want, in short, Marlboro."

"Oh, thank you, all," I cried and, donning a muu muu, I set sail for Hawaii, because in Hawaii, as in every state where Old Glory flies, Marlboro is the leading seller in flip-top box. On campus, off campus, in all fifty states, wherever people smoke for pleasure in this great land of ours, you will find Marlboro.

Redmen Hockey Team Loses To M.I.T. and Penn. Crews, 5-2, 4-3

The Redmen varsity hockey team, under the direction of Coach Steve Kosakowski, got off to a slow start this season, losing its first game to a rugged MIT team, 5-2, and being edged by the University of Pennsylvania squad on Orr Rink, 4-3, Saturday.

The MIT squad put together several effective attacks in the opening period of the Cambridge clash which were good for three goals.

UMass broke into the scoring column as senior co-captain and left winger Bobby Glew of Framingham beat the MIT goalie at 15:07, the assist coming from defenseman Gerry Clinton. MIT scored again in the second period on a goal by Bogie Salmon to make it 4-1.

Center Tom Taylor scored the last Redmen goal of the afternoon at 4:28 of the third period with assists by Charlie Donovan and John Karchenes. Mike Denny, scoring his second goal of the day, made it 5-2 Engineers, to end scoring.

In Saturday's clash against the Penn. squad, the visitors repeated last year's 4-3 victory over the Redmen, taking advantage of a few UMass mistakes to edge out the win. Although the Redmen played a fine game, most of the credit for their showing must go to goalie Frank Cesario who played the entire game with a lump on his elbow the "size of an orange."

The freshman team outclassed Ithaca College 4-1, Saturday.

Coach Steve Kosakowski's charges face an active week, with three home games on the schedule. Williams College, Amherst College and A.I.C. will face the Redmen in that order on Orr Rink on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The Williams and Amherst games start at 7:00 p.m., while Saturday's clash begins at 2:00.

Lussier, Foote, Harrington Named Yan Con All-Stars

Three men of the University of Massachusetts 1961 football team have been named to the Yankee Conference All-Star team.

Sam Lussier, speedy halfback on the Redmen squad and top ground gainer for the team this year shared the halfback honors with Maine's Dave Cloutier.

Dave Harrington and Maine's Dick Kinney captured the end slots while Bob Foote, a double ECAC player-of-the week, and Bob Treat of UConn are the first string choices at the tackles.

Redmen Fred Lewis, John McCormick and Paul Majeski earned honorable mention spots on the All-Star team.

Fred Stackpole, captain and guard of the UConn Huskies, is the only repeater on the all-Yankee Conference team as selected by the conference coaches. The new champions from the University of Maine placed three men on the first club as did the runner-up, UMass.

For the first time in the history of the conference selections, the coaches could not agree on the naming of a center. Most of the coaches felt that in today's changing game, with teams using five and six man lines and emphacizing line backers, that the center's duties often go unnoticed. As a result, the guards drew more votes and in addition to Stackpole, Paul D'Allesandro of New Hampshire and Ed Cramer, also of New Hampshire, were named to the "middle" guard positions.

Manchester Wheeler, a 6-1 195 pounder who guided the Black Bears to their first conference championship since 1951, was chosen for the signal calling over UM's McCormick and UNH's Dickson.

Rifle Squad Stops W.P.I.

After defeating the sharpshooters of Worcester Polytech in its second shoulder to shoulder rifle match of the current season, the UMass Varsity rifle team was defeated by Rhode Island and Coast Guard in a match which saw some fine shooting.

The victory over W.P.I. was spearheaded by Harold Butterworth and Frank Fluet with scores of 284 and 283, respectively. The team total of 1378 was enough to best WPI's 1364.

In Saturday's meet against the Rams and Coast Guard, Mason's 293 led the sailors to a first place slot as Rhode Island finished second and UMass brought up the rear.

The showing at U.R.I. was far superior to any of last year's scores, however, and shows marked improvement since the season's inaugural match at B.U. Concentrated effort should place the UMass marksmen in strong contention for the Yankee Conference title.

Matmen Edged 20-16 By WPI Team In First Meet

The University of Massachusetts wrestling squad suffered its first defeat of the new season Saturday, as it was stopped by Worcester Polytechnical Institute 20-16.

Gerry Burnham, a very promising Mass. sophomore, started the proceedings by defeating his opponent. Al Israel, a returning letterman, then followed by taking top honors in his match. Both matches were well fought with Burnham winning 2-1 and Israel emerging a 5-2 victory.

Bill Batt, another returning letterman, was pinned by his opponent, but Redman Tom Best retaliated by winning his contest, and Al Brouillet increased UMass hopes by winning by default, due to the bad arm of a WPI matman.

UMass' lead began to dwindle when Mike Kelly was pinned at 2:26. Bob Ellis, suffering from a sore shoulder, was also pinned and the last match saw Bill Rice lose, concluding a hard fought but unrewarding team effort.

Coach John Douglas is hoping that this match will not be an example of things to come, and feels that a definite improvement has been made over last year's Redman wrestling quality, and spectator participation.

The squad will be out for its first win when it meets the Jeffs on Wednesday, at 4:00 p.m. in the Cage.

Stockbridge Team Loses

Although Brad Allen of the local five was top gun for the meet, the Stockbridge Rifle Team lost a close one to Northeastern University Freshmen at the local range on Saturday in the first encounter between the two teams. Despite the loss, Stockbridge hopes to make a good match of it next Saturday against the Harvard varsity squad.

"Home of Quality Clothers for Men & Women"

Have you seen this jacket on campus lately?

If you have, you know THESE are outstanding on campus. We at the House of Walsh feel, that after consultation with several students, we have finally come up with a jacket which truly is worthy to bear the name "Massachusetts." If you would like to wear this jacket home for vacation, we offer a Student Credit Plan.

The jacket is all wool on one side and the reversible side is waterproof satin.

Rutgers Uses UM Mistakes To Hand Redmen 77-57 Loss

by STEVE HEWEY '63

Rutgers University, paced by the hot shooting hand of 6 ft. Al Ammerman, handed the University of Massachusetts cage squad its first setback of the young basketball season, 77-57, before a strictly partisan crowd at the Rutgers Gym in New Brunswick, N. J. Saturday evening. Rutgers capitalized on erratic ball handling and poor passing by the Redmen to pick up its second win against one loss.

EARLY REDMEN LEAD

Massachusetts broke the scoring ice after controlling the opening tap-off when Charlie LaPier hit on a jumper, Roger Twitchell netted a two pointer and Soph Guard Pete Bernard stole the ball and converted it into 2 more points to propel the Redmen to a 6-0 lead.

Then the Scarlet attack began to take shape and the count was knotted at 8-8 on shots by Cliff Peterson. Joel Osofsky and a pair of 20 ft. jumpers by Ammerman. Rutgers took the lead, 9-8, on a free throw and led until the 7:53 mark when two jump shots by Twitchell, a Fohlin tap and a pair of Bernard baskets offset the hot hand of Ammerman and once more the score was iced at 18-18.

Twitchell put the Zunicmen out in front 20-18. The score switched back and forth until Ammerman put his mates out in front to stay with a couple of charity tosses, 25-23, and he added four more in a row from the foul line to make it 30-23. The Redmen offense stalled as it threw the ball away twice, killing hopes of closing the gap before half time. The buzzer sounded with Rutgers enjoying an eight point bulge.

As the second half opened two Twitchell baskets cut the Scarlet margin to 37-33 and Rutgers increased the lead on markers by Petersen and Osofsky. But Mass. came within 2 points of catching them, 47-45, on six straight points by Ricciardi, Leslie and Bernard.

Then Ammerman and company took command and began to pull away. A lax Redmen defense allowed two easy baskets by Ammerman and he and Osofsky teamed up to put in eight consecutive free throws while UMass was held to a single point.

With 2:15 remaining in the game, La Pier's foul shot gave UMass 55 to Rutgers 71 points. Franz Von Brodsky tallied the last UMass basket on a sweeping hook only to have Rutgers close out the scoring on a six point spurt led by ball-stealing Al Ammerman.

Before Tuesday's YanCon opener with UConn, Matt Zunic will have to work on his squad's passing and free throws. Rutgers picked off too many Redman passes and were hot from the free throw line, making good on 25 of 34 attempts. UMass cashed in on only 9 of 24. In the field game departments, Rutgers held a slight edge hiting on 26 out of 62 tries while the Redmen netted 24 for 60.

UM Gymnasts Down Ithaca Squad, 64-30

by JEFF DAVIDSON '65

The UMass Gymnastics team more than doubled their opponents' score to beat Ithaca College 64 to 30 in their first dual meet of the season Saturday in the Cage.

The Redmen had to compete without the aid of one of the squad's top men, junior Dave Yates. Yates, who was to participate in three events—Free Exercise, Long Horse and Horizontal Bar—sprained his arm in a practice session Friday. Manager Frank Allard reports that Yates will be out of action for at least the next two meets.

Even without the help of Yates the team, coached by Robert James, gained the lead in the first event and did not relinquish it once to the men from Ithaca. The Jamesmen captured five out of the six first places, with Captain Charlie Paydos taking two of them, Still Rings and Parallel Bars. Ithaca managed to take one first place in Free Exercise, but in that contest the second, third, and fourth place positions were filled by Redmen Paydos, Frado and Amundsen.

Although Paydos was excellent in Free Exercise and on the Still Rings where he racked up a hundred points more than his nearest competitor, it was on the parallel bars that he showed his superlative skill as a gymnast. He went through his exercises with the skill and ease of motion that makes gymnastics the most graceful and, to many, the most interesting sport on campus.

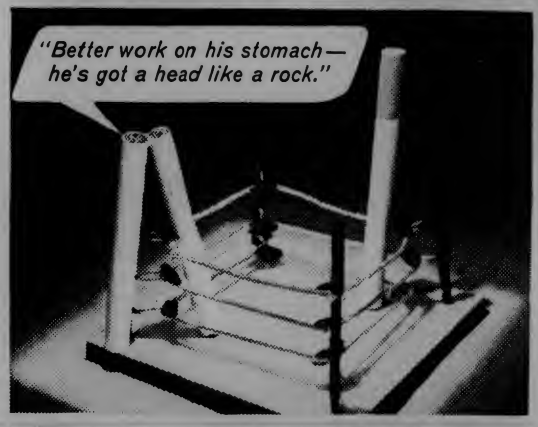
Captain Paydos was not the only member of the squad that performed admirably. Sophomore Dexter Brown far outdistanced all competition on the long horse as he finished with a score of 222 points, while second place winner, Bjerkiy of Ithaca totaled 167.5 points. In this event Dave Amundsen was nipped out of the second place position by a meager one point; Sophomore Felix Mosakewicz also scored for UMass.

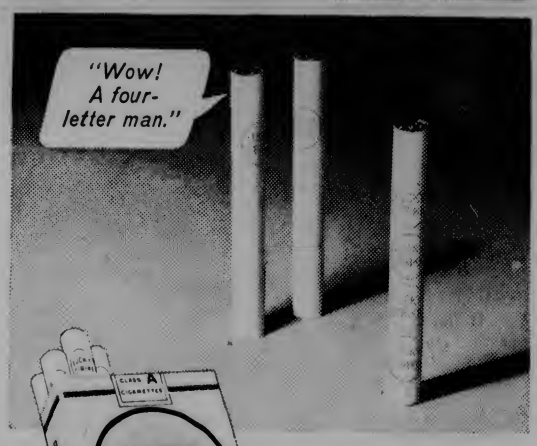
The Redmen's Bruce McCracken took the Side Horse competition with teammates Jim Adam and Bob Sloan winning the second and fourth place berths, respectively. McCracken also finished second twice, once behind Paydos on the parallel bars and the second time in back of UMass' Bob Coffin on the horizontal bar.

In the Still Rings event Eric Coate and Robert Reed took thrid and fourth place behind the winner, Paydos.

The gym squad travels to West Point next weekend to face a strong Army squad. The next home meet will be Jan. 6 against Cortland College.

LUCKY STRIKE presents: LUCKY PUFFERS "WINTER SPORTS"





WHEN DOES A LUCKY TASTE BETTER THAN A LUCKY? There's a dangerous question because, as you well know, college students are crazy about Luckies and smoke more of them than any other regular. Still, there is one kind of Lucky that tastes a little bit better than any other kind. These extra-special Luckies are the ones you get for Christmas. The only thing better than a Lucky is a free Lucky. Ask for a carton this Christmas.

CHANGE TO LUCKIES and get some taste for a change!

Noted Author Will Speak At Tanganyika Celebration

Abdul Samma and Dr. Gwendolen Carter at Dares Salaam, Tanganyika.

Tanganyika Independence Day Celebrations will be held on Tuesday, Dec. 12, in the Commonwealth Room. The public is invited to the function.

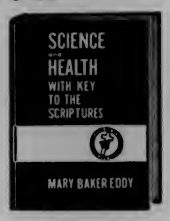
Miss Gwendolen M. Carter, professor of government at Smith will be the speaker. She is an internationally known authority on Africa south of the Sahara. In tribute to her scholarship and teaching, she was named a Sophia Smith professor in 1961.

A member of the Smith faculty since 1943, Miss Carter is the author of several books on Africa including: The Politics of Inequality (Prayer 1958); The British Commonwealth and International Security (Ryerson Press 1947); and Independence for Africa (Prayer 1960).

She has written several other books and articles on political and international topics. Her latest book is Government and Politics in the Twentieth Century (Prayer 1961).

Miss Carter received her B.A. degree from the University of Toronto, her M.A. from Oxford University and her Ph.D. from Radcliffe. She has taught at McMaster University in Canada, Wellesley, and Tufts. At Smith she established and teaches the courses in Africa south of the Sahara.

EVERY COLLEGE STUDENT needs this book



to increase his ability to learn

An understanding of the truth contained in Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy can remove the pressure which concerns today's college student upon whom increasing demands are being made for academic excellence.

Christian Science calms fear and gives to the student the full assurance he needs in order to learn easily and to evaluate what he has learned. It teaches that God is man's Mind—his only Mind—from which emanates all the intelligence he needs, when and as he needs it.

Science and Health, the textbook of Christian Science, may be read or examined, together with the Bible, in an atmosphere of quiet and peace, at any Christian Science Reading Room. Information about Science and Health may also be obtained on campus through the

LISTENING POST

Pledge Seeks Pretty Girls In Collegian

by JOE BRADLEY

Today's Listening Post is dedicated to the women of UMass who are at last getting due recognition from the state of New Mexico.

Early in October the Collegian received a note from Thomas McCarthy, a student at St. Michael's College, Santa Fe, New Mexico requesting a copy of the University newspaper. He explained that he was a pledge for a fraternity and that he had "been ordered to get" our paper.

The Collegian complied with McCarthy's request and sent him a copy of the newspaper. Curiosity got the best of us though and we sent a letter to McCarthy asking, "Why UMass?".

A short time later came an Air Mail letter with a message from McCarthy. He said he was from Boston and he has a friend who goes to UMass. When his fraternity ordered the pledges to get a college newspaper full of beautiful women, McCarthy thought of his friend at UMass who "is always raving about the beautiful girls at UMass."

Although McCarthy didn't get the newspaper with the greatest number of beautiful girls he said that he did well just the same. Now the question remains, who is Thomas McCarthy's friend who is such a loyal rooter for UMass women.

Perry To Discuss 'Sweetheart Deals'

On Tuesday, Dec. 12, Frank Perry, State Representative from Duxbury, will speak on the "Sweetheart Deals" in Massachusetts at 8 p.m. in the Middlesex Room of the S.U. Perry has been a crusading investigator and exposer of the recent scandal and conflicts of interest in the Dept. of Public Works.

At Household Finance students and faculty members have found they can discuss money needs in privacy with people who understand these problems and how best to solve them. If a loan is the answer, you can borrow up to $2500 with repayment terms you select. So call or visit HFC today.

Carni Ball To Echo Music Of Richard Maltby's Band

On Friday night, Feb. 16th, following a spectacular fireworks display, the Student Union Ballroom will be the setting of the Winter Carnival Ball, sponsored annually by the junior class. The ballroom, which will be decorated "with a continental flair," will echo the sounds of Richard Maltby and his orchestra. Last year this same band played.

Richard Maltby, who composes, arranges and directs, performs on the trumpet, vibraphone, chimes and his pet instrument, the "kookiephone," described by Maltby as "a stereophonic instrument which surrounds itself with its own sound." He has, during a 20-year career in musicana . . . created a signature for dancing. His "new sound" is based on contrapuntal trumpets . . . a Bach fugue form of writing for trumpets, most easily described by saying, "all the trumpets playing the same part at different times, together."

Known as "The Band the Dancers Demand," Maltby's entourage has played for more than 150 colleges throughout the United States.

The high point of the Ball will be the crowning of the Winter Carnival Queen by President Lederle. The five finalists are selected by a campus-wide election and the Queen, who presides over the entire weekend, is chosen by a panel of judges.

Guard Kept Over Fertilizer Quality By UMass Group

It's no accident that a Massahusetts farmer can be sure he's getting the best feed for his livestock or poultry and quality fertilizer for his field when he lays his money on the line.

Behind this fact is a state law and the feed and fertilizer control service at the University. Part of the College of Agriculture, the control service analyzes these products to see that they conform to the manufacturer's guarantee. Publication of results are made annually in bulletin form.

If the feed or fertilizer does not conform to the information on the label, the manufacturer is notified, and he must change the label or contents. Otherwise, he has to remove his product from sale and may be subjected to a fine.

"And it is not just farmers who benefit from this public service," says Prof. John W. Kuzmeski, in charge, "Anyone who buys feed or fertilizer is protected. Occasionally, feed products harmful to animals are found. In such cases, the manufacturer is expected to make good any losses."

Dr. Carter Keynotes At Tanganyikan Fete

by DICK HAYNES '64

Dr. Gwendolen Carter and Abdul Samma spoke to about fifty persons who attended the Tanganyikan Independence Day Celebration held yesterday at 4 p.m. in the S.U.

Ceremonies opened with a short tape recorded speech in Swahili by Julius Nyerere, Prime Minister of Tanganyika followed by the Tanganyikan National Anthem.

An unofficial translation of Nyerere's speech by Abdul Samma credited the Prime Minister with saying: "This day is the fruit of seven year's labor. How was this independence achieved? The people have arisen as one voice and cooperated to achieve our goal—self-government."

Dr. Carter, in the keynote address, praised the Prime Minister and his one-party democracy, and predicted success for this unique form of government.

"Tanganyika makes a definite contribution to Africa. this contribution is the successful demonstration of a one-party non-racial democracy where the population is composed of multi-racial resident groups," she said.

"The characteristics of a one-party democracy are," she continued, "the opportunity for free expression within this party and the right of groups of individuals in the party to split off and form new parties if their ideas are not compatable with the main party".

MRS. GWENDOLEN CARTER

Miss Carter also sees a real possibility of an East African Federation consisting of Tanganyika, Keyna and Uganda.

"Tanganyika's demonstration of a functioning non-racial society illustrates the human dignity of man," she concluded. The celebration was sponsored by the International Club.

Perry Says 'Sweetheart Deal' Is "Almost Accepted" By Some

State Representative Francis Q. Perry spoke last night at the second meeting of the Young Republicans' Club on the general topic of Corruption in Massachusetts. His lecture was entitled "Sweetheart Deals—Issue of Abuse in Government."

Perry, explaining his term of Sweetheart deals as favors returned to one in a public position for the benefit of favored friends, stated that he believes this area of corruption to be "symbolic of what is wrong in Massachusetts government today." Although other abuses are apparent, he sees these sweetheart deals as the significant apect of our government; in fact, it is "almost accepted practice in some areas of the government."

Perry believes the deals not only a waste of dollars, but also, in a more idealistic sense, are "a test of democratic processes." If the government does not oust these politicians directly responsible for the corruption, the entire morale of the public employees is broken down by the suspicion cast on them, and the whole political structure is undermined, he said.

People Want Correction

In an effort to determine the feeling of the people of Massachusetts on the wide reputation of their state for political corruption, Perry observed that there was a "deep yearning for correction in the people." He commented on this factor: "We are conspicuous in evil; we should be conspicuous now in trying to clear up the situation. If areas of corrupton and abuse are apparent, they need to be corrected whether this state is better or worse than any other in the country."

Although he has discovered that it is "unpleasant and unpopular" to name those involved in the deals of corruption, and to tread on the toes of those in power or those with party connections," this has to be done to get rid of the problem," he said.

UM Tuition Seen High For State University

Second in a series of articles condensed from "the Mess in Bay State Education" which appeared in the Boston Globe daily from September 17-24, by Ian Forman and Ian Menzies, Boston Globe Science and Education writers.

Nearly two-thirds of Massachusetts children will not go to college. About half will never have any formal training beyond high school.

Some might actually be "college matreial", but fall victim to inadequate guidance or an uninspiring school system.

What happens to these students? They are left with three choices:

1. Take four years of a business course.
2. Take four years of a "general" course.
3. Take a vocational program.

Only 16 high schools in the state have electronics programs. Springfield and Worcester alone are considered to have a true broad range of vocations.

Once again, education becomes an accident of geography.

The regional vocational school could be the answer to the problem of adequate technical training, since no town or small city could afford a costly technical school of its own. But in an industry-loaded area like Essex County, where industries have urged a good regional vocational school and comprehensive surveys have been made, plans for building the regional school have been stalemated by local politics and the state's lack of authority. It couldn't happen in Connecticut, where the state-wide system of regional vocational schools is under state authority, coordinated throughout the state, with each school meeting high state standards.

What about the college-bound student?

He may find himself inadequately prepared for college. The minimal standards in curriculum required by the Department of Education do not require a high school to teach either a foreign language or a science. Of the subjects that are specified, it does not make explicit how much time much be spent on these subjects.

Although it is now commonly accepted that a teacher's formal education should not stop when he or she leaves college, the Department of Education is alloted only $925 for teacher workshops. In 1900 the sum was $2000.

The college-bound student's problems do not end once he is accepted at one of the 19 state institutions of higher learning, which include the University of Massachusetts, three technological institutes, ten state colleges (formerly state teachers colleges), four community colleges and the Massachusetts Maritime Academy.

Public higher education in the state has been starved of funds—it ranks 49th among the states in the percentage it receives of the total state education budget.

The all-inclusive price tag of a four-year education at UMass or any other state college is $5600, as compared to $12,000 at Harvard and $10,000 at most private colleges. Over 90 percent of the students work to help pay their way at UMass.

The tuition sounds reasonable enough, in comparison with Harvard, but it is one of the highest state university tuitions in the United States.

One Bay State educator has urged the young man with a large family to educate to "Go West, young man!", and with reason: for little or no tuition at all, you can receive a Ph.D. or a medical or law degree at many Western universities. California, with one of the best universities in the world, charges no tuition at all.

At present UMass is the only state institution where a bachelor's degree in liberal arts is granted. It has no medical school, and no law school.

What about the ten state colleges? Despite the dropping of the name "teachers" last year, they are still primarily teachers' colleges. Progress toward becoming full-fledged four-year degree-granting colleges has been unsatisfactory.

Photogenic Finalists Will Publicize Carni

The Winter Carnival Publicity Committee has announced that the results of the all-campus election for Queen finalists, held Dec. 6, will be published after the Christmas vacation.

The five girls were elected from a field of thirty-nine nominees of the dormitories, fraternities and sororities. They will compete for Queen of the Carni Weekend, Feb. 16, 17, and 18.

The girls are all undergraduates at the University, and all classes are represented with the greatest number coming from the class of 1965.

To Be Most Photographed In UM History

The five semi-finalists will be the most photographed and most widely publicized queens in campus history. They will be seen throughout the nation via television and Associated Press Wirephoto, besides appearing on live television and in national magazine coverage.

The Queen will be crowned during the intermission of the Winter Carnival Ball by UMass President Dr. John W. [illegible].

According to the co-chairmen, John Gounaris and Ed Hammond, the 1234 students who voted exceeded the previous record of 1158 which was set last year.

The following are the nominees:

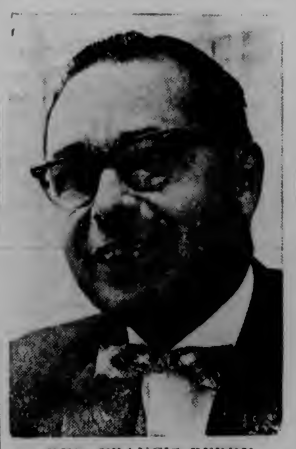
Anderson, Marilyn '65, Begin, Carol '65, Burns, Penny '64, Conlon Bernice '63, Cox, Paula '65, Crane, Mary '64, Cravicci, Gail '65, Davis, Lee '65, Doane, Andrea '65, Doughwright, Rhonda '62 Eastrom, Beverly '64, Elliot, Judy '65, Fish, Nancy '64, Gardini, Connie '63, Grinuk, Delores '64 Jones, Sandy '65, Katz, Hinda '64 LaBatte Roberta '64, Lockhart, Marcia '65, Lydon, Sue '65, Madison, Carol '63, Mallette, Marcia '63 McQuaid, Chris '63, Neilson, Wendy '65, O'Donnell, Pamela '63, Peck, Elizabeth '65, Porter, Lee '64, Read, Debbie '62, Ryan Sheila '63, Simpson, Nancy '65, Smith, Valerie '63, Stang, Eleanor '64, Stockwell, Glenda '64, Sweeney, Mary Ann '64, Thompson, Nancy '65, Tyrell, Diane '63, Weiner, Joan '63, Young, Carolyn '64, Zimmerman, Jeanie '63.

IFC To Hold Rush Convo For Frosh

The Interfraternity Council will kick off the 1962 rushing season with its annual Freshman Rushing Convocation to be held in the S.U. Ballroom tonight at 7 p.m.

Dean of Men Robert S. Hopkins, will speak on the place of the fraternity in campus life. A movie entitled "The Fraternity Idea" will illustrate the problems involved in deciding whether or not to go fraternity and how an indiivdual should go about choosing the right fraterntiy.

Following the movie, freshmen will have a chance to talk to fraternity men in open discussion and have many of their questions concerning fraternities answered. Refreshments will be served during the discussions.



REP. FRANCIS PERRY

Nash To Read Verse, Give Commentary

Humorist-satirist Ogden Nash will give a reading and commentary at UMass on Thursday, Dec. 14, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Sponsored by the University's Distinguished Visitors Program, the event is open to the public free of charge.

Nash, well known for his books of verse as well as for his frequent contributions to The New Yorker, Saturday Evening Post and other national magazines, will comment on events in his life that inspired the writing of much of his light verse.

UMASS' Gutless Women

To the Editor:

AN ANSWER TO MEL SHULTZ AND THE ACELDAMA

Do you know WHY the University women don't complain about the absurd Victorian rules on this campus? Because they are complacent and gutless. They would rather complain, and say "They'll never change," then complain some more and say "They've always been that way." They enjoy defying their counsellors and housemothers—but they wouldn't THINK of doing anything about the real issue. Let the other girl be the one to stick her neck out. Write a few letters to the Collegian? "Are you kidding? I don't want to get kicked out of here." It's so much easier to blame the Dean of Women—in the privacy of one's own room of course, where no one can hear —than to stir up an honest controversy about an archaic, basically unfair and pointless system.

A while ago, Jim Trelease wrote an article for the Amherst Journal Record about how marvelously liberal our rules are at the University, about our huge voice in our affairs, etc., etc. So I wrote a rebuttal—only Mr. de Sherbinin didn't print it, and not because it was unprintable, but because, I assume, he didn't think it was important enough to bother about. If this is the reception our letters are going to get—well, do I have to start dropping pamphlets?

A good beginning would be for the administration to scratch the rule about women in men's apartments. I mean even in New England a rule should be at least 50% effective if it's going to remain on the books, and since this one doesn't work 10% of the time, probably less, and everyone knows it, it causes even less respect for the rules in general, and makes the Deans look unnecessarily foolish.

As for signing in and out—we are told that this is so that we can be located in case of emergency. I've never quite been able to understand why it would be more necessary to locate a girl than a boy under these circumstances. Yet I've never noticed any boys worrying about signing out. Maybe emergencies don't arise in families with sons?

Mel Shultz' remark about "glass-cutters" is singularly unthought-out, in my opinion. The obvious problem, as he points out, is not so much locking the women in, as locking the men out. And the answer is an honor system—but one where every girl has a latch-key to the front door of her house, and is honor-bound to see that if she comes in after "lock-up", she does so alone. If she loses her key and has to ring for admittance, she is fined, and if any males are found with her in the house after a specified hour, she is subject to dismissal—the point of honor being the protection of her fellow students in the dorm. I know a highly reputable girls college where this method works.

The only alternative to this that I know of is to pay someone to keep "watch duty" between, say, midnight and six in the morning. It would appear, however, that the University could hardly afford the latter solution for ten dormitories.

If the administration objects to these insanely radical, wild suggestions, it could at least compromise by abolishing the nonsense rule about women having off-campus apartments. If upperclassmen could make this decision for themselves, as they certainly should, think how many freshmen and sophomores could be packed into the existing dorms! And it seems to be a major aim of the University to expand widely, even at the expense of adequate living quarters.

In principle—is there any indication that the eighteen year old boy coming to college for the first time is any more mature, more studious, more able to survive capably and with self-discipline in his new environment than a girl in the same position? Personal observation would suggest quite the opposite.

People who cannot handle the responsibilities of adult life, quite apart from cumulative averages, do not belong in college. Many of us have learned this the hard way. Nobody enjoys being asked to leave, but if necessary it may be the only way to "grow some people up," and that's a lot better than being coddled for four years and coming out a juvenile Summa.

Little boys and little girls do no become mature men and women until they have to handle some of the responsibilities that involve and indeed require mature decisions and behavior. It would be advantagous if both sexes could grow up at the same time.

ROTC Controversy

PRO

To the Editor:

The existence of the Army is for one purpose. To provide for the security of the country and for support of its national and international policies. The traditional policy of the United States is to maintain an active Army of a minimum size consistent with the immediate needs of the country. In the event of an emergency, however, this Army must have the capability to expand rapidly. Therefore, military leaders and specialists must be trained during peacetime. It is the R.O.T.C. program which provides the largest percentage of these trained leaders.

Men just out of high school bound for college usually have no military training whatsoever and little knoweldge of such. Yet these men are looked upon as future leaders of our country. If R.O.T.C. was not compulsory many highly educated students would not take the time to explore the possibilities of serving in the armed forces in a leadership capacity. We need these men to assure us of obtaining th best qualified leaders for efficient national defense.

Male students at UMass who feel that compulsory R.O.T.C. is a study burden must be complete imbeciles. What one credit course is there that can tax one so heavily? Mr. Theroux, self appointed leader of "fifty" misinformed and discourteous demonstrators, certainly has some strange ideas. Can one honestly say that the mind of the basic cadet is one which has "been conditioned"? Only a fool would believe so. Who "violated the rule of decent human conduct"? The polite cadet who accidently lost his grasp on the Union door or the group of "fifty" frustrated demonstrators who saw fit to mar one of the two major social functions of the year? If so many Cadets were in agreement with the demonstrators how many the success of the ball be explained? What are some of the "practical reasons" for abolishing compulsory R.O.T.C.? Are there really any? Maybe Mr. Khrushchev or Mr. Castro could supply us with a few, and possibly even Mr. Theroux, who had better register immediately or face a $10,000 per day fine and the efficiency of Mr. Robert Kennedy.

G. F. Handel '64
H. C. Hyde '64

CON

To the Editor:

First, let me say that the Committee to Abolish Compulsory R.O.T.C. is not an anti-military organization; it opposes only the compulsory aspect of the R.O.T.C. program at the University. For those who are interested in going advanced, wonderful; take the basic R.O.T.C. program. But why force this program on students who are not interested in a military career or who do not wish to take the course?

The following are some of my views:

Only certain individuals are good potential officer material. Others can serve our country best by working in engineering, reseach, medicine, and other fields. Why impede the desires of these people by forcing them into R.O.T.C. and reducing their limited study time? A student could devote the four hours a week which he is now forced to spend in R.O.T.C. class and drill to improving his understanding of his major or other related fields. A little known fact is that although each student receives one credit per semester for basic military, these credits are not applicable to the 120 credits required for graduation.

Making R.O.T.C. voluntary would also improve the corps because undesirable persons would not be forced to take the subject. R.O.T.C. should be taken actively, not passively. Only through voluntary R.O.T.C. can the department be sure that the whole corps consists of actively interested young men who will approve and accept military standards.

In the case of a person being chosen to serve his country by the draft, basic R.O.T.C. in most cases will not help him. He will have to relearn what he is now studying in R.O.T.C. class when he is called. If an individual is not going advanced, why force him to take a course which he will learn later in the case of the draft; or if he is not drafted, a course which he will never need?

Therefore, I believe that R.O.T.C. should be offered, but not made compulsory at a free university. The money spent indoctrinating unsympathetic students could be spent for a much better purpose—encouraging and helping the students in their quest of knowledge.

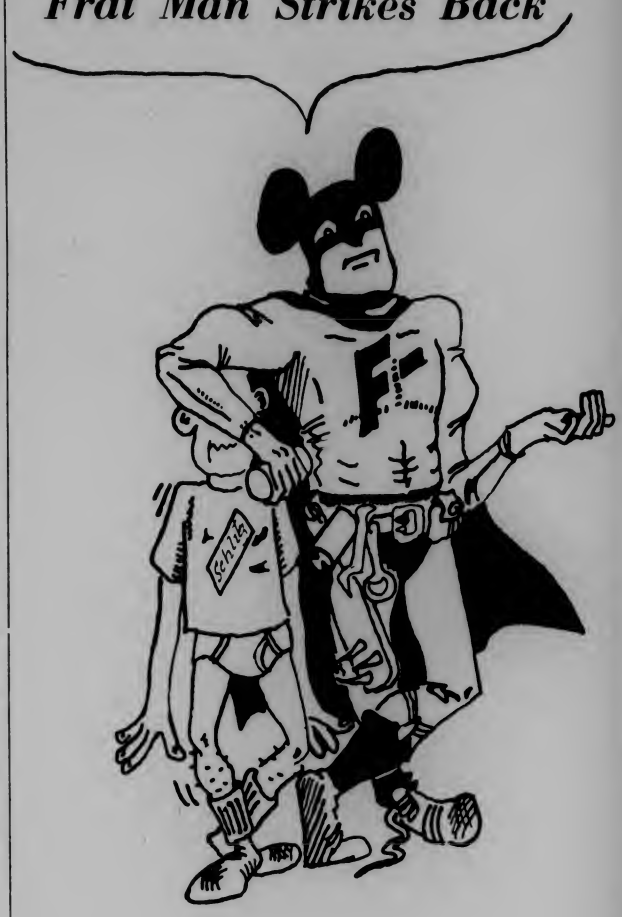
Frat Man Strikes Back



To the Editor:

Speaking as an "unimaginative and worthless quip" myself, I should like to go on record as saying that every few weeks there appears a laudatory article on the fraternity system here at the University in one of our campus publications, principally the "letters" column of the Collegian.

While it is certain that the people who are responsible for these remarkably similar and worthless missives have definite Greek affiliations, it is interesting to thumb through the lists of rushees of the various houses and find that the "third rate humorist" who created me has never been cut, (i.e.) as unacceptable to the fraternity system, principally because he never found any he considered worth rushing. Thus at least one of these satirists is not using campus publications to gain revenge for any social "humiliation" handed by the various fraternities.

It is not particularly strange that, if fraternities are such "dens of iniquity," any acceptable character would not care to be admitted to these ignominious societies. I should like to suggest to these narrow-minded incensed letter-writers that they try improving the character of their fraternity system instead of wasting our time thinking up bombastic defenses of fraternity life.

T.W. Frat Man

To the Editor:

How can we ever expect to have world peace when the perennial Greek-Independent issue exists in our own small campus community!

A curious reader

Standing by the Student?

To the Editor:

The University has maintained a reputation of providing high caliber education at low rates, thereby presenting many students with an opportunity that might well not be within their reach. Each year at this time a great many of these students are fortunate enough to obtain employment for the vacation period. The money earned during this time is a great aid to these students and for many represents the difference between returning to school for the second semester or not.

Previously the policy of the University was to present these students with a blanket excuse from attending classes on the two days that began our first week of vacation. This year the Administration has changed its policy and is requiring each student to obtain individual permission from each instructor. Perhaps the Administration feels that this method is preferable but they fail to realize that this procedure does not take into consideration the interaction of faculty and students. Some instructors, granted they may be in the minority, seem reluctant to give these students the opportunity to make up any work missed during this period. Their reasons, either individual or general, have the same result. The amount of money lost represents a sizeable portion of next semester's bill and, as usual, the student suffers.

In the final analysis we feel that the school has failed to stand by these students in aiding them and in maintaining the purpose of this University.

C. A. Schedules Play For Annual Vespers

The annual C. A. Christmas Vespers will be presented Sun., Dec. 17, 7 p.m., at Bowker Aud. She is in Bitterness, an original play for voices written and directed by Peter Gezork '62 wlil be this year's production.

The characters of the play are not named, but are given titles as in an expressionistic drama. Giving them titles such as "The Poet," "The Old Man," and "The Boy," does not limit them to any historical context, but makes them universal characters, with the universal problem of finding a meaning for life in a land "dark with death and destruction." The play deals with this search for a meaning, and how a meaning for life can arise out of the birth of Christ.

The play attempts to communicate their message of hope not only to the rational mind of the viewer, but also to the emotional senses. To heighten this aspect of the message, original music has been written for the chorus by Buffy Sainte-Marie '62.

Students, faculty and public are invited to participate in this inspiring student activity. The cast and Vespers committee feel that everyone will find true Christmas meaning in this year's Vespers.

creasingly ruthless competition for good college faculties if they have planned year-to-year salary increases.

Dr. J. P. Mather crusaded for five years to tell the people how their children were being short-changed in higher public education in the state. He used to say "You can't be nice if you feel responsible for the good education of 6,000 young men and women."

He had to resign to achieve his purpose, but in doing so he won salary raises for the faculty (about the lowest of any state university in the nation). Today, after two years, the pay scales are again inadequate.

This year again the university is making the push for fiscal autonomy—which means deciding how it will spend its buget after the legislature approves the total figure. It is the last state university in the United States without this power.

It is a sad fact, but as the result of the domination of private education in this state as opposed to the newer states of the Midwest and West, there is no one person in the Massachusetts Legislature today who could be said to be carrying the ball for public education as a whole, or who understands it in depth.

Ohio State Top Team On First Annual Collegiate All-Star Poll

A guy named Dave Mona on the Minnesota Daily Newspaper, the University of Minnesota's publication, came up with an idea this year which met with considerable success. Mona polled about one hundred college newspapers in regards to picking the top ten football teams in the country and also selecting an All-America team at the end of the season. He received replies from most papers (the Collegian entered into the poll) and came up with the first Annual National Collegiate All-American Poll.

The results of the poll are as follows:

Intramural Department To Sponsor Free Throw Tilt

A free-throw shooting contest will be sponsored by the intramural basketball program for all those students who aspire to the heights of a Bill Sharman or a Dolph Shayes. All arm-chair players will have a chance to show how good they really are the week of January 8-12 from 12:00 noon to 1:00 p.m. at the Cage.

The tournament rules are as follows:

1. The contest will be open to all four-year male students of the University of Massachusetts excluding the members of the varsity and freshman basketball teams.
2. Each contestant will take twenty-five free throws and the best percentage figure will be the winner.
3. In the event of a tie, a playoff will be held during the succeeding week (January 15-19).
